But there is, to my mind, danger in free importations of steel rails. It may be imaginary, but it can be real and exceedingly hurtful. The United States Steel Co., it is contended and believed, is a part of the world-wide Steel Trust. The American independent manufacturers are not. Wages abroad in steel making is half, in many instances less than half, what is paid to workmen in that industry in this country. Suppose we have labor troubles in a mill of the United States Steel Co.? Would not this world-wide trust, through the mutual sympathy that goes with it, be a danger factor? Or for any other reason that might appeal to this great steel company, what would prevent them from shutting up a mill in this country and importing their rails from England, Germany, Belgium, or any other foreign country where the trust understanding exists?

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. AUSTIN] is recognized.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. PALMER] stated that I could go back to the iron manufacturers in my district in reference to the duty in the Payne bill on pig iron. I will say that he can go to Bethlehem, Pa., and tell Mr. Schwab that he can get in his foreign iron ore free. Mr. Schwab was in Washington four years ago to obtain from a Republican Ways and Means Committee free iron ore. In one of the New York papers some time ago he said that he had made a contract to secure from Sweden 25,000,000 tons of iron ore. If you reduce the duty on iron ore and put it on the free list, and he imports 25,000,000 tons of it from Sweden, then you have saved for the man who has always opposed your election to Congress more than $4,700,000 of tariff duty. Mr. Schwab ought to give our distinguished colleague a gold medal and aid in keeping him in Congress as long as he lives.

Mr. FORDNEY. Will the gentleman from Tennessee yield?

Mr. AUSTIN. Yes.

Mr. FORDNEY. Mr. Schwab testified before the committee that the Bethlehem Steel Works, he, and Mr. Carnegie, own all the iron ore mines that have been so far discovered in Cuba.

Mr. AUSTIN. Last year we imported from Cuba 1,200,000 tons of iron ore. Mr. Schwab not only buys iron ore in Cuba, where he has purchased large holdings and constructed wharves and railroads, but he is a large importer of iron ore from Sweden.

Now, in the United States we pay $2.48 per day to men who mine iron. In Cuba they pay $1 a day; Spain, where women are employed, pays 50 cents to $1 a day; Sweden, 75 cents to $1 a day. In Chile, where Mr. Schwab has recently secured large deposits of iron ore, which it is proposed to import free, the labor cost is from 50 cents to $1 a day.

Now, the gentleman speaks about the United States Steel Corporation controlling all the iron ore in this country. There are nine iron furnaces in eastern Tennessee that are not controlled by the United States Steel Corporation, that own their own ore lands, and they are shipping their pig iron to Pennsylvania; and in the hearings before the Ways and Means Committee Mr. PALMER learned for the first time that southern furnaces were selling from 15,000 to 20,000 tons of pig iron per month on the Delaware River. I oppose free iron ore because it is a strike at the great pig-iron industry of the South, now producing over 3,000,000 tons per annum. The South is compelled to sell its output not in the South but in the Mississippi Valley and along the Atlantic coast and in the New England cities as far up as Boston, and if you give this advantage—free iron ore—to the Pennsylvania Steel Co., which owns also the Maryland Steel Co. and the Bethlehem Steel Co., you will have robbed the southern iron furnaces of the difference in the cost of laying down pig iron in the East in competition with the companies who own the iron-ore lands in Cuba and which are importing iron ore from Spain and Sweden.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Will the gentleman yield for a suggestion?

Mr. AUSTIN. Yes.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. PALMER] said, as I understood him, that the Steel Trust controlled practically all the iron-ore bodies in this country. The Republic Co., which is the principal independent company of this country, has 21 mines alone.

Mr. AUSTIN. I want to say, in reference to that, that if his statement was true that the United States Steel Corporation owned all the iron-ore lands in this country, would it not be for the benefit of the American wage earner in this country to buy all of that ore, to mine it in this country, and keep the money here, keep our men in the iron-ore mines of Alabama, New York, Michigan, Tennessee, and Minnesota employed, rather than to give employment to foreigners who work in the mines of Cuba, Spain, and Sweden?

What else do we do? According to the official records, we take out of the Treasury now about $300,000 in revenue and present that to the two great steel corporations, the Bethlehem Steel Co. and the Pennsylvania Steel Co. We present that to them, and as the result of it they will save from 30 to 45 cents a ton on the manufacture of pig iron, and with that advantage they will injure the sale of southern pig iron that is now shipped to the East on a freight charge of $4.20 a ton.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Tennessee has expired. The gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] is recognized.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I have listened with interest to the eloquent appeal of my friend from Tennessee [Mr. AUSTIN] for my constituents, because they are more involved in this question than are the gentleman's constituents. We have in the district I have the honor to represent a very much larger supply of iron ore than has the district represented by the gentleman from Tennessee, and probably the largest supply next to that of the district represented by the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. MILLER] who has spoken. On the other hand, we buy our ferromanganese.

Now, as a practical question, the appeal of the gentleman from Tennessee to keep this tax on iron ore is just exactly the same appeal that the citrus fruit men of California made to your side of the House four years ago—to raise the price on lemons in order to equalize freight rates to the eastern seaboard. That is all your argument means. You want us to keep a tax on iron ore in order that we may progress a little further into somebody else's territory and take care of freight rates.

Now, as a practical question it is not 30 or 45 cents a ton difference. Most of this iron ore comes from Cuba, and under the treaty the rate is 12 cents per ton from Cuba, which makes the rate on that iron ore used in a ton of pig iron about 24 cents, so that the actual benefit they get is 24 cents a ton; no more and no less.

Mr. AUSTIN. It is greater on Swedish ore and Spanish ore.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Very little Swedish ore comes in. There was formerly some Spanish ore that came in.

What is the practical question on this iron ore? Before the Payne bill was passed the duty on iron ore was 45 cents a ton. That duty was reduced under that bill to 15 cents a ton, and as it comes from Cuba it means 12 cents a ton. Now, up to the time the Payne bill became a law—which my friend voted for when the conference report came here—the producer of iron ore in the district of the gentleman from Minnesota and in the Wisconsin districts penetrated to the eastern seaboard. None now penetrates to the eastern seaboard. It came there under the 45 per cent duty. But when you reduced the tax to 12 cents from Cuba, then the freight rate intervened, and it was cheaper for the men on the eastern seaboard to buy it from Cuba than to buy it from Minnesota; and, as the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. MILLER] said, you drew the line as to how far east the western ores could come at the Allegheny Mountains. Now, if you take off this 12 cents duty the freight rate with the 12 per cent off will stop the iron ore at the Allegheny Mountains.

Mr. MILLER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman yield?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I can not yield. I have only five minutes, and I want to finish. You are going to stop it there anyhow. The line of demarcation will be there under this bill, at the Allegheny Range, with free ore, just as it is to-day under the Payne bill with 15 cents on ore.

But there is another reason why this ore should be placed on the free list, and it is not going to affect the production in the gentleman's district. It is this: We have greatly reduced the tax on pig iron. The competitive point on pig iron is the eastern seaboard, where water transportation brings the foreign iron into competition with the domestic iron. There is no danger of competition with the furnaces of the gentleman's district, or of mine, or with the furnaces west of the Allegheny Mountains, because the $2.50 freight rate on pig iron shuts out the foreign product. The real point of competition is at the water front, and we have reduced the rate on pig iron. We have brought them down to a competitive rate, and whether it is your constituents or mine, representing all the people of the United States it is nothing but right that we should do justice to these blast-iron furnaces on the seaboard, and inasmuch as we have cut their rate to a competitive point, we should give them an open door so that they might have freer ore for their own territory.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. FORDNEY. Mr. Chairman, just a word.

Mr. AUSTIN. Will the gentleman allow me to ask him a question?

Mr. FORDNEY. Yes.

Mr. AUSTIN. Did it not come out in the testimony that the Alabama furnaces sold from 15,000 tons to 20,000 tons of pig iron in Pennsylvania, on the Delaware River, and that their sales extended to New Jersey, Delaware, New England, New York City, Brooklyn, northern New Jersey, and Newark?

Mr. FORDNEY. That is my recollection; but I am not positive about the figures. But the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] now states that because of their lowering the duty on pig iron and putting iron ore upon the free list they have brought the products of this country on a competitive basis with foreign competitive products.

It will be remembered by the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] that Mr. Gary, president of the United States Steel Corporation, testified before the Ways and Means Committee four years ago. When the question was put to him, "Can you produce pig iron and continue to manufacture steel in this country under free trade?" his answer was in the affirmative. He said, "There are some gentlemen in this room who will bear out my statement that by putting iron ore, pig iron, and steel on the free list you will drive out of existence the independent steel manufacturers in this country. Why? Because the United States Steel Corporation, that produces 44 per cent of all the steel produced in this country, can live under free trade when the independents must go out of business." The chairman of the Ways and Means Committee asked why that was. He asked, "Is your machinery more modern or more efficient? Have you greater experts in the manufacture of steel than have the independents?" Mr. Gary replied that the independent manufacturers of steel in this country purchased their pig iron from the United States Steel Corporation, and that there was no other pig iron produced in this country for them to purchase, and that the United States Steel Corporation made a profit of $2 per ton on that pig iron when selling it to the independent manufacturers, and that if worst came to worst that $2 per ton on their pig iron would be a profit to the Steel Corporation and the independents would be compelled to go out of business.

The gentleman from New York [Mr. PAYNE] corrects me when I say that Mr. Schwab testified that the Bethlehem Steel Co. owned all the iron mines in Cuba. He states that practically all the iron mines in Cuba were owned by them, as stated by Mr. Schwab. I accept the correction, but it is my recollection that Mr. Schwab said that the Bethlehem Steel Co., or he and Mr. Carnegie, owned all the iron mines in Cuba that had been discovered that were valuable, and that the iron ore produced in Cuba was much superior to the iron ore produced in this country in one certain respect—for the manufacture of open-hearth steel. To the iron ore mined in this country a certain amount of nickel must be added in the steel, but the ore from Cuba contains a sufficient amount of nickel, so that it is unnecessary that in the production of open-hearth steel made from Cuban ore any nickel be added.

But there is another disadvantage to the Cuban ore—that it contains a greater amount of moisture than the ore of the United States—but Mr. Schwab said he thought that in the near future some method of extracting that moisture economically would be discovered, and that in the near future Cuban ore would be much more valuable to the manufacturer of iron than the ore of this country. Therefore, gentlemen, in placing iron ore on the free list and bringing the manufacturer of pig iron in this country on a competitive basis with the foreigner there is no question in my mind that, without any intention of being unfair, you have erred in your judgment and you have thrown all the benefits to be derived to one concern in the United States—the United States Steel Corporation.

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Chairman——

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I ask that at the end of five minutes the debate on this paragraph and amendments may be closed.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Alabama asks unanimous consent that at the end of five minutes the debate on this paragraph and amendments shall be considered concluded. Is there objection?

Mr. MOORE. I desire to offer an amendment.

Mr. AUSTIN. I desire to offer an amendment.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I will withdraw the request at this time.

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Chairman, I did not expect to take any part in the debate on this subject. I did not think the House would want to hear from the stand-stiller who cut the duty on pig iron from $4 to $2.50 a ton and made as big a cut as this committee have made, because they have only cut in two the duty of $2.50, according to the equivalent ad valorem.

I did report a bill putting iron ore on the free list. What was the condition? The United States Steel Corporation had tried to get all the iron ore in sight up in Minnesota. They had made their contracts with Mr. Hill, which covered all his holdings and the interests with which he was allied up there, at a rate for the iron ore that was progressive and would have increased the price from year to year if it had not been interfered with, so that perhaps it would have satisfied my friend from Tennessee [Mr. AUSTIN] on the iron ore there and my friend from Minnesota [Mr. MILLER] on the iron ore up in that State. I thought that if we put iron ore on the free list it would help break up that little arrangement.

Although I have never made any progress, according to the ideas of some gentlemen, I did more to break up that monopoly on the part of the United States Steel Co. than appears anywhere in this bill.

Mr. ANDERSON. I want to suggest to the gentleman from New York that since that time the Hill leases have been canceled.

Mr. PAYNE. I was just about to say that they had been canceled; and why? Because of free iron ore, or iron ore at 12 cents a ton, which is pretty nearly free. They had to cancel the leases; they had to get out of it. They did not have a monopoly of sending the iron ore east of the Allegheny Mountains. It so happened that most of the independent manufacturers of iron and steel were east of the Alleghenies. While some of them were large concerns some were small, and they were making nearly 60 per cent of the production.

I acknowledge freely that I wanted to encourage them, or at least I did not want to turn or keep back the whole thing into the hands of the United States Steel Co. and leave these people at their mercy. I made what investigation I could, and I became satisfied that free iron ore would not hurt any iron mines in the United States except possibly those in the State of New York. I examined into that question pretty closely, because these were large interests, employing a good many people and turning out a good deal of ore. I became satisfied that they could stand free iron ore without injury to their business, largely because they had to have other ore to mingle with theirs in order to manufacture pig iron, and the only place they could get it from was the western mines, or else from Cuba or Nova Scotia.

The gentleman from Michigan misunderstood my reply a few minutes ago. I told him that while Charles M. Schwab said that he had an option or agreement, or had purchased a large quantity of ore in Cuba, that he did not claim that he had all of it. It was then undeveloped, and he frankly stated that he thought it was going to be a success. He did speak of moisture, but thought he could overcome that. Nobody that has come in contact with Mr. Schwab, who seems to make a very fair statement, and I think the gentleman from Pennsylvania will agree with me—I say nobody will deny that he has an engaging personality, and he certainly knows as much about the iron and steel industry as any man I ever met.

Mr. PALMER. He has engaged me in an interesting conflict several times. [Laughter.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from New York has expired.

Mr. HAYES. Mr. Chairman, I desire to state in the interest of accuracy that the United States Steel Corporation not only does not control all the iron ore in this country, but it does not control anything like one-half of the known deposits of iron ore in this country. In the entire history of the business it never has controlled one-half.

I want to say further that the only known deposits of iron ore that can be imported into this country are controlled by the Pennsylvania Steel Co. and the companies controlled by Charles M. Schwab at Bethlehem. Four years ago the tariff on iron ore was reduced, as has been stated, from 40 cents a ton to 15 cents a ton. I then stated that that meant simply taking 25 cents a ton out of the Treasury of the United States and making a present of it to Charles M. Schwab and the Pennsylvania Steel Co., and that certainly was the effect. In six months after the bill was passed iron ore advanced 50 cents a ton in price. You can readily see that the effect of it was to take 25 cents from the United States Treasury and make a present to Charles M. Schwab and the Pennsylvania Steel Co., for they were the only people that imported iron ore into the country.

Now, following the suggestion of the gentleman from Tennessee, I say to you, and I think I know something about this business, that if you take the duty off iron ore, now 12 cents a ton from Cuba, it will not affect the price of pig iron to the consumer, it will not affect the price of anything in the country, but the only effect will be to take 12 cents a ton otherwise paid into the United States Treasury and make a present of it to Charles M. Schwab and the Pennsylvania Steel Co.

Mr. HUMPHREY of Washington. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HAYES. Yes.

Mr. HUMPHREY of Washington. I was told only yesterday that the Bethlehem Steel Co. was now building and had nearly completed a fleet of vessels to run between here and South America for the purpose of carrying iron ore as soon as the Panama Canal was opened.

Mr. HAYES. That is true.

Mr. AUSTIN. And they have bought large holdings in Chile.

Mr. HAYES. Mr. Chairman, I am not sure whether or not it has been mentioned in this discussion, but I want to say further that the Steel Corporation has been favored in another matter in this bill, and that is the taking off the tariff on manganiferous ore. That is the only corporation in this country that imports manganiferous ore, so they have not only an advantage in the increase in the rate on ferromanganese, but they have the advantage of receiving their manganiferous ore into this country free of duty, and they are the only ones that can use it under the present conditions.

Mr. STEVENS of Minnesota. Mr. Chairman, there are some facts connected with the production of iron ore in our State of which I do not think the Committee on Ways and Means has been fully informed. The United States Steel Corporation by no means controls the major portion of the iron ore produced in our State. Since the Hill leases have been dissolved, and Mr. Hill and his companies will take charge of their holdings next year, they may from their large holdings produce as much as the total production of the Steel Corporation itself. In addition, there are quite a number of mines owned by independents, which produce almost as large a proportion as either of those two holdings already mentioned. Further, there have been discoveries of a new and vast range known as the Cayuna Range, west of the Mesabi Range, which promises to be as large a producer as any of those holdings that have yielded so much in the past. In the new range and in the Mesabi Range the State of Minnesota itself, in its public capacity, owns and controls a very large part of the production by its school and public land leases, and by its public policy, as declared by its legislature and its governor, the State is doing its best to protect the independent producers and the independent steel companies, to prevent monopoly and any possibility for oppressing any of our people, so that the United States Steel Co. by no means has the control of these products of our State. The independents in the future will have even a better opportunity to obtain whatever supplies may be necessary there by means of these policies and these new discoveries. One fact still further should be known by the Committee on Ways and Means. Quite a number of times during the past few years, at various large meetings of the commercial associations and of waterway associations, it has been stated that when the Erie Canal shall be finished this iron ore can be landed from Minnesota, Wisconsin, and Michigan ranges into Buffalo, there transferred to 1,200-ton canal barges, and taken thence through the canal and connecting waterways to the furnaces along the Atlantic coast almost as cheaply as can be done from importation. The advantage that the small tariff on this ore would mean right now would be in the development of these new and independent ranges in Minnesota, together with the proposed development of the new waterway and cheap transportation system from these ranges to the Atlantic coast. The problem of the new range in Minnesota is twofold—first, to separate the ore from the foreign matter, which must be done by means of large water supplies, which are at hand in northern Minnesota, and, second, to dry the ore after the foreign matter has been washed out of it. Those processes are being developed and will be developed; but it takes a great deal of experimentation and a very great deal of money to do this work, and if you discourage that now, while the new processes of mining and preparing and new methods of transportation are being developed, you will discourage the development of the iron mining, preparation, transportation, and you will help the large holdings of the steel company and discourage the independent producers and the independent competitors of the Steel Corporation. [Applause on the Republican side.]

Mr. FESS rose.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I move that all debate on this paragraph and all amendments thereto be closed in 5 minutes.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. MOORE. Mr. Chairman, I have an amendment which I desire to offer.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I overlooked the gentleman from Pennsylvania, and I therefore ask unanimous consent that debate on this paragraph and all amendments thereto be closed in 10 minutes.

Mr. MOORE. I do not want more than 2 or 3 minutes upon this amendment.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. Chairman, I have an amendment I desire to offer.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Is it about this ore paragraph?

Mr. AUSTIN. It is to the pig-iron paragraph under consideration.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I do not want to cut out any gentlemen who want to speak to the bill. I understand the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. FESS] desires to address the committee. I ask unanimous consent that the time be extended to 15 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Alabama asks unanimous consent that debate on this paragraph and all amendments thereto close in 15 minutes.

Mr. MOORE. Reserving the right to object, there are two or three amendments, and it will be a question how we may divide the time.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. In 15 minutes with three gentlemen desiring time, each one would have 5 minutes. I have withdrawn my motion, so that each one of the gentlemen could have 5 minutes.

Mr. MOORE. I have no objection.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

Mr. FESS. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, I think there has been too much crimination and recrimination against men who rise to speak on this measure as being prejudiced in the interest of the productions in their own districts. I feel a little somewhat like John C. Calhoun, who once said that simply because I believe in a principle that favors my own section that does not mean I am opposed to that principle when applied to another section; and I think that the leader of the majority here upon this particular phase has exemplified this fact with reference to the duty on ore. I would not charge the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. PALMER] with favoring this particular increase of 35 per cent duty on manganese because he comes from the section possessing United States steel industries. I do not think that statement is quite fair; and I am objecting to the charge of selfishness or sectional interest if I rise to speak in the interest of any particular commodity which happens to be produced in my district that I shall be open to the imputation that my views are colored by my interest in that commodity. That is unfair. This is a larger principle than that. I want to raise this one question here, however, in reference to the point under discussion. President Wilson said that one of the problems before the public was to give equal opportunity to everybody in the rivalry of life. The Democratic Party professes to believe in equalizing opportunities, as I understand it from their platform and their various utterances upon this floor and in the press, and it seems that the Democratic Party has been in opposition to the large concentration of power, if we can rely upon their statements. That seems to be one of the problems for our solution to-day.

This is the question I want to raise: Does not this particular phase of this bill which increases the duty on manganese 350 per cent favor the United States Steel Corporation as against the independent producer? Is not that in direct conflict with the oft-repeated statement of the Democratic leadership and Democratic Party and its following? I think it is. What is the United States Steel Corporation? It is the largest corporation, perhaps, in the world to-day, with a capitalization of $1,437,000,000, with units numbering up to 200, and with an ownership in the ores of the country, according to the Commissioner of Corporations, that amounts to from 500,000,000 to 700,000,000 tons in their own title; possessing more than a thousand miles of railroads in their own ownership. This corporation owns more than 100 lake vessels carrying ore upon the Lakes. It owns 50,000 acres of the best grade of coal that is found to-day in this country. This tremendous corporation has an annual capacity of 9,000,000 tons of steel. It can thus save the expense of many of these various items that the independent producer must pay for. The independent producer pays for the coal because he must seek it in the mine, while the United States Steel Corporation owns its mines which supply its needs. The independent producer pays for the ore which he does not possess, although many producers do own ore mines, while the United States Steel Corporation draws its supply from its own mines, with a capacity of hundreds of millions of tons. The United States Steel Corporation does not feel the high railroad rates because it owns 1,000 miles of railroads. It saves upon the rail transportation, also upon the lake transportation, both of which are important items in the estimates of costs.

Mr. STANLEY. Will the gentleman yield?

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman yield?

Mr. FESS. I will.

Mr. STANLEY. What independents does the gentleman refer to when he says they own no ore and no transportation facilities?

Mr. FESS. I would answer the gentleman that I do not mean that no independent corporation owns any ore. There are many independent corporations that do not own their own ore. I have an independent steel manufacturer in my district who does not own any ore, and there are hundreds of others. The United States Steel Corporation produces 47 per cent, according to the Commissioner of Corporations, of the steel products, which leaves 53 per cent that is produced by the independent mills. It must appear at once how difficult it will be for the small producer to compete with this enormous corporation, with its numerous advantages.

Mr. Chairman, we are informed by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. PALMER] that there is no ferromanganese produced in this country except that which the United States Steel Corporation produces for its own use. That being the case, since the corporation chooses to produce it rather than import it at a rate of $2.50, the rate fixed by the Payne tariff bill, how can the small producer afford to pay $8 duty, as proposed by your bill? Since the independent mill can not purchase it from the United States Steel Corporation, as we are informed the latter does not produce it for sale, it will be compelled to pay $8 duty if this bill becomes law, while its mighty rival can supply its own mills. Is this not a discrimination in favor of the trust? What about the equal opportunity in the world of production about which we hear so much these days?

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman's time is up.

Mr. MOORE. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry. I desire to offer an amendment to paragraph 104, which I understand we have not passed.

Mr. STANLEY. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last two words.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will state to the gentleman from Kentucky that there is an understanding under which debate is to close at the end of 15 minutes and that time is to be divided between three gentlemen indicated who desire to be heard. That is included in the motion of the gentleman from Alabama, and the gentleman from Pennsylvania is one of those gentlemen.

Mr. MOORE. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. MOORE. I want to offer an amendment at the end of paragraph 104, which I understand is still under consideration.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. No, Mr. Chairman; I make the point of order that the paragraph is passed. The paragraph that we are considering is the paragraph that the gentleman from Minnesota offered as an independent section.

Mr. MOORE. My understanding was clear. I was watching the situation. My understanding was that the gentleman's motion was an amendment to that paragraph.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. The gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. MILLER] offers an amendment as a new paragraph, No. 104½, and that is the pending paragraph, and paragraph 104 has been passed.

Mr. MANN. Is not the time limited on the debate, anyhow?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Yes.

Mr. MANN. Then the gentleman ought not to object to the offering of an amendment.

Mr. MOORE. I have no desire to speak to the amendment of the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. MILLER]. Will the gentleman ask unanimous consent to return?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. If there was a misunderstanding on the gentleman's part as to the previous paragraph, he can send up his amendment and let it be voted on.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the gentleman can proceed.

Mr. MOORE. There is a pending amendment, and I wish to offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman can send it to the desk and the Chair will put it. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 27, line 12, after the word "remanufactured," strike out the word "ferromanganese"; and at the end of line 16, same page, strike out the period and insert a semicolon; and insert also the following: "Ferromanganese, $2.50 per ton."

Mr. MOORE. Now, Mr. Chairman——

Mr. AUSTIN. May I offer my amendment?

Mr. MOORE. The line was so tightly drawn in the discussion over ferromanganese between those of us on this side of the House who believe this ad valorem rate to be excessive and in the interests of the great United States Steel Corporation and the other side of the House, which seems to believe that it was acting in the interests of the consumers of the land, that I call for a vote on the amendment, which squarely states the issue.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment of the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MOORE].

The question was taken, and the Chair announced that the noes seemed to have it.

Mr. MOORE. Mr. Chairman, I ask for a division.

The committee divided; and there were—ayes 38, noes 60.

So the amendment was rejected.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment of the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. AUSTIN].

The Clerk read as follows:

In line 9, page 27, strike out "8 per cent ad valorem" and insert "$2.50 per ton."

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. Chairman, the amendment I offer proposes to retain the present duty on pig iron—$2.50 per ton. As I understand the new duty on pig iron, it will place a duty of 80 cents to $1.25 per ton on it, the amount depending upon the market value. The estimate of the Committee on Ways and Means on importations of pig iron the first year under this bill is $1,500,000, and the importations under the present law last year were $384,000, making a total increase in the importations of pig iron made abroad of $1,115,000 per annum under the new bill. I believe the weight of testimony before the Ways and Means Committee at the hearings developed the fact that the amount or cost of labor in the production of a ton of pig iron was 80 per cent. Eighty per cent of the amount would show the wages involved in the increased importations would be $892,000 per annum, or during four years under the operation of the Underwood bill the amount of wages would be $3,578,000.43. In other words, we are going to take from the wage earners of this country who are engaged in the manufacture of pig iron $3,578,000, and give that money to the wage earners in the iron furnaces of England, Germany, Scotland, and China. They are making pig iron in China from $7 to $8 per ton. The transportation charges across the Pacific Ocean are $2.50 per ton.

We heard a speech on the floor of the House from the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. SISSON] in reference to the pending Japanese question in the State of California. We voted during the last session of Congress for the restriction of undesirable foreign immigration, and came within 6 or 8 votes of a two-thirds vote of passing the measure over the unwise veto of President Taft. The argument was that we should protect the American wage earner from the importation of cheap foreign labor into this country. We proposed by the adoption of this new rate on pig iron not to protect the American wage earner in iron furnaces, but to transfer employment from our iron ore mines and our big independent iron furnaces in Alabama, Tennessee, and in the North, and give that work to their competitors in foreign lands. Now, I stated, in the discussion of this metal schedule a year ago, that since the importation of pig iron from China under the reduction of the tariff duty on pig iron the Birmingham furnaces had virtually been driven out of the Pacific coast market. The gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] said:

I will say to my friend, Mr. AUSTIN, that they never did—namely, that the Birmingham mills never did sell any pig iron on the Pacific coast.

Now, I know that the gentleman from Alabama did not intend to make a misstatement. He evidently forgot the facts, because I hold in my hand a letter from the vice president of the Sloss-Sheffield Steel & Iron Co., of Birmingham, Ala., in which he states that even under the present law they sold 11,880 tons on the Pacific coast, and that under the operations of the Dingley bill they sold 25,000 tons there.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. If the gentleman will allow me, it costs them $10.50 a ton. If that is so, I never heard of it; it is an exceptional case. It costs $10.50 to carry a ton from Birmingham to the Pacific coast. It costs the English manufacturer $5.

Now, if they can pay a differential freight rate of $5.50 from Birmingham to the Pacific coast, in the Lord's name, what do they want with a tariff rate to protect them on the Atlantic seaboard?

Mr. AUSTIN. Here is a letter from the vice president of the Sloss-Sheffield Steel & Iron Co., showing that they did sell on the Pacific coast. On the completion of the Panama Canal I say Birmingham and Tennessee will be able to ship pig iron to the Pacific coast at less than $10 per ton—perhaps $2.50 per ton—and will be able successfully to meet the Chinese and English pig iron, provided we can retain the present duty on pig iron.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Tennessee has expired. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. BUTLER].

The question was taken, and the amendment was rejected.

The CHAIRMAN. The question now is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. MILLER].

The question was taken, and the amendment was rejected.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

105. All iron in slabs, blooms, loops, or other forms less finished than iron in bars, and more advanced than pig iron, except castings; muck bars, bar iron, square iron, rolled or hammered, round iron, in coils or rods, bars or shapes of rolled or hammered iron not specially provided for in this section, 8 per cent ad valorem.

Mr. STANLEY. Mr. Chairman, this provision, with reference to the effort to increase the tax on slabs, structural forms, and pig iron, is utterly indefensible.

In the first place, there is no menace from Chinese or Japanese pig iron. The furnaces that are now erected in China are, the largest of them, under the supervision of an American engineer, the greatest engineer on the globe to-day, Julian Kennedy, who appeared here as a Republican and was for a long time in charge of the works of the Carnegie Steel Co. He stated that from his actual knowledge it costs as much to produce a ton of pig iron in China as it costs in the United States, and he had made pig iron in both countries.

It is universally conceded that a ton of pig iron can be made at Birmingham, Ala., $4 cheaper than anywhere else in the United States, and Judge Gary and Charlie Schwab and the whole outfit of them admit that we can produce pig iron in the United States cheaper than anywhere else on the habitable globe.

There is an equal amount of nonsense in this hue and cry about producing pig iron with American labor. There is no more American labor used in the production of pig iron in Pittsburgh than is used in Hongkong. I know, too, that the pig iron made in India and the pig iron made in China is made under the supervision of American overseers and American skilled workmen, and the pig iron made in the United States is made under the supervision of Americans, making identically the same labor as when made abroad. Over 50 per cent of the men employed in the blast furnaces in Pittsburgh can not speak the English language. Eighty per cent are foreign born. Not one-tenth of the unskilled labor used in the manufacture of pig iron to-day in Pittsburgh and at Gary but what are either foreign born or of alien parentage. Sixty per cent and over of the miners at the Mesabi Range, digging this ore, are foreign born, and nine-tenths of them do not stay in this country more than 10 years, according to the reports of your Commissioner of Labor.

It is a question of foreign labor both here and there, either way. The work about the pig-iron furnaces is simple but onerous. Those men are worked from 12 to 20 hours a day and seven days in the week. That labor is the poorest-paid skilled labor to-day in the United States, and the Dago and the Montenegrin and the Bohunk and the Syrian have long since not only driven out the American laborer but driven out the German and the Scandinavian and the Welshman and the Englishman.

The only profit that is made by the so-called independents or by the United States Steel Corporation from the manufacture of pig iron is made by the men who own the furnaces and the men who manipulate the bonds.

You talk about the independents having to buy their ore. Where are any independents making pig iron? The United States Steel Corporation makes 2,000,000 less tons of pig iron than tons of steel, although it takes 11 tons of pig iron to make 10 tons of steel.

The Lackawanna Steel Co., the Bethlehem Steel Co., the Cambria Steel Co.—all these great steel companies in the East—own their own ships and boats, and they own their own deposits of ore. In Birmingham, Ala., they not only work foreign labor, but they work slave labor. They work convicts in the mines—that is, of the Steel Corporation.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. The gentleman is mistaken. There is no convict labor worked at any furnaces or ore mines.

Mr. STANLEY. They work them in the coal mines.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. There is some convict labor worked in some of the coal mines, but I think practically now all those coal mines are independent mines.

Mr. STANLEY. I will say for the independent companies in Birmingham that they do not do that, but I have it from the sworn testimony of men who know that until very recently the Steel Corporation sent runners out to the police courts to get boys that were arrested for playing cards on public conveyances or taking a drink of whisky or some other misdemeanor, to get the fellows who were confined in the jails and from the police courts to put them in these mines.

Mr. BARTLETT. May I interrupt the gentleman?

Mr. STANLEY. Certainly.

Mr. BARTLETT. I think the gentleman's memory with reference to the testimony before the committee is mixed with what somebody said they would testify to, because I cross-examined the witnesses before the committee with reference to the particular matter referred to in Birmingham, and the witnesses did not bear out the statements that had been made to the chairman before they came before that committee.

Mr. STANLEY. I will put statements in the RECORD made by Mr. Harrison, of the Sage Foundation.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Kentucky has expired.

Mr. STANLEY. I ask unanimous consent for one minute.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I will yield to the gentleman a minute from my time.

Mr. STANLEY. I do not wish to do anybody an injustice. What I wish to state is that this idea that there is American labor in the coal mines or in the iron mines or about the blast furnaces of the Steel Corporation, whether in Birmingham, in Pittsburgh, or anywhere else, is all moonshine. There is no American labor there except the skilled labor.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I do not desire to contradict the gentleman, but I must do justice to my own constituency. I do not know where the gentleman got his information, but it is absolutely unwarranted by facts. There never has been any convict labor in any blast furnaces in Alabama.

Mr. STANLEY. If I used the words "blast furnaces," it was an error. I referred to the coal mines.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. There never was any convict labor employed in the iron mines. There was a time when the Tennessee Coal & Iron Co., now a subsidiary company of the United States Steel Corporation, did work convicts in its coal mines. I am not sure, but I am under the impression that it does not do so now. There are some independent coal operators who do work convicts in their mines.

Mr. BARTLETT. Permit me to say that the testimony from the Steel Corporation before the committee was that they had abandoned that, or at least that that contract had expired.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. It had. Now, as to the gentleman's reference to their gathering men from the police courts, I want to say that he is mistaken in that, because that class of convicts are not worked in the mines. The class of convicts who are worked in the mines are State convicts.

Mr. STANLEY. The difference is this: The State convicts are worked in the mines by the State. Convicts from the jails, convicted of misdemeanors, are worked by the corporation itself. It has its own jail and its own guardians over them. This statement is made——

Mr. UNDERWOOD. What corporation is the gentleman talking about?

Mr. STANLEY. The Tennessee Coal & Iron Co., now the United States Steel Corporation.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Oh, no; the gentleman is mistaken.

Mr. STANLEY. This statement is made by Mr. Harrison, of the Sage Foundation.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I can not yield any further time, because I want to use it. I am satisfied the gentleman thinks he is correctly informed, but I know he is not, and I think he is doing my people an injustice.

I voted to put iron on the free list. I have cut the products of this schedule without opposition, and it comes out of my own district; but I can not stand here and allow a statement to be made—I do not mean to charge that it was made intentionally by the gentleman—which is a slander of the constituency that I represent, because the condition described by the gentleman does not exist.

And more than that, although there may be a very low class of European labor that work in some districts of the North, I will say that, so far as my district is concerned, a great deal of the labor is American labor coming out of the hills and mountains of Alabama, and the white labor in that district is largely from northern Europe. The Italians we have in our country do not work in the mines and factories. We have Italians, but they are not engaged either in the furnaces or mines to any great extent. The miners we do have there of foreign birth are made up of old Scotch and Welsh miners that came to Alabama after the great strike in Pennsylvania 30 years ago. So that, although I speak for no other part of the country, I do speak for my district. I do not know from whom the gentleman from Kentucky got his information, but I do say that, as to the district I represent, the facts that he has detailed are not true.

Mr. MILLER. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. STANLEY], as he always does, gave us an interesting word picture, but, as usual, conspicuous as a monumental example of inaccuracy of statement.

Mr. Chairman, words idly uttered, even upon the floor of this House, may be taken outside with a degree of seriousness by those who are not acquainted with the habitual methods of the speaker. I can not for one pass in silence and let the statement the gentleman has made go by unanswered. When he says that nine-tenths of the 25,000 miners in my county, whom I represent, do not stay in the United States for a period of five years, he states absolutely that which is not true, however much he may think it is true.

Mr. Chairman, the miners in Minnesota, most of them, are old in experience; most of them have been there a great many years, or elsewhere in the United States, and the big majority of them either are citizens or are in the process of becoming citizens of the United States. [Applause.] They are drawing from $2.35 to $3.50 per day. They are building themselves homes; they are buying themselves farms; and they are sending their children to the best-provided schools on God's earth. These boys and girls are growing up to love the American flag. They are growing up to become citizens of the highest character and standing, and any father and mother who will give to their children these advantages, and keep them in these advantages, are not entitled to the description the gentleman from Kentucky has given them. [Applause.]

The gentleman from Kentucky says we have them work from 12 to 20 hours a day. Mr. Chairman, I marvel whence came to him that phantasmagoric dream of a disordered fancy. They work 8 hours a day, and there are three shifts a day.

Mr. STANLEY. Mr. Chairman, I stated that in the blast furnaces the employees work 12 hours a day. I quoted the record. The gentleman is not contradicting me, he is contradicting the Commissioner of Labor in a written report.

Mr. MILLER. I am not contradicting anything the gentleman said about blast furnaces, because I do not know anything about them. I am contradicting what he said about the laborers in the mines which he classed with all those, and it is that ridiculous looseness of statement that I think ought not to go unchallenged.

Now, one word in regard to the iron-ore situation, which seems to trouble many gentlemen. I have heard it stated on the floor of the House time and time again, and more often by the gentleman from Kentucky than by anyone else, that the United States Steel Corporation controls the iron-ore deposits in the United States. They never did; they do to-day less than they ever did before. I suppose they control more iron ore in the State of Minnesota than any other part of the country, because there is more iron ore there. Their headquarters are there, their greatest mines are there, because there is found the world's greatest iron-producing region.

Mr. Chairman, the Minnesota State tax board has made extended investigation. Their last report shows that the United States Steel Corporation now in operation of known deposits does not now control over 50 per cent of the ore in my State. Prior to the relinquishment of the so-called Hill lease a year or so ago the Steel Corporation controlled about 63 per cent of the ore in my State. When we also consider the great area recently discovered, known as the Cuyuna Range, one that promises to become one of the greatest iron ranges in the whole world, and in which the Steel Corporation does not control a ton of ore—when we consider this range, which the tax commission did not, the percentage of iron controlled by the Steel Corporation becomes very much less than 50 per cent. In the entire Lake Superior district, comprising Minnesota, Wisconsin, and Michigan, the Steel Corporation controls only about 51.6 per cent. When we examine the situation Nation-wide, we find that the Steel Corporation controls less than 50 per cent of the developed or proven deposits; and as future years witness the proving and development of other deposits within the United States, the per cent controlled by that great corporation will be more and more reduced.

It is ridiculous to say that any one concern does control the iron-ore deposits or has them corralled.

I was interested in the remarks of the gentleman from New York [Mr. PAYNE], whom we all love and admire very much, when he said that he felt he had played a conspicuous part in divorcing the great northern ore deposits from the United States Steel Corporation. I dislike very much indeed to take from him any of the sentimental feeling he may have in that respect, but I desire to say that a power greater than the gentleman from New York brought about that dissolution. The omnipotent hand that fashioned the universe made that lease absolutely impossible of fulfillment. The discovery of large ore deposits previously unknown created a condition in the ore market such that even the Steel Corporation could not carry out the terms of its Hill lease.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Minnesota has expired.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I move that all debate on the paragraph and all amendments thereto close.

The motion was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the pro forma amendment will be considered as withdrawn.

There was no objection.

The Clerk read as follows:

106. Beams, girders, joists, angles, channels, car-truck channels, tees, columns and posts or parts or sections of columns and posts, deck and bulb beams, sashes, frames, and building forms, together with all other structural shapes of iron or steel, whether plain, punched, or fitted for use, or whether assembled or manufactured, 12 per cent ad valorem.

Mr. STANLEY. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. Mr. Chairman, it is all very well for the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. MILLER], without facts or figures or any semblance of information except his bald and impudent assertion, to question the veracity and the accuracy of a gentleman upon this floor in a most offensive manner. He is making a pitiable exhibition, not of my looseness of statement but of his own lamentable ignorance. I have the facts here, which he will not question. I have the report of the tax commissioner of Minnesota, and he says the Steel Corporation owns the greater part of all Minnesota ore. I have a statement of the men who own the ore as to what portion they have of it. The minutes of the Steel Corporation show, Judge Gary himself states—

We certainly have everything on the Vermilion. We bought everything on Mesabi that is good, that is best, that is first class, with perhaps one exception, which we could not get.

Now, Mr. Chairman, Mr. Gayley reports that they own 90 per cent of all the best of the old-range ore. In 1901, Gayley declared it was the purpose of the Steel Corporation to get every pound of the remaining 10 per cent of Bessemer ore on the old ranges and all that was left on the Mesabi. Herbert Knox Smith, your own commissioner of corporations, states:

Authoritative data submitted to the Senate Finance Committee in 1909 by a prominent iron manufacturer, with the Steel Corporation's consent, showed that the corporation itself then reckoned on about 1,625,000,000 tons of lake ore, of which 1,258,000,000 tons was of the current commercial standard. On this basis, therefore, the Steel Corporation would have had over 75 per cent of the total commercial available ore in the entire Lake Superior region.

* * * * * * *

In 1907 the holdings of the Steel Corporation in Minnesota, which State includes the Mesabi and Vermilion ranges, according to a carefully prepared schedule of the Minnesota tax commission, amounted to about 913,000,000 tons, or 76 per cent of the total ore deposits of the State.

Now, that is according to the State tax commissioner, which commissioner is quoted by Herbert Knox Smith.

Mr. GARDNER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. STANLEY. I can not now. By 1909 the corporation had made further inroads into the slender supply of ores still remaining in this region. Herbert Knox Smith, your Commissioner of Corporations, reports:

In this connection it may be noted that the secretary of the Minnesota tax commission, in a letter to the Commissioner of Corporations, dated May 12, 1909, said: "They (the United States Steel Corporation) now control at least 80 per cent of the present known tonnage in the State."

And in the face of such figures as that the gentleman gets up here with his pitiable declaration about my inaccuracy of statement. The gentleman does not contradict my statement; he contradicts the authoritative record. The gentleman does not advertise my lack of information, but he makes a pitiable exhibition of his own ignorance and of a decent appreciation of his lack of any sort of information on this subject.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I desire to move at the end of 15 minutes that debate on this paragraph close.

Mr. GARDNER. I would like about half a minute.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Alabama moves that debate on this paragraph and all amendments thereto close at the end of 15 minutes.

The question was taken, and the motion was agreed to.

Mr. MILLER. Mr. Chairman, I am not surprised that the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. STANLEY] should have further entertained the House by some archaic figures, some back-number observations, and a full measure of rhetorical vituperation. The gentleman quotes from the Steel Corporation, under date of 1901. Iron ore was not discovered on the Mesabi Range until 1892, just 9 years before, and not 20 per cent of the present development had then occurred. What was true then is no more true now than that America is undiscovered, as it was in the youth of Columbus. [Applause on the Republican side.]

Mr. STANLEY. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MILLER. Keep still; I will not yield to the gentleman, as he would not yield to me.

Mr. STANLEY. I quoted from 1909.

Mr. MILLER. I will come to 1909 in just a minute. So much for the Steel Corporation's figures in 1901. I will say to the gentleman that since that date the available iron ores in Minnesota have multiplied sixfold and within a few years more they will multiply very many more times as we discover new fields.

Then he comes down a little bit further, and I am astounded that he is able to get within four years of the present. Good God, he has not been within 100 years of the nineteenth century since he began his investigation of the United States Steel Corporation. His committee sat for three months and took testimony that told to the world things we had known in Minnesota for 10 years, and nothing else except a lot of things nobody ever knew before and do not know now.

Mr. Chairman, with a prodigious effort he got within four years of to-day, and he did get a report of the tax commission; but if he had industry equal to his capacity to speak, he would get the figures now, and would find that since 1909 an entirely new range has been opened, greater, perhaps, than either of the others, and in which the Steel Corporation does not own one ton and does not control one ton of iron ore; and if he will come down to this point, he will also find that the Steel Corporation has given up its Hill lease and thereby lost a quarter of its holdings; and having done that, he will find that I told the truth. [Applause on the Republican side.] I invite the gentleman from rhetoric to facts. I invite the gentleman from vituperation to honest and careful consideration of the truth that the House and the country may know the facts. [Applause on the Republican side.]

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Mr. Chairman, I entirely agree with the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. MILLER] in his characterization of the statements of the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. STANLEY]. The only question in my mind is whether the gentleman from Minnesota is not wasting his time in undertaking to educate him, but I will add one more correction for the benefit of the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. STANLEY]. He stated that the independent manufacturers were not able to make pig iron, and that they bought it from the Steel Trust. He was not within 14,000,000 tons of being correct in that statement. The independents manufacture 44 per cent of the pig iron produced in this country.

And now I yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. GARDNER].

Mr. GARDNER. Mr. Chairman, I am of the opinion that the most recent figures read by the gentleman from Kentucky took no account of the fact that the United States Steel Corporation has canceled its biggest lease, and that the iron-ore lands involved in that lease are no longer in the control of that corporation. Now, I only say it from memory, Mr. Chairman, because I have not had a chance to examine the facts lately, but I am quite sure—and I am speaking only as one of the committee that investigated the United States Steel Corporation—that last summer I came to the conclusion that this Steel Corporation owns or controls between 50 and 55 per cent of the Lake Superior ore lands. I can not tell just at the present instant the figures on which I based that conclusion a year ago, but I shall look them up. At all events, as a result of the cancellation of the Hill ore lease, the whole situation has been changed since the figures were prepared which have just been read by the gentleman from Kentucky.

Mr. BUCHANAN of Illinois. Will the gentleman yield? Have you information as to whether or not the Steel Corporation has secured control of the transportation lines, namely, the ore vessels that transport the ore from Mesabi Range to the mills? Is it not a fact that they are in a position to collect a rebate from those who own and produce that ore?

Mr. GARDNER. Well, the best of my recollection is that the Steel Corporation controls two railroads which transport the iron ore from the Minnesota ranges down to Lake Superior. The railroads are the Duluth, Missabe & Northern and the Duluth & Iron Range.

Mr. MILLER. It is true they control those two, but there are four roads now hauling ore from the range.

Mr. GARDNER. Let me answer from my recollection. I am trying to answer the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. BUCHANAN]. I think, at all events, in a large part of that territory, as I remember it, the Steel Corporation had a monopoly of the transportation to the lake. The gentleman from Minnesota in front of me says that the monopoly exists only with regard to ores of the Vermilion Range. The Vermilion is the second most important range.

I rather gathered the impression that it was to the corporation's advantage to have the railroads charge as high rates as possible. Obviously payments made by the Steel Corporation on account of freight pass from one pocket into another inasmuch as the corporation owns the railroads. On the other hand, excessive payments by competitors swell the corporation's profits, at the same time handicapping its competitors. Although I felt that there was great exaggeration in the statements with regard to these excessive payments, nevertheless, I came to the conclusion that the corporation ought not to be permitted to own those railroads. I am inclined to doubt whether it is a sufficient remedy to empower the Interstate Commerce Commission to control rates on those ore roads. Now, with regard to the lake transportation—as I remember it, there is free competition on the Lakes.

Mr. BUCHANAN of Illinois. If the gentleman will permit, I just read an article in the newspapers where there had been a combination of all the lake-shipping interests, and the Steel Trust was really in control of the whole matter.

Mr. GARDNER. I am simply speaking of the conditions as they were when the investigating committee sat. My impression at the time was that there was free competition on the Lakes, but that the Steel Corporation had an advantage; perhaps they were entitled to it and perhaps they were not. It was largely due to the remarkable foresight displayed by its managers or their predecessors in securing advantageous terminal facilities. In the matter of lake terminals, to the best of my recollection, the United States Steel Corporation has a conspicuous advantage.

For instance, from Conneaut, on Lake Erie, to Pittsburgh, the corporation owns a railroad called the Bessemer & Lake Erie, or the Pittsburgh, Bessemer & Lake Erie—I always forget which railroad is the holding company. Obviously the higher the freight rate charged the better it is for the Steel Corporation. On its own freight its payments pass out of one pocket into the other pocket.

In the case of its competitors the situation is quite otherwise, I did not take the point of view of some gentlemen that this opportunity was flagrantly and outrageously abused. Nevertheless, I doubt whether the Steel Corporation ought to be allowed to own the Pittsburgh, Bessemer & Lake Erie Railroad.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the pro forma amendment will be withdrawn. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

108. Iron or steel anchors or parts thereof; forgings of iron or steel, or of combined iron and steel, but not machined, tooled, or otherwise advanced in condition by any process or operation subsequent to the forging process, not specially provided for in this section, 15 per cent ad valorem; antifriction balls, ball bearings, and roller bearings, of iron or steel or other metal, finished or unfinished, 35 per cent ad valorem.

Mr. PALMER. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. PALMER].

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 28, line 18, insert, after the word "unfinished," the words "and parts thereof."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. PALMER].

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. Chairman, I rise for the purpose of asking a question of the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. PALMER].

Under the bill of the last Congress friction balls and ball bearings and roller bearings were subject to a duty of 25 per cent. That duty seems to have been increased to 35 per cent in this bill. I would like to know the reason for this change of heart.

Mr. PALMER. The reason for it is that we found on further investigation that of the amount of production of ball bearings and antifriction ball bearings in this country the imports under the present rate were a larger proportion of the domestic production than had been supposed. The old rate is 45 per cent, which is now highly protective, because about 75 per cent of the antifriction balls are imported into this country—75 per cent of the American production. I speak roughly; I can not give you the exact figures. So that we raised the rate from 25 per cent to 35 per cent, believing that it was already highly competitive.

Mr. ANDERSON. Does not the gentleman think it remarkable that he did not have this all-important information when he wrote the other bill?

Mr. PALMER. Well, I think the situation is somewhat changed since the other bill was prepared, and I will say that we had more information at the time this bill was written than we had two years ago or a year and a half ago, of course, because we have been working upon these matters ever since.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I congratulate the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. PALMER] that he has raised the rate on these ball bearings from 25 per cent, as proposed a year ago, to 35 per cent. The present rate is 45 per cent.

The raising of the rate from 25 per cent, as contained in the bill a year ago, to 35 per cent is intended as a protection measure, pure and simple. If the rate were fixed at 25 per cent, all of these ball bearings could be imported. With a 35 per cent rate it is expected that there will be practically no increase of importations and no change in price in this country. The addition from 25 to 35 per cent is intended to protect the industries of the country. I hope it will be a successful protection, and to the extent that it is protective I congratulate my distinguished friend from Pennsylvania and welcome him, to that extent, to the protection ranks. [Applause on the Republican side.]

Mr. PALMER. Well, if the gentleman from Illinois will excuse me——

Mr. MANN. Certainly——

Mr. PALMER. He will understand that in an article where the rate is now competitive, so that perhaps three-quarters of the amount of the American product comes through the custom-house, the result of an increase from 25 per cent to 35 per cent will simply be an increase in the revenue which the Government will receive.

Mr. MANN. But there is no pretense that there will be any increase in the revenue by this measure, from this paragraph.

Mr. PALMER. Yes.

Mr. MANN. Unless the gentleman again repudiates the figure submitted by his committee.

Mr. PALMER. Thirty-five per cent is more than 25 per cent. The gentleman knows that, or ought to know it.

Mr. MANN. The duty collected on these articles under the present law in 1912 was $679,000. The gentleman estimates that under this bill there will be collected $560,000. It is certainly not as a revenue measure that the gentleman proposes to decrease the amount of collections. This duty is raised as a protection measure. Whether it will be successful or not I do not undertake to say.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. PALMER].

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

111. All iron or steel sheets, plates, or strips, and all hoop, band, or scroll iron or steel, when galvanized or coated with zinc, spelter, or other metals, or any alloy of those metals; sheets or plates composed of iron, steel, copper, nickel, or other metal with layers of other metal or metals imposed thereon by forging, hammering, rolling, or welding; sheets of iron or steel, polished, planished, or glanced, by whatever name designated, including such as have been pickled or cleaned by acid, or by any other material or process, or which are cold rolled, smoothed only, not polished, and such as are cold hammered, blued, brightened, tempered, or polished by any process to such perfected surface finish or polish better than the grade of cold rolled, smoothed only; and sheets or plates of iron or steel, or taggers iron or steel, coated with tin or lead, or with a mixture of which these metals, or either of them is a component part, by the dipping or any other process, and commercially known as tin plates, terne plates, and taggers tin, 20 per cent ad valorem.

Mr. PALMER. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Pennsylvania offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 29, line 16, after the word "valorem," strike out the period and insert the following:

"Tin plates, coated with metal, and metal sheets decorated in colors or coated with nickel or other metals, by dipping, printing, stenciling, or other process, 20 per cent ad valorem."

Mr. PALMER. Mr. Chairman, the purpose of this amendment can be stated very briefly. This is the tin-plate paragraph. There is no provision in the law for tin plate covered with other metal, and under the law as written any such plates would come in under the basket clause in this bill at 25 per cent. We think they should bear the same rate when covered with metal as steel sheets bear when covered with tin, and consequently we insert them here, where they logically belong.

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. Chairman, no man has had much opportunity to know very much about this schedule. There has not been sufficient time for any man to examine it carefully; but this paragraph seems to me entirely and wholly inexcusable. It puts a number of products, made by different processes, in different stages of manufacture, all at the same ad valorem rate. In many instances that ad valorem rate is in excess of the total labor cost, and I am inclined to think in excess of the total converting cost involved in bringing the article to the state of manufacture covered by this paragraph.

Under the Payne law the articles in this paragraph were covered by specific duties covering the conversion cost, in some instances much higher than the conversion cost, it is true, but conforming in most particulars to the conversion cost involved in making the article. The 20 per cent duty provided in this bill is, in many instances, as I have said, several times the labor cost involved in bringing the article to the stage of manufacture covered by the paragraph. In many instances 5 per cent would be amply sufficient to cover the difference in cost of production at home and abroad. The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. PALMER] will more nearly conform to the pledge of his party for downward revision if he follows the classification pursued in the Payne law and reduces some of the rates provided in this paragraph instead of increasing the rates by the application of a flat rate of 20 per cent ad valorem.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. PALMER].

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HULINGS. Mr. Chairman, I desire to ask my colleague from Pennsylvania [Mr. PALMER] a question that perhaps I should have propounded under the one hundred and ninth paragraph of the bill. I understand the design is to make cotton ties free, whilst other hoops of iron or steel are subject to an ad valorem duty of 12 per cent. Now, I am told that the same phraseology has been used in this paragraph, putting cotton ties on the free list, as formerly was used in other tariff bills where cotton ties were put in with other hoops and strips of steel subjected to a duty. I desire to ask the gentleman from Pennsylvania if he is satisfied that there is a sufficient distinction made in describing the cotton ties in the five hundred and fourteenth section of the free list, or if he does not think that there are a great many strips of steel that are not designed for cotton ties that might be imported under the one hundred and ninth section?

Mr. PALMER. I will say to my colleague that the language of section 514 was drafted after a conference with experts in the Treasury Department, and we believe it is clear enough to cover simply cotton ties and baling ties.

Mr. HULINGS. How is it with the one hundred and ninth section—hoops and bands of steel and iron?

Mr. PALMER. Section 109 provides for band iron or steel "not otherwise provided for in this section," which means, as far as that paragraph is concerned, "not provided for in paragraph 514," which is also a part of the same section as paragraph 109. So under the bill as it now stands cotton ties would come in under 514 free, and all band, hoop, or scroll iron under 109 at 12 per cent.

Mr. HULINGS. Mr. Chairman, if the gentleman is satisfied that that makes the distinction, very well.

Mr. PALMER. I am satisfied that it makes it as clearly as language can make it. We intended to put cotton ties on the free list in paragraph 514, and it is so written. In the opinion of the cotton producer and the persons who buy cotton ties, in the opinion of the manufacturers of hoop and band iron, it will put cotton ties on the free list. The only question is whether in doing it something else which looks like cotton ties may go on the free list. But I call the gentleman's attention to the fact that section 514 requires something to have been done to the hoop or band steel to indicate the purpose for which it is going to be used, and that process will be a sufficient indication to allow only such ties to come in.

I recognize that there is some difficulty about it. There may be trouble about it, but in accordance with our purpose to put baling ties on the free list, it being impossible to make it more definite, we believe that we have got as near to our purpose as we can.

Mr. HULINGS. Mr. Chairman, I would like to say that I have a communication from the Sharon Hoop Steel Co., a large independent concern in my district making these articles, and they suggest that under the phraseology used in section 514, which is the same as heretofore used in describing ties as hoops or bands when they were all subject to duty, that they believe that the division of cotton ties in that paragraph 514 should be as stated in this letter, which was directed to the chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means.

SHARON STEEL HOOP CO.,
Sharon, Pa., April 21, 1913.

DEAR SIR: I would respectfully direct your attention to paragraph No. 518 in the free list of the Underwood bill now under consideration in the House. This paragraph reads:

"Hoop or band iron or hoop or band steel, cut to lengths, or wholly or partly manufactured into hoops or ties, coated or not coated with paint or any other preparation, with or without buckles or fastenings, for baling cotton or any other commodity."

As I understood, when appearing before your committee, this was designed to admit cotton ties only to this country free of duty. As the paragraph is worded it will be impossible for even an expert in the steel business to prevent the free importation of hoops and other similar commodities unless the phraseology is changed.

Paragraph No. 111 of Schedule C of the bill provides for a duty on hoops and bands or scroll iron or steel of 12 per cent ad valorem, and the two paragraphs are necessarily conflicting.

If I am correct in my understanding that it is the purpose of the committee to admit cotton ties free, but to give to hoops and bands the same rate of duty as to other like steel commodities for revenue purposes, then there is no doubt but that the phraseology of paragraph No. 518 should be changed. As a cotton tie is a strip of steel 15/16 of an inch wide by 20 gauge, coated with cotton varnish, put up in bundles of 45 each, each bundle having 30 buckles, I would earnestly urge that a wording more correctly describing cotton ties be given, and in order to make the description broad enough to leave no question about cotton ties, regardless of some slight variation from the standard width, gauge, and length, being admitted free, would ask, if possible, that this paragraph be changed to read as follows:

"Strips of iron or steel narrower than 1¼ inches and lighter than 15 wire gauge, cut to length, painted or unpainted, with or without buckles, for baling cotton or any other commodity, and to be used as baling ties only."

Your attention to this matter will be greatly appreciated.

Very truly, yours,

SHARON STEEL HOOP CO.,
———— ————, President.

Those are the suggestions of a gentleman who is in that business who fears that in the importation there will be a great many strips that look like cotton ties and fall within the phraseology, but which may be imported under paragraph 514 when they ought to fall under another paragraph carrying a tariff duty of 12 per cent.

Mr. STANLEY. Mr. Chairman, I seldom quote figures from memory. Gentlemen who have furnished us with many broad assertions have quoted no figures, and have shown no authority whatever. I am so well acquainted with the data in this case that I can quote it accurately from memory. I wish to put in the RECORD certain statements from the report of Commissioner Neill, whom a Democratic President wished to keep in power on account of his ability and conservatism.

As you understand, about 80 per cent of the ores on the Mesabi Range prior to giving up the Hill leases were controlled by the Steel Corporation. The company which mined the ores was known as the Oliver Iron Mining Co. Of the total in the year 1907 of 12,018 employees, only 879 were native born. Those of foreign birth being 84.4 per cent of the total number of employees. Almost one-half foreign born, 49.3 per cent, had not resided in the United States over two years. I will put in the RECORD a table showing that out of 10,000 only 452 had resided 6 years; 3,237, 5 years; 900, 4 years; and only 1,205 over 10 years. Only 48.6 per cent of the employees considered in this table can speak English.

The table is as follows:

POPULATION AND NATIONALITY.

The mines have attracted a population remarkable in several ways. The increase of numbers has been rapid. The following table shows the population of the chief range communities in 1895, 1900, and 1905:

Population in the chief mining communities of St. Louis County, Minn., 1895, 1900, and 1905.

[From the Fifth Decennial Census of Minnesota, 1905, p. 42.]

Localities.	1895	1900[1]	1905
			Number.	Percent of increase over 1895.
Aurora village	.....	.....	336	.....
Biwabik Township	365	500	541	48.2
Biwabik village	1,011	1,299	946	[2]6.4
Breitung (including Soudan)	1,464	2,034	1,344	[2]31.2
Buhl village	.....	.....	788	.....
Chisholm village	.....	.....	4,231	.....
Ely city	2,260	3,717	4,045	79.0
Eveleth city	764	2,752	5,332	597.9
Fayal Township	222	1,016	1,316	492.8
Hibbing village	1,085	2,481	6,566	505.2
McKinley village	136	262	232	70.6
Mesabi Mountain Township	708	1,296	940	32.8
Mountain Iron village	443	470	604	36.3
Sparta village	.....	950	960	.....
Stuntz Township	68	1,083	1,749	2,472.1
Tower city	1,265	1,366	1,340	5.9
Virginia city	3,647	2,962	6,056	66.1
St. Louis County (excluding Duluth)	19,199	29,963	52,571	173.8

[1] Figures from the Twelfth Census of the United States. [2] Decrease.

Several of these communities show an enormous increase in population from 1895 to 1905, while only two show a decline.

Of the population of St. Louis County, 84 per cent reside in cities or villages, which is very conclusive as to the predominance of the iron-ore industry.

The leading nationalities were Finnish, Austrian, Swedish, Canadian, and Norwegian, in the order named. As shown by the State census of 1905, the nationalities represented and their respective numbers in the chief mining centers were as follows:

Principal foreign-born elements of the population in the chief range communities of Minnesota, 1905.

[Data from the Fifth Decennial Census of Minnesota, 1905, p. 177.]

Localities.	Country of birth.
	Germany.	Sweden.	Norway.	Denmark.	Canada.	Ireland.	England.	Russia.
Vermilion Range:
Breitung (including Soudan)	7	130	21	2	7	3	20	.....
Ely city	22	101	29	5	55	9	104	13
Tower city	10	156	67	1	85	9	23	10
Mesabi Range:
Aurora village	8	26	7	1	16	4	12	3
Biwabik Township	2	37	20	2	18	2	16	.....
Biwabik village	12	57	26	2	38	8	19	6
Buhl village	9	64	23	.....	24	1	6	7
Chisholm village	21	206	93	2	110	19	87	47
Eveleth city	38	325	77	6	151	39	119	65
Fayal Township	14	85	22	1	16	10	20	8
Hibbing village	72	516	314	9	498	.....	78	47
McKinley village	1	15	21	.....	1	2	6	1
Mesabi Mountain Township	7	38	2	.....	20	11	37	5
Mountain Iron village	5	20	17	5	34	13	14	4
Sparta village	5	17	8	.....	42	5	9	24
Stuntz Township	12	65	47	2	148	10	3	10
Virginia city	120	557	296	7	337	53	71	89
St. Louis County outside Duluth	770	4,228	1,898	112	2,433	312	763	400

Localities.	Country of birth.				Total foreign born.	Total native born.	Total population.
	Poland.	Finland.	Austria.	All other.
Vermilion Range:
Breitung (including Soudan)	.....	280	180	9	659	685	1,344
Ely city	.....	911	852	122	2,222	1,823	4,045
Tower city	.....	184	29	19	593	747	1,340
Mesabi Range:
Aurora village	1	62	44	14	198	138	336
Biwabik Township	.....	111	98	14	320	221	541
Biwabik village	.....	287	44	17	516	430	946
Buhl village	.....	200	64	50	448	340	788
Chisholm village	43	1,197	693	187	2,705	1,526	4,231
Eveleth city	1	1,145	676	333	2,975	2,357	5,332
Fayal Township	5	152	430	164	927	389	1,316
Hibbing village	30	1,169	323	481	3,537	3,029	6,566
McKinley village	.....	31	34	4	116	116	232
Mesabi Mountain Township	.....	250	130	31	531	409	940
Mountain Iron village	.....	127	14	37	290	314	604
Sparta village	.....	347	116	11	584	376	960
Stuntz Township	9	220	279	299	1,104	645	1,749
Virginia city	77	1,193	136	123	3,059	2,997	6,056
St. Louis County outside Duluth	296	9,945	4,461	2,313	27,929	24,642	52,571

No statistics as to nationality are regularly kept by the mining companies, but the Oliver Iron Mining Co. has taken a census of its own employees at different times, the results of which are given below:

Length of residence in the United States of foreign-born employees of the Oliver Iron Mining Co., May 1, 1907, by race or people.

[Data supplied by the Oliver Iron Mining Co.]

Race or people.	Number living in the United States—
	Under 1 year.	1 year.	2 years.	3 years.	4 years.	5 years.	6 years.
Austrian	135	199	155	92	76	55	29
Bohemian	3	14	8	3	4	3	3
Bosnian	24	58	39	11	9	3	1
Bulgarian	79	67	41	23	2	5	.....
Croatian	280	496	419	240	141	103	56
Czech	2	5	1	1	1	.....	.....
Dalmatian	43	34	25	4	10	4	1
English	.....	9	6	1	4	9	5
Finnish	263	389	464	244	271	263	134
Flemish	.....	2	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
French	3	4	4	1	2	2	3
French-Canadian	1	2	.....	1	.....	2	2
German	49	27	30	16	7	4	4
Greek	.....	.....	.....	1	1	.....	.....
Hebrew	.....	1	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
Hervat	2	3	4	2	3	2	3
Hungarian	8	8	12	5	3	3	1
Irish	.....	1	.....	1	2	1	2

Length of residence in the United States of foreign-born employees of the Oliver Iron Mining Co., etc.—Continued.

Race or people.	Number living in the United States—
	Under 1 year.	1 year.	2 years.	3 years.	4 years.	5 years.	6 years.
Italian	27	39	40	19	37	24	14
Italian (north)	23	65	50	23	31	30	19
Italian (south)	43	79	101	50	47	54	35
Japanese			2
Korean						1
Lithuanian	1		1
Macedonian	1
Magyar	19	34	46	21	36	24	10
Montenegrin	35	40	21	5	1
Polish	12	33	20	22	16	10	6
Roumanian	1	1	2	1
Russian	3	11	8	9	7	4
Ruthenian						1	1
Scandinavian	29	23	44	30	35	28	26
Scotch	1	1	1	1	2		2
Servian	16	29	18	15	7	6	2
Slav	26	30	26	23	20	12	12
Slovak	46	47	68	29	33	40	20
Slovenian	25	66	85	42	47	44	27
Syrian						1
Tyrolese	5	10	18	13	18	11	9
Not reported	56	73	84	29	44	27	25
Total	1,261	1,879	1,856	976	917	776	452

Race or people.	Number living in the United States—						Total foreign born.
	7 years.	8 years.	9 years.	10 years.	Over 10 years.	Years not reported.
Arabian	1						1
Austrian	19	16	5	4	27	2	814
Bohemian					11		49
Bosnian						1	146
Bulgarian	1	1			1		210
Croatian	25	29	13	12	59	8	1,881
Czech					1		11
Dalmatian	4	3		1			129
Dutch					2		2
English	2	5		5	114		160
Finnish	127	73	35	43	216	3	2,525
Flemish					1		3
French		2	2	1	44	1	69
French-Canadian	1	4	1		8		22
German	3	3	2	3	42		190
Greek					1		3
Hebrew	1				3		5
Hervat	1						20
Hungarian		3			5		48
Indian		1					1
Irish	1	1			71	1	81
Italian	12	3	1	3	15	1	235
Italian (north)	9	9	5	5	26	3	298
Italian (south)	26	12	5	8	35		495
Japanese							2
Korean							1
Lithuanian					1		3
Macedonian							1
Magyar	1	4	4	2	9		210
Montenegrin							102
Polish	9	1		5	15	2	151
Roumanian							5
Russian	1	2			5		50
Ruthenian					1		3
Scandinavian	14	23	12	11	241	5	521
Scotch	2	2			41		53
Scotch-Irish					1		1
Servian	1				1		95
Slav	10	7	4	3	18		191
Slovak	18	11	2	6	38	1	359
Slovenian	19	12	3	8	34	3	415
Syrian							1
Tyrolese	1	4	2	1	17		109
Welsh					3		3
Not reported	14	5	4	4	98	2	465
Total	323	236	100	125	1,205	33	10,139

Of the 12,018 employees of this company in 1907 only 1,879 were native born, those of foreign birth being 84.4 per cent of the total number employed. Almost half of the foreign born, 49.3 per cent, had not resided in the United States over two years. The races showing a large proportion who had resided in this country 10 years and over were: The Irish, with 87.7 per cent; Scotch, 77.4 per cent; English, 74.4 per cent; Scandinavian, 48.4 per cent; and German, 23.7 per cent. Those with a small proportion were: Bulgarians, with less than one-half of 1 per cent; Austrians and Croatians, with only 3.8 per cent; Italians, 8.9 per cent; Finns, 10.3 per cent; and Slavs, 11 per cent. Of all the foreign-born employees but 13.1 per cent had resided in the United States 10 years and over. The principal races with a residence of less than a year were the Montenegrins, with 34.3 per cent; Austrians, 16.6 per cent; Croatians, 14.9 per cent; Slavs, 13.6 per cent; and Slovaks, 12.8 per cent. Of all the foreign-born employees 12.4 per cent had resided in the United States less than one year.

In the following tabulation, which was furnished by the Oliver Iron Mining Co., American includes Canadians, English, Irish, and Scotch; Austrian includes, among others, Bulgarians, Bohemians, Hungarians, and Montenegrins; French and German includes Belgians, Swiss, and Hollanders; Finnish includes Russians; and Scandinavian includes Norwegians, Swedes, and Danes.

Nationality of the employees of the Oliver Iron Mining Co. on the various ranges of the Lake Superior region July 1, 1908, by locality.

[Data supplied by the Oliver Iron Mining Co.]

Locality.	American.		Austrian.		French and German.
	Number.	Per cent.	Number.	Per cent.	Number.	Per cent.
Mesabi Range:
Hibbing district	628	21.9	1,326	46.2	140	4.9
Mountain Iron district	217	22.9	446	47.1	16	1.7
Eveleth (Fayal) district	296	27.4	316	29.2	40	3.7
Eveleth (Adams) district	225	18.9	544	45.8	12	1.0
Biwabik district	74	20.9	204	57.5	4	1.1
Canisteo district	383	28.2	606	44.6	77	5.7
Total	1,823	23.4	3,442	44.1	289	3.7
Vermilion Range	85	15.3	291	52.2	13	2.3
Marquette Range	680	49.2	20	1.5	10	.7
Menominee Range	195	16.5	120	10.2	141	12.0
Gogebic Range	442	28.3	109	7.0	38	2.4
Grand total	3,225	25.8	3,982	31.9	491	3.9

Locality.	Finnish.		Italian.		Polish.
	Number.	Per cent.	Number.	Per cent.	Number.	Per cent.
Mesabi Range:
Hibbing district	212	7.4	378	13.2	65	2.2
Mountain Iron district	100	10.6	79	8.4
Eveleth (Fayal) district	125	11.6	165	15.3	1	.1
Eveleth (Adams) district	188	15.8	123	10.3	20	1.7
Biwabik district	53	14.9	3	.8	2	.6
Canisteo district	92	6.8	51	3.7	5	.4
Total	770	9.9	799	10.2	93	1.2
Vermilion Range	100	18.0	21	3.8
Marquette Range	415	30.0	108	7.8	7	.5
Menominee Range	81	6.9	201	17.0	79	6.7
Gogebic Range	405	26.0	162	10.4	199	12.7
Grand total	1,771	14.2	1,291	10.4	378	3.0

Locality.	Scandinavian.		Miscellaneous.		Total.
	Number.	Per cent.	Number.	Per cent.	Number.	Per cent.
Mesabi Range:
Hibbing district	116	4.0	6	0.2	2,871	100.0
Mountain Iron district	88	9.3			946	100.0
Eveleth (Fayal) district	135	12.5	2	.2	1,080	100.0
Eveleth (Adams) district	69	5.8	8	.7	1,189	100.0
Biwabik district	15	4.2			355	100.0
Canisteo district	143	10.5	2	.1	1,359	100.0
Total	566	7.3	18	.2	7,800	100.0
Vermilion Range	47	8.4			557	100.0
Marquette Range	142	10.3			1,382	100.0
Menominee Range	362	30.7			1,179	100.0
Gogebic Range	204	13.1	1	.1	1,560	100.0
Grand total	1,321	10.6	19	.2	12,478	100.0

Nationality of the employees of the Oliver Iron Mining Co. on the various ranges of the Lake Superior region June 1, 1908, by locality.

[Data supplied by the Oliver Iron Mining Co.]

Locality.	American.		Austrian.		Finnish.
	Number.	Per cent.	Number.	Per cent.	Number.	Per cent.
Mesabi Range:
Hibbing district	472	29.5	671	41.9	67	4.2
Chisholm district	149	9.1	1,002	61.5	154	9.5
Mountain Iron district	178	24.7	236	32.8	170	23.6
Eveleth (Fayal) district	262	20.7	377	29.8	256	20.2
Eveleth (Adams) district	283	21.4	603	45.7	140	10.6
Biwabik district	53	16.6	193	60.5	45	14.1
Canisteo district	355	22.8	733	47.1	131	8.4
Total	1,752	20.8	3,815	45.4	963	11.5
Vermilion Range	99	12.9	402	52.6	175	22.9
Marquette Range	739	49.5	40	2.7	372	24.9
Menominee Range	228	15.8	165	11.5	98	6.8
Gogebic Range	435	22.7	137	7.1	625	32.5
Grand total	3,253	23.2	4,559	32.5	2,233	15.9

Nationality of the employees of the Oliver Iron Mining Co., etc.—Contd.

Locality.	German.		French.		Italian.
	Number.	Per cent.	Number.	Per cent.	Number.	Per cent.
Mesabi Range:
Hibbing district	52	3.3	47	2.9	209	13.1
Mountain Iron district	5	.3	2	.1	155	9.5
Eveleth (Fayal) district	.....	.....	12	1.7	36	5.0
Eveleth (Adams) district	17	1.3	.....	.....	224	17.7
Biwabik district	9	.7	4	.3	177	13.4
Canisteo district	4	1.3	.....	.....	3	.9
	31	2.0	80	5.2	33	2.1
Total	118	1.4	145	1.7	837	10.0
Vermilion Range	2	.3	4	.5	30	3.9
Marquette Range	13	.9	5	.4	178	11.9
Menominee Range	33	2.3	122	8.5	284	19.7
Gogebic Range	12	.6	37	1.9	232	12.1
Grand total	178	1.3	313	2.2	1,561	11.1

Locality.	Scandinavian.		Polish.		Total.
	Number.	Per cent.	Number.	Per cent.	Number.	Per cent.
Mesabi Range:
Hibbing district	59	3.7	23	1.4	1,600	100.0
Chisholm district	104	6.4	58	3.6	1,629	100.0
Mountain Iron district	88	12.2	.....	.....	720	100.0
Eveleth (Fayal) district	108	8.5	23	1.8	1,267	100.0
Eveleth (Adams) district	84	6.4	20	1.5	1,320	100.0
Biwabik district	21	6.6	.....	.....	319	100.0
Canisteo district	179	11.5	14	.9	1,556	100.0
Total	643	7.6	138	1.6	8,411	100.0
Vermilion Range	53	6.9	.....	.....	765	100.0
Marquette Range	145	9.7	.....	.....	1,492	100.0
Menominee Range	407	28.3	102	7.1	1,439	100.0
Gogebic Range	184	9.6	260	13.5	1,922	100.0
Grand total	1,432	10.2	500	3.6	14,029	100.0

This company had 12,478 employees on July 1, 1908. The Americans were 25.8 per cent of this number. The Austrians were the most numerous, with 31.9 per cent. On the Vermilion range 52.2 per cent of the employees were Austrians.

On June 1, 1909, this company had 14,029 employees, of whom 23.2 per cent were Americans, 32.5 per cent Austrians, 15.9 per cent Finnish, etc. Those nationalities that showed an increased proportion employed in 1909 compared with 1908 were Austrians, Finnish, Italians, and Polish. Those that decreased were Americans, French, German, and Scandinavians.

Number and per cent of foreign-born employees of the Oliver Iron Mining Co. who speak English, May 1, 1907, by race or people.

[Data supplied by the Oliver Iron Mining Co. Figures do not include 25 persons not reporting as to whether they do or do not speak English.]

Race or people.	Speak English.		Do not speak English.	Total.
	Number.	Per cent.
Arabian	1	100.0	.....	1
Austrian	244	30.0	570	814
Bohemian	25	51.0	24	49
Bosnian	29	19.9	117	146
Bulgarian	24	11.4	186	210
Croatian	580	30.8	1,310	1,881
Czech	2	18.2	9	11
Dalmatian	44	34.1	85	129
Dutch	2	100.0	.....	2
English	160	100.0	.....	160
Finnish	1,372	54.4	1,151	2,523
Flemish	1	33.3	2	3
French	64	92.8	5	69
French-Canadian	20	90.9	2	22
German	84	44.2	106	190
Greek	2	66.7	1	3
Hebrew	4	80.0	1	5
Hervat	9	45.0	11	20
Hungarian	23	47.9	25	48
Indian	1	100.0	.....	1
Irish	81	100.0	.....	81
Italian	146	62.1	89	235
Italian (north)	164	55.0	134	298
Italian (south)	257	51.9	238	495
Japanese	2	100.0	.....	2
Korean	1	100.0	.....	1
Lithuanian	3	100.0	.....	3
Macedonian	1	100.0	.....	1
Magyar	72	34.3	138	210
Montenegrin	28	27.5	74	102
Polish	70	46.4	81	151
Roumanian	2	40.0	3	5
Russian	22	44.0	28	50
Ruthenian	3	100.0	.....	3

Number and per cent of foreign-born employees, etc.—Continued.

Race or people.	Speak English.		Do not speak English.	Total.
	Number.	Per cent.
Scandinavian	451	87.6	64	515
Scotch	53	100.0	.....	53
Scotch-Irish	1	100.0	.....	1
Servian	14	14.7	81	95
Slav	71	37.2	120	191
Slovak	145	40.4	214	359
Slovenian	327	79.0	87	414
Syrian	1	100.0	.....	1
Tyrolese	68	62.4	41	109
Welsh	3	100.0	.....	3
Not reported	240	53.5	209	449
Total	4,917	48.6	5,197	10,114

Only 48.6 per cent of the employees considered in this table can speak English. A considerable number of the races reported 100 per cent able to speak English, but the number of persons involved is too small upon which to base a conclusion. Austrians report 30 per cent; Croatians, 30.8 per cent; Magyars, 34.3 per cent; Slavs, 37.2 per cent; and Slovaks, 40.4 per cent speaking English, while the Italians report 55.2 per cent; Finnish, 54.4 per cent; Slovenians, 79 per cent; and Scandinavians, 87.6 per cent who speak English.

Number and per cent of foreign-born employees of the Oliver Iron Mining Co., 5 years in the United States, who have become naturalized, May 1, 1907, by race or people.

[Data supplied by the Oliver Iron Mining Co. Figures do not include 68 persons not reporting as to naturalization.]

Race of people.	Naturalized.		Not naturalized.	Total.
	Number.	Per cent.
Arabian	.....	.....	1	1
Austrian	52	33.5	103	155
Bohemian	9	52.9	8	17
Bosnian	.....	.....	4	4
Bulgarian	2	25.0	6	8
Croatian	73	24.6	224	297
Czech	1	100.0	.....	1
Dalmatian	2	15.4	11	13
Dutch	2	100.0	.....	2
English	114	83.2	23	137
Finnish	310	34.9	578	888
Flemish	.....	.....	1	1
French	40	81.6	9	49
French-Canadian	9	50.0	9	18
German	41	68.3	19	60
Greek	1	100.0	.....	1
Hebrew	3	100.0	.....	3
Hervat	.....	.....	6	6
Hungarian	6	50.0	6	12
Indian	.....	.....	1	1
Irish	65	87.8	9	74
Italian	22	30.6	50	72
Italian (north)	35	34.3	67	102
Italian (south)	53	30.5	121	174
Korean	.....	.....	1	1
Lithuanian	.....	.....	1	1
Magyar	7	13.0	47	54
Polish	11	25.0	33	44
Russian	5	41.7	7	12
Ruthenian	1	33.3	2	3
Scandinavian	242	69.5	106	348
Scotch	33	82.5	7	40
Scotch-Irish	1	100.0	.....	1
Servian	1	11.1	8	9
Slav	21	31.8	45	66
Slovak	42	31.1	93	135
Slovenian	34	28.6	85	119
Syrian	.....	.....	1	1
Tyrolese	27	60.0	18	45
Welsh	3	100.0	.....	3
Not reported	83	48.5	88	171
Total	1,351	42.9	1,798	3,149

There have been naturalized 42.9 per cent of those who have been in the United States five years. About one-third of the Austrians, Finns, Italians, Slavs, and Slovaks have availed themselves of citizenship through the naturalization laws. Over 80 per cent of the English, Irish, and Scotch and 69.5 per cent of the Scandinavians are naturalized.

Number and per cent of foreign-born employees of the Oliver Iron Mining Co., 21 years of age and over, reporting conjugal condition, May 1, 1907, by race or people.

[Data supplied by the Oliver Iron Mining Co.]

Race or people.	Married.		Single.	Total.
	Number.	Per cent.
Arabian	.....	.....	1	1
Austrian	343	52.3	313	656
Bohemian	21	52.5	19	40
Bosnian	78	68.4	36	114

Number and per cent of foreign-born employees, etc.—Continued.

Race or people.	Married.		Single.	Total.
	Number.	Per cent.
Bulgarian	118	64.8	64	182
Croatian	903	58.4	642	1,545
Czech	4	40.0	6	10
Dalmatian	73	74.5	25	98
Dutch	1	50.0	1	2
English	89	58.2	64	153
Finnish	902	39.3	1,392	2,294
Flemish	1	33.3	2	3
French	41	63.1	24	65
French-Canadian	21	95.5	1	22
German	100	58.8	70	170
Greek	2	66.7	1	3
Hebrew	1	33.3	2	3
Hervat	10	52.6	9	19
Hungarian	27	62.8	16	43
Indian			1	1
Irish	36	45.0	44	80
Italian	106	50.7	103	209
Italian, north	147	56.5	113	260
Italian, south	263	59.2	181	444
Japanese			1	1
Korean	1	100.0		1
Lithuanian	1	33.3	2	3
Macedonian	1	100.0		1
Magyar	100	54.9	82	182
Montenegrin	26	34.7	49	75
Polish	65	47.4	72	137
Roumanian	4	80.0	1	5
Russian	23	53.5	20	43
Ruthenian	2	100.0		2
Scandinavian	225	47.5	249	474
Scotch	28	54.9	23	51
Scotch-Irish	1	100.0		1
Servian	31	46.3	36	67
Slav	95	57.2	71	166
Slovak	167	54.6	139	306
Slovenian	202	56.6	155	357
Syrian			1	1
Tyrolese	43	41.7	60	103
Welsh	1	33.3	2	3
Not reported	235	58.8	165	400
Total	4,538	51.6	4,258	8,796

Mr. MILLER. Will the gentleman give the figures showing that?

Mr. STANLEY. I will.

Mr. MILLER. From what is the gentleman reading?

Mr. STANLEY. From Commissioner Neill's report of 1907 and 1908. Here is a report of 1908 giving the total of——

Mr. DONOVAN. Mr. Chairman, I rise to a point of order. I was present a few moments ago when the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. AUSTIN] was suppressed for not speaking to the subject matter before this House. I raise the point of order that the gentleman from Kentucky is not speaking to the subject matter before the House.

Mr. MILLER. Mr. Chairman, I will ask the gentleman from Connecticut if he will withhold that until the gentleman from Kentucky——

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Connecticut makes the point of order that the gentleman from Kentucky is not addressing himself to the amendment before the House.

Mr. STANLEY. Mr. Chairman, I hope the gentleman will permit me to correct a statement that has been made.

Mr. DONOVAN. Mr. Chairman, I submit that this ought to be fair. The gentleman from Tennessee was suppressed, and he was put into a position that needed to be explained, and there ought to be some limit to these gentlemen who are old Members of the House. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Connecticut makes the point of order, and the Chair sustains the point of order.

Mr. STANLEY. Mr. Chairman, I will state to the gentleman that I will put into the RECORD a statement showing 10,139 employees—Arabian, Austrian, Bohemian, Bosnian, Bulgarian, Croatian, Czech, Dalmatian, Dutch, English, Finnish, Flemish, French——

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Connecticut makes the point of order, and the Chair sustains the point of order.

Mr. STANLEY. I am talking about iron ore—Japanese, Korean, Macedonian, Magyar, Montenegrin, Polish, Roumanian, and Russian, giving the numbers——

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order. I have no objection to the gentleman talking, as far as I am concerned, but iron ore is not the subject under discussion at this time.

Mr. STANLEY. I have concluded, Mr. Chairman. [Laughter.]

Mr. MANN. In violation of the rules of the House the gentleman has concluded.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MADDEN] is recognized.

Mr. PALMER. Mr. Chairman, I submit there is no amendment pending.

Mr. MADDEN. I move to strike out the last word.

The CHAIRMAN. Of course, that amendment was pending.

Mr. PALMER. But debate on it has been exhausted.

Mr. MADDEN. Then I move to strike out the last two words. Mr. Chairman, there seems to be a good deal of controversy here as to what constitutes an American citizen, whether anybody has a right to work in any employment in this country except a man who is born on American soil. There seems to be an attempt made to discredit men who have been born somewhere else than in America.

Mr. DONOVAN. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state his point of order.

Mr. DONOVAN. The gentleman from Illinois is not speaking to the subject before the House. [Laughter.]

The CHAIRMAN. The point of order is sustained.

Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Chairman, I was endeavoring to reply to the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. STANLEY].

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will state that the Chair sustained the point of order made by the gentleman from Connecticut to the remarks of the gentleman from Kentucky.

Mr. BUTLER. The gentleman from Kentucky talked on, however.

Mr. MADDEN. I desire to discuss the point of order, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair has sustained the point of order.

Mr. MADDEN. Then the Chair does not care to hear arguments upon it?

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair is pretty clear in his own mind on that proposition. The gentleman from Illinois will proceed in order.

Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Chairman, I think the gentleman's point of order is not well taken, for the reason that in a discussion of the question of this tariff bill or of any section or any paragraph of the bill it seems to me we have a right to enter into every phase of the question so that we may be enabled to act intelligently upon it when we are called upon to vote. It seems to me that labor is one of the essential elements in the consideration of the question of the tariff, and that the question of whether a man is an American citizen or whether he has a right to live here if he is not one is one of the questions to be considered. It does not make any difference whether a man was born in England, Ireland, Scotland, or Wales, he ought to have a right to live wherever he may be, and ought to have the right to work wherever he can find employment. There was a time not many years ago, during the history of my short experience, when the men who did the mining, the work that is being done in these mines, preparing the ore for the mills, came from England, Ireland, Scotland, and Wales.

The time came when the children of these men attended the public schools of the United States and assimilated with the American people, became identified with American institutions, became lovers of the American flag. They went from these lowly employments in other walks of life. They became doctors, and merchants, and lawyers, and bankers, and manufacturers——

SEVERAL MEMBERS. And Congressmen.

Mr. POWERS. Mr. Chairman, I demand the regular order.

Mr. MADDEN. They became active instruments in the development of the institutions of the Nation.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Kentucky demands the regular order.

Mr. MADDEN. I am discussing this point of order, Mr. Chairman. [Laughter.]

Mr. POWERS. The Chair has ruled on the point of order.

Mr. MADDEN. No; the Chair allowed the gentleman to discuss the point of order, and that is what I am discussing.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, the disposition of the Chair, naturally, as the gentleman knows, is to give every man a chance.

Mr. MADDEN. I do not often take up the time of the House.

The CHAIRMAN. But where there is a demand for the enforcement of the rule, of course the Chair must enforce the rule, and the gentleman from Illinois knows the rule.

Mr. MADDEN. I do, and, Mr. Chairman, I am trying to discuss the point of order as best I can. [Laughter.]

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair sustains the point of order.

Mr. MADDEN. I hope the committee will indulge me in a discussion of this question. I hope the gentleman who made the point of order will withdraw it, because I think this is an important phase of this question and I hope I may be permitted to proceed.

Mr. DONOVAN. Mr. Chairman, I suggest the gentleman be allowed to continue his remarks in the RECORD.

Mr. MADDEN. I do not care to do that; I do not do that.

The CHAIRMAN. The regular order is demanded.

Mr. MADDEN. I will get an opportunity to object to some things which gentlemen may want to do one of these days and I will do it. Now, I ask unanimous consent that I may be allowed to proceed.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois asks unanimous consent that he may be allowed to proceed.

Mr. GUDGER. Mr. Chairman, I object. I hope the gentleman will avail himself of the opportunity——

Mr. MADDEN. No one else has been objected to in this manner.

Mr. PALMER. Mr. Chairman, I would not like to object to the gentleman continuing, but the gentleman from Alabama, who is in charge of the bill, has declared it his purpose——

Mr. MADDEN. I only want five minutes.

Mr. PALMER. The gentleman has spoken more than five minutes, has declined that the five-minute rule be extended, and in his absence I do not think the gentleman from Illinois ought to ask any further time.

Mr. MADDEN. I am not going to ask any further favors——

Mr. GUDGER. Mr. Chairman, I have objected.

Mr. MADDEN. I only want the same indulgence that has been accorded the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. STANLEY].

Mr. GUDGER. I hope the other side will object to Mr. STANLEY or anybody else if they try to speak again.

Mr. MADDEN. All right; it will take more time, and if you are going to object we will show you how to object.

Mr. GUDGER. Then we will bring in a rule.

Mr. MADDEN. Bring in your rule; go ahead, bring it in.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that debate on this paragraph close in five minutes.

Mr. PALMER. Does the gentleman from Illinois want five minutes?

Mr. MANN. I am going to ask that my colleague have five minutes.

Mr. PALMER. I submit that the colleague of the gentleman from Illinois has been discussing the question now for five minutes or more and I think we ought to proceed.

Mr. MANN. I am trying to proceed. The request was made to close debate in five minutes.

Mr. PALMER. Well, I will join the gentleman's request.

The CHAIRMAN. Unanimous consent is asked that debate close in five minutes, the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MADDEN] to be recognized for five minutes. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. PALMER. That is, debate on this paragraph and all amendments thereto.

The CHAIRMAN. On this paragraph and all amendments thereto. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. MADDEN. Now, Mr. Chairman, I was saying when I was interrupted [laughter] that the time came when the sons of the men who came from the north of Europe left the lowly employments and went into other employments of life.

Then the Germans came on to the scene, and they took the places of these men who came from England, Ireland, Scotland, and Wales. They did this kind of work. They were not American citizens when they came, but their children grew, and they went to our schools and became American citizens; and in the process of evolution they left this kind of employment and became factors in the development of the great industrial institutions of this country, and they are potential factors in the life of the Nation to-day and among our best American citizens. Following them, the Swedes came, and the process of evolution went on exactly the same. Their children are doctors, and lawyers, and merchants, and bankers, and fill every other walk of life, and are doing the things that make for the best good of the people of this great Nation. Following them came the Poles, and the same process of evolution went on with them. Their sons and their daughters are influential factors in the life of this Nation. They are among the best American citizens. And following them were the men from the north of Italy, and the same thing went on with them, and their boys and girls grew into manhood and womanhood. They are American citizens, and they love our flag and our institutions and are as patriotic as any other of our citizens. [Applause.] Following them came the Austrians, and the same process of evolution went on with them, and their boys and girls are now men and women, are now American citizens, living under the protection of the American flag and ready to fight for the flag whenever need be. They are the men we have heard traduced as men who work in the lowly walks of life to-day. Some men must do this work. Who is the American? What is the American? What did he come from that he has any special rights? How many men would be here to-day sitting on these seats if their fathers and mothers and grandfathers and grandmothers had not come from across the sea? Where did these men who are talking about Americans come from? What kind of meat do they eat that makes them so great? I want to say to the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. STANLEY] and anybody else on this floor, that men coming from any part of Europe who are willing to work should be welcome to our shores. I have nothing to say of any man——

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. Do you include the Chinese?

Mr. MADDEN. I do not include the orientals, but I mean from any place in Europe, in all the Caucasian race, whether he is a south Italian or north Italian, an Irishman, an Englishman, a Scotchman, a Swede, a German, an Austrian, a Hungarian, or whatever he may be. And I want to say to you, Mr. Chairman, and to you, gentlemen of this committee, that it is a slander upon the human race to say that because a man comes from some other country and can not speak the English language he is unworthy of consideration as a workman in the mines, in the fields, on the farm, and in the factories of the United States, where we need brain and brawn to create the wealth to push forward the great industrial development of which we are all so proud. [Loud applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the pro forma amendment will be withdrawn, and the Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

112. Steel ingots, cogged ingots, blooms and slabs, die blocks or blanks, billets and bars, and tapered or beveled bars; mill shafting, pressed, sheared, or stamped shapes, not advanced in value or condition by any process or operation subsequent to the process of stamping; hammer molds or swaged steel; gun-barrel molds not in bars; all descriptions and shapes of dry sand, loam, or iron molded steel castings, sheets, and plates, if made by the Bessemer, Siemens-Martin, open-hearth, or similar processes, not containing alloys, such as nickel, chromium, tungsten or wolfram, molybdenum, titanium, iridium, uranium, tantalum, boron, and similar alloys, and steel not specially provided for in this section, 10 per cent ad valorem; steel ingots, cogged ingots, blooms and slabs, die blocks or blanks; billets and bars and tapered or beveled bars; pressed, sheared, or stamped shapes not advanced in value or condition by any process or operation subsequent to the process of stamping; hammer molds or swaged steel; gun-barrel molds not in bars; alloys used as substitutes for steel in the manufacture of tools; all descriptions and shapes of dry sand, loam, or iron molded castings, sheets, and plates; rolled wire rods in coils or bars not smaller than No. 6 wire gauge, and steel not specially provided for in this section, all the foregoing when made by the crucible, electric, or cementation process, either with or without alloys, and finished by rolling, hammering, or otherwise, 15 per cent ad valorem.

Mr. PALMER. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Pennsylvania offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend, page 29, line 19, after the word "shafting," strike out the comma and insert a semicolon.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. PALMER. Mr. Chairman, I also offer the following amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 29, line 24, after the word "plates," strike out the comma and insert "; all the foregoing."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. PALMER. Mr. Chairman, I also offer a further amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 30, line 1, after the word "nickel," insert the words "cobalt, vanadium."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment of the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. PALMER. Mr. Chairman, I offer a further amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Pennsylvania offers a further amendment which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 30, line 3, strike out the words "and steel not specially provided for in this section."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. PALMER. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Pennsylvania offers an amendment which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 30, line 17, after the word "otherwise," insert the words "and all steels by whatever process made containing alloys such as nickel, cobalt, vanadium, chromium, tungsten, wolfram, molybdenum, titanium, iridium, uranium, tantalum, boron, and similar alloys."

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, what rates do those now bear, according to the bill?

Mr. PALMER. Under the present law?

Mr. MANN. Under the present law and according to the bill as it stood before.

Mr. PALMER. I will say this to the gentleman in explanation: We have made a new classification in this paragraph for crucible steels, giving them a rate of 5 per cent higher than the Bessemer or open-hearth steels.

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield there?

Mr. PALMER. Just a moment. Under the present law the equivalent ad valorem rates are about 22 per cent on all the products covered by this paragraph. However, the crucible-steel products are such a small proportion of the total of imports that the 22 per cent is not a fair statement of the real equivalent ad valorem on the crucible steels, which is very much higher. Therefore, in writing this paragraph we have reduced the rate on Bessemer and open-hearth steel covered by the paragraph from about 22 per cent to 10 per cent, and on the crucible steels from something higher than 22 per cent—it is impossible to say just what—to 15 per cent.

Now, the effect of the amendments which I have just offered is simply to make certain that purpose of making this difference in classification between open-hearth Bessemer steels on the one hand and crucible steels or alloy steels on the other.

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman yield?

Mr. PALMER. I yield.

Mr. ANDERSON. Is it not a fact that on most of the articles mentioned in this paragraph the duty has been increased over the bill of last year from 10 to 15 per cent?

Mr. PALMER. Oh, no. The bill of last year carried this paragraph at 10 per cent.

Mr. ANDERSON. It now carries it at 15 per cent.

Mr. PALMER. Not at all. The bill carries the Bessemer or open-hearth or ordinary process steel at 10 per cent, the same as last year, and those are the preponderating imports and manufactures of steel, as any gentleman who has given the matter investigation will show you, while the crucible steels, of which about 100,000 tons are produced in the United States per annum, are reduced to 15 per cent.

Mr. ANDERSON. But they are increased in the bill of a year ago.

Mr. PALMER. The crucible steels are higher than in the bill of a year ago, but the gentleman said we were increasing all the articles covered in this paragraph.

Mr. ANDERSON. I said most of them.

Mr. PALMER. That is a mistake. The crucible steels are a very small proportion of the articles covered by this paragraph.

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. ANDERSON] moves to strike out the last word.

Mr. ANDERSON. The paragraph just read and the one that follows afford additional evidence of the eleventh-hour conversion of the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. PALMER] to protective ideas. The gentleman himself admits that some proportion at least of the articles named in the paragraph just read have been increased from 10 to 15 per cent. On paragraph 113, which follows, the duty has been increased to 20 per cent. On articles mentioned in paragraph 114, grit, shot, and so forth, the duty has been increased from 20 per cent in the Underwood bill of the last Congress to 30 per cent in the pending bill. I am not complaining about the conversion of the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. PALMER]. My regrets are directed to the fact that his conversion, tending toward the protective tariff, has not included the agricultural schedule. I had hoped that it might extend to some of the products raised in the great Northwest. My regret is that the gentleman seems to have greater consideration for the Steel Trust and the steel industry than he has for the agricultural interests of the great Northwest. [Applause on the Republican side.]

The CHAIRMAN. If there be no objection, the pro forma amendment will be considered as withdrawn. The question is on the amendment proposed by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. PALMER].

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. MOORE. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Pennsylvania offers an amendment which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend, page 30, line 17, by inserting after the words "ad valorem" a semicolon and the following: "Provided, That none of the articles herein specified shall be admitted to the United States until it shall be shown to the satisfaction of the Secretary of the Treasury that the foreign labor employed in the production or manufacture thereof shall have been paid wages equal to wages paid for similar labor in the United States."

Mr. PALMER. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order against that amendment that it is not germane to the paragraph.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Pennsylvania makes a point of order against the amendment of his colleague [Mr. MOORE].

Mr. MOORE. Mr. Chairman, that amendment is in different form from the one upon which the Chair ruled yesterday, and it is made pertinent to the paragraph itself. I think it is entirely in order, and I would like to discuss it for a moment, if the Chair cares to have me do it.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will hear the gentleman on the point of order.

Mr. MOORE. The paragraph fixes tariff rates upon steel ingots, cogged ingots, blooms, and slabs, and so forth, and other products of iron and steel, with a view to protecting their manufacture in the United States; or, rather, with a view to raising revenue for the Government of the United States. The amendment which I have offered proposes to put a limitation upon the kind of commodities that may come into the United States as provided in the paragraph. I assume it is within the province of the House to say that if the wages paid for the manufacture of iron and steel products in the United States are twice or three times as high as the wages paid for similar labor in foreign countries that goods shall not be admitted in competition with the labor of the United States, if the foreign wages paid were less.

The purpose of this amendment is so to define the law that a Secretary of the Navy, for instance, who gives instructions by direction of Congress to an American manufacturer of iron and steel that he must limit the hours of labor to eight, may, by the same token, be permitted to say to a foreign manufacturer who is competing with the American laborer that the wages paid for the product which it is proposed to put into the ships of the United States or any other commodity of the United States shall conform to the American wage.

The CHAIRMAN. Has the gentleman concluded?

Mr. MOORE. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair ruled yesterday afternoon on a proposition very similar to this. Whether or not there is a place in the bill where this might be in order, the Chair will not undertake to say at this time; but the Chair holds that it is not germane to this paragraph and sustains the point of order. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

115. Rivet, screw, fence, nail, and other iron or steel wire rods, whether round, oval, or square, or in any other shape, and flat rods up to 6 inches in width ready to be drawn or rolled into wire, all the foregoing in coils or otherwise, including wire rods and iron or steel bars, cold rolled, cold drawn, cold hammered, or polished in any way in addition to the ordinary process of hot rolling or hammering, 10 per cent ad valorem: Provided, That all round iron or steel rods smaller than No. 6 wire gauge shall be classed and dutiable as wire.

Mr. PALMER. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Pennsylvania offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 30, line 25, insert after the word "wire" the words "or strips."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

116. Round iron or steel wire; wire composed of iron, steel, or other metal, except gold or silver, covered with cotton, silk, or other material; corset clasps, corset steels, dress steels, and all flat wires and steel in strips not thicker than No. 15 wire gauge and not exceeding 5 inches in width, whether in long or short lengths, in coils or otherwise, and whether rolled or drawn through dies or rolls, or otherwise produced; telegraph, telephone, and other wires and cables composed of metal and rubber, or of metal, rubber, and other materials; iron and steel wire coated by dipping, galvanizing, or similar process with zinc, tin, or other metal; all other wire not specially provided for in this section and articles manufactured wholly or in chief value of any wire or wires provided for in this section; all the foregoing, 20 per cent ad valorem; wire beddles and healds, 25 per cent ad valorem; wire rope, 30 per cent ad valorem.

Mr. TREADWAY. Mr. Chairman, I desire to offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. TREADWAY] offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 31, line 22, after the words "ad valorem," at the end of paragraph 116, insert the following: "Fourdrinier wires and bronze, brass, or copper wire cloth, partly or wholly manufactured, 45 per cent ad valorem."

Mr. TREADWAY. Mr. Chairman, yesterday we heard a good deal said by the gentleman from New York [Mr. HARRISON] about this tariff bill not being prepared in behalf of the manufacturing interests of the country. I wish to submit that, in connection with the amendment I have offered, it is not prepared in behalf of the laboring people of this country. It happens that in my district there are two mills making what is known as Fourdrinier wire or wire cloth used in paper manufacturing. I was waited on last week by representatives of the American Wire Weavers' Protective Association. They are laboring men who work at the loom making that wire cloth, and they ask that the present rate of duty on wire products be retained, in order that they may maintain their families and homes in this country and not be obliged to submit to the rivalry and competition of England and France in their line of employment. They are a high-grade class of working people. I have letters here showing the way in which they stand with their employers. They have not asked in 25 years for any increase of wage. They are receiving on an average about $4 per day, or $25 per week, in comparison with the same class of work in England at $10 to $12 per week and in Germany at $6 to $7 per week. It is impossible for the rates of wages which are now being paid to continue at any less duty than now appears under the basket clause in this schedule. Consequently I ask that the rate be restored on this wire-cloth manufacture, that these man may continue to receive employment at home.

Mr. GRAHAM of Pennsylvania. Will the gentleman yield? I would like to ask him why they pay so much more in England than they do in Germany?

Mr. TREADWAY. I can not yield; I have only five minutes. The wage in this country, as I have stated, is $25 per week and in Germany for the same class of work the employees receive $6 to $7 per week. Now, at an average price of 22 cents per square foot, which 60-mesh wire costs, the laboring man has 50 to 60 per cent, and as the fineness of the wire increases a greater proportion goes to the man at the loom. At the present rate of duty foreign competitors can undersell our manufacturers in the home market.

Yesterday there was adopted in the Massachusetts Legislature resolutions to this honorable body, not because the Democratic governor sent a special message to the legislature upon the subject of the tariff, but because just such industries as the one to which I now refer and hundreds of others in our State realize what the effect of the adoption of this bill will mean to the working men and women of the State. Massachusetts believes in the spirit of protection—protection to the laboring man—and it is on that account that they memorialize this Congress.

I desire, Mr. Chairman, if I may, to submit an extract from these resolutions, and I also desire to submit a brief that was submitted to the Ways and Means Committee by the American Wire Weavers' Protective Association, and also a letter from one of the manufacturers, in which he speaks of the standard of these employees. We ask, therefore, that the same rate of duty which applies to this line of goods be retained in the present bill. [Applause on the Republican side.]

The matters referred to are as follows:

PROTECTIVE TARIFF URGED—MASSACHUSETTS LEGISLATURE MEMORIALIZES CONGRESS AT REQUEST OF GOV. FOSS.

BOSTON, April 29.

In accordance with a request of Gov. Foss expressed in a special message, both branches of the legislature to-day adopted a resolution memorializing Congress. The resolution declares:

"That the policy of opening the markets of the United States to the unrestricted competition of the rest of the world, advocated by the President in his message and the pending bill, which is a long step toward the complete establishment of that policy, appears to the legislature to be in direct contravention of the wishes of the voters of the United States, and especially of this Commonwealth, as expressed in the last election."

It is urged that any tariff legislation should be based upon the protective principle, that a tariff commission of disinterested experts be reestablished, and that reasonable opportunity be given those interested to be heard before final action is taken.

—

BRIEF OF THE NATIONAL EXECUTIVE BOARD OF THE AMERICAN WIRE WEAVERS' PROTECTIVE ASSOCIATION.

NEW YORK CITY, N. Y., January 7, 1913.

WAYS AND MEANS COMMITTEE,
House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

GENTLEMEN: We beg to file this statement with your honorable body in the name of the iron, bronze, copper and brass, and other kinds of wire-cloth weavers of the United States.

Understanding it to be the intention of the incoming Congress to revise the tariff schedules, we wish to urge for your consideration whatever claims our industry may have, if not to an increase, at least to a retention of the present duty.

We do not think it possible that there can be any reduction in the tariff on iron, bronze, copper and brass, and other kinds of wire cloth if your honorable body is made acquainted with the facts of this industry as we know them.

Any reduction at this time will be detrimental to the interests of every wire weaver in this country as well as to the interests of the large number of workers in the allied branches of the trade.

While the cost of living has increased, the wages of the wire weavers of America are lower to-day than they have been for 30 years, lower, in fact, than they have been since the establishment of this industry in the United States; as a direct result of the importation of wire cloth from abroad a reduction of wages amounting to 20 per cent has been made necessary within the past year.

Even under the present tariff many American wire weavers have been thrown out of employment by reason of German manufacturers finding a market for iron, bronze, copper and brass, and other kinds of wire cloth in the United States. There has been a considerable increase in these importations within the past year, making employment in some American factories less certain than formerly.

The wire weavers in Germany work 60 hours per week. This is 10 hours per week longer than the American is required to work in the same line. There can be no comparison between the wages paid to the German wire weavers, a statement of which is herewith appended, and those received by the weavers in this country for the same grade and class of work. Even taking into consideration any possible difference in the cost of living in Germany, as compared with the United States, the German wire weaver works for a wage so low that his standard of living can not approximate to that deemed necessary for the American mechanic.

Under the present tariff, the German wire-cloth manufacturer is able to place his finished product in the American market at a price lower than his American competitor. We think any reduction in the tariff would give the German an unfair advantage. We believe it would mean discrimination against American labor, and tend to discourage the investment of capital in home enterprise.

Again, we may cite the condition of the British wire-cloth manufacturer. While they have not been of any great injury to the American wire-cloth manufacturer, this possibly being due to the present rate of 45 per cent duty, and also to their higher rate of wages paid the British weaver over that of their German competitor, yet they, too, may become as serious a menace to the American manufacturer should a reduction of the tariff take place. We submit, herewith, a statement showing the rate of wages paid by the British manufacturer as compared with the American manufacturer.

We know that you will not purposely retard the growth of any legitimate interest in our country, but as our product does not seem to be specifically classified under the present law it has seemed to us necessary to draw it to your attention in this way. We think you would be encouraging American labor as well as American capital in this case by protecting us against unfair foreign competition.

If such encouragement is to be given we urge you, if you do not recommend an increase in the duty, to see that the present tariff is maintained. We would not ask that this statement be filed if we were not fully convinced that a reduction in the tariff on iron, bronze, copper and brass, and other kinds of wire cloth, would be detrimental to the workers in whose interests we write and tend to interfere with the growth of a legitimate American industry.

We have been given repeated assurances that no reduction in the tariff will be made by Congress if it can be shown that such a change will discourage the normal growth of legitimate business enterprises.

We do not know, of course, that any change is contemplated in the case of iron, bronze, copper and brass, and other kinds of wire cloth. If any such change may be contemplated, we beg your honorable committee to give us an opportunity of acquainting you with whatever facts we possess when the schedule is taken up.

Thanking you in anticipation of a careful perusal of the statements herein set forth, we beg to remain,

Yours, very respectfully,

AMERICAN WIRE WEAVERS' PROTECTIVE ASSOCIATION.
E. E. DESMOND,
Secretary-Treasurer, 27 Woodland Avenue, Woodhaven, N. Y.
JOSEPH O'NEIL, 31 Brown Avenue, Holyoke, Mass.
PATRICK A. WATERS, 20 Bayard Street, Belleville, N. J.

—

NATIONAL EXECUTIVE BOARD OF THE
AMERICAN WIRE WEAVERS' PROTECTIVE ASSOCIATION,
Holyoke, Mass., April 4, 1913.

Hon. ALLEN T. TREADWAY, M. C.,
Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: Referring to your letter to Mr. Fred Childs, which he handed to me with request that I reply to the same, I beg to say that the brief filed by our committee at the time of hearing by the Ways and Means Committee covers the matter, and to which you have access.

Trusting that things will turn out better than we expect, and thanking you for any efforts you may have put forth in our behalf and for anything you may do in the future,

I am, very sincerely,

ARCHIBALD A. BROOKS.

—

LEE, MASS., March 29, 1913.

Mr. ALLEN T. TREADWAY,
House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR MR. TREADWAY: I received your letter of the 15th instant, in regard to the tariff, and am sending you herewith some figures and statements. I trust you will do your best for me regarding this matter, and appreciate your kindness in sending me the letter.

The wire manufacturers do not mean to be selfish or unjust in asking that the duty on our particular product remain, at least, where it is without any reduction. At present under the latest tariff ruling, the manufacturers of brass-wire cloth are protected by a duty of 45 per cent. This may seem like a very large duty, but it is warranted by the difference in labor conditions. We, with other manufacturers, have figured very carefully the cost of making the brass-wire cloth that we furnish our customers, and at the present price of copper, which is about a normal price, find that what we call No. 60 actually costs us from 21 cents to 21¼ cents per square foot. Our customers use these grades of cloth in about four different meshes, No. 60, No. 65, No. 70, and No. 80. The No. 60 furnishes a fair illustration. As stated above, with very careful figuring we find that it costs us 21 cents to 21¼ cents, and is sold to our trade in no case over 24 cents, and very frequently sold at 23 cents to 23½ cents. This cost mentioned above does not figure any rebates for poor service, which is one of the sources of complaint and which we can not seem to overcome in any way. This alone adds about 2½ per cent to 3 per cent to our cost of manufacture. Of our cost, our workmen get 50 per cent, or about 10 cents per square foot on the total of 21 cents to 21¼ cents.

These men average $25 per week, very frequently running up to $35 and $38 per week, not including overtime, simply straight time-work, very seldom going below $15 or $16. It is piecework, hence the difference in the wages.

In England the workmen get from $10 to $12 per week, and turn out practically the same amount as our own men. The looms are very similar in construction. In Germany, from which we have the strongest competition, the weavers get $6 and $7 per week. This enables the representatives of the German manufacturers to sell No. 60 wires in this country at 22 cents per square foot and pay freight, insurance, and 45 per cent duty. To-day the strongest competition is from Germany, and they are sending large quantities of their goods to this country. Our own workmen are getting the same wages that they have for the last 25 or 30 years. Never in all that time have they made any demands on us for increase as the cost of living has increased. For the most part they are steady, faithful men, and of a high order of intelligence and thrift.

The lowering of the duty, therefore, on our particular product would seem to indicate nothing but lower wages for them, or the stopping of some of the production in our line of goods in this country. If the lowering of the tariff reduces our income, as it necessarily must, and as the Government expects to tax incomes above a certain amount, it is simply losing this tax on incomes from the American manufacturer and encouraging the foreign manufacturer. We can not see it in any other way, that it seems to be helping the business of the English and German manufacturers at the expense of the American manufacturer.

If there was an enormous profit on our line of work, we might be able to stand something of a cut, but 8 per cent does not seem to us to be an excessive profit, and that 8 per cent is determined very largely on whether we get the highest or lowest price mentioned above. The manufacturer who makes his goods at a cost of 21½ cents and sells them at 23 cents is not making 8 per cent. It would seem to us, therefore, as though we really needed protection. We have taken No. 60 as an illustration, but the same truths apply to the other meshes.

Hoping your assistance will prove satisfactory to the trade, I remain,

Yours, very truly,

THISTLE WIRE WORKS,
GEORGE W. ROBERTS.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. TREADWAY].

The question was taken, and the amendment was lost.

Mr. BUTLER. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word of the paragraph, that I may ask the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. PALMER] a question. I have had submitted to me a brief touching the telegraph, the telephone, and other wires. I am in ignorance on the subject of this paragraph, upon what is known as telegraph and telephone wire. Will the gentleman please tell me whether or not a telegraph or telephone wire covered with lead is included in this paragraph?

Mr. PALMER. I would say that it was.

Mr. BUTLER. I am asking for the gentleman's best impression, because I know that he is familiar with it. It seems to me that it is. I understand that such a wire covered with lead will have on it a duty of 20 per cent?

Mr. PALMER. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. The pro forma amendment will be withdrawn.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last two words. I would like to inquire why smooth wire is put on the dutiable list while wire nails and barbed wire is on the free list?

Mr. PALMER. We made the distinction very largely because, following the bill of a year and a half ago known as the farmers' free-list bill, we wanted, where we could, to write a tariff bill in such a way as would bring the benefits of the reduction close home to the people. We know of nothing in the agricultural section of the country that is of more general use than this kind of wire and wire fencing and other articles the gentleman names which we have put on the free list. It is in the interest of the consumer.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. I understand the gentleman perfectly. It is because they put it on the free list a year ago that they now wish to put barbed wire and nails on the free list as a bid for the farmers' vote.

Mr. PALMER. The country has approved of what we did in that matter [applause on the Democratic side], and we think they will approve of it again.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Oh, no; the country has not approved of that at all. The majority was against you; and the farmers are not clamoring for anything of that kind. This is simply another instance of the rule which has been applied in a number of instances throughout this bill, where you have put a duty on the partly finished product and let the completed article made from it bear a higher duty. Barbed wire is so cheap now that the farmer never thinks anything about it, and nails are so cheap that a man can not afford to stop and pick up one when he drops it, and both of them have been made so by the application of the principle of protection and the protective tariff that has been put on these products by the Republican Party. [Applause on the Republican side.]

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, as I understand this bill it puts nail rods on the dutiable list, and nails made from nail rods on the free list. Am I correct?

Mr. PALMER. Nails are on the free list.

Mr. MANN. Nails are on the free list. I send to the Clerk's desk and ask to have read in my time letters from an independent manufacturing concern located in my district, which makes tacks, nails, etc., as to the justice of the proposition.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

GRAND CROSSING TACK CO.,
Grand Crossing, Ill., April 19, 1913.

Hon. JAMES R. MANN,
House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR MR. MANN: The tariff bill as introduced by Mr. UNDERWOOD on April 7, 1913, which you so kindly sent to me, has been received, and I just wish to offer a few comments that may be of more or less interest to you.

When this bill reaches the House the first move the Republicans should make as soon as they have the opportunity would be to amend its title by calling it a bill to perpetuate the trusts by insuring their great solidity and power to monopolize, and then pass the bill just as it stands, which would give the country an everlasting monument of Democratic stupidity and wise statesmanship. This may seem sarcastic, but the real facts as they exist in the bill will demonstrate that it is no idle talk, as it is well illustrated in the iron and steel schedule and free-list section.

Ask Mr. UNDERWOOD or any of his Democratic colleagues, or even the President himself, who in all logical reason of all the producers in this country of tacks, cut nails, wire nails, brads, staples, barbed wire, galvanized fence wire and wire fence, is the best able to stand competition against the world? Is it the ones who have their iron ore and coal mines, steamship and transportation companies, and blast furnaces in which they can smelt the ore, and coal dug from their own mines, and the same raw material brought in from other countries free of duty, or is it the hundred or more small producers of the above-named articles, whose raw material is either pig iron and scrap, or billets and sheet bars, or wire rods, or plain wire or sheets, who have been struggling for years in competition with the trust against the natural advantage the larger concern has over them in their cheap raw material and the cost of converting that raw material to the point where the small concern goes into the market and buys his raw material and then finishes the conversion and finally goes into competition with them to sell the finished product to the consumers? There is only one answer—the trust. And now the Government by the proposed bill is going to add another burden to the small concern by taking away all of his possibilities of profit by putting the above-named finished articles on the free list, leaving him to the mercy of the competition of the world in addition to his competition with the trust, and takes away all of the chance he might have to survive by leaving his raw material on the dutiable list with a duty of 8 per cent to 15 per cent, and depriving him of the chance of the world's free competition in buying these articles which are his raw material.

Surely this bill could be rightfully christened a bill to league the Government in helping the trust to crush all competition, because that is what the passage of this bill will do in effect, and the facts bear out the argument; and if what I have said is not enough, look up and figure out what effect the proposed changes on ferromanganese and ferrosilicon will bear on this subject, as well as the proposed duties on zinc in pigs, known in the market as spelter. From every angle that I can study the bill from the facts which I know, they all point to the same common end—trust advantage, small manufacturers' disadvantage.

Kindly plead with the dominant party to give us small manufacturers at least an even chance by taking off the free list paragraphs 562 and 649 and give them a duty commensurate with the duty on kindred articles and the semiraw material out of which these articles are made. If this can not be done, then be fair with us by giving us free trade on those semifinished iron and steel articles, which are our raw material, by putting on the free list pig iron and scrap, ferromanganese, ferrosilicon, found in paragraph 106; ingots, blooms, slabs, billets, and bars, found in paragraph 114; sheets of iron or steel, common or black, skelp, iron or steel, found in paragraph 109; rivet, screw, fence, nail, and other iron or steel wire rods, round, in coils, found in paragraph 115, and all of paragraphs 166 and 167. They can not be fair and just to us small manufacturers who are trying to compete against the so-called Iron and Steel Trust, who own their own raw material in the ground, unless they give us at least one or the other of the above propositions.

I fully realize the conditions as they now exist in Washington and the very slim chances that there are of any changes being made in the proposed tariff bill which is now before the Democratic caucus, but at the same time I wish to set the facts forth as they actually are and leave it to you to use them in any way that you may see fit, with the small hopes that possibly something might be done to help us out in some way.

Thanking you for the attention that I know you will give to the subject, I am,

Yours, very truly,

O. N. HUTCHINSON.

—

GRAND CROSSING TACK CO.,
Grand Crossing, Ill., January 9, 1913.

Hon. JAMES R. MANN,
House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR MR. MANN: I wish to lay before you an argument prepared by Mr. William F. Donovan, president of the Atlas Tack Co., Fairhaven, Mass., in reference to the proposed new tariff bill in reference to tacks and small cut nails. I have read over this document, and I can give it my hearty indorsement. He seems to have stated nothing but facts, and has put them in a very terse manner.

Of course, we presume it is hardly possible that any argument or facts that we can bring forth will have any influence upon the dominant party. Be that as it may, however, we believe it is advisable to file just as vigorous a protest as we possibly can, and we ask you to do everything in your power to that end.

We sincerely hope that through their errors the business interests of this country will come back to their own again in a very short time.

Yours, very truly,

O. N. HUTCHINSON.

—

JANUARY —, 1913.

SIR: At a recent conference of the manufacturers of tacks and small nails relating to the proposed new tariff bill, it was shown that any further reduction of the duty on this class of products would result in very great hardship to the manufacturers of this country, and in all probability in the importation of foreign goods to an extent which would put many of those exclusively engaged in that line out of business or compel a reduction in wages, which does not seem desirable, feasible, or even possible.

It became evident that even in the tariff bill of 1909 an unjust discrimination was made against this class of products, and we were only saved from foreign importations under the existing duty because of the extremely low prices which have prevailed until very recently in the cost of raw material in this country, and the almost destructive competition which has existed in our home trade.

We therefore appeal to your sense of justice and your known desire to be of service to your constituents in all proper ways to give us the benefit of such assistance as we feel sure you can render in insuring proper consideration being given to this class of product by those concerned in the revision of the tariff which is now being undertaken, and upon which hearings will be held before the Ways and Means Committee on the 10th instant.

Briefly stated, the facts, as they apply to our industry, are as follows:

In the revision of 1909, notwithstanding the protests of all the manufacturers engaged in producing this class of goods, the duty upon them was reduced one-half, or from 1¼ cents per pound to five-eighths cent per pound on the smaller sizes, and from 1¼ cents per pound on the larger sizes to three-fourths cent per pound, while on the plate and sheets from which tacks and small nails are made the duty of one-half cent per pound was retained (sec. 125, Schedule C), thus leaving only from one-eighth cent to one-fourth cent as proportion to labor on the manufactured tacks, which is approximately 60 per cent of the material cost, the protection to labor being, therefore, only 11 per cent of the average labor cost, while the raw material is protected to 27 per cent of its total cost.

Surely this shows unjust discrimination, and it is further shown in the existing tariff by the duty which is carried on other manufactured articles involving a much smaller percentage of labor, such, for example, as rivets (sec. 165, Schedule C), which are given a protection of 1¼ cents per pound, or 52.7 per cent of the labor cost, while the rivet rods from which these rivets are made are protected only to the extent of three-tenths cent per pound.

Iron and steel wood screws, in section 167, Schedule C, are given a protection of from 8 cents to 12 cents per pound on the lengths which correspond to the lengths in which tacks are made, an average of 10 cents per pound protection on these sizes of iron and steel wood screws. The screw wire rods from which the screws are made pay a duty of only three-tenths cent per pound under provisions of section 133 of Schedule C, thus giving a protection of $9.67 per 100 pounds to the labor of making steel wood screws, or approximately 37 per cent.

These comparisons are made, not for the purpose of trying to show that the other products referred to are unduly protected, but as a basis for an inquiry as to why the tack manufacturer should be the "goat."

What the present views of the Ways and Means Committee may be in this connection we, of course, can not say; but assuming that the bill which passed the House of Representatives on January 29, 1912—H. R. 18642—represents its views, a still further injustice would be done to the tack-making industry, as that act placed tacks upon the free list, while a duty of 15 per cent ad valorem is retained upon the raw material from which tacks are made.

Consular report issued by the Bureau of Manufactures under date of June 19, 1912, gives the price of fine sheets in Germany on January 1, 1912, as from $33.32 to $34.51. Allowing the American differentials for sheets of heavier gauge—sheets gauging from 17 to 21, which are used in tack making—would make the price for such sheets $29.32 as against the lowest price quoted in this country, for the last 10 years at least, of $31. With tacks upon the free list, the German tack manufacturer, buying his raw material at a price lower than it has been sold in this country under the severest competition and with labor at little more than one-half the cost in this country, would only have the freight against him—approximately 10 cents per cubic foot from Antwerp to New York—or not to exceed $2.75 per ton C. I. F., while the American manufacturer will have, in trying to import his raw material, a duty of 15 per cent ad valorem—approximately $4.65, the importer's profit, if only 5 per cent—of $1.55, the freight and insurance of $2.75, making a net handicap of $6.20 per ton, even if it were possible for a small tack manufacturer in this country to keep himself supplied with this long-distance material, which could only be done in the event of importers carrying a stock in this country to meet his requirements, in which event, of course, the allowance made for the importer's profit would have to be largely increased, and the fact that such stocks would be carried in this country is so improbable that it is not worthy of consideration.

The German tack manufacturer would therefore have an advantage over the American manufacturer of $6.20 plus the difference in labor, which, assuming the German labor to be 60 per cent of the American labor cost, would give the American tack manufacturer a further handicap of at least $12 per ton, or a total of $18.20 per ton—equal to 18 per cent—in the presence of which he could not continue to exist.

What is true of Germany is true of France and Belgium likewise, particularly the latter.

Tack plates and sheets are now being made in Canada, where, again, we are confronted with cheaper labor, and it is certain that the American market will receive the surplus products of the Canadian tack manufacturers in the event of tacks being placed on the free list, unless the market is occupied with other foreign products, while the American manufacturers can not indulge in reprisals, owing to the heavy Canadian duty.

In view of these facts, are we not entitled to better consideration, and will you not render us such assistance as you can in seeing that our business receives it?

Respectfully, yours, WM. F. DONOVAN.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

121. Finished automobiles and automobile bodies, 45 per cent ad valorem; automobile chassis, 30 per cent ad valorem; finished parts of automobiles, not including tires, 20 per cent ad valorem.

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. This paragraph offers a very good example of the mental gymnastics necessary to write a bill of this character. The present law provides for a duty of 45 per cent ad valorem upon automobiles and finished parts alike. The pending bill reduces the duty on the finished parts from 45 to 20 per cent, thus increasing the protection of the assembler in a very large degree. The only result of this situation will be to increase the importation of the finished parts of automobiles from foreign countries so that they can be assembled in this country and offered for sale in competition with the finished automobile here. The result will be inevitably a taking away from the American workman of work involved in the making and finishing of these parts. I think that the duty on automobiles might very properly be reduced. I think that the duty upon the finished parts might very properly be reduced, but it is impossible for me to understand the mental gymnastics that justify the increasing of the protection upon automobiles by 30 per cent.

Mr. PALMER. Mr. Chairman, it would not be difficult for the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. ANDERSON] to understand this change in the rates if he would take the time and the trouble to study the question of the automobile industry, both at home and abroad, as it has been studied by the Ways and Means Committee in connection with the drawing of this bill. Under the present law automobiles pay a rate of 45 per cent. That is not a high rate or an unconscionable rate, from our point of view, for a foreign luxury such as one of these automobiles.

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PALMER. Not at this time.

Mr. ANDERSON. The gentleman knows of the export of automobiles.

Mr. PALMER. Yes. Mr. Chairman, the kind of automobiles that that duty covers is not the cheap automobile, but the high-priced car. The average unit of value of imports of automobiles exceeds $2,000. The only kind which come into the country are the high-priced cars, purchased by people of large means, who get the car because it is a foreign car and because they want to make a show before their neighbors and friends by having a Fiat or a Mercedes or some other famous foreign car.

We left that duty just where it is, but we did reduce the duty on the parts, because we believe that, while 45 per cent is a proper duty for an article of luxury purchased by the rich, it is not a proper rate of duty in view of the other rates in this bill upon an article which is largely a raw material of a great industry in this country. The fact is that the American manufacturer of automobiles uses foreign parts to a great extent, and we by making this rate 20 per cent are keeping it in line with other semiraw material used by manufacturing industries in the country. There is no danger whatever, and all automobile manufacturers and importers acknowledge that—the gentleman from Minnesota could find it out if he would take the trouble to read the hearings—there is no danger that the foreign automobiles will be imported as knocked-down cars in order to get rid of this 45 per cent rate. These parts come in as parts, and never come in as a knocked-down car, because the imported car that the American buys abroad he buys because he wants it, and he wants it because he is getting an automobile made in Europe which bears the foreign mark and the name. He does not care anything about having foreign parts in his car; he does not care anything about having a foreign wheel or a foreign axle. What he wants is a foreign car, and the reason these foreign cars come in at this excessive, this large, rate of 45 per cent is because the rich American is willing to pay any price in order to show himself off to his neighbors and his friends.

Mr. ANDERSON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PALMER. I will yield if I have the time.

Mr. ANDERSON. Does not the gentleman know that under this provision it would be possible to import an entire automobile exclusive of the tires at 20 per cent ad valorem?

Mr. PALMER. No; it would not be done.

Mr. ANDERSON. Well, it can be done, can it not?

Mr. PALMER. The automobile chassis, which the gentleman from Minnesota must know, is practically the finished car with the exception of the top and the tires, comes in at 30 per cent. The automobile parts which would be imported under the Treasury definitions and the definitions of the courts are such parts as are capable of being used in manufacture here or in repair of local cars. The experts in the import offices would have little difficulty, it seems to me, in noting the difference between parts sent in to repair a car or parts of a car which had been made, manufactured, completed, and then taken apart and knocked down. The whole answer to it lies in the fact that there is no incentive to that kind of an importation because the finished car is what the American wants.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, this is one of the peculiar features of this bill. Automobiles now pay 45 per cent duty, which is a prohibitory duty in the main, absolutely prohibitory as to all except a few high priced and in the main French cars. It is easy enough to carry out the provisions of this bill, 45 per cent on those cars, without carrying a prohibitory rate on the poor man's car, and it will not do any longer to say that automobiles are only for the rich. Even Members of this House who are not rich are able to own automobiles, and many of their constituents, with an annual earning of less than one-tenth of a Congressman's salary, own automobiles. But here is a prohibitory tariff, absolutely prohibitory on all of the cheap automobiles, direct in the face of the statement which has been made by the gentleman from Alabama as to the theory of this tariff. We imported less than $2,000,000 worth of automobiles last year. We exported over $9,000,000 worth, and the amount produced in the United States and consumed was $165,000,000 worth of production, and yet the gentlemen say in making up a competitive tariff that they must keep the price of automobiles up to a 45 per cent ad valorem rate. I am prepared to say that there would be due protection to the American industry with a considerable reduction in price. Automobiles have become a necessity in the land. For many years the price naturally was high because it was controlled by patents, but the time has come when automobiles ought to be made cheap in competition with the ordinary cheap buggies. No longer do people possess carriages, buggies, and horses to the extent they did formerly, but they now want to get automobiles. Here is a proposition which proposes to keep the rate now the same rate that has been on for years on automobiles, a prohibitory rate on all except the highest priced machines.

Mr. PALMER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MANN. Certainly.

Mr. PALMER. I want to say to the gentleman this is the fact about the automobile business: That the finer, the high priced, the luxurious cars come in as finished automobiles——

Mr. MANN. Well, the gentleman said that before.

Mr. PALMER. Wait a minute. On them we lay a duty of 45 per cent. The cheaper cars which are imported for use here, the trucks, the commercial cars, all come in as chassis at 30 per cent ad valorem.

Mr. MANN. But we export finished automobiles of that character, as the gentleman well knows. I have no objection to making the tariff rate 50 per cent or 60 per cent on machines that cost over $1,000 or $1,500.

But why is that a reason for maintaining 45 per cent on machines which sell for less than $1,000 and cost less than $300 to make. The automobile business is now maintaining the newspapers of the country through advertising. It is doing a large amount of expensive work in every direction in that way. The same thing that applied to sewing machines at one time, which sold from $75 to $150 per machine because of patented processes, now applies to automobiles under this provision in the bill. I say the tariff rate ought to be reduced on automobiles, so that there would be some competition, and that people might have machines. It would not injure an industry in this country.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, the arguments which I have just heard from the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. ANDERSON] and the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] illustrate the united position the Republican Party occupies to-day on the tariff question. We have just heard an eloquent and able speech from the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. ANDERSON], a member of the Ways and Means Committee, charging us with the fact that this violent reduction of rates on automobiles was going to destroy the business, and, on the other hand, the leader of the Republican Party, in the next breath, comes up here and tells us that we have written a prohibitive rate on automobiles, which will destroy the American people. Now, there you are. Take your choice on each side of the Republican Party, a gentleman who says that it will destroy industry, and a gentleman who says at the same time the prohibitive rate is ruining the American people.

As a matter of fact, the automobile is the chassis. The balance is merely a carriage top. We have reduced the rate very considerably on the automobile—that is, the chassis—which means the entire car except the carriage part, the top of it, and the rubber tires. We have reduced it from 45 per cent to 30 per cent, a reduction of one-third. Now, as to the top, it is the cheaper part of an automobile, for the use of an ordinary man, a man of reasonable means. Of course, for the luxuriant rich the limousine top may cost a great deal of money, and it is that kind of a top, that kind of seating arrangement, that we are going to tax, and keep the tax of 45 per cent on. If a man wants to come over here and ride in a French car and display his wealth to his friends, he ought to pay for it, and he is going to pay for it under this bill. But when you can bring into this country at 30 per cent, a reduction of a third, the well-made, well-manufactured chassis, the working part of the car, it is not going to destroy the business as our friend from Minnesota [Mr. ANDERSON] suggests, but it is going to bring real competition to the American manufacturers of automobiles, because it will build up an industry among those men who import the chassis, put an American top to it, and it brings real competition that will bring down the price of the home-made article.

Mr. Chairman, I ask to close debate on this paragraph.

Mr. FORDNEY. Will the gentleman permit me just a few minutes?

Mr. SIMS. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I will first yield to the gentleman from Tennessee.

Mr. SIMS. It puts 40 per cent on motor cycles. I did not understand those to be a matter of luxury, but rather for utilitarian purposes.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. One of my boys owns two of them, and I think they are a matter of nuisance more than anything else.

Mr. Chairman, I move to close debate on the paragraph in five minutes.

The motion was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Michigan [Mr. FORDNEY] is recognized.

Mr. FORDNEY. Mr. Chairman, the business of manufacturing automobiles in the State of Michigan is a very important one. There are establishments in the city of Detroit and other cities in Michigan which employ from 5,000 to 8,000 high-class laboring men. By high-class men I mean mechanics who receive a high rate of wages, from $5 to $10 and $12 a day.

A few days ago a gentleman gave me a ride in a very magnificent automobile, and when returning to the hotel, he said, "What do you think of my automobile?" He told me it was a French machine, for which he had paid $8,700.

Now, poor people do not own machines of that kind, and I do not care how high you put the duty on that class of luxury. I would like to see it sufficiently high so that all such machines that are used in this country will be made in this country and made by American laboring men, at the scale of wages paid in those factories here in the United States. In this bill you put a rate of duty on the finished parts of an automobile, not including tires, of 20 per cent ad valorem. The finished parts of automobiles means that the machine will be finished abroad and brought here to be assembled.

There are but few people who are to-day classed as poor people who own automobiles.

I saw a notice in a paper the other day to the effect that a farmer living in the State of Illinois, Mr. MANN's State, brought to market 12 hogs in an automobile and took home in return $480 in cash.

Mr. MANN. The farmers all own automobiles in my State. [Laughter.]

Mr. FORDNEY. Yes; they are all wealthy—the farmers——

Mr. MANN. Under the present laws.

Mr. FORDNEY. Under the present laws and the general prosperity that we have enjoyed during the last 16 years the farmers, not only of Illinois, but elsewhere, are rich. I want to see them remain rich. [Applause on the Republican side.]

Mr. MADDEN. They have all got money in the bank. [Applause.]

Mr. PAYNE. I want to say to the gentleman that in my district I have a little town of 4,000 people, and most of them are farmers, and they told me that by actual count last fall over 300 automobiles were owned in that town.

Mr. FORDNEY. I have a letter which I will send to the Clerk's desk to have read when the matter comes up to which the letter is germane; a letter in which the person who writes it says that a few years ago he paid from 12½ to 15 cents a yard for ordinary calico for a dress for his wife, but that now his wife takes to market in an automobile one setting hen and can buy a silk dress with the proceeds thereof. [Laughter and applause.] That illustrates the difference between the values of farm products and manufactured products then and now. The point I wish to make, gentlemen, is that in reducing the duty from 45 per cent to 20 per cent on this item, if it will permit the importation of automobile parts, you will have then transferred the labor that is now employed in the automobile factories of this country to a foreign land, and to that I most strenuously object. [Applause on the Republican side.]

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the pro forma amendment will be withdrawn, and the Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

122. Bicycles, 25 per cent ad valorem; motor cycles, and finished parts thereof, not including tires, 40 per cent ad valorem.

Mr. SHERLEY. Mr. Chairman, if there is any industry in America that has demonstrated its ability to stand on its own feet, it is the automobile industry.

I have listened to a very remarkable statement here, made by the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. FORDNEY]. Detroit is probably the greatest automobile center in America. There is not a man possessed of ordinary business capacity who has gone into the automobile business in Detroit but has not only made a good living but has made in most instances a very great fortune; and if the gentleman will pick up any trade paper in this country or any trade paper published in France or in England he will find that the cheap American automobile has taken a large part of the market in England and in France.

Now, what happened was this: The people abroad were earlier than we in the building of automobiles; they built up an industry long before we did; and there was a time in this country when we were not able to make a machine that was anything like as good as the foreign machine. That time has long since passed, and American ingenuity, American skill, and American ability have, with high-priced American labor—in the sense that it was high-priced in the wage that it got, but was cheap in the work that it gave—have developed what is to-day the greatest automobile industry in the world; and if you had free trade in automobiles, in my judgment, you would not have any serious competition in the cheap automobile industry—in the automobiles that sell anywhere from $750, like the Hupmobile, or similar cars, up to $1,000 or $1,500.

We to-day are making those machines better and cheaper than they are made anywhere else in the world, and it is simply folly, in the face of the actual facts, to talk about a threatened industry. Nothing is being threatened about it. There ought to be a tax on the higher priced cars. But, speaking for myself, I would not feel that there was the slightest risk to the industry as a whole if automobiles were put on the free list.

Let me ask the gentleman what has been the experience in the city of Detroit? How many multimillionaires have been made there, almost overnight, in the automobile industry?

Mr. FORDNEY. I do not know. I am not in the business.

Mr. SHERLEY. I know, because I happen to know some of the men who have made the money. I am glad they have made it. But I know that there has not been a single concern, well managed, but has not only made a success but a success so great as to be the marvel of modern manufacturing enterprise.

Mr. FORDNEY. Will the gentleman yield to a question?

Mr. SHERLEY. I know of one gentleman whom the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. FORDNEY] knows very well, who by the fortunate investment of a few thousand dollars in an establishment making a very low-priced car, has to-day an annual income very much larger than either the gentleman or I receive for serving our country.

Mr. FORDNEY. Let me say to the gentleman that the only complaint I am making is that if by lowering the rate of duty from 45 to 20 per cent you encourage importation, then you have injured the industry, or the labor, by transferring it abroad; and if it will not do that, why lower the duty?

Mr. SHERLEY. Of course the gentleman and I can never meet upon common ground. He believes we ought to make it impossible for anybody to bring anything into this country. He believes it ought to be made a capital offense. He thinks America can go on selling to the rest of the world and never buying from it. I think it is time for these industries to get out of their swaddling clothes and to go out into the world's market and capture some of it.

Mr. FORDNEY. What you think "the gentleman" thinks, and what you know about what the gentleman thinks, may be two different things.

Mr. SHERLEY. Of course, for I am limited to what the gentleman says he thinks, and I may be wrong in my conclusion.

Mr. FORDNEY. I do not think I have said anything from which you could draw such a conclusion.

Mr. SHERLEY. During my 10 years of service here the gentleman has stood as the champion of the highest protective tariff that could be written. To-day he is in constant quarrel with nearly every man on his own side, because some of them want to progress, and he wants to stand pat on the tariff.

Mr. FORDNEY. My friend, I always object to progressing as a crawfish does.

Mr. SHERLEY. Oh, yes; but perhaps the trouble may be in your vision rather than in the direction in which people are progressing.

Mr. FORDNEY. Perhaps.

Mr. SHERLEY. The gentleman has stood on this floor talking about lumber, and he has the same sort of idea about that; whereas it is well known that every man who invested in standing timber as long as five years ago has had the benefit of such an increase in value as to amount to a great return upon the investment. Yet the gentleman thinks if you change a single rate touching lumber you are verily laying an impious hand on the ark of the covenant.

Mr. FORDNEY. Again you are asserting what the gentleman thinks, without knowing what he thinks.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. SHARP. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. I will ask the gentleman in charge of this schedule of the bill for information concerning paragraph 122. I notice it provides for a duty on bicycles of 25 per cent ad valorem, and on motor cycles and finished parts thereof, not including tires, 40 per cent ad valorem. I wish to ask this question because I have a manufacturer back in my home town who asked me recently as to the provision of the present bill as it affects his bicycle-saddle business, the largest in the country, I believe. I notice that in referring to motor cycles it provides for 40 per cent ad valorem on the finished parts thereof, not including tires. Does that include the saddle used on a motor cycle?

Mr. PALMER. I should think so. That is a part of the motor cycle.

Mr. SHARP. Then how would it apply to bicycle saddles? Would it be 25 per cent ad valorem?

Mr. PALMER. The reason that language was not put in in reference to bicycles is that practically all of the parts of bicycles would come in under the basket clause at the same rate that bicycles carry, while as to motor cycles, the basket clause is lower than the motor-cycle rate. In other words, there is not the same necessity for putting it in as to bicycles that there is for putting it in as to motor cycles, because the basket clause and the bicycle rate are the same.

Mr. SHARP. But taking the saddle of the bicycle, would that receive an ad valorem protection of 25 per cent?

Mr. PALMER. No; saddles do not come in the basket clause of the metal schedule.

Mr. SHARP. Does the gentleman mean that bicycle saddles do not?

Mr. PALMER. Unless they are composed in chief value of metal. I am not prepared to say whether those saddles are composed in chief value of metal or in chief value of leather. They have both metal and leather in them.

Mr. SHARP. Turning over to page 114, paragraph 535, you provide for all leather not specially provided for in this section; and then in the latter part of that section you say:

Harness, saddles, and saddlery.

Mr. TOWNSEND. That means leather saddles.

Mr. SHARP. Is that broad enough to include bicycle saddles?

Mr. PALMER. It would if the saddle was composed wholly or in chief value of leather. In that case it comes in under the free list. If it is composed wholly or in chief value of metal it comes in the basket clause of the metal schedule.

Mr. SHARP. Would not the same statement apply where it is used for a motor cycle?

Mr. PALMER. I think not, because under that language it would be a finished part of the motor cycle.

Mr. COOPER. Will the gentleman permit a question?

Mr. PALMER. Yes.

Mr. COOPER. I notice in lines 8 and 9, page 33, motor cycles are dutiable at 40 per cent and the finished parts of the motor cycles, not including tires, also at 40 per cent. In other words, so far as motor cycles and finished parts are concerned, the tariff is 40 per cent, whereas automobiles are dutiable at 45 per cent and the finished parts at 20 per cent. Why is that distinction made between automobiles and their finished parts and no distinction made between motor cycles and their finished parts?

Mr PALMER. The finished parts of small machines are very much larger in value proportion of the finished article than the finished parts of large machines like automobiles. Therefore there is less logic in making parts come in at a less rate in motor cycles than in automobiles.

Mr. COOPER. I can not understand the logic of the gentleman's statement. I do not know why bringing in an automobile chassis and the finished parts of an automobile is not in effect bringing in the automobile itself. It can all be set up here.

Mr. PALMER. Is the gentleman asking me a question

Mr. COOPER. I say I do not understand the logic of the gentleman's statement. I do not know why the finished parts of a motor cycle should be dutiable at the same rate—40 per cent—as the motor cycle itself, and that the finished parts of automobiles should be dutiable at 25 per cent less than completed automobiles

Mr PALMER. I have stated to the gentleman the reason that the committee had.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, the two paragraphs, I think, will cause a serious commentary in the mind of any person. The gentleman from Wisconsin just endeavored to extract some information as to why there was a difference in theory between the two paragraphs, but I did not hear any reply which seemed at all satisfactory.

Mr. GARNER. We are not responsible for the gentleman's failure of mind.

Mr. MANN. Usually it is desirable to make finished parts pay a little higher duty than the entire assembled machine, because that causes the parts to be made here rather than abroad. But under the automobile paragraph itself it is to the interest of anyone to make the parts abroad, or have them made abroad and brought here. You can bring in an entire automobile, if knocked down, and that is the way they naturally will come in, at 20 and 30 per cent advalorem instead of 45 per cent for the finished machine.

And yet when you get to motor cycles the rate on the finished machines is made at 40 per cent instead of 45 per cent, as it is on the finished automobile, and the rate on the finished parts is put at 40 per cent, and only 20 per cent on the finished parts of automobiles. No wonder the gentleman from Pennsylvania did not furnish an explanation. A man to understand that will have to eat a welsh rarebit and go to sleep. [Laughter on the Republican side.]

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the pro forma amendment will be withdrawn.

The Clerk read as follows:

125. Bolts, with or without threads or nuts, or bolt blanks, finished hinges or hinge blanks, nuts, and washers, 15 per cent ad valorem; spiral nut locks and lock washers, whether of iron or steel, 35 per cent ad valorem.

Mr. PALMER. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 33, line 21, insert, after the word "bolts," the words "of iron or steel."

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. PALMER. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 33, line 22, insert, after the word "nuts," the words "or blanks."

Mr. POWERS. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word; and, with the permission of the gentleman from Pennsylvania, I want to ask him a question. I received a letter this morning from Dr. J. B. Mason, of London, Ky., who wants to know what tariff duties, if any, this bill carries on scientific and surgical instruments and equipment. He goes on further to state that it is his opinion that they are not manufactured in this country to any great extent.

Does the gentleman from Pennsylvania refuse to answer the question?

Mr. PALMER. Oh, no; I do not refuse. They are not in this schedule. I am trying to find them, and if the gentleman will read the bill he will find them.

Mr. POWERS. Mr. Chairman, I have read the bill, but I failed to find them.

Mr. PALMER. Is the gentleman talking about surgical instruments or surgical utensils?

Mr. POWERS. Surgical instruments and equipments and those used by dentists.

Mr. PALMER. Hospital utensils would come under paragraph 136, which is printed on page 36, while surgical instruments not specifically enumerated would, if made in chief value of the metals covered by the metal schedule, come in under the basket clause, at 25 per cent.

Mr. POWERS. Does paragraph 136 cover the instruments that dentists use in their profession?

Mr. PALMER. No; I would think not.

Mr. TOWNER. Mr. Chairman, I call the gentleman's attention to page 120 of the bill, paragraph 587:

Professional books, implements, instruments, and tools of trade, occupation, or employment in the actual possession of persons emigrating to the United States owned and used by them abroad; but this exemption shall not be construed to include machinery or other articles imported for use in any manufacturing establishment.

I suppose that has reference to professional instruments.

Mr. POWERS. That is on the free list; but that only applies to instruments brought here and used by immigrants.

Mr. PALMER. That is for scientific, religious, literary, or experimental purposes.

Mr. POWERS. Mr. Chairman, I want to state that my constituents inform me that the instruments used by dentists are not manufactured in this country at all, or that virtually few of them are, and that the American dentists pay at least 100 per cent more for the equipment of their offices than do the German dentists. If that is true, a provision ought to be made letting those matters come in free of duty.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the pro forma amendment will be withdrawn, and the question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. PALMER].

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

126. Card clothing not actually and permanently fitted to and attached to carding machines or to parts thereof at the time of importation, 40 per cent ad valorem.

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word, for the purpose of drawing the attention of the committee once more to the protective-tariff tendencies of the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. PALMER]. Under the bill of last Congress articles named in this paragraph were made dutiable at 30 per cent. They are dutiable in this bill at 40 per cent. It seems, however, that upon at least one class of the articles dutiable under this paragraph the gentleman from Pennsylvania has somewhat exceeded the speed limit. On card clothing manufactured with round iron or untempered round steel wire the duty under the present law amounts, in ad valorem equivalent, to 16.29 per cent, based on the importation of 1911. This paragraph increases that duty 250 per cent. That certainly ought to be satisfactory to any protectionist, even though he come from Pennsylvania.

Mr. PAYNE. But being in this bill it is a revision downward, nevertheless.

Mr. ANDERSON. Oh, yes; of course.

Mr. MURDOCK. Mr. Chairman, I rise to oppose the amendment of the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. ANDERSON]. I would like to ask the gentleman in charge of the bill why certain parts of this paragraph were eliminated in H. R. 3321 as against H. R. 10.

Mr. PALMER. Those words were simply descriptive in H. R. 10.

Mr. MURDOCK. That was the sole reason for their elimination?

Mr. PALMER. That is all. They got into H. R. 10 because following the language of the Payne bill the descriptive words were necessary by reason of the larger number of classifications, and when we put them all in at one rate, without any classification, it became unnecessary to have these descriptive words, and we dropped them out. It has no other effect.

Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Minnesota has several times adverted to the fact that rates of duty in this bill were raised over what they were in the Underwood bill passed in the Sixty-second Congress. If his judgment of my practice in regard to tariff making were to be taken at its full value in Pennsylvania, I would be popular with manufacturers, indeed.

But as they look at the facts and consider that which has been done by the Ways and Means Committee, I find I am somewhat unpopular in Pennsylvania with the manufacturers. Thanks to my friend from Minnesota, therefore, I expect to get it from both ends. I want to say to him now, to end this discussion once and for all, that this Schedule C carries every rate lower than the Payne tariff law, with two exceptions, and those are the ferromanganese item, which we have discussed before, gold and silver ware and gold and silver plated ware.

Mr. MANN. How about finished automobiles?

Mr. PALMER. Finished automobiles are the same in this law as the Payne law.

Mr. MANN. But not any lower.

Mr. PALMER. Well, I said we did carry two increases in this bill.

Mr. MANN. But the gentleman said it carried lower rates in every case except two. [Applause on the Republican side.]

Mr. PALMER. Well——

Mr. PAYNE. The gentleman amends that.

Mr. PALMER. I will amend that if the gentleman wants to be so accurate, and say there are two increases in this bill—I thought that is what I did say—over the Payne law, and those are the two I have mentioned. Every other item in the bill has a very considerable reduction below the Payne bill, so that the average reduction is from 34.35 per cent to about 20 per cent throughout the schedule. Now, the Underwood bill last year is somewhat different from this bill now, and there are just 11 increases in this schedule of the bill over the rates of the Underwood bill and 12 decreases in the rates of this bill under those of the Underwood bill; but on the whole this bill is lower than the bill of the Sixty-second Congress, as far as Schedule C is concerned. I have them here in a list and will publish in the RECORD the changes that have been made in this schedule from those in the same schedule of last year's bill in the Sixty-second Congress. Therefore, taking the schedule throughout, there is absolutely no truth in the insinuation or intimation that the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. ANDERSON] would throw out that this bill indicates a tendency toward an upward scale in the making of a tariff from that of a year and a half ago. If he will be honest with the committee and with the House while he goes along and calls attention to these slight and inconsequential increases, he will call attention also to the fact of the large and considerable decreases which we have put in this law under those of the Underwood bill of a year ago. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

Mr. GARDNER rose.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, if the gentleman from Massachusetts will permit me, I desire to ask unanimous consent that debate on this paragraph close in five minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Alabama asks unanimous consent that debate on this paragraph close in five minutes. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. GARDNER. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last two words. Referring to the statement just made by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. PALMER] in contradiction of the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. ANDERSON], will the gentleman from Pennsylvania turn to page 100 of his report? Has the gentleman that page? Now I will ask the gentleman whether it is true that card clothing manufactured with round iron or untempered round steel wire is charged to-day a duty of 20 cents per square foot. Is that correct or not according to your report?

Mr. PALMER. That is right.

Mr. GARDNER. That is true. I understood the gentleman to say that is true?

Mr. PALMER. The gentleman can read as well as I can.

Mr. GARDNER. Very well. Under your new bill that same card clothing is charged 40 per cent ad valorem, and the gentleman from Minnesota declares that to be a rise in duty over the Payne law. Does the gentleman from Pennsylvania deny that?

Mr. PALMER. Well, the rate on card clothing under the Payne law is nearly 60 per cent. The rate in this bill now is 40 per cent, but even at 60 per cent the fact is that there was very considerable competition, and that is the reason why we raised this rate slightly above the Underwood bill of a year ago.

Mr. GARDNER. I am afraid the gentleman did not understand my question. As an illustration, I singled out the first item in paragraph 145 of the Payne law, as did the gentleman from Minnesota. I referred to "card clothing * * * when manufactured with round iron or untempered round steel wire." The duty under existing law is 20 cents per square foot. In the pending bill you have raised the duty on that kind of card clothing to 40 per cent ad valorem. According to your figures on page 121 the average value of imported card clothing per square foot is 82½ cents. Consequently the 40 per cent ad valorem duty which you propose amounts to 33 cents per square foot. Unless it is denied that a duty of 33 cents per square foot is higher than a duty of 20 cents per square foot, it is evident that the gentleman from Minnesota was correct in his statement.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the pro forma amendment will be considered as withdrawn.

There was no objection.

The Clerk read as follows:

127. Cast-iron pipe of every description, 12 per cent ad valorem; cast-iron andirons, plates, stove plates, sadirons, tailor's irons, hatter's irons, and castings and vessels wholly of cast iron, including all castings of iron or cast-iron plates which have been chiseled, drilled, machined, or otherwise advanced in condition by processes or operations subsequent to the casting process but not made up into articles or finished machine parts; castings of malleable iron not specially provided for in this section; cast hollow ware, coated, glazed, or tinned, 10 per cent ad valorem.

Mr. PALMER. Mr. Chairman, I desire to offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Pennsylvania offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 34, at the end of line 14, insert the words: "Not specially provided for in this section."

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, if it would have done any good, I should have offered, and would hereafter offer, some amendments as we progress in the bill, raising the rate of duty proposed. I recognize the futility of offering amendments of that character in the present temper of the Democratic majority, and that the offering of such amendments would only consume much more time than would otherwise be spent. While I think that this bill will be very injurious to the business and other interests of the country, still I have never felt like prolonging agony beyond the time when it might be ended, and as we are to have the passage of the tariff bill through the House in the present form substantially, with a reasonable discussion which so far, I think, has been allowed, the sooner the better. This item reduces very materially the rate of duty on chains, and I send to the Clerk's desk and ask to be read in my time a letter from one of the prominent men whom I know and who is engaged in the manufacture of chains.

The CHAIRMAN (Mr. HOUSTON). The Clerk will read the letter.

Mr. POWERS. Mr. Chairman, I wish to offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk is about to read a communication for the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] in his time.

The Clerk read as follows:

CHICAGO, March 18, 1913.

Hon. JAMES R. MANN,
House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: Now that President Wilson has issued the call for a special session of Congress to consider a new tariff bill, we wish to call your attention to the item of chain in the iron and steel schedule.

The present duty on chain is 45 per cent ad valorem, and I understand that Mr. UNDERWOOD proposes to cut this to about 20 per cent.

This is entirely too much of a reduction, for the simple reason that it will allow chain which is made in foreign countries to come in in such quantities as to close down the shops in this country unless the wages of our men are almost cut in half.

This is a pretty strong statement, but when you consider that in Germany boys of from 12 to 16 years of age are employed in making the lighter sizes of chain and are paid 35 cents a day; from 16 to 18, 45 cents per day; 18 to 20, 60 cents per day; and married men, 87½ cents per day.

In England, in the "black district," women and girls make all the smaller sizes of chain, and it is one of the worst "sweated" trades there is. These women are known as "outworkers" and earn from $1.50 to $3.50 per week.

The making of chain is on a piecework scale of wages, and on one size the men are paid 40 cents per 100 pounds, where we in this country pay 84 cents, other sizes in proportion.

A very timely article on this subject appeared in the January 3, 1913, edition of the Hardware Reporter, and it fully describes the condition in "the black country."

A reduction in the tariff, as proposed by Mr. UNDERWOOD, will come very nearly destroying the chain-making industry in this country, and we trust you will do everything in your power to have a duty sufficiently high retained to enable us to continue in business and pay reasonable wages to our men.

After a careful study of the situation, we firmly believe that any duty lower than what would be the equivalent of 35 per cent ad valorem would be disastrous to the industry.

Will you kindly let us hear from you in regard to the above?

Yours, very truly,

S. G. TAYLOR CHAIN CO.
S. G. TAYLOR, JR., President.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. PALMER].

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. POWERS. Mr. Chairman, I offer my amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Kentucky offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Insert as a new paragraph the following:

"PAR. 128½. All scientific and surgical instruments and equipment, 5 per cent ad valorem."

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order that is not in order at this point in the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair sustains the point of order.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, what is the point of order?

The CHAIRMAN. That it is not germane to this paragraph of the bill.

Mr. MANN. It is a new paragraph. It was not offered as germane to any paragraph. It is germane to the bill and germane to this schedule.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. The gentleman overlooks the proposition that it must be germane to the paragraph.

Mr. MANN. I beg the gentleman's pardon, but he offered it as an independent paragraph.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I understood the gentleman to offer it as an amendment to this paragraph.

Mr. MANN. No. He offered it as an independent paragraph.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I withdraw the point of order. I think that is true.

The CHAIRMAN. The point of order is withdrawn, and the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. POWERS] is recognized.

Mr. POWERS. Mr. Chairman, I just wanted to state this to the majority leader, as I do not believe he was in the room a while ago. I received a letter this morning from Dr. J. B. Mason, of London, Ky., who is a dentist, and in his letter he wants to know what data, if any, your bill carries on scientific and surgical instruments and equipment. He goes on further to state that it is his information that practically none of these are manufactured in this country. He states further that it costs an American doctor at least 100 per cent more to equip his office than it does a German doctor. Now, if that is true, I think this paragraph ought to be voted into this bill. I would like to hear the majority leader on the matter.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I wish to say that the gentleman proposes to put a tax of 5 per cent on surgical instruments. Now, most surgical instruments in this bill are taxed under the basket clause 25 per cent. Some of them are in 136, "Hospital utensils," that are also taxed at 25 per cent. But the bill carries in the bill philosophical and scientific apparatus, utensils, instruments, and so on, imported specially by order for the use of any society or institution incorporated or established for religious, philosophical, educational, scientific, or literary purposes, or for the encouragement of the fine arts, or for the use and by order of any college, academy, school, or seminary of learning in the United States, and so on.

Now, I think that that is a very broad exception to the rule. These surgical instruments, under the bill as it stands, for a hospital, or for an eleemosynary institution, can be brought in free. But even that liberality was protested against. The testimony had before the Committee on Ways and Means showed that some of the surgical instruments are patented, and that many are devised by American doctors without patents. As a rule, they do not take out a patent on them, but get a manufacturer in America to make them, and after they are made and introduced and used here they are copied abroad and shipped in here.

I think this provision exempting them from taxation when intended for use in hospitals or in eleemosynary institutions and in works of science is as broad as it is necessary to go. They are on a revenue basis, and I do not think there is any reason for adopting the amendment offered by the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. POWERS].

Mr. POWERS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Yes.

Mr. POWERS. If I understand the gentleman's explanation, that provision applies to hospitals and eleemosynary institutions?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Yes.

Mr. POWERS. But it does not apply to the individual dentists, and those individual dentists' tools would come in under the basket clause, which carries a duty of 25 per cent?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Yes; and that is a reduction from 45 per cent to 25 per cent.

Mr. TOWNER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Alabama yield to the gentleman from Iowa?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Yes.

Mr. TOWNER. On page 120, in the free list, these instruments and tools of trade are exempted to those persons who emigrate to the United States—professional persons. Does not the gentleman think that if those persons can bring their instruments here with them our own professional people ought to have an equal opportunity of obtaining them?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Well, I think the gentleman's question is rather captious. When an immigrant comes to our shores and wants to bring with him the tools of his trade we let him bring them, as we let him bring the clothes on his body, free. We do not want him to wander around the streets without clothes, or be taxed for the clothes on his back, and we allow him to bring in also the tools of his trade in his hand, so as to enable him to earn an honest living in America. The conditions are entirely different.

Mr. Chairman, I move that the debate be closed on this paragraph and amendments thereto.

Mr. PAYNE. I want to call attention to the fact that the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] is quoting an old Republican doctrine that has been heard here for a good many years. [Laughter on the Republican side.]

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Alabama moves that debate on this paragraph and amendments thereto be closed. The question is on agreeing to that motion.

The motion was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. POWERS].

The question was taken, and the amendment was rejected.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

130. Penknives, pocketknives, clasp knives, pruning knives, budding knives, erasers, manicure knives, and all knives by whatever name known, including such as are denominatively mentioned in this section, which have folding or other than fixed blades or attachments, and razors, all the foregoing, whether assembled but not fully finished or finished; valued at not more than $1 per dozen, 35 per cent ad valorem; valued at more than $1 per dozen, 55 per cent ad valorem: Provided, That blades, handles, or other parts of any of the foregoing knives, razors, or erasers shall be dutiable at not less than the rate herein imposed upon the knives, razors, and erasers of which they are parts. Scissors and shears, and blades for the same, finished or unfinished, 30 per cent ad valorem: Provided further, That all articles specified in this paragraph shall, when imported, have the name of the maker or purchaser and beneath the same the name of the country of origin die-sunk conspicuously and indelibly on the blade, shank, or tang of at least one or, if practicable, each and every blade thereof.

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Chairman, this is one of the paragraphs where the gentlemen on the other side have had a change of heart since the Underwood bill of a year ago was prepared. That bill put a duty of 35 per cent on all of these articles. This bill, after exempting a considerable class of articles which sell for less than a dollar a dozen, leaving those in that class at 35 per cent, increases the remainder from 35 per cent to 55 per cent.

I am inclined to think that if the majority members of the Committee on Ways and Means had about 10 years longer they would be able to get up a pretty good bill, because occasionally when they make a move they move in the right direction. They have improved the Underwood bill of a year ago very much on this paragraph.

Now this paragraph puts the same duty on the parts as it does on the assembled knives. This thing of bringing in knives in parts is something that occurred away back in 1890, when they evaded the proper tariff on cutlery by bringing it in in parts at a lower rate of duty—just what they would do if there is any opportunity to do it in the case of automobiles. I do not care so much about automobiles. Four years ago we found that they were not building any automobiles in this country and we placed a lower rate on a great many things that came in in the basket clause at 45 per cent and left automobiles at 45 per cent. The result has been in the last four years something that is marvelous, or would be if it had not happened so frequently in this country before, to the same or to a greater degree, by the multiplying of the products of the factories since putting on a protective tariff. Why, it was almost a new industry four years ago, and you have heard a description of the wonderful growth of it in the city of Detroit and in Michigan and all over the country. In my own town there are three factories that are making automobile parts, and they are busy all the time and inventing new parts. Our inventive genius has been at work, and it will always be at work whenever we have an industry here protected so that the boys and the men can be brought face to face with the problem to see what they have got to do toward inventing machines that cheapen the cost of production and add to the value of the labor that is put in by the human hand. We have developed this wonderful industry in automobiles in the last four years. The gentlemen have kept the duty on. Of course it was not at all for the sake of protection. They did not do it because they did not want to run the risk of throttling this industry, but they have kept on the duty of 45 per cent.

I think probably they could safely have reduced it, because the industry has become established, and because we are doing the best work, and we are selling our cheap machines abroad. And notwithstanding the slander that has gone out from high quarters against our American manufacturers and against the laborers at work in our shops and the skill of our mechanics, four years have demonstrated that we can learn more about making automobiles, and have learned more, than any other country in the world. Now, that does not mean that we can get along unless we can keep this market for our people, even at competitive rates. We must have the difference if we pay the difference in wages to labor. We have got to have this, the best market in the world, to keep our factories running, and when they do run, to sell something across the water and increase the output, and run them day in and day out, day and night. And having paid the original overhead charges, we can cheapen the article here and cheapen it elsewhere, and so go on from prosperity to prosperity. Do not turn them out and tell them that we will not give them an adequate tariff to make up the difference in cost here and abroad because of our labor, but give them the continued opportunity. I shall have something to say again, by and by, when we reach it, on these articles that we snatched out of the "not otherwise provided" clause in the tariff, where they had been running for years, four years ago, and put them in other places in the bill.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman criticizes this clause in the bill.

Mr. PAYNE. I am commending it, as far as it goes.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. But the gentleman criticized our putting the same rate on blades and handles and other parts of knives and cutlery that we placed on the knives themselves.

Mr. PAYNE. I was commending it.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I understood the gentleman to criticize it.

Mr. PAYNE. Oh, no; you did exactly right, as far as you went.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I want to call the gentleman's attention to the fact that on pocketknives and clasp knives valued at not exceeding $1.25 a dozen the rate in his bill was 5 cents per piece and 40 per cent ad valorem. On parts of knives and blades valued at not exceeding $1.25 per dozen the rate was 5 cents per piece and 40 per cent ad valorem. On knives valued above $1.25 and not exceeding $3 your rate was 10 cents apiece and 40 per cent ad valorem. On parts valued at more than $1.25 but not exceeding $3 your rate on the parts was 10 cents apiece and 40 per cent ad valorem. On knives valued above $3 per dozen your rate was 20 cents apiece and 40 per cent ad valorem. On the parts valued above $3 per dozen your rate was 20 cents apiece and 40 per cent ad valorem, putting exactly the same rate on the parts as you put on the knives themselves. Yet you criticize our bill for doing the same thing.

Now, we did change this rate. Gentlemen on that side of the House are disposed to criticize this committee because we are not standpatters. Well, I recognize that we are not standpatters. The gentleman from New York [Mr. PAYNE] is an old member of that school in every sense of the word; but this committee was glad to receive information, glad to adjust its rates according to its principles. With the lights before us a year ago, we fixed a rate of 35 per cent on this entire schedule. After further investigation we found that the 35 per cent was an ample rate, in our judgment, on cutlery valued at less than $1 a dozen, but that we were going to have a very competitive rate on cutlery valued above a dollar a dozen. Now, our principle is to levy a revenue tax, and by that we mean a competitive tax, and by a competitive tax we mean a tax that produces reasonable competition and not disastrous competition.

As we thought that the rate we had a year ago probably was too drastic and allowed competition to be too great, and unnecessarily too great, and by a division of rates we could still have a reasonable competitive tariff—one that would bring sufficient revenue to the Government on a competitive rate—both rates were largely decreased in the present bill. We concluded that it was wise for us to divide this paragraph in two parts and put a higher rate on those valued at a dollar a dozen in order that we might carry out our principles within reasonable limits.

Now, the gentleman from New York criticizes the fact that we made changes in this bill. Why, gentlemen, if you would view the Payne bill as it came before this House four years ago, I believe after it was reported to the House, not originally introduced—there were two prints in the House, and when it came back from the Senate its own author did not know it. [Laughter and applause on the Democratic side.]

On many of the vital items in the bill the gentleman from New York took this bill back into the committee and changed it continuously.

Mr. PAYNE. I suggest to the gentleman from Alabama that this bill has not got back from the Senate yet. [Laughter on the Republican side.]

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I am not a prophet, but I think the bill will come back more recognizable than did the gentleman's bill. Mr. Chairman, I ask that debate on the paragraph close in 15 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN (Mr. HOUSTON). The gentleman from Alabama moves that debate close in 15 minutes.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. PLATT. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 35, lines 9 and 10, after the word "dozen" in each line, strike out the figures 35 and 55, and insert in lieu thereof the figures 45 and 65.

Mr. PLATT. Mr. Chairman, I desire to ask the gentleman from Alabama whether he does not think the present rates are really entitled to be called competitive? According to the statistics I have, the American production of pocketknives amounted to about $3,000,000, with importations amounting to about two million and a half dollars. That comes pretty near making competitive rates. The rates in this paragraph have been cut below the rates in the Wilson bill of 1896, which were 53.12, and these rates are 40. It seems to me that they ought to be put back to what they were in the Wilson bill or a little above.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I will say to the gentleman that there are some parts of this schedule that are quite competitive. There are other parts that are entirely prohibitive. The lower grade of knives under the present rates is prohibitive. The competitive part of this schedule is largely above the dollar a dozen. We have cut most of the things that go into the cost of production in these knives. Take the whole schedule and there was only $811,000 in importations. Now, we have not made a drastic cut in these rates under these circumstances, because we have left on this class of knives above a dollar a dozen 55 per cent, one of the highest rates in this bill. When you come to consider that 55 per cent will largely more than equalize the difference in cost of labor—as a matter of fact the 55 per cent will more than amount to the entire labor cost—it seems to me that we have left a very reasonable rate in this bill so far as the manufacturer is concerned, and yet a rate that, I think, will produce a fair amount of competition, and we intended to produce a fair amount of competition.

Mr. COOPER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I am occupying the time of the gentleman from New York.

Mr. COOPER. The gentleman from New York has yielded the floor. A moment ago, in reply to the gentleman from New York [Mr. PAYNE], the gentleman from Alabama said that the Committee on Ways and Means had changed the rates in the pending Underwood bill from those in the Underwood bill of a year ago, because on further investigation the committee had found that the bill of a year ago would permit too great competition. Too great competition for whom—the consumer?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. No; it could not be too great for the consumer.

Mr. COOPER. Then, if it is not too great for the consumer, is the gentleman trying to protect the producer—the manufacturer—against competition?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. We were compelled to lower the tariff to a revenue basis, and a revenue basis does not mean that there shall be great competition with the American producer, that he shall be overwhelmed with competition.

It means reasonable competition, and, as I stated, we were apprehensive that the rate established two years ago on the top end of this schedule might produce too great competition with the American manufacturer, and therefore, in justice to the American manufacturer we put the rate higher than we had it in last year's bill, but make a considerable reduction below what it was in the Payne bill.

Mr. COOPER. Mr. Chairman, too great competition means too much importation, but great importation would produce revenue. Does the gentleman mean too much revenue?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Of course, the gentleman is trying to assume that it is necessary for us to throw down the bars and consider nothing in this reduction but the question of the floodgate of importation and increasing the revenue.

Mr. COOPER. Will the gentleman permit an interruption right there?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Wait one moment until I finish. I have said in the beginning, and I say now, that although on that side of the House you criticize this bill as a drastic bill and as a drastic revision, that except in some vital necessities the committee has endeavored to lower this tariff with a jackscrew and not with an axe, and in cutting this rate we preferred to make it more gradual than we had it in the other bill. That is the whole thing.

Mr. COOPER. Mr. Chairman, what I had in mind was this: The Democratic platform declares that a tariff levied to protect an American industry is in violation of the Constitution of the United States. If this be true, it follows, therefore, that Members of Congress having sworn to support the Constitution of the United States, and to support it without mental reservation, have taken an oath not to enact a tariff to protect an industry against too great competition. The Democratic tariff must be for revenue only, and the question of the welfare or the condition of an industry or the question of too great competition ought not to be taken into account.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from New York [Mr. PLATT] has expired.

Mr. COOPER. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Wisconsin is recognized.

Mr. MANN. But, Mr. Chairman, I understood that certain gentlemen were to be recognized.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Minnesota was to be recognized for five minutes.

Mr. MANN. I thought I was to be recognized for five minutes, and if the Chair will recognize me now I will be very glad to yield one minute to the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. COOPER].

The CHAIRMAN. Very well.

Mr. COOPER. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] said that under his bill of a year ago there was danger of too great competition, but not, he said, too great competition for the consumer—there could not be for the consumer. Then he must have meant for the American producer—that is, the American producer and manufacturer were to meet with too great competition—and to remedy this the rates were changed in the Underwood bill now before us. And yet, according to the Democratic platform adopted last year, rates fixed in a tariff bill in order to shield a manufacturer from too great competition violate the Constitution of the United States.

I cite this only to show in this instance the utter inconsistency between Democratic platform principles and Democratic practice.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, when the bill passed last year it carried a 35 per cent ad valorem rate upon knives valued either above or below $1 per dozen. In the veto message which President Taft sent to this House he called attention to the fact that this rate on knives would destroy the industry of producing the higher priced knives in this country. The gentlemen thereupon made a further study of the subject, and now propose a rate of 35 per cent on knives below $1 a dozen and 55 per cent on knives above $1 a dozen. Of course, with the rate at 35 per cent the amount paid would be very much higher on knives above a dollar a dozen than on knives below a dollar a dozen; but here is a jump in the rate from 35 per cent to 55 per cent, as a protective measure, and to that extent I commend the gentlemen for following the advice of President Taft on the subject.

The gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] a moment ago undertook to say, as I understood him, that under the Payne law the rates on parts of knives is the same as the rate on the finished knives. I do not so understand. I do not know what the gentleman was reading from, but probably one of the Treasury reports.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Here it is in my hand—imports for consumption.

Mr. MANN. Very well, and I hold the law in my hand.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Here is the Treasury authority upon the subject.

Mr. MANN. Oh, no; that is not Treasury authority at all.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. It gives the rates.

Mr. MANN. That is, giving the amount of importations.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Oh, no; it gives the rates. If the gentleman wants to see it, I will be glad to show it to him.

Mr. MANN. I will take what the gentleman said there, although that is not complete. There the rate given was 10 cents each, plus an ad valorem rate, whether it was a knife or an unfinished part of a knife. Does anyone say that is the same rate? If you have 10 cents apiece on the blade and 10 cents apiece on the knife that is not the same as 10 cents on the finished knife. I am going to say I know the gentleman from Alabama is able to add 10 and 10 together and make 20. The rate is not the same and was not the same, and the information which the gentleman has is not complete. This is the law which I am holding in my hand in comparison with the existing law. The Payne law was designed to have knives made and assembled here in this country by American labor.

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. PALMER] repudiates with considerable heat and some scorn the idea that he is a protectionist. If I have said anything from which it may be fairly inferred that the gentleman from Pennsylvania was a real protectionist, I did him a great injustice. He is not a real protectionist. He is only a semiprotectionist. He believes in partly protecting the industries of the great State of Pennsylvania. He does not believe in protecting the wool industry of the State of Wyoming or the wheat industry of the State of Minnesota, so I say that he is only a semiprotectionist. Now, the gentleman from Alabama insists that the rates of the present bill are competitive. I pointed out several instances in which the rates of the present bill are very large increases over the rates of the Underwood bill of the last Congress. We were told during the last Congress that the rates of that bill were competitive. Now, I submit that if the rates of that bill were competitive the rates which have been increased in this bill are prohibitive. Again, if the rates of this bill are competitive, the rates of that bill were way below the competitive rate and destructive, and the only fair inference is that that bill was offered and passed through the House and the Senate with a view of its meeting the presidential veto and of fooling the American people.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Mr. Chairman, we have heard much in reference to the proposed new competitive tariff. If there is any place that it has application, here is the schedule to which it ought to be applied. The importations of this class of goods are now large, and they are constantly increasing. The rates which are imposed by this bill under consideration, with one exception, are not as much as they were under the Wilson bill, under which the industry was gradually dying out. The wages paid in this industry here in America are three times what they are in Germany, from which nearly all the importations come. The gentleman says he has imposed a rate in this bill which will cover the difference in cost. If so, why were these importations being continually increased, and what figures have been given to show when the wages are so much larger in this country than they are abroad? This rate that is proposed is not nearly enough to cover the difference in wages and the other increased costs of manufacturing in this country. It is simply leaving the American worker on cutlery at the mercy of his foreign competitors.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is upon the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York.

The question was taken, and the amendment was rejected.

The Clerk read as follows:

137. Needles for knitting or sewing machines, latch needles, crochet needles, and tape needles, knitting and all curriers', drawing, farriers', fleshing, hay, tanners', plumbers', painters', palette, artists', and shoe knives, forks and steels, finished or unfinished, without handles, 25 per cent ad valorem; with handles, 30 per cent ad valorem: Provided, That all the articles specified in this paragraph, when imported, shall have the name of the maker or purchaser, and beneath the same the name of the country of origin indelibly stamped or branded thereon in a place that shall not be covered thereafter.

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Chairman, I tried to get recognition from the Chair on the last paragraph in regard to butcher knives, and so forth.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair did not hear the gentleman and will recognize the gentleman now.

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. I simply want to call attention to the fact that there is a raise on the butcher and kitchen knife business in the duty. The paragraph in the former Underwood bill had a duty of 25 per cent ad valorem in those knives with or without handles, but they differentiate here; without handles they put it at 25 per cent and with handles they put it at 30 per cent, another instance where he ought to take off his hat to President Taft and beg his pardon for what he had said about him in the campaign when he called attention in his veto to these various little slips that he had made in that bill, having so many things not even on a competitive basis let alone a protective basis. There is another thing to which I wish to call attention. The President of the United States in his campaign last fall said that his cheek blushed with shame when he saw in a shop an article stamped, "Made in Germany" He did not know that was in the law. They have got it in this bill, they had it in the former paragraph requiring the stamping of the name on the article itself, and I hope the gentleman, when he consults with the President the next time about this bill, will tell the President that that was put in the law way back in 1890 and it has been kept there ever since.

That is the reason his cheeks flushed with shame when he saw "Made in Germany" on the knife, and arrived at the unpatriotic conclusion that that was because the Germany goods were better. It was because our American goods are better that our American manufacturers insisted that that stamp be put on the article, way back in 1890, and because of their insistence it is there yet in this present law.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman states that this paragraph is a raise in the rates. The Payne bill levied a rate of 41 per cent.

Mr. PAYNE. I did not say it raised the rate in the Payne bill, but in the Underwood bill of a year ago.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. The gentleman failed to explain himself, and therefore I will apologize.

Mr. PAYNE. I spoke about the President's vetoing of your bill a year ago. The gentleman does not pay attention.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I will leave it to the RECORD. You would imagine from what the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] said a moment ago that the President had vetoed these iron and steel schedules on account of these items we had raised. I have just read the veto message to see whether he said anything about knives, or butcher knives, or the raising of the rates; and if the President ever heard of the subject he entirely overlooked it and did not mention it in his message.

Mr. PAYNE. If the gentleman will allow me, I could tell the gentleman they were not mentioned by name in the veto message, and also that the President got his information before the Senate committee, both as to knives and other items, and that is the reason he vetoed your bill.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. He vetoed it without informing us, and, therefore, as he did not inform us it is evident that we did not raise the rate on account of the President's vetoing it.

Mr. PAYNE. The gentleman has the message there. Did he not say he vetoed it because you had reduced the rates on certain articles there?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Yes; the principal tune the President sung in this message was in relation to machine tools made in Cincinnati.

Mr. PAYNE. He spoke generally about rates.

Mr. FITZGERALD. The President probably told the gentleman from New York his reasons for vetoing the bill under the impression that he was the Congress, and then forgot to put it in his message.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Exactly. And cutlery is a very important industry in the State of my friend from New York [Mr. PAYNE], and as the President left it out of the veto message I have no doubt he salved the soul of the gentleman from New York by telling him he was taking care of his home industry.

Mr. PAYNE. I want to say to the gentleman that I never said a word concerning the veto message to the President.

Mr. MARTIN of South Dakota. Mr. Chairman, in view of the recent statement of an explanation of the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] as to the competitive principle in this tariff, I would like to ask the gentleman whether on the paragraph we passed a short time ago, as to automobiles, the 45 per cent is a competitive or a revenue-raising rate?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I will say to the gentleman that I positively decline to go back to it at this time.

Mr. MARTIN of South Dakota. I hope we will have time to do so in the consideration of this bill, so that we may have an explanation as to whether the rate in the automobile item is a competitive or a revenue-raising rate.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I will say to the gentleman that during his absence I fully discussed that, as did my colleague, and I refer him to to-morrow morning's RECORD for the information.

Mr. PALMER. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. PALMER] offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 36, line 12, after the word "shotguns," strike out the comma.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

135. Breech-loading shotguns and rifles, combination shotguns and rifles, and parts thereof and fittings therefor, including barrels further advanced than rough bored only; pistols, whether automatic, magazine, or revolving, or parts thereof and fittings therefor, 35 per cent ad valorem.

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from South Dakota [Mr. MARTIN] and the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. COOPER] a moment ago were unreasonable enough to expect the gentlemen in charge of the bill to express or to exhibit any consistent line of argument with regard to it.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I want to advise my friend from Wyoming that I am going to be unreasonable enough to insist that he shall argue this paragraph. [Laughter.]

Mr. MONDELL. Very well. I shall be very glad to do it, because this paragraph illustrates the inconsistency to which I was going to refer. Sometimes the gentlemen place a higher rate of duty on the raw material or on the parts of the finished product than on the finished product itself. Sometimes the rates are just the other way, and sometimes, as in this case, the rate is the same on the raw material, on the parts, and on the finished product.

I was about to remark, when interrupted by the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD], that it is altogether unreasonable for gentlemen on this side to expect the gentlemen in charge of the bill to be logical in their explanation of the bill, because the bill itself is so illogical that there is no logical explanation that can be given of its paragraphs and of its rates. We started out with a free-trade schedule and with a free-trade defender thereof in the person of the gentleman from New York [Mr. HARRISON]. The next schedule was defended by a tariff-for-revenue gentleman, with some leaning toward protection. This particular schedule is in the charge of the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. PALMER], who is a partial protectionist in spots. [Laughter on the Republican side.]

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order that the gentleman from Wyoming is not discussing kitchen knives or table knives, although his discussion is very pointed [laughter], or any sort of a gun.

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Chairman, this is one of the cases where I understand the gentleman has reduced the rate with a jackscrew. [Laughter on the Republican side.] How much the gentleman must have regretted it when some one who is said to reside at the other end of the Avenue took the jackscrew from under his wool rate! [Laughter on the Republican side.]

I will not say that placing wool on the free list is a reduction with an ax, it is a reduction by dynamite, even more destructive than by any ax. [Laughter.] In this particular paragraph the gentleman is consistent in his inconsistency, and the American manufacturer can either buy the parts of his shotguns abroad or buy them at home, as he sees fit. Ordinarily in the interest of competition the gentleman from Alabama has so arranged the rates that it is to the advantage of the manufacturer or of the assembler of manufactured articles to buy the parts abroad and employ no labor in the United States in the fabrication of these articles, save alone in their assembling. But the gentleman is not consistent as to that, because that rule, carried out in some of the schedules, is violated in others, as it is in the one now under discussion. [Applause on the Republican side.]

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

136. Table, kitchen, and hospital utensils, or other similar hollow ware of aluminum or of iron or steel, enameled or glazed with vitreous glasses, but not ornamented or decorated with lithographic or other printing, 25 per cent ad valorem.

Mr. PALMER. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. PALMER] offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 36, line 20, after the word "ware," insert the words "composed wholly or of chief value."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

140. Rivets, studs, and steel points, lathed, machined, or brightened, and rivets or studs for nonskidding automobile tires, and rivets of iron or steel, not specially provided for in this section, 20 per cent ad valorem.

141. Crosscut saws, mill saws, pit and drag saws, circular saws, steel band saws, finished or further advanced than tempered and polished, hand, back, and all other saws, not specially provided for in this section, 12 per cent ad valorem.

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. I should like to ask my friend from Pennsylvania if these saws embraced in this paragraph at 12 per cent duty include the Disston saws that he found advertised in the Saturday Evening Post that were sold all over creation and everywhere else?

Mr. PALMER. Yes; and we reduced the rate from something like——

Mr. PAYNE. I can tell the gentleman—from 25 per cent to 12 per cent.

Mr. PALMER. I think it was from 30 per cent to 12 per cent.

Mr. PAYNE. No; from 25 per cent to 12 per cent.

Mr PALMER. Below the Payne law.

Mr. PAYNE. I think I cut it in two four years ago.

Mr. PALMER. And we followed suit and cut it in two again.

Mr. PAYNE. You are following suit on a good many things and are learning all the time. If you would only be consistent about it we could commend your bill.

Mr. MARTIN of South Dakota. I should like to ask the gentleman from Pennsylvania why it is that he reduced down to 20 per cent ad valorem the duty on rivets or studs for nonskidding automobile tires but retained the duty of 45 per cent on the automobiles?

Mr. PALMER. If the gentleman had been here when we discussed the automobile question——

Mr. MARTIN of South Dakota. Unfortunately I was not, and unfortunately also I have not the disposition to read all that the gentleman said about it. It would take too much time.

Mr. PALMER. I do not think the gentleman ought to take advantage of his absence from his duty to compel us to go over again that which we have discussed very considerably in his absence.

Mr. HAMILTON of Michigan. And I think it is very unfair to ask the rest of us to listen to it, too. [Laughter.]

Mr. PALMER. I think so. I agree with that entirely. But I will say to the gentleman from South Dakota briefly that it is only finished automobiles that bear the rate of 45 per cent. The automobile chassis, which is the only part of the automobile which is imported for the cheaper cars or for the commercial cars, comes in at 30 per cent, and parts of automobiles under this law come in at 20 per cent.

Mr. MARTIN of South Dakota. Why should these separate parts pay 20 per cent and the parts combined into an automobile pay 45 per cent?

Mr. PALMER. In the interest of finishing this bill I refer the gentleman to the RECORD. I do not care to go over that any more.

The CHAIRMAN. If there be no objection, the pro forma amendment will be considered as withdrawn and the Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

143. Umbrella and parasol ribs and stretchers, composed in chief value of iron, steel, or other metal, in frames or otherwise, and tubes for umbrellas, wholly or partially finished, 35 per cent ad valorem.

Mr. MOORE. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Pennsylvania offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 36, line 13, after the word "finished," strike out "35 per cent ad valorem" and insert "40 per cent ad valorem."

Mr. MOORE. Mr. Chairman, this paragraph illustrates the habit of the committee of imposing even higher duties on the raw materials than on the finished articles. It is strange that so many people of the United States were deceived during the late campaign into believing that the Democratic Party would play fair with the manufacturers of the country, and would not destroy legitimate industries.

One of the gentlemen who had perfect faith that the party now in control would frame a tariff bill that would not destroy legitimate industry advises me that "a mistake" has been made in that part of the bill which relates to umbrellas and the component parts thereof. Indeed, I find there are several gentlemen who have the same notion. One of them writes:

Now, it must surely have been an oversight on the part of the committee to give a preference of 15 per cent to foreign manufacturers and to otherwise handicap the American makers by having the completed article 15 per cent lower than the component parts. Such a schedule, if put through, would be apt to put every American manufacturer out of business.

Mr. Chairman, the committee in this bill fixed the umbrella duty at 30 per cent ad valorem, and then they fixed the duty upon umbrella and parasol ribs and stretchers which enter into the manufacture of the umbrella at 35 per cent. Then, in order to make it still more interesting to the man whose industry in this country was not to be destroyed, when it came to the woven fabric, of which silk was a component part, they provided a duty of 45 per cent ad valorem, so that they made it utterly impossible, if a man wanted to manufacture an umbrella in this country, to get any of his raw materials at a less price than the foreigner could send his finished umbrella into the country for.

Mr. PAYNE. If the gentleman will allow me, I want to suggest to him that the item was in at 30 per cent instead of 35 per cent in the Underwood bill a year ago, and undoubtedly the veto was what called attention to it. I want to inquire whether it would not have been better for these gentlemen to have gone to the White House a year ago, instead of confining their visit to about a month ago?

Mr. MOORE. I think the gentleman is entirely right in his supposition as to what they should have done. But the truth is, the committee saw that an error had been made in attempting to establish a revenue duty in regard to umbrella frames, and did, on the appeal of certain Democratic representatives of manufacturers of umbrellas, change base and give an added protection of 5 per cent, bringing the rate upon finished umbrellas up to 35 per cent. As the situation now stands, umbrella and parasol ribs and stretchers, composed in chief value of iron, steel, or other metals, and tubes for umbrellas are to come into the United States at a duty of 35 per cent, and the finished umbrella is to come in at 35 per cent, but the silk which goes into the umbrella—and most people, whether rich or poor, use umbrellas in this country—is taxed at 45 per cent. So everything as it stands in the bill is in the interest of the men who want to send abroad to manufacture umbrellas and the component parts, because it is impossible for men in the United States to get their raw materials cheaper than the finished product.

Mr. PALMER. Mr. Chairman, the discussion with which we have been favored ought to commend itself to the distinguished gentleman from Wyoming——

Mr. MONDELL. It does. [Laughter.]

Mr. PALMER (continuing). As evidence of that inconsistency in the conduct of men when it comes to making tariffs that seems to arouse his criticism. He would do well if he would train his popguns upon his colleagues on that side of the aisle who have just now exhibited this startling inconsistency.

We find the gentleman from New York cooperating with the gentleman from Minnesota at all times, and complaining against our conduct in raising the rates in the bill over those of the Underwood bill of a year ago. We find immediately afterwards the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MOORE], and the gentleman from Iowa, to whom evidently an absolutely contrary duty has been assigned in this debate, complaining because we did not raise the rates high enough.

The gentleman from New York takes us to task for raising the rates from 30 per cent to 35 per cent over the Underwood bill, and the gentleman from Pennsylvania takes us to task for not raising the rates from 30 per cent to 40 per cent.

Now, as to the gentleman's charge of inconsistency by reason of carrying a larger rate on the materials or parts than we do on the finished product. I could call his attention to dozens of cases in every tariff law which has ever been on the statute books where that necessarily inconsistent feature appears. It is far less inconsistent in a Democratic bill written upon a Democratic theory than it would be or has been in some of the Republican bills in the past, because when we write a rate with regard to the competition which will result from the rate we do not necessarily take into consideration the rates upon the component materials that go into the finished product, but the exact situation in trade between this country and other countries.

There may be now less competition in the finished article than in the component parts, or vice versa, and it is a question of how much competition now prevails under the present rate. That is largely instrumental in determining whether the rates should be reduced, and how far, in order that a proper amount of competition throughout the entire line of business activity in these manufactured articles may be kept up; we consider the amount of the production in this country in connection with the amount of imports under the rate, and fix the rate with regard to that. If it so happens that the component materials carry a higher rate than the finished article, it will be because there is to-day less competition in the finished article than in the component material, and we desire to bring about a proper relation.

Mr. MOORE. Does the gentleman think that is a fair argument to apply to a man whose house is burning?

Mr. PALMER. Nobody's house is burning as far as umbrella ribs are concerned. [Laughter.]

Mr. MARTIN of South Dakota. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. I think this afternoon of the second day of proceeding under these various schedules has got far enough along to sample the quality of this bill and to demonstrate conclusively that it is not built upon any consistent plan or system that the gentleman from Pennsylvania or anyone else can explain to the satisfaction of reasonable men.

If they have made a reduction in the rates and it will bring in a greater revenue because of greater importations, the explanation is that this is a revenue tariff, and they have no regard for its effect upon the industries of the country; and if, on the other hand, they have so changed the rates that importations will be reduced, they state that we are not compelled to seek a revenue from this particular item because we now have an income tax. Here is an instance in the umbrella schedule upon which they have the rates on the raw material higher than the finished product. We have just had another schedule, to wit, the automobile schedule, in which they have the finished product rates much higher than the rates on the various parts composing it.

Mr. PALMER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MARTIN of South Dakota. Yes.

Mr. PALMER. The gentleman will notice that if the amendment of the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MOORE] shall prevail, the rate on the raw or semiraw materials will be still higher than the rate on the finished product.

Mr. MOORE. We will come to that when we reach it.

Mr. MARTIN of South Dakota. Mr. Chairman, I am not so much interested in the position of the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MOORE] as I am in the efforts—futile efforts, it seems to me—of the gentlemen to explain the system of construction upon which the bill has been made. It makes no difference what you call the rate on any article; it is to the extent of the rate protective. Take the automobile industry—a consumption of automobiles in this country to the amount of $158,000,000. There is a rate of 45 per cent. That is prohibitive, practically. Less than $2,000,000 in value of automobiles were brought into this country, and only about $2,000,000 in parts and completed automobiles altogether.

Take the completed automobiles and the component parts and the consumption in this country is over $240,000,000. The rate of 45 per cent is practically prohibitive. It is a protective rate, no matter what you call it. It does not produce revenue; it does not produce foreign competition in the industry. The Republican Party are frank enough to say that this rate is made because the industry is employing thousands and thousands of American laborers and consuming thousands upon thousands of American raw materials as well as foreign raw materials; building up a great profitable industry that has probably added more impetus than any other one single industry to the prosperity of this country in the last 10 years. The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. PALMER] is not willing to destroy this industry nor to place it upon either a revenue basis or a competitive basis, and he is not frank enough to say that he has regard for this important industry. The fact of the business is that the rates protect. If you can produce an article in this country and you put a rate upon it, you protect it, no matter what you may call it, and the merits of this bill, when it is in operation, will be judged by whether it tends to encourage or destroy the great prosperity in which we are now indulging.

Last year, 1912, marked the high-water mark both in production and exportation. We produced in round figures something like $30,000,000,000, $8,500,000,000 in agriculture and $21,000,000,000 of manufactures. We exported $2,204,000,000 of that. We imported something like $1,600,000,000. They were the largest exportations and importations in the history of the country. We can stand experimentation now, perhaps, as well as at any other time, and when these gentlemen have placed their tariff schedules in operation, they will be judged according to how they work. A protective principle always has worked well and always will work well in this country, and I commend their preserving some measure of protection on some of the important industries, although I can not commend their lack of frankness in confessing the fact.

Mr. PALMER. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that debate on this paragraph and all amendments thereto close in 10 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Chairman, speaking of the umbrella paragraph, in order that I may be within the rules, I am glad that there is one proposition on which the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. PALMER] and I are in full agreement. He says that the bumps and inconsistencies in this bill are not so remarkable in a Democratic bill as they would be in a Republican bill. I agree with him on that proposition absolutely. As a matter of fact, I have about come to the conclusion that the gentlemen do not expect to be expected to be consistent. It is unfortunate the gentleman from Pennsylvania did not give sufficient attention to what was said by the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. ANDERSON] and his colleague from Pennsylvania [Mr. MOORE] to understand that they did not protest against his having increased or decreased any one particular rate. What they did protest against was the bumpy, humpy, hobble-skirted, limping character of these schedules. For instance, here are certain of the component parts of umbrellas at 35 per cent. Over on page 97 are other parts of umbrellas at 30 per cent, and in the silk schedule are other parts of umbrellas at 45 per cent, and the umbrella itself bears a rate of 35 per cent. Now, the gentleman from Pennsylvania knows—we all know—that there is neither rhyme nor reason in that sort of thing. It is just common, ordinary blundering, as, in my opinion, the rates on automobiles and their parts are. When the gentleman from South Dakota asked why these inconsistencies in the automobile schedule, he is told to read in the RECORD to-morrow the explanation the gentlemen from Alabama and Pennsylvania claim to have made.

The trouble is that when the gentleman from Minnesota and the gentleman from South Dakota examine the RECORD to-morrow they will discover that the gentlemen from Alabama and Pennsylvania sent them to the RECORD for a snipe hunt. They will find no explanation there. As the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] well said, there is no one on earth outside of a certain class of eleemosynary institutions or the victims of an overdose of Welsh rarebit who can explain why automobiles should be 40 per cent, parts of automobiles 20 per cent; bicycles, 25 per cent, parts and all; and these little choo-choo affairs that are a cross between the bicycle and the automobile bear a different rate from either of the other two, both in whole and in part. There is no explanation for these things, no logic in them.

Mr. BUCHANAN of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, I do not think I care to take up the full five minutes. The discussion of this bill, as the discussion of all tariff questions, brings out argument in favor of designing measures that will protect laborers, and some gentleman has this afternoon stated that organized labor was for a protective tariff. Even in this debate since this bill has been before the committee reference has been made to a comparison between some of the building trades in this country and those of some foreign countries, when in fact the tariff can not have anything to do with the wages of the building craftsmen of this country. They do not build buildings in foreign countries and sell them in competition with the builders here, and the fact is, Mr. Chairman, that the American building craftsmen are not only the best paid workmen of this country or any other country, but they are the most efficient and capable workmen. We construct buildings cheaper in the United States than anywhere else. I do not blame the gentleman for taking these things as a joke, because he does not care anything about the working people anyhow, probably. The fact is you are not going to fool the working people any more with this argument that you are making about protecting the American workingman. He has waked up to the fact that you have been fooling him for all these years and he is not going to allow the wool to be pulled over his eyes any longer.

Mr. KELLEY of Michigan. This is umbrellas.

Mr. BUCHANAN of Illinois. That is one of the hopeful signs, that they have woke up to the deception that has been practiced on them in these arguments by men who should be representing them here in a sincere and honest manner.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. Chairman, I rise to a point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. AUSTIN. I just want to call the attention of the gentleman from Alabama to the fact that the gentleman from Illinois is not strictly observing the rule that he enforced against me this morning

Mr. BUTLER. The gentleman is talking about honest men now.

Mr. AUSTIN. I have no objection and I withdraw the point of order.

Mr. BUCHANAN of Illinois. If I have made any objectionable remarks, I might withdraw them, but I am getting tired of this argument about protecting labor when labor has always had to fight its own battles, and probably will have to in the future. What labor wants is to have their legal and constitutional rights protected and a fair opportunity and a square deal; they do not need any tariff laws to protect them at all. I want to have read here as a part of my remarks, in my own time, a statement made before President Taft by the secretary of the Federation of Labor urging the signing of the immigration bill. I desire to have part of that read to show the position he takes; that a protective tariff, while it protects the manufacturer in collecting tribute in the way of abnormally high prices from the working people of this country, never has given the workingman any protection in the way of high wages.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. President, it is now an undisputed fact that in many industries the emigrants who come here are working for such low wages that the American born can not compete with them. They can not live on the wages paid and support a family.

In support of the position that the American born can not compete with foreigners and live on the wages paid to them and support a family, I refer you to the investigation of the Bethlehem Steel Works made by a committee of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ and the investigation made by Commissioner Neill, of the Department of Labor, as to wages and conditions in the steel industry.

We ask for this legislation for the purpose of giving the wage workers of this country an opportunity for self-improvement; an opportunity for a breathing spell, so they can secure improved conditions both as to hours and wages.

In passing I will call your attention to the fact that industry is protected by a tariff, but labor is not. The products of labor are protected, but we have a free flow of labor coming to these shores all the time. The manufacturers have protection against products manufactured by cheap labor in foreign countries, but labor has no protection against the importation of cheap labor.

The opponents of this measure will say that if the products of labor are protected, then labor itself must be benefited, because the manufacturer can sell the product at a much higher rate than can be obtained in other countries, and will thus be in a position to pay higher wages to his employees. The first contention is well founded. The manufacturer does receive a higher rate than the products can be purchased in other countries, and the second contention, that they can pay higher wages to their employees, is also true, but the fact is they do not pay higher wages. They pay lower wages. We find that in the highest protected industries, particularly in the industries that are now controlled by trusts, such as the Steel Trust, Rubber Trust, Sugar Trust, packing-house employees, and textile industry, the lowest wage in the country is paid to their employees, and in some of them less than a living wage for a family. A high tariff has nothing to do with the wages paid in these industries.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the pro forma amendment will be withdrawn. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MOORE].

The question was taken, and the Chair announced that the noes seemed to have it.

Mr. MOORE. Division, Mr. Chairman.

The committee divided; and there were—ayes 23, noes 54.

So the amendment was rejected.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

144. Wheels for railway purposes, or parts thereof, made of iron or steel, and steel-tired wheels for railway purposes, whether wholly or partly finished, and iron or steel locomotive, car, or other railway tires or parts thereof, wholly or partly manufactured, 25 per cent ad valorem; ingots, cogged ingots, blooms, or blanks for the same, without regard to the degree of manufacture, 10 per cent ad valorem: Provided, That when wheels for railway purposes, or parts thereof, of iron or steel, are imported with iron or steel axles fitted in them, the wheels and axles together shall be dutiable at the same rate as is provided for the wheels when imported separately.

Mr. FARR. Mr. Chairman——

Mr. MOORE. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MOORE] offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 38, line 18, after the word "manufactured," strike out "25 per cent ad valorem" and insert "one-fourth cent per pound"; and on the same page, line 20, after the word "manufactured," strike out "10 per cent ad valorem" and insert "1 cent per pound."

Mr. MOORE. Mr. Chairman, this is essentially a labor proposition. I sit in this House sometimes amazed at the sort of twaddle that is passed out to the public through the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD as the voice of labor in the United States. It seems to me the time has come when a Member of this House, who is as much a laborer as the man who belongs to a union or the man who stands here assuming to speak for a union or a particular class of workers, ought to be man enough to assert h'mself. It is an odd thing that one or two men here should always be picked as the real spokesman of labor. Awhile ago we could not quote from Samuel Gompers even without objection when the thing to be quoted disproved what has been said on this floor against the protection of labor.

I said the amendment I offer is a labor proposition. It is a labor proposition, because it not only involves millions of capital but the employment of thousands of men who may or may not belong to labor unions, or may or may not have special spokesmen on this floor, but who have a right to the protection of the law in this country, which my friend from Illinois [Mr. BUCHANAN] said awhile ago they did not need. A little while ago we had read from the Clerk's desk a clipping from some newspaper quoting some crank or other, some new faddist, who intimated that all the people in the insane asylums were people who had toiled in the mills, and by reason of excess of toil had been forced into insanity, when the real truth doubtless is that many of those who get into insane asylums are those who do not have any useful thing to do and who do not give their real share of labor to the common welfare of the land.

I say this amendment is essential to the labor. In Germany and in France these railway wheels, made by honest but ill-paid labor, are protected by the laws of those countries in a manner in which you do not propose to protect them in the Underwood bill. Germany makes it compulsory upon the people to buy railroad wheels of the German manufacturers, and England makes it compulsory upon the people of England to buy the railway wheels made by the workingmen of England. And yet in this bill you propose to reduce the rates that have afforded protection to the men who make the wheels in the United States and offer inducements to England and Germany, with cheaper material, to send their material here.

Mr. Chairman, I speak for men who work. I work, and I do not take odds from anyone with regard to the amount of work I do. It is of service to the community, and I am doing my part just as worthily, I hope, as any man who wears a badge or label of any kind; and so it is with every man who earns his salt. He is something of a demagogue who takes any other position. I intend to incorporate in my remarks a statement that comes from men over their own signatures—over 100 of them—men who work in the mills making car wheels, who ask this Congress to protect them in their American occupation against the cheaper labor of England and Germany which some of the professed friends of labor on this floor wish to introduce in order to beat down the American wage.

I append the following letters:

RAILWAY STEEL-SPRING CO., SCOTT WORKS,
Philadelphia, Pa., April 21, 1913.

Hon. J. HAMPTON MOORE,
House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: You will find inclosed herewith a petition from the local officers and employees of the Railway Steel-Spring Co., at Philadelphia, Pa., together with signatures of some of the most prominent business men at this point, protesting against the proposed reduction in the tariff on railway tires as covered by the proposed amendment to the tariff in the bill now before Congress, reading as follows:

"Wheels for railway purposes, or parts thereof, made of iron or steel, and steel-tired wheels for railway purposes, whether wholly or partly finished, and iron or steel locomotive, car, or other railway tires or parts thereof, wholly or partly manufactured, 25 per cent ad valorem," etc.

There are millions of dollars invested in this industry at various places in this country, and a large number of men are employed in the works at this point. The maximum wages have been paid, and satisfactory labor conditions have prevailed at all times. The present tariff on tires is 1¼ cents per pound, and the proposed reduction to 25 per cent ad valorem is a percentage reduction of 64 per cent. We can not help but feel that this is a situation which has not been properly presented to Mr. UNDERWOOD and the other gentlemen of the Ways and Means Committee, and this opportunity is taken to inform you of the true facts of the case.

In England and Germany tires are sold at higher prices than are charged by American manufacturers to railroads in the United States.

Canada and Mexico are practically the "dumping grounds" of Europe for the excess production of these materials by European manufacturers, and it is certain the United States would receive large quantities of these products from England and Germany if the proposed reduction in tariff on tires becomes a law.

England protects its industry by compulsory use of British tires in England and the colonies, while Germany does the same for the German manufacturers by means of a high tariff.

The tire-manufacturing plants in America have been and still are able to produce these materials largely in excess of the American demands for them, and it was in the endeavor of American manufacturers to dispose of their excess production that they learned of the prices prevailing in Canada and Mexico.

We feel that it is but right and just for us to request simply the retention of the present duty on wheels and tires for the purpose of conserving to this country the manufacture and sale of products for which, as above stated, this country is already oversupplied with producing capacity.

In submitting the inclosed petition, therefore, we ask you to use all the means at your command to prevent any reduction whatever in "wheels for railway purposes or parts thereof, etc., or railway tires or parts thereof, etc.," as a matter of justice to American tire manufacturers as well as the protection of the large number of workmen employed in this industry.

Respectfully submitted.

RAILWAY STEEL SPRING CO., SCOTT WORKS,
FRED W. HARRIS, Manager.

PHILADELPHIA, PA., April —, 1913.

Hon. J. HAMPTON MOORE,
House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: We, the undersigned, residents of your congressional district, hereby respectfully call your attention to the matter of the proposed reduction in the tariff on "wheels for railway purposes and parts thereof, etc., * * * and other railway tires or parts thereof, etc.," now pending before Congress.

The proposed reduction in the tariff on the above-mentioned products would seriously affect one of the most important industries as carried on by the Railway Steel Spring Co. in the city of Philadelphia, and would positively result in the cessation of that company's activities at Philadelphia. It is well known to you that the Railway Steel Spring Co. is one of the best wage-paying factories in Philadelphia, and upon its operation a great many workmen and their families depend.

We therefore earnestly petition you to use all honorable means at your command to prevent the proposed reduction in the tariff on the above-mentioned products.

Charles T. Nichols, F. W. Harris, J. E. Morrison, Edward Williams, Martin T. Convery, Thomas G. Coleman, William Ostertag, Chas. Bohmer, Jas. N. Foster, William H. Desher, sr., Adam Hoover, B. Frank Roland, James McLees, Wm. McConnell, Wm. Isherwood, W. O. Vane, Albert J. Hastings, Geo. W. Dargin, W. H. Desher, jr., Chris. Bersold, Patrick Hughes, James Shepherd, W. Harry Bright, Milton Hersch, John C. Whitman, Abe Rossman, Adolph Otto, H. F. M. Withington, August Laiex, George F. Radford, Thomas Gauden, Frank B. Homan, Frank H. Hughs, John H. Mairs, Leonard Coffin, W. Bright, Chas. McKenner, George F. Moore, William Coffin, James Santime, Walter Schaeffer, Charles Artese, Geo. Brunetti, P. Schmidt, Guido Brunetti, Angelo Dike, Dominico Fressl, Henly Perrow, G. Dare, S. Leeser, J. Schurm, W. C. Ebbert, Joseph Rafman, Pasquale Amato, Lues Segal, Francis McLean, John Merklinger, Joseph W. Lunn, Edward J. Williamson, Theo. G. Rambo, Samuel McCall, James G. Fowkes, P. M. Walton, Thos. H. Rowdall, Chris. Graham, Peter Cremins, Leo Maynas, Henry J. O'Neill, Frank W. Davis, Edward L. Birch, A. Penrose Ambler, William E. Conover, G. Howard Byan, Edward P. Crawford, George Veale, William T. Nichols, H. R. Edwards, Wm. M. Mervine, John H. Wolf, P. L. Frey, H. A. Tripple, John Kloos, J. Donovan, Wesley Miller, Stanly Shultz, William Futz, Yoekule Koll, Max Muntz, Tony Giuseppe, Harry Camenisch.

STANDARD STEEL WORKS CO.,
Philadelphia, Pa., April 22, 1913.

Hon. J. HAMPTON MOORE,
The Raleigh, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: The Underwood tariff bill, which is before Congress for consideration, contains the following:

"Wheels for railway purposes, or parts thereof, made of iron or steel, and steel-tired wheels for railway purposes, whether wholly or partly finished, and iron or steel locomotive, car, or other railway tires or parts thereof, wholly or partly manufactured, 25 per cent ad valorem; ingots, cogged ingots, blooms, or blanks for the same, without regard to the degree of manufacture, 10 per cent ad valorem: Provided, That when wheels for railway purposes, or parts thereof, of iron or steel, are imported with iron or steel axles fitted in them the wheels and axles together shall be dutiable at the same rate as is provided for the wheels when imported separately."

As manufacturers of the material affected by this portion of the bill we wish to place on record our protest against the reduction of the present tariff relating to the articles mentioned. If the bill passes and becomes a law with the recommendations as contained therein it will not be possible to compete with the importation from Europe. This is proved by our inability to successfully compete with European manufacturers for the sale of tires in Canada, Japan, or South America, where the chances of securing business are equal, the deciding factor being price only. We secure no Canadian business except when the demand is urgent and the time for delivery from Europe is too long. Our information of conditions indicates that the price of tires for home consumption in Europe is higher than the prices charged for tires by American manufacturers to home consumers. England protects its industries by the compulsory use of British tires in England and the colonies, and Germany by high tariff. America would become therefore another dumping ground such as Canada for the excess production. The total productive capacity of American manufacturers is so much in excess of the possible requirements that our plant is never operated to its full capacity. As the plants are not now run to their full capacity every endeavor is made to obtain orders for rings for crushing machinery and commercial uses other than tires for railway purposes in substitution for the same articles ordinarily made of steel castings to assist in the plants' operation to as near maximum capacity as possible, in order to secure the benefit of lowest cost.

It will be clearly apparent, therefore, that the deprivation of business that will surely occur if the bill is enacted can have no other result than an advance in cost due to the lesser quantity produced, increasing thereby the intensity of the already severe competition.

We would suggest the advisability of a specific tariff per pound instead of per centum ad valorem, with its uncertainty of actual amount of tariff and its inducement to improper and untrue statements of price in order to secure lower tariff charges. We especially protest against a lower rate of tariff for "ingots, cogged ingots, blooms or blanks for the same, without regard to degree of manufacture," than is charged for "iron or steel locomotive, car, or other railway tires, or parts thereof, wholly or partly manufactured," because in the manufacture of tires the process proceeds from the cast ingot to the cogged ingot, to the rolled blank, from which the tire, with but little additional cost, is finally rolled. The sketch attached hereto illustrates the various degrees of manufacture referred to in the bill, indicating clearly the possibility of construing the rolled tire as a blank.

(Sketch not printed in RECORD.)

Therefore a bloom or blank, upon which almost all the cost of manufacturing tires has been placed, could be entered under the 10 per cent clause and do irreparable injury to the tire manufacturers in this country.

We trust the facts herein set forth clearly indicate that it is not our desire to secure a tariff which will permit exorbitant selling price, but, on the contrary, indicate a desire to be granted sufficient protection to insure the acquisition of business which is rightfully ours, with the reasonable profit to which we are justly entitled.

Will you be good enough to acknowledge receipt, advising if we may expect your support toward preventing any reduction in the present tariff on the articles mentioned.

Yours, very truly,

STANDARD STEEL WORKS CO.,
ROBERT RADFORD, Secretary.

P. S.—The present tariff is 1¼ cents per pound on tires and 1 cent per pound on the ingots from which they might be made.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. Chairman, I agree with the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MOORE]——

Mr. BUTLER. Upon what?

Mr. FITZGERALD. That this amendment is essentially a labor proposition. It would be very laborious for me, and I believe it would be so for 99 per cent of the Members present, to determine whether his amendment, proposing to place a specific duty on these materials in place of an ad valorem duty, as fixed in the bill, will increase or decrease the rate of duty proposed by the committee. Inasmuch as the gentleman has refrained from imparting or has withheld from the committee the needed information as to whether this proposed specific duty would result in an increase of the duty fixed in the bill or a decrease in the duty fixed in the bill, it is a matter of labor for the Members to ascertain for themselves whether the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MOORE] is intending to increase or to decrease the rate proposed.

Those of us who have not had the advantage of the information furnished to the gentleman from Pennsylvania from the protected industries of his State, which have so long fattened at the expense of the people, and those of us who have not been able to devote all of their time and energy to tariff questions and to public duties so as to be worn to a frazzle, as the gentleman from Pennsylvania happens to be, can not tell offhand whether a specific rate proposed will increase this definite ad valorem rate or decrease it. I desire to exercise some intelligence in voting upon the amendments that are proposed. I can only assume from the conduct of the gentleman from Pennsylvania heretofore that, no matter what rate may be proposed in this bill, it is not sufficiently high to satisfy him, and that he really intends to increase the proposed rate, whether he gives any information from which that conclusion may be drawn.

Some time I should like to go quite fully into some of the questions raised by the gentleman. Congress some years ago provided that the Government should purchase armor plate, manufactured in the gentleman's own State, from American manufacturers. They have frequently taken advantage of the Government to foist upon it, for the protection of the ships designed for the defense of the country, armor plate that was absolutely worthless.

They have resorted to all kinds of tricks and devices to deceive and mislead the inspectors furnished by the Government to protect the Government. Serious questions have at times been raised as to whether the armor of the ships that have been provided for the defense of the country and armored with the armor plate manufactured in the gentleman's State was of such a character as to afford the protection intended.

Perhaps the gentleman from Pennsylvania desires some of his industries to furnish all of the parts for the rolling stock of our transportation companies, and thus place not only those who are enlisted to defend the country, but the general public, in the power of some of the not overscrupulous manufacturers for whom he has been so assiduously working during the consideration of this bill.

In some respects the consideration of this bill has been very edifying and educating. For the first time—either in my experience or in the experience of the gentleman from Pennsylvania, or in the experience of the gentleman from Wyoming, or that of some of the other gentlemen who have been criticizing several items of the bill in their endeavor to ascertain the logic or the reasoning which influenced the Committee on Ways and Means in fixing in the bill certain rates—has a tariff bill been read by the House so that it can be considered by the Committee of the Whole.

I am inclined to believe, Mr. Chairman, that this is the first time that many of these gentlemen have either heard read, or read themselves, any tariff bill that has ever been enacted into law. Their own party never gave them an opportunity to question the men in charge of a tariff bill as to the particular reasons influencing the committee that prepared the bill in placing the duties at one rate or another. Their bills were considered under a special rule, which provided that the Committee on Ways and Means at any time might offer amendments to any part of the bill, and thus the bill was never read, and the gentlemen never had an opportunity either to offer amendments themselves or to question those who represented them as to their reasons for fixing particular rates. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from New York [Mr. FITZGERALD] says this is the first time an opportunity has been granted to Members of the House to read a tariff bill. It is strange that the gentleman from New York has not taken advantage of the opportunity, if this is the first time; but evidently he has not. If he had taken advantage of the opportunity to read the bill and examine the report of the committee, he would not have needed to ask the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MOORE] whether his proposition meant an increase in the ad valorem rate, because the committee, endeavoring to give information for the benefit of the House, which was wasted on the gentleman from New York, however, gives the information that under the existing rate, which is now proposed by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MOORE], the ad valorem would be at least double what is proposed in this bill. The gentleman should read the report.

Mr. FITZGERALD. That would involve labor.

Mr. BUTLER. A well-deserved rebuke! [Laughter.]

Mr. MANN. Well, perhaps it is labor for the gentleman. I apprehend that he is so accustomed to bringing in appropriation bills without any information in his report that he considers that nobody examines the reports of committees in the House. Evidently he has not examined at all the report on this bill. Possibly he does not know even that the committee made a report to the House.

Mr. Chairman, unless the antidumping clause acts as a protective measure, this reduction of the duty on car wheels will to a large extent destroy the car-wheel industry in the United States. I do not know whether there will be sufficient protection under the antidumping clause to protect the industry or not. That is a matter of estimate. It may be that it will protect. In the other countries, outside of England and Germany, the industries are to a large extent driven out of those countries by the surplus from Germany and England being dumped upon them, England protecting itself by a positive requirement that the wheels or tires shall be of English construction, and Germany protecting itself by a prohibitory tax. We propose, barring the antidumping clause, to admit the products of their factories practically free, or at a greatly reduced rate, into the United States.

In connection with my remarks I will insert some further information upon this subject, knowing that it is useless to give it to the House otherwise, the Democrats having determined that there shall be no amendment proposed from this side of the House accepted by them. It would be useless to give any information to the gentleman from New York [Mr. FITZGERALD]. Usually independent, usually somewhat progressive, he is bound feet and arms, and he is gagged, except to abuse or criticize this side of the House. His vote is delivered in advance. He dare not on any proposition vote for an amendment submitted by this side of the House or vote against his own side of the House. He conducts bills in the House which are considered on their merits. It is unusual for the gentleman from New York to be so bound, but now he is bound like my colleague from Illinois over on the other side [Mr. BUCHANAN], whom I see rising to his feet.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Let me say to the gentleman from Illinois that if he will offer any amendment that has merit and can furnish information that will convince any reasonable person I will be glad to vote for his amendment.

Mr. MANN. I have offered some amendments and have furnished reasonable information.

Mr. FITZGERALD. The gentleman imagines that. It is not a fact. [Laughter.]

Mr. MANN. I offered amendments a year ago which the gentleman, along with his party, voted against, decried them, said they ought not to go in the bill. Yet when the bill is brought in this year it contains the very provisions which I then offered and which the gentleman, after receiving the information, voted against a year ago. [Laughter on the Republican side.]

I insert as a part of my remarks the following letters relating to this subject:

RAILWAY STEEL SPRING CO., PULLMAN WORKS,
Pullman, Ill., April 18, 1913.

Hon. JAMES R. MANN,
Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: You will find inclosed herewith a petition from the local officers and employees of the Railway Steel Spring Co., at Pullman, Ill., together with signatures of some of the most prominent business men at this point, protesting against the proposed reduction in the tariff on railway tires, as covered by the proposed amendment to the tariff in the bill now before Congress, reading as follows:

"Wheels for railway purposes, or parts thereof, made of iron or steel, and steel-tired wheels for railway purposes, whether wholly or partly finished, and iron or steel locomotives, car, or other railway tires, or parts thereof, wholly or partly manufactured, 25 per cent ad valorem," etc.

There are millions of dollars invested in this industry at various places in this country and a large number of men employed in the works at this point. The maximum wages have been paid and satisfactory labor conditions have prevailed at all times.

The present tariff on tires is 1¼ cents per pound, and the proposed reduction to 25 per cent ad valorem is a percentage reduction of 64 per cent. We can not help but feel that this is a situation which has not been properly presented to Mr. UNDERWOOD and the other gentlemen of the Ways and Means Committee, and this opportunity is taken to inform you of the true facts of the case.

In England and Germany tires are sold at a higher price than are charged by American manufacturers to the railroads in the United States.

Canada and Mexico are practically the "dumping grounds" of Europe for the excess production of these materials by European manufacturers, and it is certain the United States would receive large quantities of these products from England and Germany if the proposed reduction in tariff on tires becomes a law.

England protects its industry by compulsory use of British tires in England and the colonies, while Germany does the same for German manufactures by means of a high tariff.

The tire-manufacturing plants in America have been and still are able to produce these materials largely in excess of the American demand for them, and it was in the endeavor of American manufacturers to dispose of their excess production that they learned of the prices prevailing in Canada and Mexico.

We feel that it is but right and just for us to request the retention of the present duty on wheels and tires, for the purpose of conserving to this country the manufacture and sale of products for which, as above stated, this country is already oversupplied with producing capacity.

In submitting the inclosed petition, therefore, we ask you to use all the means at your command to prevent any reduction whatever in "Wheels for railway purposes, or parts thereof, etc., or railway tires, or parts thereof, etc.," as a matter of justice to American tire manufacturers, as well as the protection of the large number of workmen employed in this industry.

Respectfully submitted.

JACOB C. PFEIFFER.

PULLMAN, ILL., April 18, 1913.

Hon. JAMES R. MANN,
House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: We, the undersigned, residents of your congressional district, hereby respectfully call your attention to the matter of the proposed reduction in the tariff on "Wheels for railway purposes and parts thereof, * * * and other railway tires or parts thereof, etc.," now pending before Congress.

The proposed reduction in the tariff on the above-mentioned products would seriously affect one of the most important industries as carried on by the Railway Steel Spring Co., in the town of Pullman, and would positively result in the cessation of that company's activities at Pullman. It is well known to you that the Railway Steel Spring Co. is one of the best wage-paying factories in Pullman, and upon its operation a great many workmen and their families depend.

We therefore earnestly petition you to use all honorable means at your command to prevent the proposed reduction in the tariff on the above-mentioned products.

Edward F. Bryant, Marcus A. Aurelius, Claude R. Egan, Donald R. Bryant, Paul E. Pearson, Allan M. Summers, Paul N. Dahlin, A. C. Caldwell, E. M. Sweeney, 11313 Forest Avenue; F. W. French, 11419 Prarie Avenue; T. A. Kennedy, president Kennedy Laundry & Supply Co.; F. Wolff, 26 Arcade Building, Pullman; P. B. Tireau, 237 East One hundred and thirteenth Street, Chicago; J. C. Ferrin, 28–30 Arcade Building; C. A. Gillespie, 11110 Indiana Avenue, Chicago; L. H. Jahn, 11339 Stephenson Avenue; Charles H. Meir, 11340 Prairie Avenue, Chicago; L. J. Johnston, 11340 Prairie Avenue, Chicago; W. H. Armund, 10–11 Market Building, Chicago; Julius Spamer, jr., 11224 Stephenson Avenue, Chicago; O. G. Lindberg, 367 East One hundred and seventeenth Street; E. E. Thompson, Market Building, Pullman; A. J. Hoetestra, 11313 Cottage Grove Avenue; James B. McLachlan, 11201 Cottage Grove Avenue; H. J. Donahue, 11450 Michigan Avenue; Louis Crouse, 11445 Michigan Avenue; F. T. Loucks, 11439 Michigan Avenue; Martin R. Lynn, 11855 State Street; J. H. Walsh, 11401 Michigan Avenue; L. W. Kahn, 4710 Grand Boulevard; C. M. Hanan, 11400 Michigan Avenue; H. W. Hoffman, 12109 Butler Street; Robert Elliott, 11541 Stewart Avenue; Isidore Frank, 11403 Prairie Avenue; Louis A. Schmid, 11324 Michigan Avenue; Charles Lauer, 11233 Michigan Avenue; Nels O. Larson, 11320 Indiana Avenue; Charles Peorie, 115 West One hundred and eleventh Place; F. C. Bendl, 11420 Prairie Avenue; I. J. Stram 10733 Carty Avenue; H. Holm, 233 West One hundred and tenth Street; Emil Wumerberg, 11156 Curtis Avenue; H. B. Ludwig, 11334 Curtis Avenue; George J. Phillips, 11138 Michigan Avenue; John G. Deckelman, 48 West One hundred and twelfth Street; H. Hagel, 114 West One hundred and thirteenth Street; A. Hammerstrom, 11144 Curtis Avenue; R. A. Dean, 625 East One hundred and twelfth Street; Frank O. Ernst, 11410 Indiana Avenue; J. C. Wares, 11333 Prairie Avenue; Jos. W. Cannon, 11333 Indiana Avenue; Albert Holmbery, 11328 Prairie Avenue; Wm. Guthardt, 59 West One hundred and thirteenth Street; Ben Budka, 236 West One hundred and thirteenth Street; Wm. I. Sherwood, 302 West One hundred and twelfth Place; Elmer E. Carlson, 11254 Michigan Avenue; G. Z. Carvier, 29 West One hundred and fourteenth Street; Paul F. Neidhardt, 11820 Eggleston Avenue; John J. Kunst, 20 East One hundred and twelfth Place; Thomas J. Ryan, 29 East One hundred and twelfth Place; Glenn G. Perry, 11824 Lowe Avenue; Jos. Gannon, 11214 Stephenson Street; C. Wm. Akerman, 11421 Prairie Avenue; George J. Scheifla, 120–121 Lowe Avenue; Michael Fox, 3247 Ninety-first Street; M. J. Ryan, 11118 Curtis Avenue; J. Van Brugge, 61 West One hundred and tenth Place; George Noble, 1101 Michigan Avenue; Herman Pott, 245 West One hundred and fifth Place; John Johnson, 21 West One hundred and twelfth Place; Joe Zukouski, Block E, Room 14; E. A. Frazin, 11717 Parnell Avenue; George Lind, 10738 Stephenson Avenue; G. Ritz, 135 East One hundred and thirty-fifth Place; S. Benschof, 11311 Eggleston Avenue; C. Appel, 126 East One hundred and fourteenth Place; John Ahearn, 7331 Greenwood Avenue; Alfred Eckborg, 56 West One hundred and twelfth Street; Wm. Zellinger, 346 West One hundred and ninth Street; Frank W. Lounsbery, 9322 Washington Avenue; Jacob C. Pfeiffer, 11322 Prairie Avenue; John Holck, 12046 Wallace Street; August Orne, 10530 Erickson Avenue; John Doodeman, 11624 Yale Avenue; Albert Crouse, 21 West One hundred and tenth Place; H. C. Knudsen, 11120 Indiana Avenue.

ATLANTA, GA., April 12, 1913.

Hon. JAMES R. MANN, M. C.,
Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: This will advise that the writer was requested some months ago, by some personal friends interested in the manufacture of car wheels and car-wheel springs, to file an argument and brief before the House Ways and Means Committee and call attention to certain baneful consequences which would probably result if any change was made in the tariff duties on these products.

This the writer proceeded to do, and said brief and argument was filed with the Ways and Means Committee on or about February 7 last.

I quote for your information extract from customs-tariff act of August 5, 1909, covering the rates of duties on these products:

"PAR. 171. Wheels for railway purposes, or parts thereof, made of iron or steel, and steel-tired wheels for railway purposes, whether wholly or partly finished, and iron or steel locomotive, car, or other railway tires or parts thereof, wholly or partly manufactured, 1¼ cents per pound; ingots, cogged ingots, blooms or blanks for the same, without regard to the degree of manufacture, 1 cent per pound.

"Provided, That when wheels for railway purposes, or parts thereof, of iron or steel, are imported with iron or steel axles fitted in them, the wheels and axles together shall be dutiable at the same rate as is provided for the wheels when imported separately."

I understood at the time that certain changes in these duties were under consideration by said committee, and it was to lay the matter properly before the committee that the argument was filed.

I am advised that the principal foreign competing manufacturing plants are located in England and Germany, and I am further advised that the German tariff on the imports of these products into that country is expressly prohibitive, and that this was done to prevent competition from American-made goods.

I am further advised that in England there is a law which requires the users of these products to purchase the same from manufacturing concerns located in England or her colonies.

These two very important points were amplified in my argument before the committee, and it seems to me should have been conclusive on the subject matter.

As a result of the situation growing out of said laws in England and Germany, it is not a question of rates of duty so much as it is to protect the American manufacturer against foreign laws evidently passed for the purpose of preventing importation of these goods and competition from America.

I respectfully call your attention to my argument, which you will find in the printed reports of the committee under the iron and steel schedule.

I am now advised that there is a company of considerable size manufacturing these products in your district, located at Pullman. For that reason your constituents are interested in this particular matter, and I call it to your attention with the earnest request that if it meets with your approval you do what you can in Congress when this phase of the tariff bill comes up for consideration to properly present the above facts to the entire Congress, as they strike me with great force, and, in my judgment, are controlling on the subject matter, as stated above.

* * * * * * *

Very truly, yours,

H. N. RANDOLPH.

The CHAIRMAN. If there be no objection, the pro forma amendment will be considered as withdrawn.

Mr. BUCHANAN of Illinois. Mr. Chairman——

Mr. PALMER. I ask unanimous consent that debate on this paragraph and all amendments thereto close in five minutes.

Mr. FARR. I should like five minutes.

Mr. PALMER. Then I will make it 10 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. PALMER] asks unanimous consent that debate on this paragraph and all amendments thereto close in 10 minutes. Is there objection?

Mr. MANN. Reserving the right to object, for the purpose of getting information—I shall not object to the request—what is the intention in reference to the evening, and if we have an evening session, as to the time of taking the recess?

Mr. PALMER. I understand that the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] desires to recess from half past 6 until half past 7, and then complete the metal schedule to-night.

Mr. MANN. I suggest to the gentleman from Alabama that last night, with the recess an hour and a quarter long, there was nobody in the House when we reassembled, and I think a recess of an hour and a quarter is a little too short.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I will say to the gentleman that I do not want to cut off anybody in the House. I want this bill to have full opportunity to be discussed, and I know it is natural that we should get into political debates on a tariff bill. If the gentleman is willing to urge his friends on that side of the House that after supper we shall confine our remarks to the schedule, I will do the same, and I am willing, when this 10 minutes' debate is over, to take a recess.

Mr. MANN. This side of the House has not violated the rule in that respect as much as the other side has.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I think both sides have wandered into the realm of politics.

Mr. MANN. It might keep them from wandering some, but I think no one can criticize the action of the minority on this bill where we could delay or force the gentlemen on the other side of the House to bring in a rule.

Mr. PALMER. Except where they want the discussion reported when they have been out to lunch and have not heard it. [Laughter.]

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I have no criticism to make of the gentleman's side of the House. I am allowing the bill to be read for their benefit, as we have largely made up our minds on it. [Laughter.]

Mr. MANN. The gentleman is allowing us to read the bill in order to escape the criticism of bringing in a rule to encourage the gentleman from New York to say how liberal you have been. I do not criticize the gentleman for taking that attitude.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I think if we brought in a rule on our side of the House without at least giving the minority an opportunity to fairly consider the bill we would be subject to just criticism. If, on the other hand, a situation was forced upon the House so that we could not get the bill through, I would not hesitate to bring in a rule.

Mr. MANN. I understand the situation, I think, on both sides of the House. Politically speaking, we would rather have you bring in the rule, but, on the other hand, we have no desire to take an unfair advantage or force a rule as long as there is a reasonable amount of debate allowed. It seems to me that after we use up these 10 minutes we might easily take a recess until 8 o'clock.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I would ask the gentleman if we could not "swap tobacco between lines" and hold the debate down to the schedules?

Mr. MANN. I have not indulged in any of it. I have discussed only the bill.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Except when the gentleman was referring to me. [Laughter.]

Mr. MANN. I was discussing the car-wheel proposition entirely. [Laughter.] The gentleman from New York did not know anything about it, and I was trying to give him information. Of course it was useless. [Laughter.]

Mr. MONDELL. Will not the gentleman from Alabama make the time 15 minutes before closing debate on this paragraph? I would like 5 minutes.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I am willing to let the debate run 15 minutes if we can come to an understanding.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Alabama modifies his request, and moves that all debate on this paragraph and amendments thereto close in 15 minutes.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. BUCHANAN of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, the remarks of the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MOORE] may lead some gentlemen to believe that I was assuming to be the special representative of organized labor, and that there were only two or three of us who were capable of representing labor. I would like to say for his information, and for the information of others, that I have not been officially connected with organized labor for about eight years. I served as an official of organized labor for a number of years, and I tried to serve them well.

I took the position with reference to organized labor then that I take now—that organized labor's interest and the interest of honest, legitimate business and capital are one. The position that I take in representing labor in Congress is that anybody that does anything that is useful is doing labor. I do not confine the labor to those that work with their hands only. Those that are working in their own business; that are working with their brain, doing clerical work or working in any capacity, doing useful work, are, from my point of view, working people.

The Democrats who controlled this House in the Sixty-second Congress, and a number of those elected on the Republican ticket, demonstrated that they were in sympathy with the demands of organized labor by passing legislation requested by the representatives of organized labor that had been defeated by the Republicans, who had been in the majority of the House for the last 16 years. The Democratic House responded to the appeals of organized labor because they were reasonable and only asked for just and equitable legislation. Some of the measures passed by the House died in the Senate and some were vetoed by the Republican President. Labor is hopeful now of securing the passage of remedial legislation for the working masses, because the Democratic Party is in full control of Congress, and we have a real people's President in the White House.

When you talk to me about "labor's interest" and about "capital's interest," as though they were different and distinct, I say to you that the great problems confronting the people will not be solved until they are considered from the point of view of the best interests of the whole people, because honest legitimate business and commercialism can not be separated from the interests of labor. The people of this country are suffering from the burdens of financial and commercial piracy, which has resulted in floating on the industries of this country about $40,000,000,000 of watered stock, or fictitious and counterfeit capital, which is bearing heavy on the shoulders of the great masses of the people.

Mr. HARRISON of New York. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BUCHANAN of Illinois. Yes.

Mr. HARRISON of New York. The gentleman will observe that the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MOORE] admitted that under this high protective system the insane asylums of the country are full of men who are out of work.

Mr. MOORE. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman certainly does not mean to say that.

Mr. BUCHANAN of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, I have not the time to yield, as I have only five minutes. Those who know the industrial conditions know that the drift of industrial conditions is such as tend to impair the physical and mental ability of the working people of the country, because the so-called captains of industry through their greed for profit on counterfeit capital and fictitious valuations have disregarded the rights and interests of humanity.

Mr. Chairman, I was elected to this Congress on the Democratic ticket, and was elected on a platform declaring for a reduction of the tariff or a tariff for revenue only. In my district I am well known to be opposed to the protective-tariff policy, and favor a tariff for revenue only to obtain revenue for the expense of the Government economically administered. I do not try to deceive anyone in regard to my position, and if they do not know it, it is not because I have not stated it plainly and bluntly. The trade-union people of the country by their associations and exchanges of ideas are better educated than those who have not organized in the country, and in my opinion the large majority of them are opposed to the protective-tariff policy. The party that is advocating that policy had refused, when it was in power in this Congress, to give them the remedial legislation that they asked and worked for for so many years. The Democratic Party, however, having pledged in its platform that it would pass legislation for the eight-hour day and other legislation that the trade-unions required for the protection of the rights and interests of the wageworkers, has fulfilled its promise and has passed about every measure that has been asked by representatives of the great organized labor movement of this country.

I insert here an article published in the Chicago Record-Herald of May 1, 1913, written by Stoughton Cooley, who is an able student of economic conditions:

(By Stoughton Cooley.)

Seldom have justice and expediency been in closer accord than in the plea of American seamen for relief from antiquated rules and regulations that govern modern seafaring life.

It has puzzled a great many persons to know why the American merchant marine, protected and hedged about as it is by all the laws its friends could devise, should have failed to prosper along with other industries. American tonnage in 1800 was half as great as that of Great Britain—970,000 and 1,856,000 tons respectively—and continued to grow by leaps and bounds until in 1860 America had 5,350,000 tons, while England, including her colonies, had barely 5,713,000. Yet, in 1910 the American tonnage had fallen to 5,058,678, while that of England had mounted to 19,012,294 tons.

TONNAGE ON DECLINE.

Nor do these striking figures convey the full measure of our shipping's decline. Less than one-sixth of the tonnage flying the American flag, or 782,517 tons, is engaged in the overseas trade, the remaining five-sixths being employed in the coastwise trade. Our navigation laws absolutely prohibit foreign vessels from engaging in the coasting trade.

In 1860, 69 per cent of our exports and imports were carried under the American flag; in 1870 the proportion had fallen to 35 per cent; in 1880, to 18 per cent; and in 1911, of our foreign trade, the greatest in the world and amounting to $3,576,546,304, less than 9 per cent was carried in American ships. With but four steamships to Europe and four to the Orient flying the American flag we have come to a pitiable pass.

TARIFF FURNISHES ANSWER.

What has brought this once great industry to this condition? Why should other enterprises advance while the shipping industry decays?

The answer lies in that much discussed and still unsolved question, the tariff. When protection to the iron industry raised the price of rails and locomotives the increase was added to the freight rates and the shipper paid it. He had no other choice. But when this higher priced iron was used in a ship the freights could not be advanced to cover it, for the reason that the shipper had an alternative; he could employ English ships.

But American shipping was not allowed to decay without efforts on the part of Congress to revive it. Many investigations were made and a multitude of laws proposed and discussed.

FREE SHIPS, FREE MEN.

The sum total of these investigations seems to have established the fact that an American ship costs more to build than an English ship. To remove this handicap it has been proposed to allow American shipmasters to buy ships abroad.

The friends of the tariff say this would be ineffective for the reason that the difference in the wages of seamen makes it more expensive to operate an American ship. To meet this condition they have asked that the Government aid the shipbuilder, the shipmaster, and the seamen by means of a large subsidy. But the people will not submit to a subsidy. Nor are they content to see the flag disappear from the high seas.

But the key to the situation is unexpectedly put in the hands of Congress by the sailors. To the plea for free ships they add a plea for free men. Free ships and free men will restore the flag to the high seas.

SEAMEN UNDER "SLAVERY."

That free ships will equalize the cost of ships is plain; that free seamen will overcome the difference in the cost of operation will be apparent upon a moment's reflection.

The navigation laws of nations maintain a species of slavery among seamen that has come down to us from the rude age when the line between buccaneering and legitimate commerce was shifting and indistinct.

Serfdom on land has long since disappeared, even in Russia; but serfdom on the sea remains. The man who ships on a vessel is bound to her by all the power of the Army and Navy. He must sign a contract, and should he attempt to quit his job, even when the ship is safe in port, he is seized like a felon, put aboard in irons, and held till the ship goes to sea.

Naturally, such a law has been abused. Human nature could not resist the temptation. It has been abused to such a degree that the American seaman has disappeared along with the American ship.

MEN DEMAND JUSTICE.

Self-respecting men now go to sea only when no other means of livelihood is to be found, so that the few ships we still have are manned for the most part by foreigners.

For years the American seaman has been appealing to Congress for relief. Last February a bill was passed repealing the compulsory servitude laws and otherwise ameliorating conditions in the forecastle, but it failed of Mr. Taft's signature and will have to be reenacted.

Justice alone demands that the men be granted this relief. But in this, as in all other cases, justice turns out to be the most expedient. The law that permits the shipping of a crew in a foreign port where wages are low and prevents them from leaving the ship in a port where wages are high puts it in the power of the foreign shipmaster to underbid the American shipmaster.

NAVY NEEDS DEFINED.

But grant the men the right to quit when the ship is in port. Then a ship coming to our ports with a cheap crew would be unable to leave until it paid American wages. And rather than submit to this trouble and delay the shipmaster would pay American wages all the time. With ships and crews at equal cost, would the American shipmaster need anything more to induce him again to unfurl the flag on the high seas?

We talk of a larger Navy, but of what use are ships without men to man them and colliers to coal them? When our battleships made their spectacular voyage around the world they were coaled by foreign ships. And had hostilities broken out suddenly not one of the 27 colliers would have dared approach the fleet. Our Navy is already short of officers and men, and it is becoming more and more difficult to man the ships. Is this a thing to be treated lightly?

SEAMEN'S BILL URGED.

It was the Navy that performed indispensable service in 1776 and saved the country from complete annihilation in the War of 1812, and it was the Navy that made possible the preservation of the Union in 1861. But in those times the seas fairly swarmed with American ships and sailors, the best ships and the best men to be found under any flag, as was proven time and again in actual clash of arms.

What a pitiable showing we should make to-day if suddenly called on to meet such an emergency!

The seamen's bill is drawn with a view of making life at sea as tolerable as life ashore. It provides that the Government, instead of the shipowners, shall issue the certificates of efficiency to the men; that a certain percentage of the crew shall be composed of efficient seamen; and that the seaman shall have the right to leave his ship when it is safe in port.

With free ships and free men there is no doubt as to the future of the American merchant marine.

The argument here contained can not be successfully denied. The wage workers of the country have the scum removed from their eyes and the cobwebs from their brains, and they will no longer permit the agents of the tariff barons of the country to deceive them by their old threadbare worn argument that the tariff protects the workingman. Such argument is a delusion and a snare and is an insult to the intelligence of the working people.

The tariff, from its historical origin and even in its name, is a survival of piracy, and the object and purpose for which it has been maintained since the War between the States has been for the industry of the Republic to hand over an increasing proportion of its earnings to a group of men organized in a more or less conscious conspiracy to promote their own aggrandizement at the expense of their fellow citizens.

Naturally, the people think that a tariff is necessary to raise public revenue; but the people of the country have paid annually about two thousand millions of dollars more for the things they use and consume than they would have been required to pay for the same in a free market. The greatest share of revenue accruing to the Government in any one year under the tariff system and from the tariff was approximately $333,000,000. The difference between this sum received by the Government and the total cost of the system to the people, approximately $1,615,000,000, has been the annual tribute levied upon industry by tariff beneficiaries, and this sum has come largely from the class whose industry produced the small return, the laboring man, who is not, has not been, and can not be protected by any form of tariff, and the farmer, who could derive no benefit from the tariff.

Twenty years ago 50 per cent of our international commerce consisted of agricultural products in one form or another, which total international commerce constituted about 5 per cent of the total commerce of the Republic; therefore, 2½ per cent, or one-fortieth of our total commerce, determined commercial prices for our entire circle of exchange. The tariff on the statute books, ostensibly for the benefit of the farmer, became a nullity at the customhouse, since the volume of our agricultural surplus was disposed of in free markets abroad, which determined the value of domestic consumption. The price of wool, cotton, packing-house products, and other farm and agricultural products were determined in the great consuming centers abroad.

We were exporters and still are exporters of such produce and not importers. However, the natural laws of trade form themselves, regardless of human interference and the penalties borne by the farmer for the last two generations, have begun to impose their vengeance on the Republic in the shape of a high cost of living, with men driven out of agriculture by its excessive penalties under the tariff which compels them to sell in the free markets and buy under tariff protection. It has driven men out of agriculture and into employment of a different kind until the margin of surplus of agricultural produce beyond consumption has about reached the vanishing point.

It is difficult to speak temperately of a system which has produced such diabolical results. It is even more difficult to speak temperately with reference to the infatuated blindness of a people that has permitted it.

The necessity of a tariff as a matter of protection to American industry has long since disappeared. The cost per unit of production of articles manufactured in America is appreciably less than that of the same commodity in any other country. The actual basis for the demand for a tariff is not the necessity to cover the difference in wages between America and other countries, but in order that form and substance may be given to an inflation of American securities. An industry, the total value of which in invested capital amounts to practically $5,000,000, is by a process of concentration, amalgamation, and combination capitalized at about $25,000,000, and in order to float it—move it in the exchanges—it is necessary to show dividends on the exaggerated capital; therefore it begins by the prevention of competition to raise the market prices for its products and to lower the cost of its manufacture both in the price of material and in the cost of labor. It will be cheerfully admitted that much of the artificial and fictitious capital now paraded on the stock exchanges of the country as solid values will disappear when the power to levy unearned tribute is destroyed.

Aside from the economic evils which have accompanied like a shadow the abuses of the system, the social and moral consequences are even more deplorable and enduring. The people may recover from a period of industrial stagnation, but they can not so easily overcome the results of moral degeneration. Whenever a citizen is allured by the prospect of sharing the loot into supporting the iniquitous system, becoming thereby a participator in the crime itself, the transition for spoliation of the innocent general public to the appropriation of individual properties is very natural and easy. It is an established principle that whosoever secures something of value for nothing, and without equivalent return, is economically and morally a thief; and there is a class of minds developed under the stress and strain of economic pressure, a natural consequence of the artificial system, which naturally believes that any form of injustice may not only be legalized, but sanctified by act of Congress.

The eagle was the emblem of Roman genius and is the emblem of American spirit. It may not have occurred to those who chose this symbolism that the later history of the Republic amply justifies the selection of this royal bird as its emblem. It is the habit of the eagle to lie in wait until the osprey by vigilance and industry shall have captured a supply of food, which capture is the immediate signal for activity on the part of the eagle, who darts from his lofty perch and seizes upon the fish caught by the osprey. Under our magnificent system our captains of finance find it much more simple, instead of creating wealth themselves, to wait until others have created it and then, by artful processes legalized under our system, to appropriate it to their own use.

It is doubtful if any argument, statement of facts, tabulation of statistics, social, moral, or industrial deductions from our experience as a people will have weight or power to change opinions already fixed. The only hope is that by the agitation of the question there may be an increasing number who are not the official exponents, but rather the coefficients of public opinion, whose ideas may be developed along the lines of justice and truth.

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Chairman, we are discussing the paragraph with reference to car wheels. The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MOORE] has illustrated how the interest of labor is involved in this paragraph. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. BUCHANAN] complains because we insist upon calling attention, as these rates are reduced, to the danger of loss of employment and reduction of wages to the American workingman, and while he is complaining because we do call attention to the danger which the workingman is in owing to this legislation he insists that we have no interest in the welfare of the laboring man. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. BUCHANAN] is going to vote for this bill. No one will ever know, I assume, what are his views as to the particular paragraphs and items in the bill, for he has transferred to his agents, the Committee on Ways and Means, authority to act for him, and eventually he will vote as the caucus bound him to vote. This is what he will vote for. He calls himself a friend of labor, and I think he is a friend of labor, and a sincere friend of labor, but he is not the only one on earth, I will suggest to the gentleman. This is the bill he is going to vote for, a bill that on the showing made by its proponents, its authors, is to transfer at least $146,000,000 of production from our shores to foreign shores.

Based upon the ordinary percentage of labor entering into production, that means transferring at least one hundred to one hundred and twenty-five millions annually of opportunity to labor from our country to foreign shores, and at the end of three years, when the free-sugar provision goes into effect, it means the transfer of at least $75,000,000 more of labor opportunity to foreign shores. Will the gentleman from Illinois kindly inform us what he expects the men to do who are now engaged in those gainful productions which are, according to report of the majority on this bill, to be transferred abroad? Where are those men to find employment when they lose it by the transfer of production to foreign shores, as the committee has said they will if this bill becomes a law?

Mr. BUCHANAN of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MONDELL. I can not yield at this time. The gentleman knows as well as any man on this floor that this is a fact, that whatever else you may say of this bill there is not a man under the flag, there is not an enterprise in the country that expects to have an additional wheel turn, an additional machine operate, an additional opportunity for a day of labor through the passage of this bill.

No laboring man in America believes that the passage of this bill will increase his wages. I doubt if there is a man anywhere laboring in a mill or in a mine, or in a factory or on the farm, who has the slightest idea that the passage of this bill will give him an additional day's work or increase the rewards of his labor. The most you can hope for and the most you can promise is that by impoverishing the farmers of the country you may be able to make the living of the laboring man in the city a little cheaper. That is all anyone can promise under this legislation, and even that promise can not be fulfilled without bringing distress to a large portion of our people.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. FARR. Mr. Chairman, I hope the general apprehension as to the effects of this bill on the country will not be realized. I am certain that as a Republican I shall not want anything to happen to this grand country. It is no compensation to have our industries and their employees injured by the enactment of this bill. I have a case here for which I can appeal to those who specially appeal for labor. It is an opportunity to save an industry that employs male labor——

Mr. AUSTIN. May I ask the gentleman if he is not a member of a labor organization?

Mr. FARR. I am a member of a labor organization. The industry to which I now refer employs male labor. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. BUCHANAN] I know is sincere concerning labor, and he speaks of the pathetic conditions that prevail, I regret to say, in some industries; yet by his vote he is willing to stop the wheels from turning in this country and have those go in foreign countries, where wages are one-half and less than they are in this country and the cost of living on the same standard just as much.

If industrial conditions are bad in places in this country, how must they be across the ocean, where wages are so much lower and hours longer? Shall we benefit industrial conditions in this country by permitting foreign-made tires and other goods coming into this country and taking the labor away from our people? The amendment offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MOORE], which I would have offered had he not, to retain the present duty, the duty in the Payne bill in this new bill—the Underwood bill—ought to prevail. I am sure the gentleman could not have seriously considered this schedule and reduced the percentage 64 per cent, inviting serious injury, if not destruction, to this industry. We are selling these tires in this country for 3½ cents per pound. They are sold in Germany at 4 cents a pound and in England at 4 cents a pound. We can not ship any of our goods over to Germany on account of the high tariff, and we can not sell to England on account of some compulsory rule that forces English consumers to use English-made goods, and they dump those goods in Canada, and our people can not go into Canada on account of the preferential duty in favor of England. We have developed splendid industries for the making of these tires in Pennsylvania, Missouri, Illinois, New York, Michigan, Tennessee, and other places. Let us maintain it and help its further upbuilding.

Mr. HARDWICK. What is that rule of which the gentleman speaks?

Mr. AUSTIN. And some in Tennessee.

Mr. FARR. Yes. The rule adopted by England protects its industries by the compulsory use of their products in England and their colonies.

Mr. HARDWICK. Where does the gentleman get that?

Mr. FARR. It is in this petition. So, gentlemen, if you want to favor labor you should retain this duty and continue this industry, and the chairman of the Ways and Means Committee ought to give this subject additional consideration. Officers and employees of the industry in Scranton have signed an urgent petition against this heavy reduction in the tariff on tires. I know they would not have done so but for their earnest belief that there was danger to that industry. Now, we talk about labor in this country. I am a labor man. I served my time and worked hard in a printing office, passing from newsboy, devil in the office, and afterwards printer and a city editor. There is no country on God's footstool that offers the opportunity that this glorious Nation does to the working people, and there is no country where such consideration is given to human welfare and the happiness of men and women and children as in this country.

Mr. BUCHANAN of Illinois. May I ask the gentleman a question?

Mr. FARR. Yes.

Mr. BUCHANAN of Illinois. About how many men work in this shop?

Mr. FARR. About 8,000.

Mr. BUCHANAN of Illinois. If you will stop some of the immigrants coming in here——

Mr. FARR. How would the gentleman have been here himself if they had stopped his parents from coming here?

I shall submit as a part of my remarks a statement made before the Ways and Means Committee by a representative of the Scranton Railway Steel Spring Co., relative to the present tariffs on the products under discussion, to wit, iron and steel wheels for railway purposes and tires, as follows:

The investment in this business in the United States is approximately $25,000,000. The plants are located in the States of Illinois, Missouri, Pennsylvania, New York, Michigan, and Colorado. It is estimated that employment is given 8,000 men in this industry.

If any change is made in the existing tariff of a material nature, it would not be possible for the manufacturers of these products in the United States to compete with importations of similar products from Europe. This is proven by the fact that they are now unable to successfully compete with the European manufacturers for the exportation of these articles to Canada, where the opportunities for securing this business are equal, and the deciding factor should be one of price only. At the present time the United States manufacturers are unable to secure any business except when the demand is urgent and it is impossible to await delivery from Europe.

Investigation will show that prices for home consumption of these products in Europe are higher than the prices charged by American manufacturers of these same products to home consumers. In England and Germany tires are sold at upward of 4 cents per pound; in the United States at from 3 to 3½ cents per pound, and in no case as high as 4 cents per pound. Canada and Mexico are practically the dumping grounds of Europe for the excess production of these materials by European manufacturers, and it is certain that the United States would likewise become the dumping ground of these same products from the same sources if any material reduction was made in duties.

England protects its industry by compulsory use of British tires in England and the colonies, and Germany by high tariff. At the present time the production of these materials from the plants in the United States is largely in excess of the American demands. This fact has already reduced the price which these manufacturers can obtain for their goods to a much lower basis than the importance of the business demands and would justify, and if, in addition to this, they were confronted with the surplus products of the European manufacturers, it would have a very disastrous effect on the business and capital invested in these plants; particularly so when England has shut off any possibility of competition in the British Isles and her colonies, and Germany by high tariff.

We feel that we have a right to request simply a retention of the present duties on these materials, for the purpose of conserving to this country the manufacture and sale of products, for which, as above stated, this country is already oversupplied at the present time with producing capacity, with consequent low prices to the consumers, due to competitive conditions.

The foreign plants manufacturing these materials are located principally in Germany and England, there being but 3 plants in France, as against 8 in Germany, 10 in England and Scotland, and 3 in Belgium. Thus it will be seen that the greater majority of the foreign manufacturers are protected from importations from this country, or practically so, and if these duties were reduced they could send their surplus products here with practically no chance of retaliation by the home manufacturers.

If competition is a desirable thing to bring about, it certainly should be reciprocal, and a one-sided competition, where the American manufacturers have no chance to get into the foreign markets on account of the facts above stated, certainly ought not to be desired. Moreover, as stated, these products are already selling in this country, due to local competition, for considerably less than these same products sell in the foreign markets, and naturally the foreign manufacturer does not desire to reduce the price in this country any lower than prevailing prices, because he can sell his products already for a higher price at home, and he would only avail himself of our markets with his surplus product or when there was a dullness in his home markets.

Here we have a case, therefore, of an American industry in which a very reasonable amount of capital is already invested and one in which the business has been created in various parts of the country by the ingenuity and ability of our people, and a large number of our citizens obtain employment and a livelihood; where, if any material changes are made in the tariffs, it would probably result in the partial destruction, if not the very serious impairment, of the entire business.

For these reasons it is earnestly asked that no change be made in the duties on these specific items.

The facts above stated can and will be verified by the testimony of competent witnesses, if desired, and witnesses thoroughly familiar with this business in all its details; the particular facts stated being taken from information furnished the undersigned by one of the leading experts in the business.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired. The question is on the amendment of the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MOORE].

The question was taken, and the amendment was rejected.

The Clerk read as follows:

145. Aluminum, aluminum scrap, and alloys of any kind in which aluminum is the component material of chief value, in crude form, aluminum in plates, sheets, bars, and rods; barium, calcium, magnesium, sodium, and potassium, and alloys of which said metals are the component material of chief value, 25 per cent ad valorem.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. Chairman, I wish to offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Tennessee offers an amendment which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend, page 39, line 6, by striking out "25 per cent ad valorem" and inserting in lieu thereof "7 cents per pound."

Mr. AUSTIN. I wish to debate that amendment after recess.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I move that the committee do now rise.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the committee rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, reported that that committee had had under consideration the bill H. R. 3321—the tariff bill—and had come to no resolution thereon.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

Mr. STEDMAN, by unanimous consent, was granted leave of absence for 10 days, on account of illness in family.

REPORT ON CONCENTRATION OF CONTROL OF MONEY AND CREDIT.

Mr. FINLEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of Senate concurrent resolution No. 1, which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the resolution.

The Clerk read as follows:

Senate concurrent resolution 1.

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That there be printed 6,000 additional copies of House Report No. 1593, Sixty-second Congress, on the "Concentration of Control of Money and Credit," of which 2,000 copies shall be for the use of the Senate document room and 4,000 copies for the use of the House document room.

Mr. MANN. Reserving the right to object, how much is there to this report?

Mr. FINLEY. Well, the Senate concurrent resolution provides for the printing of 6,000 additional copies.

Mr. MANN. Does this report contain all the evidence?

Mr. FINLEY. It does.

Mr. MANN. How much is there of it?

Mr. FINLEY. The cost will be $1,003.80.

Mr. MANN. How much of a volume is it or how many volumes are there?

Mr. FINLEY. I will tell the gentleman frankly that it came over only a little while ago, and I have not had time to investigate that.

Mr. MANN. If it is a valuable report, some of the gentlemen now on the floor will know how long a report it is. I am frank to say I have not read it. It is not a book of that size if it contains all the evidence taken.

Mr. FINLEY. That work is still under way, if the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] will permit me.

Mr. HARDWICK. If the gentleman from South Carolina will permit, I will say that I have heard they took three or four thousand pages of testimony. I can not vouch for the accuracy of that. It will probably be three or four volumes.

Mr. MANN. I was trying to ascertain whether all the testimony that was taken was to be included in this report. We had the privilege of reprinting in large numbers all the testimony that was taken. So far as printing the report is concerned, we never object to things of that kind.

Mr. HARDWICK. We could not print all that evidence in a report for $1,000.

Mr. MANN. Probably not.

Mr. FINLEY. This will cost within a fraction of $1,000—a little over $1,000.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

The question is on agreeing to the Senate concurrent resolution.

The resolution was agreed to.

SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE FOR EVENING SESSION.

The SPEAKER. The Chair assigns the gentleman from Connecticut, [Mr. REILLY] to preside as Speaker pro tempore to-night.

RECESS.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now take a recess until 7.45 p. m.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly (at 6 o'clock and 35 minutes p. m.) the House took a recess until 7.45 p. m.

EVENING SESSION.

At 7.45 p. m., the recess having expired, Mr. REILLY of Connecticut, Speaker pro tempore, called the House to order.

LABORERS AND JANITORS.

Mr. LLOYD. Mr. Speaker, I wish to present the following privileged report from the Committee on Accounts.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Missouri [Mr. LLOYD] offers a resolution which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

House resolution 56 (H. Rept. 8).

Resolved, That the Clerk be, and he is hereby, authorized to appoint three laborers and three janitors, who shall be paid, out of the contingent fund of the House, compensation at the rate of $60 per month; and also a stenographer to the Journal clerk, who shall be paid, out of the contingent fund of the House, compensation at the rate of $1,000 per annum.

With committee amendments, as follows:

Amend line 2 by striking out the word "three" after the word "appoint" and inserting the word "four" in lieu thereof, and in the same line, after the word "and," strike out the word "three" and insert the word "two."

Mr. LLOYD. There is another amendment, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will read the other amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Also, amend, by striking out all of the resolution after the word "month," in line 4.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, I would like to have the resolution reported as it would be if the amendments are agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the resolution as it would read if amended.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That the Clerk be, and he is hereby, authorized to appoint four laborers and two janitors, who shall be paid, out of the contingent fund of the House, compensation at the rate of $60 per month.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, may I ask the gentleman if these are to be session employees or permanent employees?

Mr. LLOYD. Session employees.

Mr. MANN. The resolution does not so state.

Mr. LLOYD. Oh, I beg the gentleman's pardon. These are to be permanent employees.

Mr. MANN. And the stenographer?

Mr. LLOYD. That is not provided for. That is taken out by the amendment.

Mr. MANN. Why was that taken out, may I ask?

Mr. LLOYD. That was taken out because the Journal clerk and the bill clerk concluded that they could get along without the additional stenographer during this session of Congress. We may ask for it at the next session of Congress if it is needed.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, the Journal clerk of the House is new, and thus far probably has not had any very great difficulty in handling the Journal of the House. I think myself that ordinarily the Journal clerk ought to have a stenographer.

Mr. LLOYD. The Journal clerk and the bill clerk have conferred, and by arrangement between them the Journal clerk has the present stenographer the greater part of the time.

Mr. MANN. I am not violating any confidence now when I say that I feel very certain from what was said to me in a former Congress that that arrangement was not very satisfactory to the former Journal clerk.

Mr. LLOYD. I may say that it is satisfactory to the present Journal clerk. These officers are kind enough to try to get along without this additional stenographer if they can, and if they do so this additional one will not be needed.

Mr. FOSTER. Mr. Speaker, may I inquire what particular work these laborers are doing?

Mr. LLOYD. The janitors are expected to care for all the offices of the Clerk; that is, the Clerk's office proper, and the office of the Chief Clerk, and the office of the disbursing clerk, the bill clerk's office, and the Journal clerk's office. There are 16 rooms in all that they are expected to take care of.

Mr. FOSTER. Who is doing this work now?

Mr. LLOYD. There is a messenger who is doing janitor service, and part of the time the Clerk pays for having this work done out of his own pocket.

Mr. FOSTER. Has this messenger been doing janitor work and taking care of 16 rooms thus far during all this Congress?

Mr. LLOYD. He has done part of that work a part of the time, and the Doorkeeper has furnished help a part of the time, and at other times the Clerk has been obliged to employ help himself.

Mr. FOSTER. In order to keep these rooms clean?

Mr. LLOYD. To keep these rooms in order, yes.

Mr. FOSTER. At the beginning of the Sixty-first Congress were these laborers discharged, or is this an additional force to what was on in the Sixty-first Congress.

Mr. LLOYD. Nearly all the Clerk's force was cut off at that time. In the Sixty-first Congress they had plenty of messengers, janitors, and additional clerks, and the force was cut just about half at the beginning of the Sixty-second Congress.

Mr. FOSTER. Who is taking care of the rooms of these committees for which the janitors and messengers were appointed last year?

Mr. LLOYD. These men are not taking care of any rooms that are now occupied by Members of Congress. There is another resolution that will provide for that. In the last Congress we had two janitors to take care of the rooms in this building that are occupied by Members of Congress.

Mr. FOSTER. It occurs to me, Mr. Speaker, that if these men have been able to do this work in the last two years, I do not understand why it is necessary to have additional men at this time.

Mr. LLOYD. There is additional service, too, that is needed, that was not rendered in the last Congress but that was rendered in previous Congresses. There ought to be some messenger provided to deliver the bills from the document room to the various chairmen of committees who have no janitors immediately upon the receipt of the bills.

Mr. FOSTER. Does the gentleman think that for $60 a month we can supply a person to do that sort of work?

Mr. LLOYD. The Clerk advises us that he can. I do not know whether he can or not.

Mr. PALMER. As a matter of fact, Mr. Speaker, I think the gentleman will find that the chairmen of committees send their own clerks and messengers to the document room for bills. That is a universal practice, and we cut that place out purposely because the committees did send their own clerks and janitors after bills.

Mr. LLOYD. It is also true that the Clerk has no messenger to send to the Journal clerk's room, the enrolling clerk's room, the disbursing clerk's room, or to send over to the stationery room. He needs a messenger to send to these various places. He insists that he ought to have a messenger at the stationery room. There is no one there to receive or deliver stationery. There are just the two men in that room. We took out of the stationery room, and very properly, I think, all the help which had formerly been provided there except the stationery clerk and the assistant.

Mr. FOSTER. Mr. Chairman, with the bills going to the Clerk's room after being introduced and referred to the committees, I do not believe it is necessary to have a messenger to carry those bills around. All of the great committees have clerks and messengers, and they can go to the document room after bills.

Mr. LLOYD. If the gentleman will allow me——

Mr. FOSTER. Just a moment.

Mr. LLOYD. I want to explain just at this point.

Mr. FOSTER. All these larger committees which have a great many bills referred to them, like the Judiciary, Pension, and Post Office Committees, and other committees of that class, have janitors or messengers who can get these bills without much trouble when the clerks are busy; but it seems to me that in the case of these minor committees their clerks are not so busy but that they are able to go and get these bills without the expense of hiring some one to carry them around to them.

Mr. MANN. Will my colleague yield for a suggestion?

Mr. LLOYD. There are nearly 20 committees that have no janitors. It is not necessary to furnish bills to the Appropriations Committee, or the Ways and Means Committee, or any of the large committees that have janitors.

Mr. FOSTER. I understand that, but as far as I am concerned I should object to the employment of an additional person to deliver these bills around to these committees.

Mr. LLOYD. These messengers are not to be assigned to any particular duty. They are placed under the control of the Clerk, and he is to use them wherever they are necessary. The Clerk insists that he needs this additional force to do the messenger and janitor service in his department.

Mr. FOSTER. I understood from the gentleman from Missouri that one of these men was to be assigned to that duty.

Mr. LLOYD. No; I beg your pardon. There is no assignment to any particular place.

Mr. FOSTER. That the intention was to use one of these men for this purpose.

Mr. LLOYD. As I understood, you asked what these men were expected to do, and one of the things that one of them was expected to do was to deliver bills to the committees that have no janitors.

Mr. MANN. May I ask the gentleman what is the process now by which the Senate bills are delivered to the committees?

Mr. LLOYD. I do not know that I can answer the gentleman's question.

Mr. FOSTER. I think Senate bills are referred to the Clerk's room just as House bills. They go there and get them.

Mr. MANN. I do not know whether that is the way; I think it is a haphazard way. Formerly there was a clerk whose business it was to deliver the bills, to deliver Senate bills, taking the receipt in each case out of a book of the chairman of the committee. In the last Congress several times Senate bills were lost. I have no doubt they were lost because that method was no longer pursued.

Mr. PALMER. And in former Congresses also.

Mr. FOSTER. Receipts are taken for all bills now just as they were in former Congresses.

Mr. MANN. I do not know what the process is now. Nobody seemed to be able to locate some bills in the last Congress, and I supposed they were lost in that manner.

Mr. COX. Mr. Chairman, I want to ask the gentleman a question. What is the necessity of a bill-distributing messenger?

Mr. LLOYD. I beg the gentleman's pardon. I have not stated that there would be any messenger assigned to distribute bills. He is a messenger to perform any and all duties that are to be performed in any way.

Mr. COX. I do not think there is any necessity for a messenger of that kind at all, and I will state why. My little committee, the Committee on Expenditures in the Treasury Department, has bills sent to it by mail by the Clerk, and also copies of all bills that I have introduced. I have no complaint on earth to make about it. Every bill introduced here I presume reaches its final and proper destination. The Clerk of the House furnishes me with a copy of all bills going to my committee. I have on file in my office a copy of every bill introduced by any Member referred to my committee, and also a copy of every bill I have introduced going to any other committee. Here is what I am afraid of, with all due deference to the chairman of the Committee on Accounts. We cut out a lot of jobs two years ago, and criticized gentlemen on the other side for their practice of having extra employees for four or five years.

Mr. MANN. You know more now.

Mr. COX. We had a lot of useless employees that we cut out. And I am wondering in my mind whether there is an attempt here to get some of these employees back.

Mr. LLOYD. I can assure the gentleman most positively that there is no attempt to get employees back. There is nothing of that kind.

Mr. COX. These are new employees.

Mr. LLOYD. They are new; but they are not such employees as were in the office before. The men in the Clerk's department received $1,500, $1,800, and $2,250 a year. We are providing for messenger service that is necessary to be performed under this resolution at the rate of $60 a month. Another thing: You must take into consideration that there is additional work for the clerks to perform. Instead of having 392 Members we have now 435 Members, and that makes additional work for the Clerk to take care of in the accounts of all these Members. It does not occur right now.

Mr. COX. I think the gentleman does not attach much importance to the increase of membership.

Mr. LLOYD. The Clerk says it will make an additional burden.

Mr. COX. I can not concur in that statement. I do not think so.

Mr. PALMER. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman says this resolution does not put back any employees who were cut out in the resolution that was passed in the beginning of the Sixty-second Congress. I call his attention to the fact that one of the employees who was theretofore carried on the rolls was a messenger in the Clerk's office, whose sole duty it was to carry bills from the document room to the various committees when referred.

Mr. LLOYD. And he received a salary of $2,250 for performing that duty.

Mr. MANN. And he earned it.

Mr. PALMER. The fact is that the employee did little or nothing, because the committees sent for the bills themselves and the Members got all of their own bills.

That was on the theory that every bill that is worthy of consideration by a committee will have a Member behind it who will see that the committee gets it, so that place was cut out; and I hope the gentleman from Missouri will not in a small House suggest that we shall to-night attempt to put back on the rolls of the House any official who was cut out after careful investigation and full consideration by a practically unanimous sentiment of the majority Members of this House in the Sixty-second Congress.

Mr. LLOYD. Mr. Chairman, I am surprised at the gentleman from Pennsylvania, who himself offered in the last House a resolution which would have restored $22,500 in salaries.

Mr. PALMER. I did that at the beginning of the Congress, with the statement that as to those particular places we had some doubt, and we wanted to be perfectly fair. We did not press the resolution, because in the Sixty-second Congress we thought that the House organization, as we had framed it up, was amply competent to take care of the business of the House, and the gentleman knows that we did not press that resolution. This is not big enough to fight seriously about, and I think the gentleman ought to go slowly in the matter.

Mr. LLOYD. It is big enough that the Clerk of the House should have the service he needs to perform the duties of his office, and he insists that he wants this additional assistance. Now, with reference to the notification clerk, we are not restoring him. There is no attempt to restore the notification clerk. We have not a messenger who is to distribute these bills. It may be that the individual chairmen of these committees would rather have them mailed and get them later in the day——

Mr. COX. I did not say that; I simply had no complaint to make of——

Mr. LLOYD. If they have a messenger that will settle it at once.

Mr. MADDEN. If I may be allowed to interject a word, if there is any trouble about the distribution of these places you can send them over here.

Mr. FOSTER. Mr. Speaker, just one word and I am through. I think if the gentleman from Missouri is providing by this for people to take care of these rooms—janitors, which are necessary—as far as I am concerned, I shall have no objection; but I do think the gentleman from Missouri ought not to bring in here, as suggested by the gentleman from Pennsylvania, a provision for any help for the employment of this notification or bill clerk, as you may call it, to mail bills around, and if there is one person now performing that service I shall object at this time.

Mr. LLOYD. The Committee on Accounts has carefully investigated this resolution, and it is a unanimous report of that committee. I ask for a vote.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the amendment.

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the adoption of the resolution as amended.

The question was taken, and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the ayes seemed to have it.

On a division (demanded by Mr. FOSTER) there were—ayes 52, noes 9.

So the resolution as amended was agreed to.

Mr. LLOYD. Mr. Speaker, I offer the following privileged resolution.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the resolution.

The Clerk read as follows:

House resolution 55 (H. Rept. 7).

Resolved, That the Doorkeeper of the House be, and is hereby, authorized to appoint two janitors for committees, located in the Capitol, during the sessions of the Sixty-third Congress, compensation at the rate of $60 per month for each janitor to be paid out of the contingent fund of the House, said appointments to begin the 1st of April, 1913.

Mr. MANN. I understood that the other resolution carried two janitors.

Mr. LLOYD. The other provided janitors for the Clerk. This provides janitors for the various committees, including Mr. Cox's committee, Mr. HAMLIN'S, and various committees over this building where they have no janitor.

Mr. MANN. Does the Clerk need two new janitors?

Mr. LLOYD. Mr. Chairman, these janitors have nothing whatever to do with the Clerk, and the Clerk has nothing to do with them. These two janitors take care of 8 or 10 rooms.

Mr. COX. We have janitor service now.

Mr. LLOYD. Certainly; and that is what we want to provide pay for, and what we are seeking to do is to provide for the janitors that the gentleman has now.

Mr. COX. Are the janitors now doing janitor work—the same men that worked last year?

Mr. LLOYD. Yes.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, it can not be possible that the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. Cox] wants a janitor. I supposed, with his economic turn of mind, that he took care of his own room.

Mr. COX. No. The only thing that I know about that is that a janitor comes in every morning and cleans up. I was inquiring whether that was a new position.

Mr. LLOYD. We are providing for these janitors and not providing any new assignments whatever.

Mr. HARDWICK. In other words, we are giving the Members with committee rooms the same service that they get in the Office Building.

Mr. LLOYD. Exactly so.

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Chairman, if necessary, I would ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from Indiana be permitted to take care of his own room, so as to get rid of the janitor. [Laughter.]

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

The resolution was agreed to.

ATTENDANT, LADIES' RECEPTION ROOM.

Mr. LLOYD. Mr. Speaker, I present the following privileged resolution, which I send to the desk and ask to have read.

The Clerk read as follows:

House resolution 54 (H. Rept. 10).

Resolved, That the Doorkeeper of the House be, and is hereby, authorized to appoint an attendant for the ladies' reception room of the House during the sessions of the Sixty-third Congress, compensation at the rate of $75 per month to be paid out of the contingent fund of the House.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the adoption of the resolution.

Mr. MANN. Is this the usual rate of compensation?

Mr. LLOYD. Yes.

Mr. MANN. Seventy-five a month?

Mr. LLOYD. Yes; just the same as a page.

Mr. HARDWICK. The same old thing in the same old way.

Mr. LLOYD. The same person and the same pay as last session and the preceding session.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

The resolution was agreed to.

MARY S. MANN.

Mr. LLOYD. Mr. Speaker, I offer the following privileged resolution, which I send to the desk and ask to have read.

The Clerk read as follows:

House resolution 61 (H. Rept. 9).

Resolved, That the Clerk of the House is hereby authorized to pay, out of the contingent fund, to Mary S. Mann, widow of Charles H. Mann, late superintendent of the reporters' gallery of the House, a sum equal to six months of his salary as such employee and an additional amount, not exceeding $250, for the funeral expenses of said Charles H. Mann.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

The resolution was agreed to.

THE TARIFF.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the bill H. R. 3321—the tariff bill.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the tariff bill, with Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee in the chair.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. AUSTIN], and, without objection, the amendment will be again reported.

There was no objection, and the amendment was again reported.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. Chairman, this amendment is to continue the present duty on aluminum. There are two aluminum companies in the United States—the Aluminum Co. of America and the Southern Aluminum Co., the latter a new company, being in the South and at this time having in course of erection its plant in North Carolina. Aluminum is made from bauxite, and that ore is found only in the South. It is located in the districts represented by Mr. LEE, of Georgia, Mr. MOON, of Tennessee, Mr. BURNETT, of Alabama, and Mr. TAYLOR, of Arkansas.

We are now producing in this country 45,000,000 pounds of aluminum per annum, and we are importing from France and other countries 12,500,000 pounds per annum. If the provision now placed in the Underwood bill becomes a law, we will increase our importations in value from $1,857,000 to $2,500,000, making an increase in importation over and above the present importation of $643,000.

The cost of producing aluminum in the way of labor amounts to 60 per cent of the cost of production. Sixty per cent of $643,000 is $385,800 in labor. In other words, we increase our importation of aluminum and we deprive American wage earners of $385,800 per annum that they are now receiving. In four years we would take from these wage earners engaged in this industry $1,543,000. Our present duty on aluminum is 7 cents per pound, and to show you that it is low enough, the figures of the Treasury Department show that the French and other makers of aluminum have been able to ship into this country and successfully sell in competition with the aluminum made in America 12,500,000 pounds per annum.

Our greatest competitor in the production of aluminum is France, which produces annually 40,000,000 pounds. They use 6,000,000 pounds, and have a surplus of 34,000,000 pounds to sell to other countries. There is a duty of 7½ cents a pound on every pound of aluminum imported into France and sold in competition with aluminum made in that country. The average wage per day in the aluminum plants of our competitors abroad is 80 cents as compared with $2.50 a day in this country. Now, is it for the best interests of America, will it advance and promote the interests of the four States in the South that have the only known deposits of bauxite in this country out of which aluminum is made, to reduce our duty to practically 2½ cents per pound and permit the French people, with a surplus of 34,000,000 pounds a year to enter this field in competition with aluminum made from southern bauxite?

Oh, I know the gentleman who has charge of this bill [Mr. PALMER] will say that the Aluminum Co. of America is a monopoly in this country. Yes; and I say to him that there is a legalized pool and an Aluminum Trust in France and in the other foreign countries where our competitors are engaged in this business. If there is a pool or a monopoly there why should not the American Congress prefer an American monopoly or an American trust, which voluntarily reduced the price of aluminum from $8 per pound to 17 cents per pound, in preference to a foreign trust or a foreign monopoly? Why should we seek by legislation to take business from the aluminum mills of America and money from the wage earners in the American aluminum plants? Why should we attempt by legislation to take in round numbers over a million and a half dollars per annum and turn it over to foreigners, to plants operated in Europe that pay no taxes to the American Government or any State in it, or who do not employ a single American wage earner?

I submit for the consideration of this House an appeal from the business organizations of Knoxville, Tenn., in the interest of this great American industry.

The appeal is as follows:

Resolution adopted at a special joint session of the boards of directors of the Board of Commerce, Commercial Club, Manufacturers and Producers' Association, and Traffic Bureau, of Knoxville, Tenn.

Whereas the aluminum industry of the United States, being fostered and stimulated by patents on the process of manufacture and by a duty of 7 cents per pound on foreign aluminum, has during the last 20 years grown from practically nothing to an output of 40,000,000 pounds per annum, while the price to the consumer has fallen from $4 per pound to 18 cents per pound; and

Whereas said patents have now expired, leaving nothing but the tariff of 7 cents per pound to secure to the American manufacturer the home market; and

Whereas it is far more expensive to produce aluminum in this country than in France and other foreign countries because of the fact that foreign bauxite is richer than that found in America, and because in foreign countries bauxite, coal deposits, and water power for generating electricity are found in close proximity to each other, while in this country they are found far apart; and because it is far more costly to develop the water powers in this than in foreign countries and because the American manufacturer must pay much higher wages to labor than his foreign competitor; and

Whereas there are thousands of American citizens dependent upon the aluminum industries for support and millions of American capital invested in the business, both of which would suffer if the American market should be turned over to the foreign producer of aluminum; and

Whereas bauxite, from which aluminum is made, is found only in the Southern States, and there are also found in the South vast coal deposits and undeveloped water power possibilities, both of which are essential in the production of aluminum; and

Whereas these advantages have attracted the manufacturers of aluminum in this country and abroad to such an extent that the Aluminum Co. of America and the Southern Aluminum Co. have each recently secured extensive water powers in the South with a view to their immediate development for use in the manufacture of aluminum, which development would, in the opinion of this body, be retarded and delayed, if not entirely prevented by any tariff legislation which would make it easier for foreign producers to sell their goods in this market and harder for the American manufacturer to obtain reasonable returns on the capital invested in the aluminum business; and

Whereas we believe that there is no demand coming from the consumers of aluminum goods for a lower duty, but that the cry for a lower tariff on aluminum comes solely from the manufacturers in their own interest and is not made in the interest of the consumers: Therefore be it

Resolved by the Board of Commerce, Commercial Club, Manufacturers' and Producers' Association, and Traffic Bureau, of Knoxville, Tenn., That we deem it prejudicial to the best interest of the South to reduce the tariff on aluminum below 7 cents per pound, and we therefore urge our Senators and Representatives in Congress to use their influence to prevent such reduction.

J. W. BROWNLEE,
President Board of Commerce, Knoxville, Tenn.
G. E. BRADFORD,
President Commercial Club, Knoxville, Tenn.
W. A MORERLY,
President Manufacturers' and Producers' Association, Knoxville, Tenn.
JESSE THOMAS,
President Traffic Bureau, Knoxville, Tenn.
CHAS. KIMMICK,
Secretary Joint Meeting.

KNOXVILLE, TENN., February 6, 1913.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I move that all debate on this paragraph and all amendments thereto close in five minutes.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. PALMER. Mr. Chairman, if there is any rate in all the length and breadth of this bill which is entirely and absolutely justified by the facts, it is this rate on aluminum, which the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. AUSTIN] would seek to change. The fact is that his constituents, the interests for whom he is speaking here in this matter, do not care particularly about this tariff rate upon aluminum. The gentleman applies his remarks to the aluminum paragraph, but what he has back in his head is what the Aluminum Co. of America has in its mind—the fact that we have put bauxite, the raw material of the Aluminum Co. of America, on the free list. That is what is frightening them, and for a very peculiar and interesting reason. The gentleman from Tennessee talks about the competition that the Aluminum Co. of America is suffering now and is liable to suffer because of this decreased rate. There is not a particle of competition in the aluminum business in this country or anywhere else on God's earth. There is an absolutely country-wide monopoly in America possessed by the Aluminum Co. of America, and, as the gentleman says, there is a trust abroad as well, and the Aluminum Co. of America is the founder of that trust and the biggest part of it.

Mr. Davis, the general manager of the Aluminum Co. of America, testified before the Ways and Means Committee in January that he went to London and wrote the agreement on behalf of his Canadian company, owned by the Aluminum Co. of America, which fixed the price and divided the market all over the world for aluminum. Now, the only reason we left a rate upon this aluminum at all was because the Aluminum Co. of America is not big enough, giant though it has become, it has not secured a sufficient number of water powers which are necessary for the manufacture of aluminum, to entirely supply the American market, and it must permit its foreign associates, companies associated with it under the agreement that Mr. Davis wrote, to send into this country something like $1,800,000 worth of aluminum per annum. Upon that aluminum we levy this tax of 25 per cent in order to raise revenue for the Government.

It is not to give the Aluminum Co. of America competition, because there is no competition. The price is world-wide, and in this country larger than the foreign country by the amount of duty, making an even level of price the world over. The gentleman refers to another aluminum company as if the trust really did have some opposition and competition in this country. It is not so. But some venturesome Frenchmen have come over into this country and have undertaken to build an aluminum plant down in one of the Carolinas.

They have invested a large amount of money, although they have not got to the point of making any aluminum itself. The Aluminum Co. of America, the American Aluminum Trust, owns all the commercial bauxite in America, most of which is located down in the section of country represented by my friend from Tennessee [Mr. AUSTIN].

Mr. AUSTIN. There is none of it in my district.

Mr. PALMER. Well, in that section; and with the Aluminum Trust's grip on bauxite, these Frenchmen can not give them any competition unless we put bauxite on the free list; so that we are getting revenue upon this item by putting a 25 per cent rate on aluminum, and getting 25 per cent of the nearly $2,000,000 worth of aluminum which will come into the country, and we are making it possible for this world-wide trust to have actual competition by depriving it of its monopoly in the ownership of the bauxite beds.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. AUSTIN].

The question was taken, and the amendment was rejected.

Mr. PALMER. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. PALMER] offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend, page 39, line 3, by inserting after the word "bars" the word "strips."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

146. Antimony, as regulus or metal, antimony ore, stibnite and matte containing antimony but not containing more than 10 per cent of lead, 10 per cent ad valorem: Provided, That on all importations of antimony-bearing ores and matte containing antimony the duties shall be estimated at the port of entry, and a bond given in double the amount of such estimated duties for the transportation of the ores by common carriers bonded for the transportation of appraised or unappraised merchandise to properly equipped sampling or smelting establishments, whether designated as bonded warehouses or otherwise. On the arrival of the ores at such establishments, they shall be sampled according to commercial methods under the supervision of Government officers, who shall be stationed at such establishments, and who shall submit the samples thus obtained to a Government assayer, designated by the Secretary of the Treasury, who shall make a proper assay of the sample and report the result to the proper customs officers, and the import entry shall be liquidated thereon, except in case of ores that shall be removed to a bonded warehouse to be refined for exportation as provided by law, and the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized to make all necessary regulations to enforce the provisions of this paragraph; antimony, oxide salts, and compounds of, 25 per cent ad valorem.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, in paragraph 146 I move to strike out the last word. It relates to the duty on antimony.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] moves to strike out the last word in paragraph 146.

Mr. MANN. I call the attention of the Members to this letter:

INTERNATIONAL NAIL CORPORATION,
Chicago, January 9, 1913.

Hon. JAMES R. MANN, M. C.,
Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR MR. MANN:

* * * * * * *

As you are aware, some time ago you procured for me statistics on antimony, which were very valuable to me at the time, and on the strength of that knowledge I formed, with a number of my friends, a corporation several years ago for the smelting of antimony, and only now, after spending in the neighborhood of $120,000, we are very close to smelting.

I can intelligently say that the reason that there has been no antimony smelted in this country for several years last past is because of the cheapness of the production of antimony and the oxide from the other side, accompanied with a very low duty, such as the regulus, carrying 1¼ cents a pound duty, and the oxide of antimony, carrying 1¼ cents a pound with an additional 25 per cent a pound ad valorem; and stibnite and matte, containing antimony and not containing more than 10 per cent of lead, 1 cent a pound on antimony contained therein. That, you will see, is so low that it is pretty nearly prohibitive for the American public in the West where these mines are for them to go ahead and mine and smelt this antimony.

My visit through the West several months ago caused me to call through the extreme south of California and up to the extreme northwest of Washington, stopping at all the known places where antimony has been mined and can be, and I can truthfully say that there is an awful pile of it, but the same old howl is there. We would be pleased to mine and smelt, but the duty is too low for us to compete with the foreign business, as far as the price of antimony itself is concerned.

As this antimony proposition has taken five years of hard labor to put it where it is, as far as I am concerned and all the money that I could get myself and the friends that I have interested in with me, I feel as though I ought to communicate with you in time and place the matter before you as I have, and am satisfied that you will do what a lot of other people could not for me. If that duty can not be raised, for "the love of Mike" let it stand as it is.

I would be pleased to hear from you regarding your ideas in this matter, and if you found it essential for me to be in Washington before this explosion takes place kindly advise me, and I will be pleased to come, as we can not afford to fail in this effort.

Yours, as ever,
FRANK NOWAT.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the pro forma amendment will be withdrawn, and the Clerk will read.

Mr. MILLER. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last two words.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. MILLER] moves to strike out the last two words.

Mr. MILLER. I want to ask the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. PALMER] a question. It is this: What is antimony used for in the arts?

Mr. PALMER. It is used in the manufacture of type metal, Babbitt metal, for ball bearings, and so forth.

Mr. MILLER. Is there any such monopoly with respect to that metal as there is with respect to aluminum?

Mr. PALMER. Not that I know of.

Mr. MILLER. I wish to call the attention of the gentleman to the fact that, in view of his statement regarding the Aluminum Trust in the United States and abroad being practically controlled by the same parties, it was thought wise to put a duty on the importations of aluminum, the local monopoly not being able to supply the local demand, so that a tax on the importations is simply a tax on the trust.

Mr. PALMER. Yes; the last reason being the controlling reason. The fact that they are not able to supply the local demand makes it necessary to let importations come in, and we get the revenue.

Mr. MILLER. As I understand, the amount of the duty will be simply that much taken from the trust for revenue for the benefit of the United States Government.

Mr. PALMER. That is it.

Mr. MILLER. Would not the gentleman think it wise to retain that duty at 50 per cent instead of dropping it down to 25 per cent if the total amount is to be collected from the trust anyhow? I notice from the tables that have been prepared that the expected importations will cause a slight reduction in the amount of the revenues to be derived from aluminum and a slight reduction in the amount of the revenues to be derived from antimony. For instance, of one form of antimony there was received in the year 1912, in round numbers, $74,000, and it is expected that $50,000 only a year will be received under this bill. On another antimony item $148,000 was received in 1910. Now it is expected to receive under this bill $80,000. On another item $27,000 was received and it is expected to receive $20,000, and so on down through the list. Especially is this falling off of revenue to be found in the aluminum paragraph. In 1912 we received in duties on aluminum products $1,047,000, and it is estimated by the committee that we will now receive under this bill only $625,000. It seems to me that if the amount to be collected in duties on aluminum is to be simply a tax upon the trusts, it might be wise to make that tax as high as possible. This bill appears to fatten the Aluminum Trust to the extent of $400,000 each year.

Mr. PALMER. I would be glad to do that if it were not for the fact that, of course, a certain proportion of the tax can be, and is, passed on in the price of the article which is made by the Aluminum Co. of America. While there is this world-wide agreement, it is maintained with due regard for tariff duties. The price of aluminum in this country is to-day 7 cents higher than the foreign price, or it was until recently. That is to say, the duty is added to the foreign price to make the American price; and I would not be willing to write into this law such a rate as would continue the possibility of the Aluminum Co. of America adding as much as 7 cents a pound to its crude prices, or 11 cents a pound to its finished aluminum, at the expense of the consumer.

Mr. MILLER. Then the gentleman does think there exists some relationship between the amount of duty collected and the cost to the consumer of the finished product.

Mr. PALMER. I have many times said, and everybody else has said, that the consumer pays the tax.

Mr. MILLER. I understood from the gentleman's statement that the trusts were paying this tax.

Mr. PALMER. It comes out of the trusts primarily, of course, into the Government coffers.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I notice that the price of imported aluminum is shown by the report of the committee to have been 24 cents a pound in 1905, and 12 cents a pound in 1912. That shows a very amiable disposition on the part of the Aluminum Trust, I take it, that with the tariff duties stated as 7 cents a pound during all this period, they now charge only 50 per cent, practically, of the price which they charged seven years ago on imported aluminum.

Mr. PALMER. The fact is that even under the falling prices which the Aluminum Co. of America have maintained—because they were the sole dictators as to what the price should be—their profits were so enormous that they would have been afraid to maintain any higher price to increase those enormous profits.

Mr. MANN. But if this is a world-wide trust, without any competition, I should say that it indicated a rather generous disposition on the part of that monopoly in this case. In the course of seven years it has cut the price 50 per cent.

Mr. PALMER. It was not generosity or philanthropy which prompted that. It was the fear that if out of a common article of necessity of this kind they continued to make such enormous profits as they made some years ago, they would so incense the public mind that attention would be drawn to their unconscionable activities, and as a trust they would be wiped out of existence.

Mr. AUSTIN. I will say to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] that aluminum was selling in this country for $80 a ton, and they were the sole people who owned or controlled it. They have put the price down from $80 a ton to 17 cents a pound.

Mr. MANN. That is, under the influence of a protective tariff the price was cut in two in the course of seven years.

Mr. AUSTIN. The protective tariff enabled them to develop the industry.

Mr. PALMER. The price of aluminum has come down on account of the inventions, improvements, and discoveries which have been made in the methods of its manufacture and the uses to which it can be put, but to which it was never put when aluminum was $80 a ton. At that time it was not a commercial article at all.

Mr. AUSTIN. Is it not a fact that the American Aluminum Co. extended the use of aluminum, built up this business from the very start, and that it has very greatly reduced the price from that day up to this?

Mr. PALMER. That is a fact.

Mr. AUSTIN. Give them credit for it!

Mr. PALMER. I give them credit for it. It is a fact also that on an actual investment of something less than $2,000,000 they are to-day declaring dividends upon their stock, which amount to nearly 200 per cent on all the money they have invested as original investment, and with the present comparatively low price of aluminum they are making enormous profits. They are entitled to credit for their success, but their large profits show that the reduction in aluminum to American consumers resulting from this decrease can come from their profits without undue injury to the industry.

Mr. PAYNE. Is it not true that no aluminum was produced in the United States practically until we put a protective tariff upon it?

Mr. PALMER. I do not think that had anything to do with its production here.

Mr. PAYNE. Certainly not, according to the gentleman's idea. These gentlemen came here and asked for a tariff on it in order that they might go into the enterprise. They did go into the enterprise, and they have reduced the price steadily from that time to this, and they have built up the industry.

Mr. PALMER. The business has been built up largely, as stated before, because of the control of the one concern of the patent on the discoveries connected with the methods by which it was made. The largest reason why the price has gone down, besides the fear of prosecution of this trust if the enormous profits continued, was the fear of competition on American soil.

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Chairman, it is true they were protected by patents as well as by the duty in the first place, but they did not make any and did not get any patent on the invention or invent any new process until the protective tariff was put on the article. Then they went to work and invented a new process and took out patents under the laws which we all believe in, and they were protected in that as well as the tariff.

Mr. PALMER. The gentleman claims that the protective tariff stimulated invention?

Mr. PAYNE. Certainly it does set them to work and gives them a chance. I wish the gentleman from Pennsylvania would get that into his head, and the more he studies it the more he will appreciate it.

Mr. AUSTIN. I do not see why this company should fear local competition, because the gentleman from Pennsylvania has stated that this company owns an absolute monopoly of all the raw materials.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I move that all debate on the paragraph and amendments thereto be now closed.

The motion was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The pro forma amendment is withdrawn.

The Clerk read as follows:

148. Bronze powder, brocades, flitters, and metallics; bronze, or Dutch-metal or aluminum, in leaf, 25 per cent ad valorem.

Mr. DONOVAN. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word, to ask a couple of questions. What did the committee find in regard to bronze powder as a reason for changing the tariff to 25 per cent ad valorem, practically a reduction of about 20 per cent?

Mr. PALMER. I will say to the gentleman from Connecticut that bronze-powder manufacturers came to Washington protesting vigorously against this reduction. They saw me in conference and told me the prices they were paying for labor in this country and the prices they were paying abroad; and after we had gone all over it with them it developed that this rate exactly equalized the difference in their cost of production, according to their own statement. We did not think, on any theory, they made much of a case for us to raise it.

Mr. DONOVAN. Has the gentleman got the figures of the total amount of business in bronze powder? The point I want to make is that about one-half of the bronze powder was imported under the Payne tariff law, and by the reduction of this duty it will practically allow all the bronze powder business for the other side.

Mr. CAMPBELL. Is not that all right? Did not the gentleman from Connecticut vote for that?

Mr. DONOVAN. I want to know if the gentleman's figures show that one-half of the bronze powder was imported under the Payne law?

Mr. PALMER. I have not the figures at hand, and if that was so it would not scare me any.

Mr. DONOVAN. I was not familiar with the situation, but I supposed the committee had treated this in an intelligent manner.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, may I ask the gentleman a question?

Mr. PALMER. Certainly.

Mr. MANN. I notice in this paragraph the committee has proposed to reduce the tariff rates on flitters. Does the term "flitters" refer to the gentlemen on the other side of the House who will be out of it after the tariff goes into effect? [Laughter.]

The CHAIRMAN. The pro forma amendment is withdrawn. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

150. Gold leaf, 35 per cent ad valorem.

Mr. MOORE. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Strike out the paragraph and insert in lieu the following:

"150. Gold leaf, 35 cents per 100 leaves. The foregoing rate applies to leaf not exceeding in size the equivalent of 3⅜ by 3⅜ inches; additional duties in the same proportion shall be assessed on leaf exceeding in size said equivalent."

Mr. MOORE. Mr. Chairman, it may be conceded at the outset that gold leaf is not eaten by the poor. Ordinarily it is in the luxury class, but the rate of duty has been reduced in this bill. The amendment I have offered attempts to restore the rate to what it was under the act of 1909. The amendment is offered at the suggestion of both the employers and the employees, numbering about 3,000 in this country, whose business and employment is affected by the proposed reduction.

In support of their contention, I desire to present this extract from a statement prepared by both sides, employers and employees:

The wages are $12 to $15 per week for men and $5 to $7 for women, and any change in duty, however small, would of necessity be taken off the present wages, as Germany now lays down gold leaf in this country at less than the cost price even at these wages, already low as compared with other skilled trades. The German wages are $6 to $7.50 for men and $3 to $5 for women, being 50 per cent less than American wages. In Germany each man works with several apprentices; the net result is greatly in excess of 50 per cent less than in this country.

I desire to say this change is evidently not in the interest of revenue, because it is an advance of only 5 per cent over the Wilson bill rate. The Wilson tariff of 1896 collected only $766 of duties upon gold leaf. Under the Payne act, where the ad valorem equivalent is 37.77 per cent of protection, the imports enabled the collection of duties to the extent of $13,514 in 1912. Hence it would appear that this reduction from the Payne rate is not in the interest either of the poor, who do not eat gold leaf, nor of the Government, for which it is expected to obtain revenue.

Mr. PALMER. Mr. Chairman, perhaps the remark does not apply to this particular amendment of my distinguished colleague as well as to some others, but it may as well be made now. The gentleman from the Philadelphia district has been, ever since we started the consideration of this bill, bringing in amendments to restore the Payne rates, or to continue the Payne rates. He finds his mind led toward that desire so strongly that even in a case like this, where we have simply reduced the rate from 37 per cent to 35 per cent, he feels that he must put back the old Payne rate, and increase it from 35 per cent to 37 per cent. I simply want to take this occasion to call to the attention of my colleague, the gentleman from Philadelphia, the fact that every platform of every political party which was promulgated in the State of Pennsylvania in the year 1912 demanded a downward revision of the tariff. The Republican Party in Pennsylvania condemned the Payne law in its State platform and demanded a revision downward of that law.

Mr. MOORE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PALMER. And it seems to me that it is about time the gentleman from Philadelphia woke up and discovered what the people in this country decided last fall. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

Mr. MOORE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PALMER. Just a moment. I commend to him the example of his distinguished leader, the gentleman from New York [Mr. PAYNE], who knows that the American people have condemned his law because he is here with a new Schedule K, reducing his own Schedule K very materially.

Mr. MOORE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PALMER. And I expect the gentleman from Philadelphia is opposing it.

Mr. MOORE. Can the gentleman point to a single Republican platform in State or Nation that does not declare for protection to American industries?

Mr. PALMER. I can point to the Republican platform in the State of Pennsylvania, and that is what I am talking about—the platform of the party which elected the gentleman from Philadelphia—which condemned this Payne law, and which the gentleman now seeks to restore.

Mr. MOORE. Will the gentleman yield for another question?

Mr. PALMER. Yes.

Mr. MOORE. Does the gentleman presume to say that it is not within the province of a Member to stand up for any particular industry in his district or against a great combination for which a special rate was fixed in the matter of ferromanganese?

Mr. PALMER. Mr. Chairman, I will say in answer to that that if the gentleman from Philadelphia could say that he was here trying to save an industry from destruction there might be some logic in his position; but he is here because he is such a standpatter that he can not allow the rate on gold leaf to be reduced from 37 per cent to 35 per cent, and he knows that that small reduction will not have any effect upon gold-leaf manufacturers either in his district or elsewhere.

Mr. MOORE. Will the gentleman yield once more?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I move to close all debate on this paragraph.

Mr. MOORE. Will the gentleman yield once more? Is not the real difference between the gentleman from Pennsylvania and myself this, that I am standing pat against a loss of employment to men engaged in the industries, while the gentleman is sponsor for a bill which——

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Pennsylvania has expired. The gentleman from Alabama moves to close all debate on this paragraph and all amendments thereto.

The question was taken, and the motion was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment proposed by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MOORE].

The question was taken, and the amendment was rejected.

The Clerk read as follows:

155. Lead dross, lead bullion or base bullion, lead in pigs and bars, lead in any form not specially provided for in this section, old refuse lead run into blocks and bars, and old scrap lead fit only to be remanufactured; lead in sheets, pipe, shot, glaziers' lead, and lead wire; all the foregoing 25 per cent ad valorem.

Mr. PALMER. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 40, line 23, at the end of the line insert the words "or of tinsel wire, lame, or lahn, and India rubber."

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. PALMER. I also offer the following amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report it.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 40, line 24, after the word "threads," insert the words "not specially provided for."

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. MOORE. Will the gentleman yield for a question? Has this item been passed? Has paragraph 152 been passed?

Mr. PALMER. I was waiting for the Clerk to read.

Mr. MANN. Will the gentleman permit me to make a suggestion about the amendment just adopted?

Mr. PALMER. I have not taken the floor. The amendment has been offered and agreed to.

Mr. MANN. Will the gentleman permit me to make a suggestion?

Mr. PALMER. Yes.

Mr. MANN. I notice everywhere else in the bill "not specifically provided for in this section." While it is not important, it might be advisable to have the same language.

Mr. PALMER. I ask unanimous consent that the amendment may be modified by adding the words "in this section." [Applause on the Republican side.] I do that to show that the gentleman really has somebody following him.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Pennsylvania asks unanimous consent to modify the amendment last agreed to by adding the words "in this section" to the amendment. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

Mr. MOORE. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. PALMER. Did I understand the gentleman from Pennsylvania to now move to strike out the last word which the gentleman from Illinois put in?

Mr. MOORE. No; the last word of the paragraph of the bill. I would like to ask the gentleman from Pennsylvania, however, which is the raw material and which is the finished product in this paragraph 152? If the gentleman from Pennsylvania would please give as much attention to the House as to the platforms of his party, perhaps he would answer my question.

Mr. PALMER. I beg the gentleman's pardon.

Mr. MOORE. I want to find out what difference the committee allowed as between the raw material and the finished product in this paragraph.

Mr. PALMER. Well, there are very many different raw materials which come in at different rates.

Mr. MOORE. They are jumbled together in this paragraph. The raw material comes in at 30 per cent ad valorem and the finished product at 40 per cent ad valorem. Is not that the fact?

Mr. PALMER. Some raw material comes in at 10 per cent ad valorem.

Mr. MOORE. But chiefly tinsel as raw material comes in at 30 per cent and the finished product at 40 per cent, so that the American manufacturer is given an actual protection of 10 per cent. Is not that the fact?

Mr. PALMER. There is a differential between wire and tinsel of 20 per cent and between tinsel and the fabric of 10 per cent.

Mr. MOORE. Does the gentleman regard these articles as luxuries?

Mr. PALMER. Some are and some are not.

Mr. MOORE. Some are Christmas ornaments and are made very cheaply in Germany in competition with the United States. The gentleman offers 10 per cent protection to the American manufacturer, whom he taxes 30 per cent for his raw material. Now, with reference to this paragraph and with particular reference to what the gentleman said a moment ago, I desire to say that the difference in political opinion between the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. PALMER] and myself is this: Platforms of a party are sometimes written by an individual or a combination of individuals. Notwithstanding this the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MOORE] stands for the maintenance of industries of the United States which are progressive in an economic sense and which give employment to labor in the United States at an American wage, while the other gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. PALMER], by his performance, writes out of business not only the industries of his Commonwealth, but puts out of employment men who are engaged in those industries, and this in the interest of revenue for the Government which is being collected now under the Payne bill, which he condemns.

Mr. PALMER. If the gentleman his finished his short sentence, would he mind——

Mr. MOORE. I made it as pointed as I could so that the gentleman could understand the difference between himself and myself.

Mr. PALMER. The gentleman has excused the repudiation of his party platform in Pennsylvania because of the fact that it was drawn by an individual or a combination of individuals of whom apparently he does not approve. Would the gentleman mind stating, for the information of the House and for the RECORD, in order to keep history straight in Pennsylvania, where it would be important and interesting, what individual or what combination of individuals really control the Republican Party in Pennsylvania and write its platforms? [Applause on the Democratic side.]

Mr. MOORE. Will the gentleman tell me who wrote the Government-ownership plank of the Democratic platform? Will the gentleman tell me who wrote the waterways plank in every one of the national platforms of last year? Will the gentleman tell me——

Mr. PALMER. I asked you for information.

Mr. MOORE. Will the gentleman tell me who dictated the Democratic platform of Pennsylvania last year? I wish the gentleman would rise up and answer.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MOORE] has expired.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I move that all debate on this paragraph and all amendments thereto be now closed.

The motion was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

153. Hooks and eyes, metallic, snap fasteners and clasps by whatever name known, trousers buckles and waistcoat buckles made wholly or partly of iron or steel, steel trousers buttons and metal buttons not specially provided for in this section, all the foregoing and parts thereof, 15 per cent ad valorem.

Mr. CALDER. Mr. Chairman, I wish to offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New York offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 41, strike out the last two words in line 3 and the words "buttons and metal buttons" in line 4 and insert the following:
"Nickel bar buttons and trousers, buttons of steel and other metal."

Mr. CALDER. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] had such good fortune in presenting an amendment to the last section of the bill, which the committee evidently overlooked, that for the same reason I have the temerity to present this. In examining the provisions affecting buttons I find that in the Payne Tariff Act they were dealt with largely in Schedule N, in paragraph 427. I have not sought to raise the duty or to interfere at all with the duty on this particular item of metal trousers buttons, but sought to put under that classification the same items that came under it in this paragraph, to which I have referred, in the Payne bill.

Mr. PALMER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CALDER. Yes.

Mr. PALMER. You are seeking to add a new kind of metal button?

Mr. CALDER. That is right.

Mr. PALMER. And which you do not find in this bill at present?

Mr. CALDER. That is right.

Mr. PALMER. But the gentleman will note the language of the bill, "not specially provided for in this section," will cover the new metal button.

Mr. CALDER. That will leave the question open.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Oh, no; it will not. I will say to the gentleman from New York [Mr. CALDER], so that he may save time, that that particular language was written in there by a Treasury expert, who prepared the proposition. There are two items in reference to buttons in this bill. All the buttons were pulled out and put in Schedule N, except metal buttons, and this was prepared especially by an expert of the Treasury Department to cover all metal buttons, and there is no question about it.

Mr. CALDER. Those who have given the subject some thought have considered that the nickel bar buttons might be considered in Schedule N, to which the gentleman referred.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. The gentleman need not have any doubt, because all trousers buttons and metal buttons not specially provided for, which means all other metal buttons, are covered by this paragraph.

Mr. MANN. That would depend on whether it would be considered they were provided for under the sundries amendment.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. There are none provided for under the sundries amendment. My friend from Illinois evidently has not read this paragraph or he would not ask that question.

Mr. MANN. I have read the paragraph; certainly.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. It says: "Steel trousers buttons and metal buttons not specially provided for." That covers all the buttons that you could make.

Mr. MANN. It does if they are not specially provided for elsewhere.

Mr. CALDER. Mr. Chairman, my amendment makes the whole thing clear, so that you do not leave open in future the question for the determination of any board of appraisers or any customs court. There is no question about it if my amendment is adopted. Otherwise there may be.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I do not think so. If the gentleman's amendment prevailed it might cloud some other provisions as to metal buttons that are now clear.

Mr. CALDER. In the Payne Act all these buttons were in the same classification.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York [Mr. CALDER].

The question was taken, and the amendment was rejected.

Mr. KREIDER. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. KREIDER] offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 41, line 1, after the word "eyes," insert the words "other than those used in the manufacture of boots and shoes."

Mr. KREIDER. Mr. Chairman, in offering this amendment, I take the position that in view of the fact that the committee that wrote this tariff bill has been kind enough to the shoe-manufacturing industry of this country to simply put the product of the shoe manufacturers on the free list and not attach any penalties to it [laughter on the Republican side], they would perhaps give sufficient consideration to that industry to allow the shoe manufacturers to receive without a duty the hooks and eyes which they use in the manufacture of shoes, which now must be sold in free and open competition with the rest of the world if this bill becomes a law.

I have been thinking that possibly the gentlemen who prepared this bill would be considerate enough to allow the shoe manufacturers to use these hooks and eyelets without being obliged to pay a duty on the same. The position assumed by the Committee on Ways and Means, as explained on this floor by the distinguished chairman of the committee, if I understand it correctly, is that the tariff duties in the future shall be levied in such a manner as to put all lines of manufacture on a competitive basis.

I have been trying to point out that this cure-all in tariff legislation is not a proper cure. It will put a premium upon dishonesty and upon the lack of thrift and the lack of economical manufacture, and will impose a penalty upon thrift, economy, and honesty. By that I mean to say this, making just this one illustration: During the debates to-day and yesterday you heard repeatedly that the duties on various articles have been placed at the point where they now appear because the importation of those articles has been either extensive or, perhaps, not extensive; and duties as high as 55 and 60 per cent have been imposed upon articles in which the labor cost is not over 75 per cent of the cost of the articles themselves.

In the shoe industry of the United States the labor cost on the average price of shoes manufactured is 25 per cent of the wholesale cost. There appeared before the Committee on Ways and Means a committee of shoe manufacturers, who pleaded with the committee earnestly, and put the proposition up to them, and told them that this industry will suffer, and suffer severely, if the little duty of 10 per cent that was retained by the Payne bill is now removed.

It is useless to go into these details. I can not begin to think of doing it in the five minutes allotted to me. But permit me to say, Mr. Chairman, that the injustice of this thing lies in the fact that the shoe manufacturers of this country have been in open and free competition with each other, there being over 1,300 American shoe manufacturers in existence. They have been in such fierce and open competition that it has been necessary to practice the greatest economies possible in the minutest details of manufacture, and the manufacturers have succeeded in giving to the country and the people of the United States such a line of goods that, notwithstanding the fact that a duty of only 10 per cent was kept on the statute books, it has been impossible for foreign manufacturers to come in and compete. [Applause on the Republican side.]

Mr. PALMER. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that debate on this paragraph and amendments thereto be closed at the end of 5 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Pennsylvania asks unanimous consent that all debate on this paragraph and all amendments thereto close in 5 minutes. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. PALMER. Mr. Chairman, the remarks to which we have just listened from my distinguished friend, the Member from Pennsylvania [Mr. KREIDER], furnish a striking illustration of what has been going on in this country with respect to tariff legislation under the Republican régime for many years. My friend comes here, and in the Congress of the United States, though sent here to represent 200,000 people in the great State of Pennsylvania, he makes a plea to you to put money into his own pocket; for the distinguished gentleman from Pennsylvania is not alone a boot and shoe manufacturer, but if I am not mistaken is the president or ex-president of the American Boot and Shoe Manufacturers' Association. Now, I ascribe to him no improper motive, but it does seem to me that it is a striking illustration of the habit of thought which has got into the minds of American manufacturers, that they can and should come here and plead with American Representatives that taxes be laid upon the American people in order to add profit to the special interests which they represent. [Applause on the Democratic side.] The gentleman speaks of this small item of hooks and eyes. I am not a shoe manufacturer, and I do not know what proportion exactly hooks and eyes bear——

Mr. KREIDER. There are 30 items which go into the manufacture of shoes which are not on the free list.

Mr. PALMER. I do not know what proportion of the value of a shoe the hooks and eyes amount to, but I am certain it is an infinitesimally small part of the value of the shoe. The gentleman's amendment would simply throw these hooks and eyes into the basket clause and increase the rate. But, passing that by, I will say to him that we did reduce this duty from 45 per cent under the present law to 15 per cent on these articles, so that, though we do have boots and shoes upon the free list, the great boot and shoe industry is not going to suffer very much by reason of the fact that it must pay simply 15 per cent upon hooks and eyes, an industry which is able to produce in this country nearly $600,000,000 worth of product and export more of its product than any country on the face of the earth exports into foreign markets.

Mr. KREIDER. I beg to differ. The gentleman is misinformed.

Mr. PALMER. Perhaps the gentleman misunderstood me. What I say is that the American boot and shoe manufacturer exports more than any other country in the world exports.

Mr. KREIDER. The gentleman is misinformed.

Mr. PALMER. Oh! but it is absolutely true. And the boot and shoe manufacturers who came before the Ways and Means Committee confirmed that statement. The gentleman knows Mr. McElwin, I think, the head of the biggest boot and shoe manufacturing establishment in the country, and he showed that we exported, I think it was, $17,000,000 worth of boots and shoes, against a little less than that amount exported by Great Britain, so that here is a great industry which faces a foreign competition of less than $200,000, with a production of nearly $600,000,000, sending its shoes all over the world, underselling the foreign manufacturer at the very door of his own factory, asking us to remit the duty of 15 per cent on hooks and eyes.

Mr. KREIDER. Will the gentleman allow me to reply?

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Pennsylvania has expired. All time has expired.

Mr. FORDNEY. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to be heard on this question.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I do not care to go into the question of boots and shoes at this time. We will reach them later. I prefer not to debate this bill all over it.

Mr. MANN. I move to strike out the last two words.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I will say to the gentleman that debate on this paragraph has already been closed by unanimous consent.

The CHAIRMAN. By order of the committee debate upon this paragraph and all amendments thereto is closed. The question is on the amendment proposed by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. KREIDER].

The question being taken, the amendment was rejected.

Mr. KENNEDY of Connecticut. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. KENNEDY] offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 41, line 5, after the word "thereof," strike out "15" and insert in lieu thereof "25."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Connecticut.

The amendment was rejected.

The Clerk read as follows:

154. Lead-bearing ores of all kinds containing more than 3 per cent of lead, one-half cent per pound on the lead contained therein: Provided, That on all importations of lead-bearing ores the duties shall be estimated at the port of entry, and a bond given in double the amount of such estimated duties for the transportation of the ores by common carriers bonded for the transportation of appraised or unappraised merchandise to properly equipped sampling or smelting establishments, whether designated as bonded warehouses or otherwise. On the arrival of the ores at such establishments they shall be sampled according to commercial methods under the supervision of Government officers, who shall be stationed at such establishments, and who shall submit the samples thus obtained to a Government assayer, designated by the Secretary of the Treasury, who shall make a proper assay of the sample and report the result to the proper customs officers, and the import entries shall be liquidated thereon, except in case of ores that shall be removed to a bonded warehouse to be refined for exportation as provided by law. And the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized to make all necessary regulations to enforce the provisions of this paragraph.

Mr. MORGAN of Oklahoma. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend, line 8, page 41, by inserting, after the word "lead," the words "one and."

[Mr. MORGAN of Oklahoma addressed the committee. See Appendix.]

Mr. DAVENPORT. Mr. Chairman, in reply to what was said by my colleague in reference to the glass factories, I want to inform him that the glass factories went out of business in Oklahoma immediately after the adoption of the Payne-Aldrich bill, and the price of lead in the county went down as low as it has been for years. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

Mr. McGUIRE of Oklahoma. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DAVENPORT. Yes.

Mr. McGUIRE of Oklahoma. The largest glass factory in Oklahoma is located in Ponca, and that was located there after the enactment of the Payne law. [Applause on the Republican side.]

Mr. DAVENPORT. Mr. Chairman, I did not undertake to answer for the district of my Republican colleague [Mr. McGUIRE], but I was speaking of mine, as the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. MORGAN] has referred to it. The Ponca City one is not making very great progress at present, as my colleague will admit, and the lead mines in Oklahoma do not need any protection greater now than they have had for years, and they are not clamoring in my district for that protection.

Mr. SMITH of Idaho. Mr. Chairman, I wish to say a few words in support of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. MORGAN].

We have in northern Idaho about 12,000 people dependent directly or indirectly on the operation of our lead mines, which produce over 30 per cent of the supply of the United States. Nearly $5,000,000 yearly goes to the railroads for freights in transporting the products of the mines and the mills, and merchandise needed by the communities which are sustained by this industry. In addition, the wages of the miners, supplies, rents, and so forth, amount to nearly $10,000,000 per year. This industry has been built up under a protective tariff of 1½ per cent on lead ore. In addition to the mines in operation, there are a great many prospective mines which are being developed at great expense and this development will be abandoned in many instances if lead miners are compelled to enter the market in competition with Mexican ores. The latest statistics compiled by the census report shows that out of 2,185 mines reported, only 154 were producing mines. The total capital invested was $72,738,889, 44 per cent of which was invested in prospective mines, all of which would be a total loss if the lead producers are not to have the benefit of existing protective laws. I can not understand how any man who loves his country and who is interested in the happiness and welfare of his neighbors could support a measure which would place them on a par with the cheap labor of Mexico, who receive one-fourth of the wages received by the miners in Idaho.

Note the comparison between the wages paid in Idaho and Mexico:

	Coeur d'Alene, Idaho.	Mexico.
Miners	$3.50 to $4.50	$0.75
Muckers	3.00 to 3.50	.50
Laborers	3.00 to 3.50	.50
Timbermen	3.50 to 4.00	.75 to $1.00
Pumpmen	4.00	1.00
Engineers	4.50 to 5.00	1.00
Shift bosses	5.00 to 6.00
Track and pipe men	3.50 to 4.00	1.00
Blacksmiths	4.00 to 5.00	1.00 to 1.25
Blacksmith's helpers	3.50 to 4.00	.75
Machinists	4.50 to 5.00	1.00
Millmen	3.50 to 4.00	.65
Average	3.60	.80
Day's work	8 hours.	10 to 12 hours.

Who would be benefited by the proposed reduction of the duty and the suspension of the lead-mining industry in the United States? Why should we send our money out of the country for those things that are now being produced by ourselves? [Applause on the Republican side.]

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Oklahoma.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate on this paragraph close in 10 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, a few moments ago the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. KREIDER], on this side of the House, offered an amendment relating to hooks and eyes used in boots and shoes, and made an observation concerning boots and shoes being on the free list. The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. PALMER], who prepared this schedule, and who is in charge of it, endeavoring to reflect upon his colleague from Pennsylvania, stated that he was surprised that a gentleman on the floor of the House would make a proposition to the House which might affect his own pocket or his own business, and that it was improper, or words to that effect, for the president or ex-president of the United States Shoe Manufacturers' Association to propose an amendment upon the floor of the House affecting the shoe business.

Mr. Chairman, I suppose next we will be told that gentlemen in this House who own farms or who are interested in agriculture have no right to propose amendments or to vote upon propositions affecting the tariff upon agricultural products; but think of a speech of that sort coming from one of the older Members of this House, when the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] who introduced the bill affecting the tariff upon iron and steel products is himself an iron and steel manufacturer!

Think of a gentleman making that observation relating to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. KREIDER], saying that it was improper for him to propose an amendment affecting the tariff upon boots and shoes when he was the president of the Shoe Manufacturers' Association, when the gentleman from Pennsylvania himself secured iron ore free, the principal user of which is located in his district! [Applause on the Republican side.]

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. Chairman, and the gentleman might have added that they were also making 20 per cent profit on the investment.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I am sorry that the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] has brought me personally into this question.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I will say to the gentleman, if he will permit me, that I did not do it with any reflection upon the gentleman from Alabama. The gentleman from Alabama does not need to defend himself upon the floor of this House, so far as this tariff bill concerns his own business, and no one has ever charged him with attempting to use his official position to improperly advantage himself in his private business. [Applause.]

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for what he says, but the only business in which I am interested is the pig-iron business and the iron and steel business in my own district. There is not an item in it that has not been reduced in this bill. So far as the Birmingham district is concerned, its great iron supply has been put upon the free list, for the benefit of the country generally.

The coal that it produces has gone to the free list. The greatest manufacturing plant in the district is a steel-rail mill, and rails have gone to the free list, because that industry is controlled by a monopoly. The next greatest plant in the district is a wire plant, and a part of their product has gone to the free list. I do not mean to say that I would have advocated putting these articles on the free list if I thought that they ought to bear a revenue tax. The item in this bill that I am more interested in than any other is pig iron, and although the gentleman from New York [Mr. PAYNE] cut the rate on pig iron from $4 to $2.50 in his bill, in this bill we cut the rate from $2.50 specific to 8 per cent ad valorem, which, at $15 pig iron, would mean $1.20 a ton, or a cut of 50 per cent. If I could not represent my constituency and at the same time represent the people of the United States without involving myself in a question of feeling I had to be a special pleader for interests that happen to be located in my district, I would be unworthy to occupy the position I hold in this House and unworthy to bear a commission from the great Democratic Party of this country. [Applause on the Democratic side.] I have no criticism of a gentleman who comes here to represent the interests of his constituency. I have no criticism of the gentleman from Pennsylvania who desired to lower a duty on a product that he buys and at the same time contends for a raise of a duty on the product that he sells. I do not question the gentleman's motive in the case, but I contend this—that when Representatives of the American people stand in this House and exercise the power to tax the people of this country and lay on their backs burdens of taxation, at least it is not becoming for gentlemen to display a selfish interest in these matters. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

The time has passed when the laws of this country shall longer be written for special interests [applause on the Democratic side]; when men may come to this Congress and ask for legislation that shall convert the dollar from the pockets of the American people into their own pockets that they may grow rich as the result of that legislation. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired. The question is on the amendment proposed by the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. MORGAN].

The question was taken, and the amendment was rejected.

The Clerk read as follows:

152. Tinsel wire, lame or lahn, made wholly or in chief value of gold, silver, or other metal, 10 per cent ad valorem; bullions and metal threads, made wholly or in chief value of tinsel wire, lame or lahn, 30 per cent ad valorem; fabrics, ribbons, beltings, toys, or other articles, made wholly or in chief value of tinsel wire, lame or lahn, bullions, or metal threads, 40 per cent ad valorem.

Mr. FRENCH. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment, which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend, page 42, line 7, by inserting, after the word "remanufactured," the words "all the foregoing, 2½ cents per pound." Also, amend line 9 by striking out the words "25 per cent ad valorem" and inserting in lieu thereof the words "2½ cents per pound."

Mr. FRENCH. Mr. Chairman, I have already spoken generally upon this subject, and I merely want at this time to make one or two observations that it seems to me are pertinent to consider when we are considering the question of reducing the duty upon lead imported into this country. I think that the Coeur d'Alene region of Idaho may be taken as a very fine example of a region where the laborers are benefited by a protective duty. That is a region of country in which almost all the laborers employed are American citizens. In fact, under the laws of Idaho no corporation may employ laborers who have not at least taken out their first papers as the first step looking to their naturalization. [Applause on the Republican side.] The average wages paid to laborers of the Coeur d'Alene is $3.60 per man, and I would compare that with the average wages paid to the laborers in the mines of the Republic to the south of us, where the average is 80 cents per man. The miners in the Coeur d'Alene receive from $3.50 to $4.50 per day for their labor, while the miners in the mines of Mexico receive 75 cents per day. The muckers receive in the Coeur d'Alene from $3 to $3.50 for their labor, and the muckers in Mexico receive 50 cents per day. The blacksmiths employed in connection with mine work receive from $4 to $5 per day in Idaho, as compared with $1 to $1.25 per day in Mexico. And so you can go down the list, and you may compare the wages received by the various classes of workmen in the mines of the region that produces nearly one-third of the lead of the United States and almost 10 per cent of the lead of the world, and you will find that the wages received on the average are more than 400 per cent of the wages received by the laborers in similar mines in the country immediately adjacent to the United States. More than that, let me say this:

The lead produced from the mines in the Coeur d'Alene region would not pay the running expenses and the freight to convey the lead to the markets of the world if it were not for the by-product of silver that is produced in connection with operating the mines of that region. The very fact that we are able to produce silver alongside of the lead enables our miners to work these mines and operate the same at a profit and pay good wages to the laborers in this country. If you were to insist upon reducing the schedule of duties upon lead imported from foreign countries into the United States anywhere near the ratio suggested by the bill you are considering at this time, it will mean that our miners will be compelled to accept lower wages than they are receiving at the present time or else the mines will cease to be operated.

Possibly both of these results will in part obtain, and I have no doubt but that so far as development work is considered in that region and other regions of the great West it will in large part cease or be retarded, because it will not seem to be a profitable business in which to engage. [Applause on the Republican side.]

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment of the gentleman from Idaho [Mr. FRENCH].

The amendment was rejected.

The Clerk read as follows:

156. Metallic mineral substances in a crude state, and metals unwrought, whether capable of being wrought or not, not specially provided for in this section, 10 per cent ad valorem; monazite sand and thorite; thorium, oxide of and salts of; gas mantles treated with chemicals or metallic oxides, 25 per cent ad valorem; and gas-mantle scrap consisting in chief value of metallic oxides, 10 per cent ad valorem.

Mr. PALMER. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Pennsylvania offers an amendment which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 42, line 14, after the word "gas," insert the words "kerosene or alcohol."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. PALMER].

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. I desire to call the attention of the House to a communication relating to mantles, and so forth, carried in this bill, as follows:

LINDSAY LIGHT CO.,
Chicago, January 31, 1913.

JAMES R. MANN, M. C.,
Washington, D. C.

HONORABLE SIR: We respectfully urge that no change be made in the import duty under paragraph 183, Schedule C, tariff law 1909, which has particular reference to monazite sand, thorium, incandescent gas mantles, and gas-mantle scrap.

To support this request we submit the following facts: That there are no agreements of any kind pertaining to the sale of incandescent gas mantles; they are sold in open competition and without regulation of price.

Ninety-five per cent of the materials used in manufacturing gas mantles is dutiable under act of 1909 with 40 per cent and over, and the remaining 5 per cent is dutiable at 25 per cent.

All materials used in the manufacture of gas mantles cost us 30 per cent to 85 per cent more than the German manufacturer.

Our average wage rate is from $1.10 to $1.75 per day, and in some branches of the work more, against an average wage rate paid in Germany of 50 cents to 62½ cents per day.

We know that the German manufacturer has an advantage in lower cost of labor and material, conservatively estimated at from $18 to $22 per thousand mantles.

Mantles of foreign manufacture are offered at extremely low prices, varying from $25 to $50 per thousand; present rate of duty adds $10 to $20 per thousand, and in reality the difference in cost is $18 to $22 per thousand.

We manufactured last year 8,600,000 mantles. We have no bonded indebtedness. We have no watered stock and conduct our enterprise in the most economical manner possible consistent with good manufacturing.

Our net profits for last year on gas mantles were $32,473, which figures $3.77 per 1,000, or a trifle more than one-third of a cent per mantle profit, which would be totally eliminated if any reduction in duty takes place.

Any reduction in the duty is not going to benefit the American consumer, for the reason the consumer's prices on gas mantles are 10 cents, 15 cents, and 25 cents, which at these figures will give the dealer profit varying from 40 per cent to 100 per cent. The dealer does not give the benefit possible to the consumer, and even if the public did get the benefit of this saving it would only be about $300,000 for the entire United States, and for this the American industry, paying $1,800,000 for labor, would be placed in a serious jeopardy.

We doubt very much if the proposed reduction on thorium will benefit the American manufacturer, for the reason that this particular item is controlled in Europe by a syndicate who would immediately take advantage of the new condition by raising their prices, and this then would go to Europe in place of the American manufacturer as reduced cost.

We sincerely hope that you will do everything possible to assist us. We are in favor of leaving the tariff as it now stands on gas mantles. If it is consistent with this to procure a reduction on thorium, we would welcome it.

Your attention is respectfully called to printed petition presented to the members of the Committee on Ways and Means.

Very truly, yours,

LINDSAY LIGHT CO.,
J. M. SHERBURNE,
Secretary.

The Clerk read as follows:

158. Pens, metallic, 8 cents per gross; with nib and barrel in one piece, 12 cents per gross.

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. This afternoon I endeavored to point out some of the paragraphs in which the duties had been increased in the present bill over the Underwood bill of the last Congress. Gentlemen complained because I pointed out only the increases. I now desire to point out one of the decreases in this bill. Under the Payne law metallic pens, with nib and barrel in one piece, were dutiable at 15 cents per gross. Under the Underwood bill of the last Congress they were made dutiable at 25 per cent ad valorem, a duty equivalent to 47 cents per gross, or 200 per cent more than the duty of the Payne law. I congratulate the gentlemen of the Ways and Means Committee on having discovered this error and having reduced this duty to 12 cents per gross. However, I rose to direct the attention of the committee to another matter. The present law, paragraph 186, reads as follows:

Pens, metallic, except gold pens, 12 cents per gross.

The language "except gold pens" is stricken out in the present law. In paragraph 187 there is a proviso which reads as follows:

Provided, That pens and penholders shall be assessed for duty separately.

That has been stricken out of the bill, so that gold pens, if the laws remains in its present form, will be dutiable under paragraph 158 at the rate of 12 cents per gross, a duty very much lower than that contained in the present law.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Has the gentleman read paragraph 159?

Mr. ANDERSON. I have read paragraph 159.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. The gentleman is talking about gold pens, is he not?

Mr. ANDERSON. Yes.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Paragraph 159 reads:

Penholder tips, penholders and parts thereof, gold pens, fountain pens, and stenographic pens.

Mr. ANDERSON. That paragraph applies only to pens and penholders attached, and unless the ambiguity is corrected gold pens without holders attached will be dutiable under the other paragraph.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. The gentleman will have to learn some constructions from the new customs court, I guess.

The Clerk read as follows:

162. Type metal, on the lead contained therein, and new types, 15 per cent ad valorem.

Mr. PALMER. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN (Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee). The gentleman from Pennsylvania offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 43, line 13, strike out the words "on the lead contained therein."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the adoption of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. PALMER].

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. PALMER. Mr. Chairman, I also offer the following amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Pennsylvania offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 43, line 13, strike out the word "new."

Mr. PALMER. Mr. Chairman, I simply want to put in the RECORD that that paragraph, 640 of the free list, provides for type fit only to be remanufactured, so that the word "new" is stricken out here because it is practically covered by the two clauses thus together.

Mr. MANN. Should it not also provide:

Not otherwise provided for in this section.

Mr. PALMER. I think not. The Treasury experts say not. Types to be remanufactured are to come in free.

Mr. MANN. It is proposed to strike out the word "new" and make it "type."

Mr. PALMER. To make it "type," so that all type comes in at this rate with the exception, of course, that the free list provides for old type, fit only to be remanufactured.

Mr. MANN. But there would be a plain conflict then, because this would include the other.

Mr. PALMER. The other is "old type, fit only to be remanufactured."

Mr. MANN. But if you strike out "new" here, this would carry all type at 15 per cent ad valorem.

Mr. PALMER. Provided it were fit only to be remanufactured.

Mr. MANN. There is no "provided" about it. The question is whether, unless you insert something else, that would not conflict with this.

Mr. PALMER. I offered that amendment at the suggestion of the Treasury Department, which, in the interest of the clear interpretation of the language in accordance with the intent, said that that word "new" ought to come out.

Mr. MANN. I agree with that part of it; but I think it would be a little safer to put the other language in, which could not harm anything.

Mr. PALMER. It may be so.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. PALMER].

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

164. Zinc-bearing ores of all kinds, including calamine, 10 per cent ad valorem.

Mr. CAMPBELL. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment, which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment offered by the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. CAMPBELL].

The Clerk read as follows:

On page 44, lines 18 and 19, strike out the paragraph and insert the following in lieu thereof:

164. Zinc-bearing ore of all kinds, including calamine, containing less than 10 per cent of zinc, shall be admitted free of duty; containing 10 per cent or more of zinc and less than 20 per cent, ¼ of 1 cent per pound on the zinc contained therein; containing 20 per cent or more of zinc and less than 25 per cent, ½ of 1 cent per pound on the zinc contained therein; containing 25 per cent of zinc, or more, 1 cent per pound on the zinc contained therein: Provided, That on all importations of zinc-bearing ores the duties shall be estimated at the port of entry, and a bond given in double the amount of such estimated duties for the transportation of the ores by common carriers bonded for the transportation of appraised or unappraised merchandise to properly equipped sampling or smelting establishments, whether designated as bonded warehouses or otherwise. On the arrival of the ores at such establishments they shall be sampled according to commercial methods under the supervision of Government officers, who shall be stationed at such establishments, and who shall submit the samples thus obtained to a Government assayer, designated by the Secretary of the Treasury, who shall make a proper assay of the sample, and report the result to the proper customs officers, and the import entries shall be liquidated thereon, except in case of ores that shall be removed to a bonded warehouse to be refined for exportation as provided by law. And the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized to make all necessary regulations to enforce the provisions of this paragraph.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the debate on this paragraph close in five minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] asks unanimous consent that the debate on this paragraph close in five minutes.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. Chairman, reserving the right to object, this is an industry in my district, and I would like to have five minutes.

Mr. MANN. There are two other gentlemen who desire time.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I will say 15 minutes, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. DECKER. Mr. Chairman, I would like to have five minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Missouri [Mr. DECKER] states that he desires five minutes.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I will make it 20 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] modifies his request and asks unanimous consent that the debate on this paragraph close in 20 minutes. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered. The gentleman from Kansas [Mr. CAMPBELL] is recognized.

Mr. CAMPBELL. Mr. Chairman, I offer this amendment for the purpose of continuing the zinc ore mining industry in the United States, and especially in my own district.

It is proposed to reduce the ad valorem rate from an average of 50 per cent to 10 per cent.

With apologies to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. PALMER], I state that I own no stock in any ore mines anywhere. But I am interested in those men who are employed in that industry in my district. The industry is carried on by individuals. Men group themselves together, put their capital together, and go down into the earth to get the ore. The ore production in that section of country is not under the control of any great combinations of capital, but is carried on by individual efforts, and the men employed by these men are dependent upon that industry for their livelihood and for their prosperity.

I have seen those men lose their employment as the result of competition with old Mexico in the production of zinc ore under free trade. I have seen the same men find employment again as the result of the protection given to the zinc-ore industry in 1909 by the present law. The men were out of employment as the result of competition with Mexican miners, who get from one-fifth to one-ninth of the wage that is paid to the laborers in Kansas. The reason the laborers in Kansas were out of employment in the zinc-mining industry was because they could not live upon the same wage that the men in Mexico were getting who were supplying the smelters in my district with zinc ore.

I urged a duty then to protect them from that competition. I am urging now a duty high enough to protect the laborers employed in that industry, to the end that they may have an opportunity of supplying their families with the necessities of life and the opportunity of living in the manner in which they have been accustomed to live. That is all that is asked. They can not do that if Mexican peons mine the ore that supplies the smelters of the United States. In 1910 and 1912—I have not the figures for 1911—there were imported 41,750,564 pounds of zinc ore, for which the United States paid $747,554. There was imported free of duty $354,442, making a total of $1,097,996 of American money that was paid for Mexican ore, money that should have been paid to American laborers in our own country at a wage of from five to nine times as high as that which is paid to the laborers in old Mexico for mining ore. [Applause on the Republican side.]

Gentlemen upon this floor represent districts the people of which are mightily interested in this section. I am wondering what they will do. I am wondering how they will vote upon this amendment. I trust that they will vote to continue employment for the thousands of laborers in their districts and for the prosperity of the communities in which they live. [Applause on the Republican side.]

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. Speaker, I move to strike out the last word. We have discovered in four or five of the counties of eastern Tennessee a very valuable zinc ore, and during the last six months more than one-half million dollars have been invested in purchasing these zinc lands, building houses, and so forth. A very large and expensive plant is now in course of construction in Knox County, and the contractors are building 150 houses for the operatives of that plant alone.

Since the passage of the Payne-Aldrich bill Boston or eastern capital has been developing the zinc business in Jefferson County. If this duty written in the Underwood bill becomes a law, that promising industry in eastern Tennessee will be at an end or a suspension of operations until the Republican Party comes back into power four years from now and writes protection for the zinc industry of America.

Not only is Tennessee interested in zinc ore, but Arkansas, Missouri, Kansas, and Oklahoma are interested in it, and the Democratic Member [Mr. DECKER] who represents the Joplin (Mo.) district will, I have no doubt, bear testimony to the fact that thousands of dollars are invested in the zinc industry in his district, and more than 50,000 people in that State are affected directly and indirectly by the growth and prosperity of that industry.

Now, gentlemen, why did you cut this duty to this small amount? Did you do it in the interest of Missouri zinc, Tennessee zinc, Kansas zinc, Oklahoma zinc, or Arkansas zinc? Be honest and tell us if you did not do it in the interest of the New Jersey Zinc Co., which, I understand, has large holdings of zinc lands in Mexico, and its smelter is located on or near tidewater in New Jersey?

I know the Ways and Means Committee, on page 7 of its report, attempts to justify its course in putting coal, iron ore, and bauxite on the free list, and zinc, lead, gypsum, and barytes practically on the free list, under this paragraph of said report:

REDUCTION OF RESOURCES.

That the speedy exhaustion of many natural resources is to be feared unless access to a fresh supply is gained no one who considers the subject from an unbiased standpoint can doubt. This is noticeably true in the case of such articles as timber, ores, minerals, and other substances whose supply can not be increased, and whose exhaustion is merely a question of the rate at which they are taken from their original sources.

Now, listen to this declaration in the Democratic national platform of 1912:

OUR MINERAL RESOURCES.

We rejoice in the inheritance of mineral resources unequaled in extent, variety, or value, and in the development of the mining industry, unequaled in its magnitude and importance.

If that plank in the Democratic national platform about our resources being unlimited is true, why do you propose to go to Mexico for our lead and zinc, to France for our bauxite, Nova Scotia for our coal, and Cuba, Sweden, and Spain for our iron ore?

Oh, you can depress and injure this southern and western industry. You can do it in the interest of American smelters which own cheap ore lands in foreign countries. You may talk here about the "vested and special interests" of this country, and you may criticize the manufacturers of America, but you do not make a single complaint or criticism of the agents and importers who are the representatives of every foreign manufacturer fighting before your committee for a reduction of duty for the benefit of the "vested and special interests" on foreign shores.

Why should not an American manufacturer who puts his capital into the development of our resources, to give employment to our people, to furnish transportation to the railroads, and wages for the laboring people, appeal to the law-making body of this country for a hearing on legislation which affects his business and the interest of the men he gives employment to at the highest known wages. The importers are given hearings. The importers of the great city of New York, seeking to flood the country with foreign goods at the expense of American mills and factories, are heard and heeded. Every line of the bill shows that it is written in the interests of the manufacturers and wage earners across the sea. [Applause on the Republican side.]

Mr. DECKER. Mr. Chairman, the greatest zinc-producing country in the world comprises part of the congressional district which I have the honor to represent. In my district there is also a large agricultural section made up of a loyal and intelligent and patriotic citizenship. For the honor which I have of occupying a seat in this body, I am indebted in a large measure to men engaged in the mining of zinc ore, and especially am I indebted to the men who do the actual work of mining zinc ore. About 14 years ago I went from law school to the city of Joplin, and from that day to this my best personal, professional, and political friends have been the brave men who every morning when the whistles blow go down into the ground with their lamps on their caps and their picks in their hands to dig for their daily bread.

And if I should fail in doing what I think to be for their best interests I would be unworthy of their friendship and their confidence. I told the farmers of my district at the schoolhouses. I told the merchants and the business men in the agricultural towns, I told the miners at the mouths of the shafts, I told them in their homes, I told them in the halls where they assembled to hear me speak, that I was a Democrat, that I did not believe it was the province of Government to tax one man to make another prosperous. I reminded them also that it was the consumer who paid the tariff and that the vast majority of consumers were made up of laboring men; that I believed in a tariff for revenue only; but I told them each and all that so long as the revenue to run this Government was raised by means of a tariff and so long as the brave miners of my district paid a tariff tax to the Federal Government on the hats on their heads, their underclothes, their coats, their pants, their socks, their shoes, the lumber with which they built their homes, their furniture, and the food upon their tables, I would insist that the people of other parts of the United States should also pay a revenue tariff on the only thing which the miners of my district produced.

I did not promise them that in order to get what I thought was the proper tariff on zinc ore I would join with and vote with men who believed in placing exorbitant and prohibitive and unjust tariffs on commodities produced in other parts of this country. I told them plainly that I would not do so, but that I would present their case from the Democratic standpoint of fairness to all the people, and here and now I wish to say that I have kept my pledge.

Since my election I have worked to carry out this pledge. In the Underwood bill of two years ago zinc ore was placed upon the free list. Before the opening of the last session of the Sixty-second Congress, at my own expense, I went to Birmingham, Ala., to place my views before the chairman of the Ways and Means Committee. In season and out of season, publicly and privately, I have presented those views to the other members of the Ways and Means Committee and to the members of the Democratic caucus. The Ways and Means Committee have agreed in part to my views—I do not mean entirely on account of my arguments—and have placed a revenue duty of 10 per cent ad valorem on zinc ore. This was only part of what I asked. I believe I was right when I advocated a higher duty, and I have not changed my views. And I do not apologize to any man—Republican or Democrat—who may differ from me on that proposition. But the great Democratic Party, to which I belong and in whose principles I believe, has been commissioned by the people of this country to revise the tariff, and revise it downward, and I also believe that two-thirds of the Republicans and Progressives believe in a downward revision of the tariff. This bill we are about to pass will affect directly or indirectly over ninety millions of people. If all those people could assemble here for the purpose of writing this bill, there could not be found two out of the ninety millions who would agree in every particular. If out of all the people of this country two men were given authority to make this bill, they could not agree in every particular. And whether this bill were written by ninety millions of people directly or by two people, it would have to be the result of concession and compromise. The only practical way yet devised for the enactment of such a law is for those representatives of the people who believe in the general principles of revision downward to meet together in a caucus, which caucus, after giving a free, fair, and full discussion and vote upon different items, becomes binding.

Gentlemen of the committee, I participated in such a caucus and that caucus after full, fair, and free discussion and vote upon different items has reduced the tariff tax which the miners of my district must pay upon the things which they consume; that caucus has reduced the tariff on hats and pants and socks and shoes, on furniture and on food and lumber, the things which the miners of my district consume, and it has also made a reduction in the tariff tax on zinc ore, the thing which these same miners produce. And while I have not changed my views, and while I still believe that this reduction in the tariff on zinc has been greater than is wise, yet I participated in this caucus and I am going to abide by this caucus. And when the miners of my district understand what I have done and why I have done it, as I will give them to understand, I believe they will approve my course.

I am going to vote for this bill, not only because it has the indorsement of the great Ways and Means Committee, in which the country has confidence, not only because it has been indorsed by this Democratic caucus of which I speak, but also because I believe as a whole it is a good bill and because, in spite of all the Republican prophecies of calamity and distress and in spite of temporary disturbances necessary to readjustments in business, I believe the patriotism of the people of this country is stronger than partisanship, and because I believe that this bill after being passed and perhaps modified and improved by a Democratic Senate, a coordinate branch of this Government, and after being signed by a great Democratic President, will receive the ultimate approval of a benefited people. [Loud applause on the Democratic side.]

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. CAMPBELL].

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. CAMPBELL), there were—ayes 60, noes 98.

So the amendment was rejected.

The Clerk read as follows:

165. Zinc in blocks, pigs, or sheets, and zinc dust; and old and worn-out zinc fit only to be remanufactured, 10 per cent ad valorem.

Mr. CAMPBELL. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment, which I send to the desk and ask to have read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 44, line 20, strike out the paragraph and insert the following in lieu thereof:

"165. Zinc in blocks or pigs and zinc dust, 1¼ cents per pound; in sheets, 1¾ cents per pound; in sheets, coated or plated with nickel or other metal or solutions, 1¾ cents per pound; old and worn-out, fit only to be remanufactured, 1 cent per pound."

Mr. CAMPBELL. Mr. Chairman, the reduction made in the Underwood bill upon the products of the zinc smelter is greater than the reduction made on almost any other industry. There is no labor employed anywhere in the country that works harder than the labor employed in the smelters. They get about four times the wage that the zinc-smelter workers receive in any other country that competes with them in the production of zinc products. They have not been able to compete with the labor that is thus paid a less wage with the rates of duty that are provided even by the present law, for in the last three years great quantities of zinc spelter and zinc sheets and blocks have been imported into the United States, amounting in the aggregate to 31,508,276 pounds, for which the United States paid $1,550,554. There was an ad valorem rate of 32.37 per cent on zinc spelter and blocks so imported, and that rate of duty was paid upon the importation of over 31,000,000 pounds of zinc products for which the United States paid over a million and a half dollars. The reduction is from 32.37 per cent to 10. That will encourage a vastly larger importation of zinc products than we have had heretofore. Zinc ore can be mined in old Mexico, as I stated a moment ago, for from one-fifth to one-ninth of what it can be mined here, taken to Belgium, smelted there, and sent back to Pittsburgh, Pa., the State represented by the gentleman who prepared this schedule, at a less freight rate than zinc spelter can be taken from my district to Pittsburgh, Pa., and I will state here that the State of Pennsylvania, that has large steel industries, consumes 95 per cent of the zinc spelter produced in the United States.

I have sometimes wondered if these great reductions in zinc in all its grades from the zinc ore to the product of zinc ore has been made for the purpose of giving a compensation to the steel industry for the reductions that have been made in the products of that industry in the United States.

Is this a sort of sop to the steel industry? While you take off duties on products of the steel industry you give practically free trade in one of their raw materials. Was that the purpose of reducing the duty on zinc spelter? Will the gentleman from Pennsylvania answer? Why was the reduction made? The people who are interested in the manufacture of zinc spelter have large investments in the industry. The industry will be destroyed, and the factories will undoubtedly close when their product comes in competition with the importations that will come from other countries under the advantages given to imports by this bill. The hundreds of men employed in these industries and their families will suffer. The gentleman from Missouri [Mr. DECKER], who spoke in apology for the vote which he intends to cast against the welfare of the people of his district, gave a thrust at some of the laborers whom he says are employed in my district. He stated there were coal miners there who were there under contract. I challenge him or any other man to designate a single coal miner who is employed in my district under improper contract. He stepped out of his way to make a gratuitous charge against the coal miners in my district he can not sustain. The men of whom he so sneeringly speaks are honest and industrious and are engaged in hazardous employment in which they contribute a large share to the common welfare. Democrats pose as the friends of laboring men, but that friendship is not shown in this bill or by what is said by Democrats in defense of it. [Applause on the Republican side.]

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, my distinguished young friend from Missouri [Mr. DECKER] who made a very eloquent speech a moment ago, in a way congratulated himself, and I think possibly is entitled to congratulation, that he had gotten the Ways and Means Committee to add 10 per cent ad valorem tax on zinc ore, that is produced in his district. Evidently when he had secured this increase from the bill of a year ago his zest cooled, because I find that in the Underwood metal schedule bill of a year ago, while they put zinc ore on the free list, the manufactured product from zinc ore was put upon the dutiable list at 15 per cent ad valorem, while this year, owing to the effort of my distinguished friend from Missouri possibly, they have put zinc ore on the dutiable list at 10 per cent and reduced the duty on the zinc sheets to 10 per cent ad valorem, and where before the raw material was free and a 15 per cent rate put upon the finished product, owing to his endeavors they now put the same rate of duty on the raw material and the finished product, which will probably result not only in the closing of the mines where they produce zinc ore but in the smelting establishments where they produce zinc sheets and blocks and pigs. I congratulate him upon his success. [Laughter and applause on the Republican side.]

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Chairman——

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, does the gentleman want to speak on this paragraph?

Mr. MONDELL. Yes.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate on this paragraph close in five minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Alabama asks unanimous consent that all debate on this paragraph and all amendments thereto close in five minutes. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Chairman, they produce zinc in the district of the gentleman from Kansas, and therefore I think the gentleman from Kansas owes an apology to the gentleman from Alabama for advocating a duty on zinc, because, if I correctly understood the gentleman a moment ago, the doctrine he now pronounces and stands for is that any Member rising on the floor of the House for the purpose of protecting the labor and the industry of his district is thereby a special pleader for special interests and not worthy of a place in the House. To me that is a rather remarkable doctrine. Our sophomoric young friend from Missouri [Mr. DECKER], who did scratch through with a bare majority, admits that he told the people in his district that he would stand for a duty on their products so long as there were duties on other products. I shall leave it to the people of his district to decide whether or no he has kept his word. He cooed mildly here this evening as compared with the way he roared in the caucus, if he is correctly quoted, for there it is said, or has been said by the newspapers, that the gentleman went so far as to criticize a coordinate branch of the Government which holds the veto power for having had too much to do with this tariff, and he insisted that the rate now carried in the bill for which he now proposes to vote would be injurious to the people of his district.

Mr. HARRISON of New York. If the gentleman will yield to me for a moment, I wish to correct an injustice in that respect that was done to the gentleman from Missouri. I was present in the caucus, and no such attack was made by the gentleman from Missouri as was quoted of him in the newspapers.

Mr. HENSLEY. I will say to the gentleman that no reference to the President was made in his speech.

Mr. MANN. If you had an open caucus they would not have had it wrong. [Laughter.]

Mr. MONDELL. I hope the newspapers will apologize to the gentleman from Missouri. I simply made the statement as it was made in the public press, the best evidence available, as the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. SLOAN] suggests. The gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD], pronouncing the new doctrine that we are not to stand for the labor and industries in our districts, referred to the industries in his district by way of illustration—to the industries of his district where rates had been reduced. As the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] has said, the gentleman from Alabama is not called upon to defend himself relative to his action in regard to this bill. However much we disagree with his views and opinions, no man here will and no man elsewhere ought to question his sincerity and his honesty, and I think no one does. And yet I think the gentleman from Alabama would scarcely say that he has placed a rate in this bill that he believes would be destructive of an industry in his district. Down in Alabama they work black men, and they work them mighty cheap, and down in Alabama the coal is on one side of the hill and the ore on the other. And down in Alabama, as the gentleman from that State has told us, they make pig iron cheaper than anywhere else on earth, and, therefore, no rate that the gentleman could fix could injure the industries of his district unless it was absolutely and totally destructive of the industries of the entire balance of the country.

While we all realize and appreciate the fact that the gentleman has not, in framing this bill, attempted to give an industry in his district a rate more than it needs, I repeat that the gentleman from Alabama certainly will not say that he has placed any rate so low that he believes that an industry in his district will be destroyed or seriously injured by that rate. [Applause on the Republican side.]

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Wyoming [Mr. MONDELL] I do not think fully appreciated what I said. I stated awhile ago, when the gentleman from Pennsylvania had offered to put on the free list, or started to put on the free list, an article in which he was interested, and at the same time contended for a higher rate on another article in which he was interested, that I did not impugn his personal motives in the matter, but I thought he had put himself in a rather contradictory position in this House. Now, I do not for one minute contend that any man on the floor of this House, on either side, ought not to represent the constituency that sends him here. But I did say, and I say it now, that he ought not to represent the special interests of his district, whether he is a part of them or whether he is not. That is the distinction. The man who comes here with an open and a free mind and votes what he believes is for the interest of the people of his district and abroad at the same time, and votes for the interests of all the people of the United States, is free to stand here and vote as he pleases without any man having the right to say yea or nay. But when a man stands on this floor from any district in the United States, coming here with the selfish purpose of representing a special interest in his district or in the country and not the interest of the great masses of the people of this country, I say the time has come in the American Congress when this House is not large enough to hold him in the future. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

Mr. MONDELL. I understand the gentleman to say that any Member is justified to stand for in a proper way and uphold the industries of his district, and no man has the right to say him nay. How about the caucus—the secret and binding caucus?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. The difference between some gentlemen on that side of the House—not the gentleman from Wyoming—and men on this side of the House is this: Individualism has broken loose in the ranks of the Republican Party, but not with the gentleman from Wyoming [Mr. MONDELL]. He is an organized soldier. We believe in party government. We believe that the great principles that should govern this Nation can only be written on the statute books by virtue of a united and great party standing for those principles and maintaining them, and for that reason we surrender our individuality to the wisdom and the cohesive strength of a great party, founded on principles that have not only been the foundation of our Republic, but the keystone of the liberty of the people. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

On that side of the House your organization is broken. You once believed in party government; some of you—my friend from Wyoming still believes it—but there are few on that side of the House that are bold enough to stand out and say to-day that they believe in the government by the Republican Party instead of individualism.

Mr. FERRIS. Mr. Chairman, I wonder if the chairman of the Ways and Means Committee has been able to fix the exact date on which the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] and the gentleman from Wyoming [Mr. MONDELL] became such enthusiasts over an open caucus? It must have been very recent.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Well, I will not try to analyze the gentlemen on that side of the House, because you and I know where they stand. There are two that we can be sponsor for on that subject.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. CAMPBELL].

The question was taken, and the amendment was rejected.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

167. All steam engines, steam locomotives, printing presses, and machine tools, 15 per cent ad valorem; embroidering machines, and lace-making machines, including machines for making lace curtains, nets, or nettings, 25 per cent ad valorem; machine tools as used in this paragraph shall be held to mean any machine operated by other than hand power which employs a tool for working on metal.

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New York [Mr. PAYNE] moves to strike out the last word.

Mr. PAYNE. For a great many years in the various tariff bills there were a number of articles that came in under what we called the "catch-all" clause—articles not otherwise provided for—and they escaped in each revision of the tariff without much notice being taken of them and without Members looking through to see what articles came in under that clause. When they had the Wilson bill of 1894 under consideration that paragraph passed without any amendments and without any inquiries being made in regard to it, although our friends on the other side were then, as now, making a tariff bill. [Laughter on the Republican side.]

I take considerable pride in the fact that four years ago the Ways and Means Committee inquired into the various articles that were coming in under that paragraph. They were not enumerated in any way in the Government reports except as "other articles not otherwise provided for." We did not know what they were.

I remember that we had to send for witnesses from the customhouses in the country to find out what articles were coming in under that "catch-all" paragraph, and we got a list of them, as far as we were able. Then, we proceeded to separate them, and thereupon we laid the foundation for paragraph No. 167 of the present bill, now under consideration.

I remember that instead of putting a duty of 45 per cent on steam engines and locomotives and printing presses and machine tools, we put a duty of 30 per cent ad valorem on them. We took off a third of the duty.

By the way, it was pretty difficult to get much account of these articles, as to their comparative cost in this country and foreign countries; but we went about it, and made the best revision we could. Then we took up the question of linotype and typesetting machines, sewing machines, typewriters, and so forth, and reduced the duty to 30 per cent ad valorem.

Then we came to the question of machines for making embroidery. Some few had been imported into the United States, and there was quite a little industry here in connection with them. But it was not what we ought to have in making these machine laces in the country, and so we drew a provision, keeping the duty of 45 per cent on the machines, none of which were made in this country, but providing that until January 1, 1911, they should be on the free list—for two years after the bill went into effect.

The result was that factories were built, these machines were introduced into this country, and this industry was started up and has grown into a great and prosperous industry.

We put the limit of time on it in order to hurry up the starting of the industry. We also enacted a provision that if they did not do it within two years the duty would go back again. We believed that of course it would enable them to start the industry quickly, and that at the same time it would be a sort of protection to the machines that came here. We got enough of them at that time to cover the industry, and now I see that my friends have put a duty of 25 per cent on these lace-making machines. Probably that is a sufficient duty.

We put on printing presses a duty of 30 per cent. The Democratic Congress put them on the free list a year ago. They had them again on the free list when this present bill now under consideration was first reported in the newspapers this year. They put them on the free list, I say, along with paper for printing newspapers and magazines. Of course it was only a coincidence that it happened to be that that was a proper thing to do in a revenue tariff bill. [Laughter on the Republican side.]

Type were also put at a lower rate of duty on this bill, and that was only another coincidence. [Renewed laughter on the Republican side.] Perish the thought that the gentlemen who fixed these duties had any idea that they were going to get special favors for their people or for themselves or for their party in consequence of putting these things on the free list! [Renewed laughter on the Republican side.]

We put print paper on the dutiable list because we thought the manufacture of print paper was an industry that ought to be protected, and we are protectionists. We left this duty on printing presses because we thought the manufacture of those presses was an industry that ought to be protected in this country.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from New York has expired.

Mr. PAYNE. I would like to have one more minute.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the gentleman from New York will proceed for one minute.

There was no objection.

Mr. PAYNE. Now, the gentlemen in the committee and in the caucus changed the item and took printing presses suddenly from the free list one day and put on them a duty of 15 per cent. Of course they did not do it for the sake of protecting the industry! Oh, no! I was receiving every day copies of letters sent to the chairman of the committee protesting on the part of the manufacturers of these presses that the industry would be wiped out unless they kept on the duty of 30 per cent. They restored at least half the duty, but that action had no connection with the action of the committee or the action of the caucus, and did not even soften the rigorous mind of the President of the United States. [Laughter on the Republican side.]

Mr. MANN. Oh, no!

Mr. PAYNE. Not at all. It was a proper revenue duty at 15 per cent, and they even dared to brave the anger of the daily papers and the muckraking magazines and all that sort of thing. But what I want to do is to call the attention of that side of the House, as I have for the last two days, to the fact that the Payne bill was a revision downward on these articles; and I have called attention now to different items in the bill, enough to convince any man with an open mind and an honest mind, so that he will admit the fact that it was, as it proved to be from the statistics for the last four years, the greatest revision downward ever made in any tariff bill in the United States. [Applause on the Republican side and laughter on the Democratic side.]

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate on this paragraph and amendments thereto close in five minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Alabama asks unanimous consent that debate on this paragraph and amendments thereto close in five minutes. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. J. M. C. SMITH. Mr. Chairman, I desire to ask the gentleman from Alabama a question.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. J. M. C. SMITH. I received a letter a few days ago inquiring about steam pumps. A gentleman who manufactures them wants to know whether they would be classified under section 167, at 15 per cent, or under 169, at 25 per cent.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. They have always been in the basket clause, 169, at 25 per cent.

Mr. J. M. C. SMITH. I am very much obliged to the gentleman.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. The duty on the basket clause has been reduced from 45 to 25 per cent, and steam pumps fall in that catalogue.

I desire to occupy the time of the House for a few minutes only on the question of machine tools.

The bill which we reported last year had machine tools on the free list. The Payne bill carried them at the rate of 30 per cent ad valorem.

There are about $50,000,000 production of machine tools in this country, of which $5,000,000 are exported abroad. A portion of these exports of machine tools go to Germany, where they pay an 8 per cent tariff duty to get into that country after paying the freight.

When the committee first considered this question they believed that an industry that could send one-tenth of its product abroad, pay a tariff rate to get into another country, and compete there needed no duty here and that we could not get revenue from it. On further investigation we found out that the facts I have stated were absolutely true as to the highly organized machine tools; but we also found that there were some lower grades of machine tools that to a slight extent were now imported and that would probably be imported under a low rate of duty. We considered the question of endeavoring to differentiate between the highly organized machine tools and the low-grade machine tools. There was no point where we could establish a dividing line, and therefore, in order to be on the safe side of the question and levy a rate that would produce some revenue, and believing that this 15 per cent on machine tools would produce some revenue, we concluded that we would be conservative in the matter and cut the rate in the Payne bill from 30 per cent to 15 per cent.

I have no apology to make for the committee changing its rate from the bill of last year to the rate of this year. If the Ways and Means Committee should make up its mind that it could not err and should never change, it would undoubtedly be disqualified for performing the functions that are imposed on it by this House; and although I have some doubt myself now as to whether this industry really needs this 15 per cent, or as to how far it will be competitive, I think it was safer to put the 15 per cent rate in and try it out and see the result, although I am doubtful as to whether they would have been seriously hurt if we had put them absolutely on the free list.

Mr. COOPER. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Yes.

Mr. COOPER. Did I understand the gentleman to say that he was undecided still as to whether this machine-tool industry needed this 15 per cent protection?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. No; I did not say I was undecided. I said I was in doubt.

Mr. COOPER. As to whether this industry needed this 15 per cent protection.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I did not say protection. [Applause and laughter on the Republican side.]

Mr. COOPER. The gentleman said whether the industry needed this 15 per cent—for what?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. For what?

Mr. COOPER. The gentleman from Alabama said he was undecided as to whether this machine-tool industry needed this 15 per cent. What did he mean?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I did not mean "what."

Mr. COOPER. If the industry needed 15 per cent, it meant 15 per cent protection, because the industry would not get the revenue.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I will tell the gentleman. I was in doubt as to whether we should make this reduction gradually by cutting it in half, or put it absolutely on the free list, and I am free to say that I am in doubt now as to which would be the proper position; but we resolved the doubt in favor of 15 per cent.

I ask for a vote.

The CHAIRMAN. The pro forma amendment will be withdrawn, and the Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

168. Nippers and pliers of all kinds wholly or partly manufactured, 30 per cent ad valorem.

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. Nippers and pliers in this paragraph carry a duty of 30 per cent and machine tools in the former paragraph a duty of 15 per cent; they were free in the former Underwood bill. These tools are all of a somewhat similar character, so far as their manufacture is concerned. I do not understand why the gentleman from Alabama had difficulty in determining whether machine tools needed 15 per cent duty when he has seen fit to place 30 per cent duty on nippers and pliers, and I am wondering if the manufacture of one of these two articles constitutes what the gentleman from Alabama refers to as a special interest.

The gentleman, a few moments ago, somewhat modified his statement made earlier as to what it was proper for us to do in defending the labor and industry of our district. He now suggests that it is proper to do that, and our duty to do it, except that we must not stand for special interests. I am anxious to know when I am right and when I am wrong. I want to analyze his theory from the standpoint of my own district.

About half the people in my district and State are interested one way or the other, directly or indirectly, in the growing of sheep and wool—in the prosperity of the industry. I have no interest in it personally at all. Is that a special interest? Perhaps 25 per cent of the people in my district are more or less interested in growing cattle and horses. I own a Shetland pony and a few milk cows. Otherwise I have no personal interest. Is that a special interest? We mine coal in the State of Wyoming, and we are the only State except West Virginia that is hard hit by this bill through placing coal on the free list. I have no interest in coal mines. Is that a special interest?

We are looking forward to the time when we can have sugar-beet factories. We have them in the neighboring States. I have no sugar-beet land, and have no personal interest in the growing of sugar beets. Is that a special interest?

The difference between the gentleman from Alabama and myself is that I assume that I was sent here as a Representative of my district to do those things that I can honestly do and do in accordance with my declared purpose, and in accordance with the policy outlined and declared by my party to aid in the development of my State and in the maintenance of favorable wage conditions among my people and do it openly, while he seems to believe that the proper thing to do is to disavow any effort on behalf of his own people. I think he will hardly claim that he really intends injury to come to them.

I do not understand that these interests of my people are special interests, and if they be they are my special interests and it is my special duty here to protect them so far as I am able to do so, and consistently with the interests of all. I do not stop at the boundaries of my State, but I stand as ready and willing to give the same adequate protection to the labor and industry of every other State that I ask for the labor and industry of my State. It will be a sad day for the American people when it shall be held that it is not proper for a representative of the people to stand here and protest when they believe in their hearts that proposed legislation is not only going to injure them but it is going to be injurious to the entire body of the people. The Republican doctrine of protection is not a haphazard thing, striking here and helping there and protecting and building up one region and industry and withholding needed protection elsewhere, but a mosaic of prosperity and plenty, a beautiful picture of fair rewards to every industry and every labor under the flag. [Applause on the Republican side.]

Mr. STANLEY. Mr. Chairman, I do not wish to enter into any controversy with the chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, nor did I mean to reflect in any way in the statement I made this afternoon in reference to the employment of labor in the Tennessee Coal & Iron Co., in the great State of Alabama or the city of Birmingham.

Mr. MILLER. Mr. Chairman, I do not propose to object to the gentleman's speaking; in fact I invite it, and I hope the gentleman will have the privilege extended to him by the House; but I call attention to the fact that the gentleman from Kentucky has been speaking on a subject in which he is interested and has convictions upon three times already without addressing himself to a paragraph in the bill.

I had the privilege of speaking twice. He and I had a little colloquy respecting some of the remarks he chose to make. I am not averse to continuing that. I shall be pleased to continue it. I invite it, but I do ask the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD], if the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. STANLEY] is to have this additional time, to not object to giving me the courtesy of 10 minutes—5 minutes that he has already used and 5 minutes that he proposes to use now—in order that I may present my side of the case.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I give notice now that I shall insist upon the enforcement of the rule in reference to the pertinency of debate until 11 o'clock, and after that I hope we will adjourn until to-morrow.

Mr. STANLEY. Mr. Chairman, I do not propose to make any speech or any reference to the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. MILLER]. I have put the facts in the RECORD, and that is all that is necessary.

Mr. MILLER. Mr. Chairman, I desire to reply to those figures that the gentleman put in the RECORD.

Mr. STANLEY. I decline to be interrupted.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Kentucky is recognized and will proceed in order.

Mr. STANLEY. Mr. Chairman, I wish to state that the statements I made were from the sworn testimony of Mr. Harrison, of the Sage Foundation——

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order at this time of the night that the gentleman is not proceeding in order.

Mr. STANLEY. I hope the gentleman will indulge me half a minute. I am not going to make a speech.

Mr. MANN. I withhold the point of order for half a minute.

Mr. STANLEY. They were made by Mr. Harrison, of the Sage Foundation, from his own personal observation, giving the number of convicts in mines, the offenses for which they were committed, the place from which they were taken, the circumstances under which they were held, and he states they were there for petty misdemeanors committed in the county in which the city of Birmingham is located, and he gives the number of them and the character of their imprisonment, and the persons in charge of them, and so forth. I will ask to put Mr. Harrison's statement in the RECORD, not as contradicting the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] but as showing the authority from which I quoted. I would not desire to enter into any discussion with the gentleman from Alabama.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I will say to the gentleman that I did not challenge his statement to-day that there were convicts working in the mines or that there were men convicted of criminal offenses in my county, just as there are in every other county in the United States; but the gentleman from Kentucky stated that these great iron factories were being worked by convict labor.

Mr. STANLEY. Oh, no; I beg the gentleman's pardon.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. That is what the gentleman stated, and that they were dragneting the streets of Birmingham—and he referred to the district of the gentleman from Minnesota in the same way—for the purpose of gathering together this labor to produce these iron products. I would state to the gentleman—I do not like to say it again, but I said it before—that there never has been a convict worked in any of these foundries or factories. In some coal mines that do not produce anything but coal for domestic purposes there are convicts working, but they are not working in these blast furnaces; and the thing I objected to in the gentleman's statement was that it was a reflection on my constituency, and that the statement, whether it comes from the gentleman who is named in that book or otherwise, does not represent truthfully the condition in my district.

Mr. STANLEY. Mr. Chairman, I do not wish to raise any question as between the gentleman and myself upon that point. I simply wish to put the authority for my statements in the RECORD, as he purported to speak from his own personal knowledge. He may be very incorrect. I do not know, but in justice to myself I wish to have my authority for the statements put in the RECORD.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

Mr. MANN. The gentleman has the authority under the leave to print.

The CHAIRMAN. The leave to print is upon the bill.

Mr. MANN. I stated before that I would object to any special leaves to print in the House, when general leave has been granted.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair of course does not know whether it would be construed to be on the bill or not.

Mr. MANN. I presume the gentleman could get it in the RECORD if he furnished it to the proper parties.

Mr. STANLEY. It is only a page or two.

Mr. MANN. The gentleman has general leave to print, and there will be no special leave granted.

The statement referred to by Mr. STANLEY is as follows:

STATEMENT OF SHELBY M. HARRISON.

The witness was duly sworn by the chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. In connection with what Mr. Reed has just said I have tried to be especially careful in going into this very question not to produce witnesses who have had an obsession on the subject or who were prejudiced or who had any grievance against the corporation, because I hope, above all things, to present a cool, unimpassioned account of this condition as it exists.

When Mr. Fitch was on the stand he said something about having submitted his book and other papers from which he quoted and from which Mr. Brandeis quoted to the Steel Corporation and its officials. Do you know whether your report, about which I shall ask you later, was submitted to the Steel Corporation and its officials?

Mr. HARRISON. I do. It is the policy of the magazine. Of course, as you know, one of the editors of the magazine is a man who was a director of the Pittsburgh Survey under which these other investigations were made, Mr. Fitch's being one.

It is the policy of both the magazine and the Pittsburgh Survey to submit any articles or manuscripts for books which would be critical of any particular company or particular person to that person or company before publication, for several reasons, one being to give an opportunity for the person or company criticized to correct any misstatement of fact.

The purpose of the investigation was to correct conditions that might be viewed by the public as unwholesome. It would not be working along any scientific method toward the solution of these problems if a misstatement of the problem were made. So the first purpose of the Survey was to be sure of its facts.

It, of course, did not always expect the people to whom the manuscripts were submitted to agree with the interpretation of the facts or with the conclusions drawn from the facts. That was a matter of opinion. It did expect, however, that the people to whom the manuscripts were submitted would agree to facts which were facts and which they could not disprove.

So Mr. Fitch's manuscript for his book was submitted to the president of several of the subsidiary companies in the Pittsburgh district who were directly mentioned in the book or in the manuscript. I am of the opinion that it was submitted to some of the New York men. I am not quite sure of that. I know that in his recent articles they have been given to Mr. Bolling in the New York office.

My article in manuscript form was submitted to George Gordon Crawford.

The CHAIRMAN. Who is he?

Mr. HARRISON. He is president of the Tennessee Coal, Iron & Railroad Co.; to Mr. George B. McCormick, president of the Alabama Coal Operators' Association; Mr. James G. Oakley, president of the Board of Convict Inspectors of Alabama, and a number of other people who would view it from a different side. These were employers.

Of course, I submitted it, then, to the men who might know the prison and crime problem purely from a crime-problem side and not from a labor side.

* * * * * * *

The CHAIRMAN. Who are connected with this Charities Publication Committee? Who are the people who are behind this matter for whom you are working; do you know?

* * * * * * *

Mr. HARRISON. Robert W. De Forest, chairman, New York. Other members of the committee: Jane Addams, Chicago; Ernest P. Bicknell, Washington; Robert S. Brewster, New York; Charles M. Cabot, Boston; O. K. Cushing San Francisco; Edward T. Devine, New York; Arthur F. Estabrook, Boston; Lee K. Frankel, New York; James M. Glenn, New York; William Guggenheim, New York; William E. Harmon, New York; Joseph Lee, Boston; Julian W. Mack, Washington; Simon N. Patten, Philadelphia; Jacob A. Riis, New York; Graham Taylor, Chicago; S. W. Woodward, Washington; Frank Tucker, treasurer, New York; Paul U. Kellogg, secretary, New York.

The CHAIRMAN. Have you ever made a personal investigation of the labor conditions in any subsidiary of the United States Steel Corporation?

Mr. HARRISON. I investigated the handling of criminals in the State of Alabama, and it touched on the labor conditions in the Tennessee Coal & Iron Co., inasmuch as they hire some city and county convicts.

The CHAIRMAN. Under what auspices were you acting at that time?

Mr. HARRISON. Under the auspices of the Survey Magazine.

Mr. REED. Did you say that they "hired" convicts, or that they hire them now?

Mr. HARRISON. At the time I made my investigation they had in their employ State and county convicts.

* * * * * * *

The CHAIRMAN. What number of convicts were then in the employ of the Tennessee Coal & Iron Co.?

Mr. HARRISON. They, of course, vary almost from day to day, because as fast as men are convicted they are brought into the camp, and of course men are continually serving out their time and going away, but the average was about 360 State convicts and 240 county.

Mr. MCGILLICUDDY. Did the witness fix the time of this?

Mr. HARRISON. In May and June.

Mr. MCGILLICUDDY. Of last year?

Mr. HARRISON. Of last year, 1911; yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. How many of the convicts, county and State, were there who were employed in all the mines about at that time?

Mr. HARRISON. For the last five years the total number of convicts in the State, the average per year throughout the State, was about 2,500 State convicts and 700 county convicts. About 200 of these were men who were not able to work, mostly tubercular convicts, who were in the prison at Wetumpka, which is practically a tuberculosis camp, leaving 3,000, and, roughly, 1,500 of those were contracted out into the coal mines, which means they went into the Birmingham district, because that is where all the coal mines are located.

The CHAIRMAN. What per cent of this 1,500 who were utilized as miners did the Tennessee Coal & Iron Co. secure at the time you were there?

Mr. HARRISON. Three hundred and sixty and 240 makes 600; 600 would be 40 per cent of 1,500.

Mr. BEALL. Did the 1,500 represent the State and county convicts?

Mr. HARRISON. Together; yes.

Mr. BARTLETT. Let us understand right here what you mean by State convicts and county convicts.

Mr. HARRISON. The distinction is—at least it is supposed to be—that the State convict is a man who has committed a more serious crime than a county convict, a felony, whereas a county convict is a misdemeanant.

Mr. BARTLETT. The county convicts are those who are tried, probably in the inferior courts, for misdemeanors or small-grade felonies, and the State convicts are those who are tried in the courts having exclusive jurisdiction of felonies, or where people are convicted of felonies in the higher courts.

Mr. HARRISON. That is my impression. I am not certain of the legal side of the matter entirely. I know that the county convicts are men who are convicted of lesser crimes.

The CHAIRMAN. Of lesser crimes than a felony?

Mr. HARRISON. Of lesser crimes than a felony; yes.

Mr. BARTLETT. State convicts are those that are sentenced by the court to the penitentiary or to such public works as the superintendent of the penitentiary or those having charge of it may direct, and the county convicts are those who are hired out—I suppose that is so in Alabama; it has been so in Georgia—by the county authorities, who are convicted and subjected to the payment of a fine or alternative imprisonment. Is that about right?

Mr. HARRISON. Yes.

Mr. BARTLETT. And in the first case the State gets the pay or the hire, and in the other it goes to the county authorities?

Mr. HARRISON. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. Right at this point, speaking of the offenses for which these county convicts are sent up: It is an offense punishable by fine or imprisonment, is it not, to do such things as shooting or hunting or gaming or card playing, playing at cards or dominoes or racing, whether for money or not, on the Sabbath day? Those are offenses punishable by a fine of from $10 to $20 or imprisonment in the State of Alabama?

Mr. HARRISON. If you are reading the statement I made there?

The CHAIRMAN. Yes.

Mr. HARRISON. That is true. I have not all of that quite at my fingers' ends. That statement is true.

The CHAIRMAN (reading). Any person or persons who play or engage in the playing of any baseball, or foot ball, or tennis, or golf on Sunday in any public place where people resort for such purposes, is guilty of a misdemeanor and may be fined from $20 to $50.

Mr. HARRISON. That is true.

The CHAIRMAN. It is against the law to walk on the right of way of a railroad?

Mr. HARRISON. I understand that men have been arrested and sentenced to prison for doing that in the past, but that the authorities have been a little more lenient in the last year or two because of one very unfortunate incident where a small boy, or a young boy, had been arrested for trespassing on the railroad track, and sent up for 60 days; and he was sent to the mine. He knew nothing of mining and nothing of its dangers, and he got in the way of a car and had his leg cut off, and was crippled for life for this very small offense. That has been, so I am told, more or less of a lesson, and they have been a little less strict in enforcing that law since.

Mr. BARTLETT. Do you mean that the misdemeanor convicts in Alabama, the county convicts, as you have designated them, were worked in the mines, Mr. Harrison?

Mr. HARRISON. I do.

The CHAIRMAN. There was an accident occurred in one of those mines a short time ago, was there not?

Mr. HARRISON. Yes; there was an explosion at the Banner Mine.

The CHAIRMAN. Was anybody hurt?

Mr. HARRISON. One hundred and twenty-three men were killed.

The CHAIRMAN. Were any of these the county convicts, sent up for these petty offenses, like playing golf on Sunday, walking on the railroad tracks, and so on?

Mr. HARRISON. I have a statement here of the percentage. Perhaps I might best read that paragraph:

"Last April 123 negro convicts working in the Banner Mine, operated at that time by the Pratt Consolidated Coal Co., were instantly killed by an explosion. Seventy-two of the convicts were from Jefferson County, in which Birmingham is located; 21 out of the 72, or 30 per cent, were convicted of offenses so minor that their sentences, aside from costs, did not exceed 20 days—mainly for carrying concealed weapons, gaming, assault, vagrancy, or violating the prohibition law. Five others were serving sentences of 30 days, and 1 man was within 3 days of his release when he was killed. Another had been convicted only 5 days before the explosion. One hundred and twenty-three persons in the custody of the State, without voice as to the nature of their work, lost their lives in serving their sentences."

Those were county convicts. That gives some indication of the type of the offenses.

Mr. BARTLETT. It is true that in a majority of these cases of what you call misdemeanor convicts, they are sentenced to pay a fine, or, in default thereof, to be punished as they are punished?

Mr. HARRISON. Yes.

Mr. BARTLETT. The fine is imposed, and in default of that they must work it out?

Mr. HARRISON. They must work it out; yes.

Mr. BARTLETT. In the mines, according to the law of Alabama?

Mr. HARRISON. Yes. You understand that not all men are sent to the mines, however.

Mr. BARTLETT. That is what I am trying to get at.

Mr. HARRISON. No. I say that 50 per cent of the convicts are sent to the coal mines, and that some of them are sent to the turpentine camps. The State has a farm where it has a couple of hundred, and they have a stove factory where some of them are employed.

* * * * * * *

The CHAIRMAN. How are these convicts sent up for misdemeanors procured? In what way are they obtained? How does the Tennessee Coal & Iron Co. and these other companies get hold of them? That is what I want to know.

Mr. HARRISON. The contracts are advertised, and the companies bid for them. They are let to the highest bidder.

The CHAIRMAN. These people are just put up and sold to the highest bidder?

Mr. HARRISON. They contract for the convicts for a certain length of time, and they take all that the county has; that is, of course, they keep coming as fast as they are convicted.

The CHAIRMAN. They agree, in advance, to take the supply, whatever it may be?

Mr. HARRISON. They do.

The CHAIRMAN. No matter what they are convicted for, how long or how short the term, if they have any term of imprisonment, they take them and work out that term, is that it?

Mr. HARRISON. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. Whether they are old or young, black or white, convicted of a felony or anything else?

Mr. HARRISON. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. How do they get these people into these mining camps? Does the State or the county send them there, or do they get them?

Mr. HARRISON. The State brings the State convicts, and mining camps—the companies—send a man to the county seat where a man is convicted, and bear the expense of the man, of course, that they send, and the convicts to the camp, and upon his release they send him back to his county seat, bearing the expense, and sending a man with him.

The CHAIRMAN. After these people are procured and gotten into these camps, how are they retained there?

Mr. HARRISON. Of course they have a prison, something, at least, that is called a prison, with a wall around it. The men are kept in prison when they are not at work. When they are at work they are in the mines, where the guarding is very easy, and escape is rather difficult there.

* * * * * * *

The CHAIRMAN. What do they pay for these convicts, county and State?

Mr. HARRISON. The State convicts are paid more or less on a piece basis. I mean to say that the companies pay by the month for men in the different task groups. The average comes somewhere near the common labor rate for State convicts.

The CHAIRMAN. Do you know what they pay for State convicts? Those guilty of a felony?

Mr. HARRISON. I know what the Tennessee Co. pays.

The CHAIRMAN. What does the Tennessee Co. pay?

Mr. HARRISON. The Tennessee Co. made a contract several years ago in which it agreed to pay $46 per month per man in the first class, and there was a gradual lowering of the rate down to a man in the fourth class for which it paid $10.50. They also, at the same time, agreed to a sliding scale in practice which would slide upward and not downward; that is, any increases in the wage paid to free labor in the district would cause a proportionate raise of payment for the convicts; and since this contract went into effect there have been increases in the free labor in the district which have brought the payment for men in the first class from $46 to $50.70 per month, for men in the fourth class to $11.57.

The CHAIRMAN. What do they pay a month for these county convicts, the young fellows?

Mr. HARRISON. They vary between different companies, but the average was estimated to me by the president of the Alabama Coal Operators' Association as $12.50 per man per month; I should say per person per month, as that includes men, women, and youths.

The CHAIRMAN. Do they feed these county convicts? Does the company do it, or does the State do it?

Mr. HARRISON. The company does.

The CHAIRMAN. Do you know what it costs to feed those convicts per day?

Mr. HARRISON. I do not know.

The CHAIRMAN. Do you know about what it costs?

Mr. HARRISON. I know what it costs to feed the men in the county jails before they are sent to the camps. That cost runs from 7 to 10 cents, depending upon the number of men.

Mr. BARTLETT. Per day.

Mr. HARRISON. Per day, depending upon the number of men. I should say that the convicts in the camps are fed better than that. My guess would be—if you care for a guess?

The CHAIRMAN. An estimate.

Mr. HARRISON. About 15 cents a day.

The CHAIRMAN. About 15 cents a day to feed them?

Mr. HARRISON. Yes.

* * * * * * *

Mr. MCGILLICUDDY. Who provides the lodging?

Mr. HARRISON. The company.

The CHAIRMAN. I was going to take that up.

They are also provided with lodging?

Mr. HARRISON. By the companies—the company owns the prison.

The CHAIRMAN. What sort of lodging do they get? How are they housed, bedded, and so on? Just describe those places in which they keep them at night.

Mr. HARRISON. The prison consists, usually, of a frame building.

Mr. BARTLETT. Is this the Steel Corporation that he is talking about?

The CHAIRMAN. Yes; this is the Tennessee Coal & Iron Co., alone, that I am talking about.

Mr. YOUNG. I understood the witness to be talking about conditions generally, there. Is not that correct, Mr. Harrison?

Mr. HARRISON. I was talking with regard to the food—about conditions in general; yes.

Mr. YOUNG. Yes.

Mr. HARRISON. You understand I did not go down there to investigate the Steel Corporation convict system as a system. I investigated the whole system of handling criminals in Alabama.

The CHAIRMAN. Did you see the food as it was prepared in the kitchens, or anywhere, of the Steel Corporation?

Mr. HARRISON. I saw food that was being prepared in the prison at mine No. 12 of the Tennessee Co. That prison, however, housed the State convicts that were employed by the Tennessee Co. I was told there by the men who were preparing the food what was the customary daily ration.

The CHAIRMAN. For both county and State convicts?

Mr. HARRISON. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. Tell me about how they are housed in the barracks or prison, or whatever you choose to call it, of the Tennessee Coal & Iron Co. there in Alabama; how these convicts are provided for, at night.

Mr. HARRISON. They are housed in prisons, as I say, which are made up of large cells; they call them cells; they are really large rooms, which accommodate from 30 to 60 men. The sanitary conditions in those that I saw were good. The beds were double beds, two men sleeping in a bed.

The CHAIRMAN. How many men in a bed?

Mr. HARRISON. Two or three.

The CHAIRMAN. How are these beds made? What do they consist of? Are they oak bedsteads, or brass bedsteads, or what kind of bedsteads do they sleep in?

Mr. HARRISON. They are rather simple bedsteads. I do not think they are oak. I think they have a pine framework, with some kind of strapping underneath, ropes and canvas.

Mr. BARTLETT. Bed cords?

Mr. HARRISON. Yes; with a tick and blanket and pillow.

The CHAIRMAN. What is in the tick?

Mr. HARRISON. I can only say that my impression is that it is straw. I did not open any of them.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the pro forma amendment will be considered as withdrawn. All debate upon this paragraph is closed by order of the committee a few moments ago. The Clerk will read.

Mr. MANN. There was no order of the committee in regard to this paragraph.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair is mistaken.

Mr. MILLER. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the House, I regret exceedingly to weary the patience of the committee at this hour by making any further reference to a subject that has already been discussed to-day. I fear, however, I have been guilty perhaps of an injustice to the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr.

STANLEY], and I desire this opportunity to express my exceeding regret that I have possibly been placed in that attitude. I have perhaps done that injustice to him because it may have been assumed in something I have said that he was not intending to be fair. Whatever may have been his habitual conduct heretofore in this respect I am quite sure his conduct to-day has entirely disproved any such suggestion I might possibly have erroneously indulged in, because he had generously, completely, beautifully, and magnificently placed in the RECORD a table of figures which absolutely disprove the statement he made and absolutely prove the contention that I put forth.

The gentleman started with his fundamental proposition that nine-tenths of the men who work in the mines of Minnesota, particularly specifying the Mesabi district, were a coming-and-going crowd of individuals who did not stay there for a period of five years. I quote from the table which he has placed in the RECORD to substantiate his position, and I find that in the Mesabi Range from that record there were 13,289 American citizens [applause on the Republican side] born in America and only 17,310 of foreign birth, and I ask and invite the gentleman's attention to the further fact that if it shall be considered those of the 17,000 who have been naturalized, more than 75 per cent are American citizens to-day swearing allegiance to the American flag. [Applause on the Republican side.] He said that not 5 per cent had been in this country five years, and yet the table that he submitted shows that more than 12 per cent had been there for more than 10 years, practically dating from the time of the beginning of the development of that region, and that 32 per cent had been there for a greater period of time than five years. Furthermore, Mr. Chairman, the table which he submitted bears this astounding fact, that of the 10,000 employees of the Steel Corporation included in that report, 30 per cent are American citizens of the Lake Superior district entirely. I said 30 per cent American citizens, I mean 30 per cent American-born people, and the number naturalized is not included; and if we will extend that and include those who are naturalized you will find that 70 to 75 per cent is a fair estimate. From the men who are engaged in those mines, who, with skilled hands, managed the steam shovels that dug that ore, were taken the men who for the last five years have dug the Panama Canal, and the world does not furnish their superior. That skill which enabled them to perform that part in that great international epoch-making work they learned in the ore mines of Minnesota, and their brethren left there are their equals in skilled strength, American courage, manhood, and spirit. [Applause on the Republican side.]

I want to call the gentleman's attention to a further fact, that these miners, from their earnings, each stepped up when work was over, with his candle in his hat and his begrimed suit of oilcloth on his person, and dropped into a common fund from his hard earnings the sum that built the first monument ever erected by human hands to the memory of the martyred President of the United States, William McKinley. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. MILLER. Can I have two minutes more?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I would like to indulge the gentleman, but, Mr. Chairman, I move that all debate on the paragraph close.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Alabama moves that all debate on the paragraph be now closed.

The question was taken, and the motion was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

169. Articles or wares not specially provided for in this section; if composed wholly or in part of platinum, gold, or silver, and articles or wares plated with gold or silver, and whether partly or wholly manufactured, 50 per cent ad valorem; if composed wholly or in chief value of iron, steel, lead, copper, nickel, pewter, zinc, aluminum, or other metal, but not plated with gold or silver, and whether partly or wholly manufactured, 25 per cent ad valorem.

Mr. BARTLETT, Mr. HEFLIN, and Mr. GREENE of Massachusetts rose.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. GREENE] is recognized.

Mr. GREENE of Massachusetts. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Massachusetts offers an amendment which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend, paragraph 169, on page 45, line 20, by striking out the figures "25" and inserting the figures "45."

Mr. GREENE of Massachusetts. Mr. Chairman, in speaking on the amendment which I have offered I speak at the request of constituents whom I do not know, but they say to me that they voted the Democratic ticket in November last, and probably they did not vote for me.

Mr. MANN. They never will vote the Democratic ticket again.

Mr. GREENE of Massachusetts. In North Attleboro there are 104 men who supported the Democratic Party during the recent electoral campaign who asked me to use my good offices against any reduction in the rate of duty now levied upon jewelry, silverware, and kindred products should changes in tariff rates be contemplated. They speak of the necessity of maintaining the present schedules on account of North Attleboro being entirely dependent upon the industry of the manufacture of jewelry and the large variety of ornaments, buckles, and many of the specialties included in the metal schedule. As I have said, there are 104 men who claim that they voted the Democratic ticket, and not one of them do I know personally.

I also have a petition from the Democratic town committee of North Attleboro, a committee elected by Democratic voters of the town at the election in November, in order to promote the best interests of the Democratic Party, and they make a request of a similar nature to me, and they ask me to prevent any changes from those existing in the present law.

I also have a petition from the board of trade of the town of North Attleboro, which, of course, is entirely nonpartisan.

I also have a petition from the Democratic town committee of Attleboro, a committee elected by the Democratic voters of that town to promote the best interests of the Democratic Party, to the same effect as heretofore stated, and also a petition from the Democratic town committee of the town of Norton, which is in the district which I have the honor to represent, and the petition is of the same nature as those to which I have heretofore referred. I have not spoken to a single Democrat in either one of these towns in regard to any measure, unless they were present when I carried on my campaign last fall for nomination and election upon the Republican ticket. On each of these occasions I announced myself as a Republican who believed in protection to American industries and American labor, and as one who had stood upon every Republican platform from the time of Abraham Lincoln down to the present time [applause on the Republican side], and stated that I had voted for every Republican candidate for President.

And I also informed them that I had voted for the Payne-Aldrich Tariff Act, which I believed was the most beneficial act for the people of the district which I had the honor to represent that had ever been put upon the statute books. I made no apology to anybody for anything I thought or said, but I said if any Democrat wanted to vote for me, he must not vote for me thinking there were any Democratic ideas in my mind. [Applause on the Republican side.]

I received a number of Democratic votes, although I did not agree with the principles of the voters of that party, but I believed that those who would vote for me believed at least I was honest in my views. So I appear here to-night on the request of the Democrats of the district I represent, men who are interested in the jewelry business, probably some of them as owners and others as workers in that industry. There are more than 130 jewelry factories in these three towns above referred to. Consequently the metal schedule is of vast importance to them, and all the work they do requires great skill to prepare for the market the great varieties of goods which their employers find a market for. They do this work for the purpose of maintaining the life of the towns, and they say distinctly that if this bill as prepared goes into effect it will work very injuriously to their material interests. I appear here as a Representative upon this floor entitled to speak in behalf of constituents, certainly, to whom I owe no obligation, and who owe none to me. [Applause on the Republican side.]

The following are the petitions to which I referred in the foregoing remarks:

NORTH ATTLEBORO, MASS., December 30, 1912.

To the COMMITTEE ON WAYS AND MEANS,
United States House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

HONORABLE SIRS: In view of the proposed legislation on the customs tariff, the undersigned, who one and all supported the Democratic Party during the recent electoral campaign, take the liberty of asking you to use your good offices against any reduction in the rate of duty now levied upon jewelry, silverware, and kindred products should such reduction be contemplated.

As you are aware, the Attleboros practically owe their existence as manufacturing towns to the establishment and maintenance of the great jewelry and silverware industries, which are possible only under a tariff which will equalize the difference in the cost of labor and overhead charges between the United States and foreign countries. In these lines the difference is so enormous that even with the present duty of 85 per cent the competition has been exceedingly keen, and we are informed that even with the seemingly high duty the imports have greatly increased over those of preceding years.

A reduction in the tariff even to a small degree would therefore mean greatly increased foreign competition, with consequent lessening of our output and scarcity of work.

It is a fact that under the construction put upon the present paragraph relating to our products, by which the duty has been reduced, whole lines of articles have been discontinued, and we greatly fear and believe that any further reduction will result in the curtailment or, indeed, the actual closing down of our factories, with enforced idleness and distress.

It is unnecessary to point out to you how vital this matter is to us as workmen in these factories, and we urge you most earnestly to do your utmost to prevent any reduction in this duty.

John J. Soper, Albert Green, Wm. B. Maloney, John H. McCann, J. F. McDermott, Daniel T. M. Cartien, Joseph Gormley, Henry Carr, Henry C. Horessins, D. O. Leary, William H. King, James D. Fulton, James J. Brennan, Joseph A. Drenen, Jack M. Douglass, J. E. Genriss, James McLuhlin, Walter T. Barrows, Joseph P. Kelly, Charles A. Heath, John R. Wilson, William J. McNally, D. F. Carroll, Frank P. Roddy, James Lavere, Alvin Barrows, James J. McGowan, William T. Soper, Edward McAvoy, W. F. Corrigan, Denniss A. Flynn, jr., Joseph C. Doran, John Kiernan, John E. Devlin, Geles Paquet, William G. Moore, Ernest Toothill, Ed. E. Ostenholm, David Hanna, George Raubeault, Samuel P. Totten, Wm. Donnelly, Anthony P. Viard, Dennis J. Murphy, Joseph McKeon, Henry Kelly, Frank Edwards, Daniel Kelly, Maurice H. Kiley, George O'Neill, Edwin E. Nelson, J. L. Donnelly, Walter W. Cooke, George B. Loughlin, Aug. Schilling, F. N. Averill, Fred Viard, J. D. Fontain, T. G. Issler, Mike McQueeney, Walter Grimley, Fred A. Roessler, A. C. Roessler, George A. Fataygler, Y. Daborowski, Joseph Boisvert, Euclide Boisvert, George Braitshau, E. Payson Bennett, John J. Morse, William Wynne, John Bauman, William Cassidy, Walter Etter, George Coutona, William Pierce, Joseph L. N. Lemay, Peter Cahbot, Arthur G. Letourneau, Enset Pineult, Ubald Sde Carufel, James Flynn, S. E. Gardner, Owen Dolan, Joseph W. Brennan, Pat J. Stemfard, Hugh Gormley, Arthyr Sde Carufel, P. Gentilotti, J. E. Lambert, Paul L. Pratt, J. N. Sweet, E. M. Allen, Charles Benoit, B. A. Bennett, Cyril J. Lecompte, Eugene Austin, William B. Lincoln, Corad Lamarre, Mathew Cook, John G. MacDonald, Robert Picken, Martin H. Maguire.

—

NORTH ATTLEBORO, MASS., January 27, 1913.

The COMMITTEE ON WAYS AND MEANS,
United States House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

HONORABLE SIRS: In connection with the proposed tariff legislation at the coming session of Congress the Democratic town committee of North Attleboro, a committee elected by the Democratic voters of the town to promote the best interests of the Democratic Party, has instructed me to forward to you a copy of the following resolution passed by them on January 27, 1913:

Whereas the customs tariff law is about to be revised by the United States Congress; and

Whereas this committee recognizes that the welfare and prosperity of the town of North Attleboro is practically dependent upon its jewelry and silverware industries, which in turn are made possible only by an adequately protective tariff against the low-priced labor of foreign countries; and

Whereas the committee has been informed and believes that even under the present rate of duty on similar goods the imports are steadily increasing: Therefore be it

Resolved, That this committee record its disapproval of any reduction of duty upon jewelry, silverware, and kindred articles, and that it urge upon Congress the necessity of maintaining the present rates; and be it further

Resolved, That the secretary of this committee be, and he is hereby, instructed to forward to the Ways and Means Committee of Congress, to the Representatives of this district, and to the United States Senators of this State a copy of this resolution.

D. M. E. VAUCE, Chairman.
A. FRANK LYNCH, Secretary.
HENRY P. REYNOLDS.
FREDERIC R. WHITE.
FRANK A. BROWN.
JAMES L. MARRILL.
THOS. F. COADY.
DENNIS E. O'NEILL.
JAMES E. SMITH.
GEORGE A. WARREN.

—

NORTH ATTLEBORO, MASS., January 16, 1913.

The COMMITTEE ON WAYS AND MEANS,
United States House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

HONORABLE SIRS: In connection with the proposed tariff legislation at the coming session of Congress, the Board of Trade of North Attleboro, a board organized to promote the best interests of the town of North Attleboro, has instructed me to forward to you a copy of the following resolutions, passed by them on January 16, 1913:

Whereas the customs tariff law is about to be revised by the United States Congress;

Whereas this board of trade recognizes that the jewelry and silverware industries are the only industries of the town of North Attleboro and that the people of North Attleboro are, therefore, dependent upon these industries, which in turn are made possible only by an adequately protective tariff against the low-priced labor of Europe and other countries;

Whereas the board of trade has been informed and believes that even under the present rates of duty on jewelry and silverware the imports are steadily increasing; and

Whereas this board has further been informed and believes that many improper classifications under the present tariff act to the serious disadvantage of the jewelry and silverware industries are due to the inclusion of the words "gold," "silver," and "platinum" in the final paragraph of the so-called metal schedule: Therefore be it

Resolved, That this board of trade record its disapproval of any reduction in the rates of duty upon jewelry, silverware, and kindred articles, and that it urge upon Congress the necessity of maintaining the present rates; and be it further

Resolved, That this board record its disapproval of the inclusion of the words "gold," "silver," and "platinum" in the same paragraph with iron, steel, tin, lead, etc., and favor a special paragraph either to precede or follow the paragraph referring to the cheaper metals, and in this new paragraph the same rates be approved as are approved for the so-called jewelry paragraph; and be it further

Resolved, That the secretary of this board be, and he is hereby, instructed to forward to the Ways and Means Committee of Congress, to the Representative of this district, and to the United States Senators from this State a copy of this resolution.

Respectfully, yours,

CARL A. HEMPEL, Secretary.

—

ATTLEBORO, MASS., January 27, 1913.

The COMMITTEE ON WAYS AND MEANS,
United States House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

HONORABLE SIRS: In connection with the proposed tariff legislation at the coming session of Congress the Democratic town committee of Attleboro, a committee elected by the Democratic voters of the town to promote the best interests of the Democratic Party, has instructed me to forward to you a copy of the following resolution passed by them on January 27, 1913:

Whereas the customs-tariff law is about to be revised by the United States Congress; and

Whereas this committee recognizes that the welfare and prosperity of the town of Attleboro is practically dependent upon its jewelry and silverware industries, which in turn are made possible only by an adequately protective tariff against the low-priced labor of foreign countries; and

Whereas the committee has been informed and believes that even under the present rate of duty on similar goods the imports are steadily increasing: Therefore be it

Resolved, That this committee record its disapproval of any reduction of duty upon jewelry, silverware, and kindred articles, and that it urge upon Congress the necessity of maintaining the present rates; and be it further

Resolved, That the secretary of this committee be, and he is hereby, instructed to forward to the Ways and Means Committee of Congress, to the Representatives of this district, and to the United States Senators of this State a copy of this resolution.

WILLIAM J. KENNEY, Chairman.
CHARLES P. PREHAN, Secretary.
JOHN W. CODY.
FRANK B. KINNEY.
GILMAN L. BATES.
THOMAS F. KEENE.
HUGH GAFFNEY.
JAMES F. SIMMS.
T. FRANCIS DALY.
FRED S. COBB.

—

NORTON, MASS., January, 1913.

The COMMITTEE ON WAYS AND MEANS,
United States House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

HONORABLE SIRS: In connection with the proposed tariff legislation at the coming session of Congress, the Democratic town committee of Norton, a committee elected by the Democratic voters of the town to promote the best interests of the Democratic Party, has instructed me to forward to you a copy of the following resolution passed by them:

Whereas the customs-tariff law is about to be revised by the United States Congress; and

Whereas this committee recognizes that the jewelry and silverware industries are the chief industries of Norton, and that the people of that town are therefore largely dependent upon these industries, which in turn are made possible only by an adequately protective tariff against the low-priced labor of foreign countries; and

Whereas the committee has been informed and believes that even under the present rate of duty on similar goods, the imports are steadily increasing: Therefore be it

Resolved, That this committee record its disapproval of any reduction of duty upon jewelry, silverware, and kindred articles, and that it urge upon Congress the necessity of maintaining the present rates; and be it further

Resolved, That the secretary of this committee be, and he is hereby, instructed to forward to the Ways and Means Committee of Congress, to the Representative of this district, and to the United States Senators of this State a copy of this resolution.

C. H. MAKEPEACE,
Chairman Democratic Town Committee.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I move to close debate on this paragraph in 10 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] asks unanimous consent that all debate on the paragraph and amendments thereto close in 10 minutes.

Mr. LENROOT. I desire 5 minutes.

Mr. TREADWAY. I also would like 5 minutes.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I regret we can not progress faster. I move that the committee do now rise.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the committee rose; and Mr. REILLY of Connecticut having resumed the chair as Speaker pro tempore, Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, reported that that committee had had under consideration the bill (H. R. 3321) to reduce tariff duties and to provide revenue for the Government, and for other purposes, and had come to no resolution thereon.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

Mr. ASHBROOK, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that they had examined and found truly enrolled bill of the following title, when the Speaker signed the same:

H. R. 2973. An act making appropriations for certain expenses incident to the first session of the Sixty-third Congress, and for other purposes.

ADJOURNMENT.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly (at 11 o'clock and 15 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned until Thursday, May 1, 1913, at 11 o'clock a. m.

PUBLIC BILLS, RESOLUTIONS, AND MEMORIALS.

Under clause 3 of Rule XXII, bills, resolutions, and memorials were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. REILLY of Connecticut: A bill (H. R. 4477) to grant compensation to letter carriers and post-office clerks injured in the performance of their duties; to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.

By Mr. KENT: A bill (H. R. 4478) to authorize the completion of the unfinished portion of the Government road between Hoopa Valley and Blue Lake, Humboldt County, Cal.; to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

By Mr. BRITTEN: A bill (H. R. 4479) to amend an act entitled "An act to provide for the opening, maintenance, protection, and operation of the Panama Canal, and the sanitation and government of the Canal Zone," approved August 24, 1912; and also amending an act entitled "An act to regulate commerce," approved February 4, 1887; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. ALEXANDER: A bill (H. R. 4480) to reimburse certain fire insurance companies the amount paid by them for property destroyed by fire in suppressing the bubonic plague in the Territory of Hawaii in the years 1899 and 1900; to the Committee on Appropriations.

By Mr. HOBSON (by request): A bill (H. R. 4481) to create educational parental courts; to the Committee on Education.

Also (by request), a bill (H. R. 4482) to provide for the education of deficient children in the District of Columbia; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Also (by request), a bill (H. R. 4483) providing compulsory education in the District of Columbia; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. STEPHENS of Texas: A bill (H. R. 4525) to amend an act entitled "An act to provide for the adjudication and payment of claims arising from Indian depredations," approved March 3, 1891; to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

By Mr. CURLEY: A bill (H. R. 4526) to regulate employment of substitute clerks and carriers in offices of the first and second class of the Post Office Department; to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.

By Mr. BRUCKNER: A bill (H. R. 4527) providing for the improvement of the Harlem River; to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. GOODWIN of Arkansas: Resolution (H. Res. 82) requesting the Postmaster General to advise the House of Representatives as to the names and number of men employed as post-office inspectors; to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.

By Mr. NEELEY: Resolution (H. Res. 83) directing the Attorney General to collect a certain sum of money from the Missouri Pacific Railroad; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. PETERS: A memorial of the Legislature of Massachusetts relative to an amendment of the Constitution of the United States prohibiting the practice of polygamy; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, private bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. BELL of California: A bill (H. R. 4484) granting a pension to Josephine W. Heap; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4485) granting an increase of pension to Laura Hill; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4486) to remove the charge of desertion from the record of Charles R. Stevens; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. BLACKMON: A bill (H. R. 4487) for the relief of George P. Plowman; to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4488) for the relief of the heirs of Philip S. Fulford, deceased; to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. BRYAN: A bill (H. R. 4489) for the relief of W. F. Crawford; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. CARY: A bill (H. R. 4490) granting a pension to Eveline H. Wheeler; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. FORDNEY: A bill (H. R. 4491) granting a pension to Myron Horton; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. HAMILL: A bill (H. R. 4492) to restore Capt. Harold L. Jackson, retired, to the active list of the Army; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4493) for the relief of Leo Metze; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. KENT: A bill (H. R. 4494) granting a pension to Sadie M. Jungerman; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. KEY of Ohio: A bill (H. R. 4495) granting a pension to Mary C. Barnum; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4496) granting a pension to Thomas J. Mullin; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4497) granting an increase of pension to John F. Stallsmith; to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4498) granting an increase of pension to Thomas Shrieves; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4499) granting an increase of pension to Maria A. Sinclair; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4500) granting an increase of pension to John Ricksecker; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4501) granting an increase of pension to William A. Barrett; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4502) granting an increase of pension to Gabriel B. Andrews; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4503) granting an increase of pension to Jacob Arntz; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4504) granting an increase of pension to Adam J. Sherman; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. LOBECK: A bill (H. R. 4505) granting a pension to Katherine Hempen; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. MERRITT: A bill (H. R. 4506) granting an increase of pension to Joel Benjamin; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. MOSS of West Virginia: A bill (H. R. 4507) granting a pension to Willis Mollohan; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4508) granting an increase of pension to George W. James; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. O'SHAUNESSY: A bill (H. R. 4509) granting an increase of pension to Josephine R. Johnson; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4510) granting a pension to Jennie L. Tate; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. RAUCH: A bill (H. R. 4511) granting an increase of pension to Abner H. Shaffer; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4512) granting a pension to Gertrude Ballou; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. RIORDAN: A bill (H. R. 4513) for the relief of William E. Farrell; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. STEPHENS of California: A bill (H. R. 4514) for the relief of Jaime W. Overton; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. WHITE: A bill (H. R. 4515) granting a pension to Caroline Bast; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4516) granting a penson to William A. Pfaff; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4517) granting a pension to Rachel M. Diebold; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4518) granting an increase of pension to Wilder E. Walling; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4519) granting an increase of pension to Thomas W. Crawford; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4520) granting an increase of pension to William E. Beymer; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4521) granting an increase of pension to Martin V. McKim; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4522) granting an increase of pension to Joseph Koons; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4523) granting an increase of pension to Emma C. Kennedy; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4524) granting an increase of pension to Phoebe Morrow; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee: A bill (H. R. 4528) for the relief of the estate of Perry P. Benson; to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. SMITH of Maryland: A bill (H. R. 4529) for the relief of Robert C. Schenck, late paymaster, United States Navy; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4530) for the relief of the estate of Thomas Loker; to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4531) for the relief of the estate of George Lloyd Raley; to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. FESS: A bill (H. R. 4532) granting a pension to Dana A. Smally; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4533) granting an increase of pension to Jane Cramer; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4534) granting an increase of pension to Lewis Brown; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4535) for the relief of Erskine R. Hayes; to the Committee on Claims.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

By the SPEAKER (by request): Petitions of sundry citizens of the State of Missouri, against the income tax for mutual life insurance companies; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also (by request), petition of Ferdinand W. Schleuder, of Hermann, and J. G. Hildenstein, of Warrington, Mo., against the income tax for mutual life insurance companies; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. ALLEN: Petition of the council of the city of Cincinnati, Ohio, favoring the passage of legislation for acquiring Government ownership of all telephone and telegraph systems; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. ANSBERRY: Petition of E. D. Murphy, of Antwerp; Andrew S. Burt, of Van Wert; S. P. Wannemocher, of Cloverdale; Oscar C. Wyatt, of Drover Hill; and Clarence C. Bowyer, of Paulding, Ohio, against the income tax for mutual life insurance companies; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. ASHBROOK: Petition of Will F. Frary and J. E. Snider, of Burbank, Ohio, and Charles H. Beck, West Lafayette, Ohio, protesting against including mutual life insurance companies in the income-tax bill; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. BALTZ: Petition of sundry citizens of the twenty-second congressional district of Illinois, protesting against including mutual life insurance companies in the income-tax bill; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. BELL of California: Petition of Mrs. Mary Jones, of El Monte; 431 other beet growers, farmers, and other citizens of the following towns in the State of California: Alvarado, Arroyo Grande, Artesia, Betteravia, Colusa, Compton, Chino, El Monte, Hynes, Irvington, Huntington Beach, Marysville, Meridian, Moss, Oceana, Oxnard, Pacific Grove, Pleasanton, Salinas, Santa Maria, San Francisco, Soledad, Spreckels, Watsonville, Woodland, Anaheim, Downey, Garden Grove, Gilroy, Laws, Monterey, Santa Ana, Westminster; and the following firms and companies of San Francisco, Cal.: Wright Wire Co., A. J. & J. R. Cook (Inc.), S. F. Bowser & Co., Stauffer Chemical Co., Paul Rieger & Co., the Robert Dollar Co., Carlson Currier Co., Gantner & Mattern Co., Pacific Oil & Lead Works, Steiger & Kerr Stove & Foundry Co., and the Pacific Wire Rope Co., of Los Angeles, Cal., protesting against the proposed reduction of the tariff on sugar; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. BRODBECK: Petition of 35 citizens of the twentieth congressional district of Pennsylvania, protesting against including mutual life insurance companies in the income-tax bill; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. BURNETT: Petition of Herman Weil, W. O. Davenport, and R. E. Lee against the income tax for mutual life insurance companies; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. BUTLER: Petition of Fox Croft Grange, No. 1220, of Downington, Pa., and citizens of West Chester, Pa., favoring the passage of legislation giving international protection to all migratory birds; to the Committee on Agriculture.

Also, petition of sundry citizens of Trainer, Pa., favoring the passage of legislation to prevent the opening of the Panama Exposition on Sundays; to the Committee on Industrial Arts and Expositions.

By Mr. CARY: Petition of sundry citizens of Milwaukee, Wis., against the income tax for mutual life insurance companies; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the hand window glass manufacturers of Pittsburgh, Pa., relative to brief filed by Simon Bache & Co., of New York City, regarding the duty on window glass; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the Waltham Piano Co., of Milwaukee, Wis., against any duty being placed on ivory; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. DALE: Petitions of sundry citizens of Brooklyn, N. Y., against the income tax for mutual life insurance companies; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of W. A. Slade, of Brooklyn, N. Y., against the income tax for mutual life insurance companies, etc.; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the Stewart Hess Co., of New York City, against the clause prohibiting importation of feathers, etc.; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of F. L. Holt, of Brooklyn, N. Y., favoring the clause prohibiting importation of feathers, etc., and opposing the income tax for mutual life insurance companies; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. GILMORE: Petition of the Woman's Christian Temperance Unions of Amherst, Wolaston, and Uxbridge; of Granville R. Farrer and other citizens of Abington; Mrs. J. Malcolm Forbes and other citizens of Milton and Boston, Mass., favoring the repeal of the clause exempting American vessels from the payment of tolls in the Panama Canal; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. GOLDFOGLE: Petition of Edward J. Graeb and Spencer Lathrop, against the income tax for mutual life insurance companies; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the Braid Manufacturers' Association, of New York, N. Y., favoring assessment of all braids, under paragraph 369, with laces, etc.; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the Butler-Ward Co., of New York, N. Y., against the reduction of the duty on bound books; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the Standard Importing Co. and Austin Nichols & Co., of New York, N. Y., against assessment of fee for filing protests against assessment of duties by the collector of customs; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the National Cloak, Suit, and Skirt Manufacturers' Association, of Cleveland, Ohio, against the same rate of duty on finished clothing as upon woolen cloth; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the Van Wie Pump Co., of Syracuse, N. Y., against the removal of the duty on sugar; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the Syracuse Gardens Co., of New York, against any change in tariff affecting products of the soil; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. GOULDEN: Petition of sundry citizens of the twenty-third congressional district of New York, against taxing mutual life insurance companies in the income-tax bill; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. GRIFFIN: Petition of the Passaic Board of Trade, of Passaic, N. J., against any change of the tariff schedules affecting the wool, cotton, handkerchief, chemical, metal, and paper industries; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. GRIEST: Petition of the National Business League of America, favoring the retention in the Consular Service of officials of demonstrated efficiency; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, petition of Cigarmakers' Union No. 301, Akron, Pa., protesting against any reduction of the tariff on tobacco and cigars imported from the Philippine Islands; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. HAMILL: Petition of Mario Catavi, Hoboken, N. J., and John R. Parsons and 2 other citizens of Jersey City, N. J., protesting against including mutual life insurance companies in the income-tax bill; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. HAWLEY: Petition of the Columbia and Snake River Waterways Association, protesting against the repeal of the free-tolls portion of the Panama Canal act; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. KAHN: Petition of Fred R. Haas and 375 other citizens of San Francisco, Whittier, Moss, Chino, Compton, Artesia, Alvarado, King City, Buena Park, Betteravia, Salinas, Oxnard, Gilroy, Watsonville, Los Alamitos, Sargent, Spreckels, Pleasanton, Castroville, Hollister, Meridian, Santa Ana, and El Monte, all in the State of California, protesting against the proposed reduction in the duty on sugar; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. LEE of Pennsylvania: Petition of the Walnut Street Business Association, of Philadelphia, Pa., protesting against the proposed increase on personal-baggage exemption of duty; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. MITCHELL: Petition of John D. Brooks and other citizens of Natick; Dr. Horace Bumstead and other members of the Harvard Congregational Church, Brookline; and President Ellen F. Pendleton, Prof. Mary Whiton Calkins, and others of Wellesley College, all in the State of Massachusetts, favoring the repeal of the clause in the Panama Canal act exempting American coastwise shipping from the payment of tolls or the arbitration of the question at issue with the British Government; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. MOTT: Papers to accompany bill (H. R. 4469) granting a special pension to Ella M. Becker; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the National Association of Cotton Manufacturers, against the reduction of duties on cotton goods; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of sundry chocolate workers of Fulton, N. Y., against the reduction of the duty on chocolate; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. O'BRIEN: Petition of Charles Debold, Bernhard J. Osmer, Frank Emmett, Conrad Haaren, L. Eyring, A. H. Fersch, J. Wadsworth, and Conrad W. Brech, against the reduction of the duty on cocoa and chocolate; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of Walter S. Rapelji, Irving S. Roney, C. S. Findlay, Adolph Celtz, John Lamerdin, Frederick J. Brittner, sr., Miss M. Estelle Lifhtbouren, J. A. Armstrong, Daniel A. Dolan, Julia E. Carpenter, F. J. Bittner, Joseph Hartel, John W. Farmer, Charles Herman, Joseph Sommers, C. A. McConnell, H. H. Wallace, J. C. Goumig, Lowell M. Palmer, Warren E. Burrows, and Willis F. Taplin, all of New York and Brooklyn, N. Y., protesting against including mutual life insurance companies in the income-tax bill; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of Richard McCormick, Brooklyn, N. Y., protesting against any reduction of the tariff on bound books; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of Miss A. Dunn and Miss Lillie Oberglock, Brooklyn, N. Y., protesting against any reduction of the tariff on all lithograph work; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of William E. Lynn, Henry F. Reining, Joseph B. Lomax, Frank R. Treasure, Mrs. M. Buckley, and James D. Ackerman, all of New York, N. Y., protesting against placing Bibles on the free list; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the Moehle Lithograph Co., Mrs. T. A. Reilly, and Louis Reilly, of Brooklyn, N. Y., protesting against any reduction in the tariff on lithographic work; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. O'SHAUNESSY: Petition of Charles Ainsworth, H. T. Daniels, Richard P. Boucher, Edward Everett Rice, Nathan E. Moore, and George F. Troy, all of Providence, R. I., protesting against including mutual life insurance companies in the income-tax bill; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of Miss Alice Hall Walter, Providence, R. I., favoring the passage of legislation preventing the importation of feathers and plumes of wild birds for commercial purposes; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the Low-Taussig-Karpeles Co., Providence, R. I., protesting against the passage of legislation to collect a filing fee on each protest against the assessment of illegal duties or for reappraisement; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. PETERS: Petition of Roger Pierce, Myrom Richardson, and other business men of Boston, and the Samuel B. Capen's Men's Class, Central Congregational Church, Jamaica Plain, favoring the repeal of the clause exempting American vessels from the payment of tolls in the Panama Canal; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. RAKER: Petition of sundry citizens of California, favoring the passage of legislation compelling concerns selling goods direct to the consumer by mail to contribute their portion of the funds for the development of the local community, town, and State; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. REILLY of Connecticut: Petition of sundry citizens of the State of Connecticut, against the income tax for mutual life insurance companies; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. ROGERS: Petition of Dr. Edward Waldo Emerson and other citizens of Concord; President Clara H. Nash and members of the West Acton Woman's Christian Temperance Union, all of Massachusetts, favoring the repeal of the clause in the Panama Canal act exempting American coastwise shipping from the payment of tolls or the arbitration of the question at issue with the British Government; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. SCULLY: Petition of sundry citizens of New Jersey, against the income tax for mutual life insurance companies; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the Eastern Millinery Association of New York, N. Y., against the clause prohibiting the importation of aigrettes, etc.; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of sundry citizens of different towns in New Jersey, protesting against including mutual life insurance companies in the income-tax bill; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. STAFFORD: Petition of 46 citizens of Milwaukee, Wis., protesting against including mutual life insurance companies in the income-tax bill; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. STEPHENS of California: Petition of Paul Rieger & Co., San Francisco, Cal., protesting against the proposed increase of duty on materials for the manufacture of perfume; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the Globe Grain & Milling Co., Los Angeles, Cal., protesting against an increase of the duty on jute burlap; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the San Francisco Chamber of Commerce, San Francisco, Cal., protesting against an import duty on wheat, oats, and barley; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the Pacific Oil & Lead Works, San Francisco, Cal., protesting against the placing of coconut oil on the free list; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the Standard Underground Cable Co., Los Angeles, Cal., favoring a differential duty on pig lead and lead-covered wires and cables; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the Warren & Bailey Manufacturing Co., and 7 other companies of Los Angeles, Cal.; Carlson Currier Co., and 4 other companies of San Francisco, Cal.; and the Holt Manufacturing Co., Stockton, Cal., protesting against the proposed reduction of the tariff on sugar; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. UNDERHILL: Petition of sundry citizens of the thirty-seventh congressional district of New York, against taxing mutual life insurance companies in the income-tax bill; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. WALLIN: Petition of the glove manufacturers of Gloversville, N. Y., protesting against the passage of the provision in House bill 3321 to charge a filing fee on protests against the imposition of duties or appeal for reappraisement; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of sundry citizens of the thirteenth district of New York, protesting against including mutual life insurance companies in the income-tax bill; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. WILLIS: Petition of the Rural Letter Carriers' Association, Hardin County, Ohio, favoring the passage of legislation for Federal aid for the improvement of public roads, and against a 1 cent letter-postage rate; to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.

SENATE.

THURSDAY, May 1, 1913.

Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. Forrest J. Prettyman, D. D.

The Journal of the proceedings of Monday last was read and approved.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by J. C. South, its Chief Clerk, announced that the Speaker of the House had signed the enrolled bill (H. R. 2973) making appropriations for certain expenses incident to the first session of the Sixty-third Congress, and for other purposes, and it was thereupon signed by the Vice President.

CALLING OF THE ROLL.

Mr. KERN. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will call the roll.

The Secretary called the roll and then proceeded to call the names of the absentees.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair rules that the amendment to Rule XII simply applies to a yea-and-nay vote.

Mr. CLARK of Wyoming. I should like to have the rule that was adopted read, if the Chair please.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read Rule XII.

The Secretary read as follows:

RULE XII.

VOTING, ETC.

1. When the yeas and nays are ordered the names of Senators shall be called alphabetically, and each Senator shall, without debate, declare his assent or dissent to the question, unless excused by the Senate; and no Senator shall be permitted to vote after the decision shall have been announced by the presiding officer, but may for sufficient reasons, with unanimous consent, change or withdraw his vote. No motion to suspend this rule shall be in order, nor shall the presiding officer entertain any request to suspend it by unanimous consent. (Jefferson's Manual, Sec. XLI.)

2. When a Senator declines to vote on call of his name he shall be required to assign his reasons therefor, and having assigned them the presiding officer shall submit the question to the Senate, "Shall the Senator, for the reasons assigned by him, be excused from voting?" which shall be decided without debate; and these proceedings shall be had after the roll call and before the result is announced; and any further proceedings in reference thereto shall be after such announcement. (Jefferson's Manual, Secs. XVII, XLI.)

3. Immediately after and before the result of each roll call is ascertained and announced the Secretary shall call the names of the absentees. (Amendment of April 28, 1913.)

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair's ruling is that the amendment to the rule applies only to a yea-and-nay vote.

Mr. O'GORMAN. Regular order, Mr. President.

On the roll call the following Senators answered to their names:

Ashurst	Fletcher	Oliver	Smith, S. C.
Bacon	Gallinger	Overman	Smoot
Borah	Gronna	Owen	Stephenson
Bradley	Hitchcock	Page	Sterling
Brady	Hollis	Penrose	Stone
Bristow	James	Perkins	Sutherland
Bryan	Kern	Pomerene	Swanson
Burton	Lippitt	Ransdell	Thomas
Chilton	Lodge	Robinson	Thornton
Clark, Wyo.	McCumber	Root	Tillman
Crawford	Martin, Va.	Saulsbury	Townsend
Cummins	Myers	Sheppard	Warren
Dillingham	Nelson	Sherman	Weeks
du Pont	Norris	Simmons	Williams
Fall	O'Gorman	Smith, Ga.	Works

The VICE PRESIDENT. Sixty Senators have answered to the roll call, and there is a quorum present.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

The VICE PRESIDENT presented a joint memorial of the Territorial Legislature of Alaska, which was referred to the Committee on Territories and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY FOR THE DISTRICT OF ALASKA,
JUNEAU, ALASKA.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, Territory of Alaska, ss:

I, William L. Distin, secretary of the Territory of Alaska, do hereby certify that the annexed copy is a full, true, and complete transcript of House joint memorial No. 2 of the Alaska Territorial Legislature.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the great seal of Alaska, at Juneau, this 16th day of April, A. D. 1913.

[SEAL.] WM. L. DISTIN,
Secretary of Alaska.

House joint memorial 2.

Whereas more than three-fourths of the civil litigation in Alaska, calculated on a basis of the number of cases brought, is disposed of by the United States commissioners acting as ex officio justices of the peace and probate judges, and practically all the criminal litigation is either disposed of or initiated before these officials, by virtue of which facts and the additional facts that they also discharge the functions of recorders and coroners and various other public duties, they are, under the present governmental system in Alaska, by far the most important functionaries in the Territory, coming in their official capacity in closer, more frequent, and more varied contact with the mass of our citizens than any other officials, and being thus of more importance to the good order, peace, and general well-being of the community than any other officials; and

Whereas these commissioners, under the present system, are dependent exclusively on fees for their remuneration, which fees are in the larger number of cases inadequate as recompense for the services rendered, and in many precincts are altogether insufficient to enable the commissioner to devote himself exclusively to his official duties for a livelihood, and such fee system affords constant temptation to the commissioners to encourage litigation, and to that extent is a menace to the conscientious discharge of the duties of the office, and although there may be no case in which a commissioner has been induced by the hope of more fees to act otherwise than as his sense of right and justice dictated, such officials are, by virtue of said fee system, especially in criminal cases, placed under suspicion by the public that their acts are influenced by a desire to augment their remuneration, a suspicion which in itself tends greatly to hamper these commissioners in the discharge of their varied duties; and

Whereas it is deemed urgently necessary, as a most essential step in the improvement of governmental system for Alaska, that these commissioners be placed upon a salary affording them a reasonable and suitable income sufficient to support a family and sufficient to induce men of intelligence and ability to accept appointment to such offices: It is

Resolved by the House of Representatives of the Territory of Alaska (the Senate concurring), That the Congress of the United States be, and hereby is, urgently requested to enact a law placing the said commissioners upon a salary of at least $2,000 per annum, and that all fees collected in civil and criminal cases be turned into fund "C" of the district court of the respective divisions in which the precinct is situated, to be expended for the benefit of the court in the same manner as other moneys belonging to such fund.

Passed the house March 21, 1913.

EARNEST B. COLLINS,
Speaker of the House.

Attest:

BARRY KEOWN,
Chief Clerk of the House.

Passed the senate April 3, 1913.

L. V. RAY,
President of the Senate.

The VICE PRESIDENT presented a joint resolution adopted by the Territorial Legislature of Alaska, which was referred to the Committee on Commerce and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

House joint resolution 4.

Be it resolved by the House of Representatives of the Territory of Alaska (the Senate concurring), that—

Whereas since the discovery of gold at Cape Nome, in 1899, there has been produced and shipped to the United States from Nome upward of $72,000,000 of gold, inclusive of the sums sent out by mail; no record, of course, has been kept of the gold privately and personally taken out, but the amount is undoubtedly large. That during the same period there has been shipped to the city of Nome upward of $10,000,000 worth of commodities; that the development of dredge mining on Seward Peninsula and the rapidly increasing volume of business at Port Nome renders it absolutely necessary for a safe harbor. That this increasing business has made it necessary to operate a large fleet of small vessels to and from said port of Nome plying to various places along the coast of the Bering Sea, and the largely increasing trade of our merchants with Siberia, and the number of such vessels is increasing; and

Whereas there is no safe anchorage for such vessels at said port, and because of the want of such anchorage there has been a loss to our marine service and to the people of Nome during the period aforesaid of upward of $950,000 caused from marine disasters, due to a want of a safe anchorage from storms; and

Whereas a safe anchorage and breakwater can be constructed in the mouth of the Snake River at said city and the losses for the future due to the causes aforesaid be largely obviated:

The Congress of the United States is hereby urgently requested to appropriate $25,000 for a survey of the mouth of Snake River and a site for a breakwater in front thereof, and if found feasible by said survey that Congress then provide for the construction of a breakwater and such other works as may be needed to secure a safe anchorage at said point.

Passed the house March 20, 1913.

EARNEST B. COLLINS,
Speaker of the House.

Attest:

BARRY KEOWN,
Chief Clerk of the House.

Passed the senate April 3, 1913.

L. V. RAY,
President of the Senate.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, Territory of Alaska, ss:

I, William L. Distin, secretary of the Territory of Alaska, do hereby certify that the above and foregoing is a full, true, and correct copy of house joint resolution No. 4 of the Alaska Territorial Legislature.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the great seal of Alaska at Juneau this 16th day of April, A. D. 1913.

[SEAL.] WM. L. DISTIN,
Secretary of Alaska.

The VICE PRESIDENT presented a joint memorial of the Territorial Legislature of Alaska, which was referred to the Committee on Territories and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Senate joint memorial 10.

To the President of the United States and the honorable Senate and House of Representatives in Congress assembled:

We, your memorialists, the Legislature of the Territory of Alaska, do most respectfully and earnestly represent that—

Whereas the city of Juneau, situated on the southeast coast of Alaska, is one of the oldest and most permanent towns in the Territory of Alaska; and

Whereas the said city of Juneau, owing to the opening up and developing of quartz mines in its immediate vicinity and surrounding said city, and the mining and milling of extensive ore bodies, has increased in population within the past two years from 1,500 to over 3,000 people, and is destined to continue increasing in population steadily for several years to come by reason of the permanency and stability of the well-known quartz mines now being operated and worked and the milling of the ores therefrom; and

Whereas at this time immense milling plants for the purpose of treating and milling the ores from mines in the immediate vicinity of Juneau are in the course of construction; and

Whereas the mines and mills aforesaid, together with the other industries and business enterprises which are now growing up and will continue to increase for years to come, insure a city of vastly increased population than at the present time; and

Whereas at the present time the public-school building in Juneau is entirely inadequate to accommodate the children of school age attending and desiring to attend said public school, which said public school can only accommodate, conveniently, 160 scholars; and

Whereas the number of scholars at the present time attending said public school is 250, an increase of more than 65 since September, 1912; and

Whereas owing to the said schoolhouse being inadequate to accommodate the number of school children attending the public school in Juneau, it has become necessary to rent a store building for the purpose of teaching the said children, and that more than 60 school children are compelled to go to said store building for instruction, and 2 additional teachers are engaged to instruct said school children in said store building; and

Whereas the present school building in Juneau is not only inadequate to accommodate the school children residing in Juneau, but is an old frame building and unfit for present and future use; and

Whereas it is estimated that it will require the sum of approximately $50,000 to erect, construct, and equip a schoolhouse sufficiently adequate to meet the present and future requirements of the city of Juneau:

Therefore we, your memorialists, do hereby most respectfully urge and solicit that the Congress of the United States pass an act permitting the city of Juneau, Alaska, to issue bonds for a sum not to exceed $50,000 for the purpose of erection, construction, and full equipment of a schoolhouse sufficiently adequate to meet the present necessity, as well as the future requirements, by reason of the steady increase in population of said city of Juneau; and

That on account of an emergency existing we particularly solicit and urge that the Congress of the United States pass the act referred to above with all expediency possible, compatible with public business; and

We, your memorialists, as in duty bound will ever pray.

In order to further carry out the object and purpose of this memorial we respectfully transmit herewith for consideration of the Congress of the United States a draft of a proposed bill, the terms of which are thought sufficiently comprehensive to cover the emergency existing as described in this memorial.

Adopted by the senate April 4, 1913.

L. V. RAY,
President of the Senate.

Concurred in by the house April 11, 1913.

EARNEST B. COLLINS,
Speaker of the House.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, Territory of Alaska, ss:

I, William L. Distin, secretary of the Territory of Alaska, do hereby certify that the above is a full, true, and correct copy of senate joint memorial No. 10 of the Alaska Territorial Legislature.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the great seal of Alaska at Juneau this 16th day of April, A. D. 1913.

[SEAL.] WM. L. DISTIN,
Secretary of Alaska.

An act relating to affairs in the Territories, and authorizing the town of Juneau, Alaska, to issue bonds for public-school purposes, and prescribing the method of issuing bonds for such purpose.

Be it enacted, etc., That the incorporated town of Juneau, Alaska, is hereby authorized and empowered to issue its bonds in any sum not exceeding $50,000 for the purpose of constructing and equipping additional public schools in the said town of Juneau.

SEC. 2. That before said bonds shall be issued a special election shall be ordered by the common council of the town of Juneau, at which election the question whether such bonds shall be issued shall be submitted to the qualified electors of said town of Juneau whose names appear on the last assessment roll of said town for municipal taxation. Thirty days' notice of any such election shall be given by publication thereof in a newspaper printed and published and of general circulation in said town before the date fixed for such election.

SEC. 3. That the registration for such election, the manner of conducting the same, and the canvass of the returns of said election shall be, as nearly as practicable, in accordance with the requirements of law in general or special elections in said town, and said bonds shall be issued only upon the condition that a majority of the votes cast at such election in said town shall be in favor of issuing said bonds.

SEC. 4. That the bonds above specified, when authorized to be issued as hereinbefore provided, shall bear interest at a rate not to exceed 6 per cent per annum, payable semiannually, and shall not be sold for less than their par value with accrued interest, and shall be in denominations not exceeding $1,000 each, the principal to be due in 10 years from date thereof: Provided, however, That the common council of said town of Juneau may reserve the right to pay off such bonds in their numerical order at the rate of $5,000 per annum from and after the expiration of 5 years from their date. Principal and interest shall be payable in lawful money of the United States of America at the office of the town treasurer of the town of Juneau, Alaska, or at such bank in the city of New York, in the State of New York, or such place as may be designated by the common council of the town of Juneau, the place of payment to be mentioned in said bonds: And provided further, That each and every such bond shall have the written signature of the mayor and clerk of the said town of Juneau and also bear the seal of said town.

SEC. 5. That no part of the funds arising from the sale of said bonds shall be used for any purpose other than specified in this act.

SEC. 6. That said bonds shall be sold only in such amounts as the common council shall direct, and the proceeds thereof shall be disbursed under the limitations hereinbefore imposed and under the order and direction of said common council from time to time as the same may be required for the purposes aforesaid.

The VICE PRESIDENT presented a memorial of members of the Merchants' Association of Honolulu, Territory of Hawaii, remonstrating against a reduction of the duty on sugar, which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented a resolution adopted by the National Drainage Congress, favoring an appropriation for the prevention of floods and the abating of malarial diseases, which was referred to the Committee on Public Health and National Quarantine.

He also presented a telegram from N. C. Newerf, president of the Pacific Protective Society, relative to the validity of the Clayton-Bulwer and Hay-Pauncefote treaties, which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

He also presented a memorial of members of the Utah Chapter of the American Mining Congress, relative to the production of gold and silver in connection with western lead ores as affected by the duty on lead, which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented resolutions adopted by the conservation committee of the Daughters of the American Revolution, relative to the transfer of any part of the public domain to the individual States, which were referred to the Committee on Public Lands.

Mr. GALLINGER presented petitions of sundry citizens of Concord and Oxford, in the State of New Hampshire, praying for the adoption of an amendment to the pending tariff bill exempting from taxation the proceeds of all life insurance policies and life insurance funds, etc., which were referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. GRONNA presented resolutions adopted by the Farmers' Local Society of Equity, of Ramsey County, N. Dak., favoring the creation of better markets for farm produce, which were referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

He also presented a resolution adopted by the Commercial Club of Lisbon, N. Dak., favoring the reduction of the rate of postage on first-class mail matter to 1 cent per ounce, which was referred to the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads.

He also presented a resolution adopted by the Commercial Club of Lisbon, N. Dak., favoring the retention of the duty on wheat, flour, and barley, which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented a resolution adopted by the Local Society of Equity of Ramsey County, N. Dak., relative to the materials used in the construction of good roads, which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

Mr. WILLIAMS presented petitions of sundry citizens of Merigold, Michigan, Blackwater, Indianola, and Laurel, all in the State of Mississippi, praying for a reduction of the duty on sugar, which were referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. TILLMAN. I present a number of telegrams from the Darlington Manufacturing Co.; the W. S. Gray Cotton Mills, of Woodruff; J. M. Geer, of Easley; Ellison A. Smyth, president of the Belton Mills, of Greenville; Alexander Long, president of the Aragon Cotton Mill and Arcade Cotton Mill, of Rock Hill; Ellison A. Smyth, president of the Pelser Manufacturing Co., of Greenville; J. A. Smyth, jr., president of the Watts Mills, of Greenville; the Woodside Cotton Mills, of Greenville; J. A. Smyth, jr., president of the Dunean Mills, of Greenville; Aug. W. Smith, of Spartanburg; the Excelsior Knitting Mills, of Union; the Monarch Cotton Mills, of Union; and a letter from J. I. Westervelt, president of the Carolina Mills, of Greenville, and J. I. Westervelt, president of the Brandon Mills, of Greenville, all in the State of South Carolina, remonstrating against any reduction in the duty on cotton. I move that the telegrams and letters be referred to the Committee on Finance.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. BRISTOW presented a petition of sundry citizens of Strawn, Kans., and a petition of sundry citizens of Piqua, Kans., praying for an adjustment of railway mail pay consequent to the enactment of the parcel-post law, which were referred to the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads.

Mr. McCUMBER presented a resolution adopted by the Commercial Club of Lisbon, N. Dak., praying for the retention of a duty on wheat, flour, and barley, which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented a resolution adopted by the Commercial Club, of Lisbon, N. Dak., favoring the reduction of the rate of postage on first-class mail matter to 1 cent, which was referred to the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads.

Mr. BURTON. I present a telegram, in the nature of resolutions adopted by the board of directors of the Chamber of Commerce of Cincinnati, Ohio, which I ask may be printed in the RECORD and referred to the Committee on Finance.

There being no objection, the telegram was referred to the Committee on Finance and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

CINCINNATI, OHIO, April 30, 1913.

Hon. T. E. BURTON,
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

By unanimous vote the board of directors of the Cincinnati Chamber of Commerce at a meeting held April 29 adopted the following resolution, which is respectfully submitted for your attention:

Whereas the Underwood tariff bill imposes a duty of 10 cents per bushel upon foreign wheat and admits duty free the foreign-milled products of such foreign wheat; and

Whereas this discrimination in favor of the foreign manufacturer is in contradiction alike of all accepted economic doctrine of the established tariff policy of all political parties and of all nations, and in effect pays a bounty to the foreign miller on all products of wheat sold by him in the markets of the United States; and

Whereas if American flour millers have to pay a tax upon foreign-grown wheat, then a simple justice requires that the foreign-milled products of such wheat shall pay an equivalent tax; and if foreign-milled wheat products are admitted duty free, foreign wheat should be admitted duty free: Therefore be it

Resolved, That, believing the proposed legislation would inevitably destroy one of the most important manufacturing industries in the United States, and that it would further result in most serious injury to the American farmer, the Cincinnati Chamber of Commerce, through its board of directors, records itself as unalterably opposed, and earnestly urges upon the President and Congress of the United States the necessity of placing both wheat and its products upon terms of absolute equality.

Resolved, That copies of this preamble and resolution be forwarded immediately to the President of the United States, Senators and Congressmen from Ohio, Indiana, and Kentucky, the members of the Senate Finance Committee, and the Ways and Means Committee of the House of Representatives.

CINCINNATI CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.
W. C. CULKINS, Executive Secretary.

Mr. SAULSBURY presented a petition of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Delaware, praying for the enactment of legislation providing for the closing of the gates of the Panama Exposition on Sundays, which was referred to the Committee on Industrial Expositions.

Mr. WARREN. I present a memorial of the National Consumers' Home Industry League, by its president, William S. Brewer, favoring the creation of a permanent tariff commission. I ask that the memorial be printed in the RECORD and referred to the Committee on Finance.

There being no objection, the memorial was referred to the Committee on Finance and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

MEMORIAL OF THE NATIONAL CONSUMERS' HOME INDUSTRY LEAGUE.
(By its president, William S. Brewer.)

WASHINGTON, D. C.

To the Congress of the United States:

Respectfully represents your petitioner, president of the National Consumers' Home Industry League, of Washington, D. C.

Believing that the policy of taxation and representation and the fostering of home industries and the promoting of the same by our tariff system has become the fixed policy of our Nation, and as such has invited capital and labor to enter into competition in our home markets and the markets of the world upon a basis of investment and a standard of living never heretofore reached by any other nation of the world; believing that the vested rights of the wage earner and the employer are inherent rights and that as such they should not be changed excepting after a scientific investigation which shall show such changes to be of benefit to all, and therefore necessary, we do respectfully petition that during the present session of Congress you will consider a joint resolution substantially as follows:

1. That a joint committee be appointed consisting of the chairman and the ranking member of the minority of the Ways and Means Committee of the House and the chairman and the ranking member of the minority of the Committee on Finance of the Senate, who shall select and appoint a permanent commission of experts, not now in the Government service, who shall inquire into, collect, procure, tabulate, and collate information relative to the importation, exportation, manufacture, and sale of all goods, wares, and articles of merchandise which may be or become matters of trade between the United States and any foreign country, with all tariffs thereon affecting the same, for the purpose of supplying information to the Ways and Means Committee of the House and the Committee on Finance of the Senate, on which to base recommendations for tariff legislation which shall provide revenue for the support of the Government and safeguard our home industries against such foreign competition as will tend to reduce the American standard of living and wage.

2. That for this purpose said commission be authorized, by subcommittee or otherwise, to sit at such times and places as they may deem advisable; to send for persons and papers, to administer oaths, to summons and compel the attendance of witnesses, and to employ such clerical, expert, and other assistance as shall be necessary.

3. That all executive departments and their various bureaus shall at all times furnish said commission with such information as they shall possess, and all United States consuls in foreign countries shall furnish such information relative to the growth, manufacture, and value of such commodities as may become articles of export from those countries to which they may be accredited direct to said commission.

4. We believe tariff legislation, no matter how well intended, when based upon party lines or subject to party or local influences, is a menace to the prosperity of our Government, as well as to our institutions, and particularly to our home industries and its employers and wage earners.

Business, which has just enjoyed the greatest prosperity ever known, is at this time checked and, in many instances, threatened with annihilation by tariff legislation which imperils their existence on account of their inability to meet foreign competition because of the cheaper wages in foreign countries, where they have a lower standard of living.

After interviewing some of the most able men of affairs in and from all parts of the country and of all political beliefs, we find them agreed that the needs of all of the people, both producers and consumers, whatever their political views may be, should be the only basis for any change in the tariff, and that no political party should be permitted to decide this great question to the exclusion of those interests represented by the minority.

5. Employment and business is disturbed by each national election, greatly to the detriment of all citizens of the country and against the very principles of our Government. This uncertainty is due principally to the anticipation, whether justified or not, of the tariff and revenue policy to be enacted, or changes which may follow upon partisan lines, and not based upon a scientific analysis of the requirements both for revenue and the safeguarding of our home industries by a compensatory tariff.

A concrete example of the benefits to be derived from a tariff which fosters home industries is illustrated at the Challenge Cutlery Corporation's works in Bridgeport, Conn. This industry was established in England about a century ago. The tariff system prevented their exporting to this market. They built a factory here. Their workmen followed. These men receive about three times the wages here that they received in England. They are satisfied with their employment and consider their condition and wages here, upon an American standard, far more desirable than their former circumstances in England. A reduction in the tariff on purely partisan lines, as at present outlined, would encourage the closing of this and similar industries and the transference of the business to England. It is the consensus of opinion among all fair-minded American citizens that the status of this industry and many others similarly situated with respect to tariff legislation affecting their welfare should be changed only after a most thorough and scientific investigation.

The petition of the National Consumers' Home Industry League, which is annexed, has been circulated by every possible means at our command, with the request that for the above reasons every person receiving the same sign and return it as early as possible to our home address. Many labor, agricultural, economic, and other societies have joined and are aiding us in the work.

For these reasons we believe that tariff legislation upon purely nonpartisan economic principles, revising schedules as exigencies demand, will insure confidence in all lines of business, keep labor employed, and continue our home industries on full time.

And your petitioner will ever pray.

WILLIAM S. BREWER,
President National Consumers' Home Industry League,
619 Bond Building, Washington, D. C.

ENROLLMENT AND PETITION.

To the National Consumers' Home Industry League:

By my signature I authorize you to enroll me, without any charges or dues, a member of the National Consumers' Home Industry League.

I favor every honorable way of reducing the high cost of living, so long as it does not interfere with the continuance of home industries, and believe that this should be done.

I favor a just and necessary tariff for every American producer—workingman, agriculturist, or manufacturer—against cheaper foreign production which would injure home industry.

In order to conserve the welfare and interests of all and not to impose unjust taxation upon the consumer and to make business more stable, I favor the employment by the Government of a permanent body of nonpolitical tariff experts to recommend, in conjunction with the Ways and Means Committee, safe and scientific tariff laws based upon their findings as to what is the lowest tariff needed to support the Government and to safeguard our established home industries and their employees against idleness or wages on a basis that will humble the American laborer's home and family, thus removing the tariff from constant political strife to a basis of national patriotism and pride.

As a constituent and member of the National Consumers' Home Industry League, I instruct you to use my name and influence in petitions and otherwise to the President or the Congress or my Congressman urging tariff legislation upon this basis.

Name, ——— ———; occupation, ———; street, ———; date, ———; city, ———; State, ———.

Sign the above enrollment and petition and give to our representative, or mail at once to the National Consumers' Home Industry League, Washington, D. C.

T. E. MONTGOMERY, Secretary.

Mr. WARREN presented a memorial of the Wyoming Stock Growers' Association, remonstrating against placing live stock and meat products on the free list, which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented a resolution adopted by the Wyoming Stock Growers' Association, favoring the transfer of the control of the semiarid unappropriated grazing ranges to the Government, which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

Mr. OLIVER. I present a short telegram, in the nature of a memorial from 33 workers in decorated glass, employees of J. M. Kase & Co., Reading, Pa., which I ask to have read and inserted in the RECORD, omitting the signatures, and referred to the Committee on Finance.

There being no objection, the telegram was read and referred to the Committee on Finance, as follows:

READING, PA., April 24, 1913.

HENRY CABOT LODGE,
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.:

American workers in decorated glass have hard struggle for existence even with present tariff. The proposed reduction constitutes a serious menace to our employment, and the sweeping exemptions under paragraph 659 mean our ruin. We, skilled workmen and artists employed by J. M. Kase & Co., art-glass makers, respectfully protest against such action.

Mr. PERKINS presented a memorial of the Chamber of Commerce of Stockton, Cal., remonstrating against the imposition of a duty on wheat, oats, and barley, if flour, oatmeal, pearl barley, etc., are admitted free, which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented a resolution adopted by the Trades and Labor Council of Vallejo, Cal., favoring the adoption of an amendment to the eight-hour law, extending its provisions so as to apply to all grants or franchises granted by the Government relating to natural resources, which was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

Mr. LODGE presented petitions of Granville R. Farrar and 21 other citizens of Abington; Dr. Horace Bumstead and 20 other members of the Harvard Congregational Church, of Brookline; and of Dr. Edward Waldo Emerson and 13 other citizens of Concord, all in the State of Massachusetts, praying for the repeal of the clause in the Panama Canal act exempting American coastwise shipping from the payment of tolls, which were referred to the Committee on Interoceanic Canals.

TARIFF DUTY ON LEAD.

Mr. BORAH. I present a memorial adopted by the Silver-Lead Producers of the States of Idaho, Montana, Nevada, Utah, Colorado, Arizona, and New Mexico, assembled in formal conference at Salt Lake City, Utah, April 3 and 4, 1913, remonstrating against any change being made in the duty on lead in ores. I ask that the memorial be printed in the RECORD and referred to the Committee on Finance.

There being no objection, the memorial was referred to the Committee on Finance and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

MEMORIAL FROM THE ROCKY MOUNTAIN LEAD-ORE PRODUCERS TO THE SIXTY-THIRD CONGRESS OF THE UNITED STATES, SPECIAL SESSION.

To the President, to the Senate, and to the House of Representatives:

The lead producers of the Rocky Mountain States respectfully present for your consideration the following facts relative to their industry:

The entire population of Utah, Nevada, Colorado, Arizona, Idaho, and Montana is dependent on the mining industry, of which lead mining forms a very important part.

The output of gold and silver is largely associated with and dependent upon the production of lead, much of the gold and silver ore being smelted on the lead basis. Restriction of the output of lead will therefore reduce the output of the precious metals.

The men employed in the lead mines receive the highest wages paid to mining labor in the United States. Almost all are native-born or naturalized citizens of a high average of intelligence.

Of the total traffic of the railroads of the Western States, it has been shown by railway statistics that over 80 per cent is furnished by mineral products.

All of the lead ores of the Rocky Mountain States contain some precious metal. Without these precious metals the lead could not be produced, because the cost of production exceeds the value of the lead alone. Crediting the value of the precious metals, such as gold and silver, against the cost of producing the lead, the average profit does not exceed one-half a cent per pound of lead, at the price of 4.4 cents, which is the average price for the last five years. This profit is in most cases less than 5 per cent on the capital invested, which is inadequate, in view of the risks involved in all mining enterprises.

The present duties on lead have produced for the last 10 years an average annual revenue of $734,638, which is approximately 80 per cent more than the revenue as estimated in the bill introduced in the last Congress (H. R. 18642). It is clear, therefore, that the present duties are not in any sense prohibitive, but, on the contrary, are competitive and revenue producing.

It may be admitted, however, that there is a disparity between the duty on lead in ore and the duty on lead in pigs, bars, and bullion, and that the latter might be reduced to the same basis as the lead in ore without any serious detriment to the lead producers. But the protection afforded by the duty on lead in ore is absolutely essential to the maintenance of the lead industry in this country. The fact that, even with the present duty of 1½ cents per pound on lead in ore, the margin between cost and selling price is less than one-half a cent per pound leaves no room for argument as to its necessity.

Under the rate of duty proposed last year revenue would be decreased if the quantities imported remained the same, or, in order to produce the same revenue as at present, the quantities imported would have to be increased 80 per cent. Such an increased importation could only be absorbed in our market by displacing the equivalent quantity of domestic lead. In such a case the Government would be no better off in the matter of revenue than it is now, but a part of our own lead industry would be cut off, and the money that should go to the development of our own resources would go to develop those of Spain and Mexico, our chief competitors in the production of lead.

The mining communities of the Mountain States afford the principal market for much of the agricultural product of the West. Anything that destroys or curtails mining must react to the injury of the farmers.

The development and growth of the Western States have been coincident with the development of mining. Whatever retards the latter must inevitably check the development of all other industries in the mining States.

For the foregoing reasons the lead producers of the Rocky Mountain States, through their representatives in conference at Salt Lake City, do respectfully request that no change be made in the duty on lead in ores, and that it be allowed to remain as at present—a specific duty of 1½ cents per pound on the lead contained—and that the duty on lead in pigs, bars, and bullion be reduced from the present rate of 2½ cents per pound to 1½ cents per pound, placing it on the same basis as lead in ores. We believe that so far as lead is concerned this would be a substantial compliance with the promises of the Democratic Party to revise the tariff downward. It would be a reduction of 29.4 per cent in the duty on lead in pigs, bars, and bullion, the form in which most of our imports are made, while leaving to the domestic producers of the raw lead ores the present measure of protection, which they need to insure the continuance of their industry.

It is respectfully urged, also, that the form of the duty be not changed from specific to ad valorem. An ad valorem duty affords the least protection at the time it is most needed; and in the case of lead it would be exceedingly difficult to determine the proper amount of the duty, and certain grades of ore could be imported and escape the payment of duty, for the reason that the lead in such ores would have no value at the port of entry.

Adopted by the Silver-Lead Producers of the States of Idaho, Montana, Nevada, Utah, Colorado, Arizona, and New Mexico, assembled in formal conference at Salt Lake City, Utah, April 3 to 4, 1913.

JAS. F. MCCARTHY,
President of the Conference.
GEO. W. RITER, Secretary.

TARIFF DUTY ON SUGAR.

Mr. WORKS. Mr. President, a few days ago I had printed in the RECORD a letter from Right Rev. Henry B. Restarick, bishop of the Espiscopal Church in Honolulu. I have now another letter from Bishop Restarick, which is a sort of supplement to the one which I presented. As it is very brief I ask that it be read.

There being no objection, the letter was read and referred to the Committee on Finance, as follows:

HONOLULU, HAWAII, April 17, 1913.

The Hon. JOHN D. WORKS,
Senator from California, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR SENATOR WORKS: May I add a few words to the letter which I sent you in regard to the sugar tariff? Mr. Roosevelt said to me in Washington in 1903, "I am absolutely opposed to orientalizing any American territory." I replied, "Mr. President, Hawaii was orientalized before it became American territory. You must remember that in dealing with the islands.

We have in Hawaii some 80,000 Japanese, and large numbers of these are married and mean to stay here. If the sugar industry here is ruined by the serious reduction or abolition of the tariff, these islands will be given over to the Japanese. With a Japanese manager on a sugar plantation instead of a white man, with Japanese engineers, blacksmiths, sugar boilers, overseers, etc., and by cutting the wages of workers in two, sugar might be grown on certain plantations at a small profit. But the white people would have to go elsewhere. The United States Government has insisted that the island policy should be to get Europeans. The planters have spent enormous sums to carry out this policy; free sugar would drive nine-tenths of the white population other than United States troops from the Islands. Many Americanized Hawaiians and Part-Hawaiians would have to leave. Anyone who knows will tell you that I am not exaggerating when I write this.

Hawaii pays into the United States Treasury over and above what is spent on it (of course not counting the Army and Navy, etc.), some $1,200,000 a year in duties collected. Of course in former times these duties belonged to Hawaii. The islands have well paid the United States Government as an investment. The planters have honestly tried to bring white labor here; the Government threatens to destroy its own policy and hand over the islands to orientals.

Respectfully, yours.

HENRY B. RESTARICK,
Bishop of Honolulu.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. SMOOT, from the Committee on Public Lands, to which was referred the bill (S. 540) for the relief of Joseph Hodges, reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 27) thereon.

Mr. WORKS, from the Committee on Public Lands, to which was referred the bill (S. 488) to authorize the sale and issuance of patent for certain land to H. W. O'Melveny, reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 28) thereon.

Mr. BRADY, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to which was referred the bill (S. 653) for the relief of William O. Mallahan, reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 29) thereon.

THE CIVIL SERVICE.

Mr. OVERMAN. From the Committee on Rules I report Senate resolution No. 4 with amendments.

Mr. President, while I am on my feet I should like to inquire of the chairman of the Committee on Civil Service and Retrenchment how soon we may expect a report upon the resolution I introduced some weeks ago in regard to the civil service? I am receiving many letters about the matter from all over the country, and I should like, as soon as possible, that we have some report from the committee upon that resolution.

Mr. POMERENE. Mr. President, because of other engagements I have not been able to call the committee together, but I hope to do so very early in the coming week.

I may say while I am on my feet that I have had in preparation another resolution, the object of which perhaps is the same as that of the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. OVERMAN], but calling for more specific data. I intended to present that resolution to-day, but it has not as yet been completed in the form in which I desire to present it. I want to say that I shall do that out of no spirit of hostility to the civil-service law, but I shall do it because of a desire to have a real civil-service law administered according to both the spirit and the letter of that law. It is my belief that in some of the departments of this Government there has been an honest effort to so administer the law. I am satisfied, on the other hand, that in other departments there has been a deliberate purpose to disregard it. It may be that my information is not exactly reliable in all particulars, but when information comes to me to the effect that about 95 per cent of the employees in given departments are of one political faith I am at a loss to understand just how that can be in view of a belief I have that when it comes to mental capacity and proper equipment to perform the duties of office there is not a very great difference between the members of the several political parties in this day.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Ohio yield to the Senator from New Hampshire?

Mr. POMERENE. I do.

Mr. GALLINGER. Has the Senator from Ohio made any personal investigation in reference to the proportion of Democrats and Republicans in the departments?

Mr. POMERENE. Well, when the Senator says "personal investigation" I may reply that I have not gone personally to these departments, but that I have, for instance, information to the effect that in one division of the Railway Mail Service the superintendent, the assistant superintendent, and 18 chief clerks are all Republicans, that 39 out of 40 other clerks are Republicans, and that 680 out of 720 clerks on the railroads are Republicans.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, that seems inconceivable, and yet the Railway Mail Service is a very small division of the public service.

I want to call the Senator's attention to the fact that for a great many years the Civil Service Commission has been a Democratic commission—two militant Democrats and one very mild Republican constituting it. It seems to me extraordinary, in view of that fact, that the service can be packed with Republicans to the exclusion of Democrats. I can not understand it.

Mr. STONE. Who are the militant Democrats?

Mr. GALLINGER. I think the Senator from Missouri knows them. One is from Louisiana—Mr. McIlhenny—and the other is from Illinois—a well-known Democrat, who has held office pretty much during his lifetime as a Democrat.

Mr. OVERMAN. Mr. President, I want to say that I will show the Senator from New Hampshire how the civil-service law has been administered, and I have no doubt it will be astonishing to him. I stated on the floor here the other day that it had been charged—I did not charge it—that the law as to-day administered was a fraud. I do not charge that now, but I do charge that its administration has been a deception; that Congress has been fooled; that the people of this country have been fooled. They ask for an investigation, and I ask the Senator from Ohio [Mr. POMERENE] to make an investigation. I say that his committee can do no better thing for this country and for the people of this country than to make an investigation of the civil service.

The President of the United States, through his Economy Commission, has made an investigation. I have tried to get their report, and I shall have the report. I only have a partial report to-day, Mr. President, but I ask Senators to listen to this report as I read it, which shows that the civil service is a cloak for the spoils system. We had better have a spoils system than to have what is known as a civil-service system not carried out upon the principles of the law as enacted, but in order to put certain favorites upon the rolls.

Why, Mr. President, I am told that in one city they have at election times put 250 roundsmen, ward heelers, on the laborers' list, and in a few months promoted them over efficient clerks, one man having been given a $3,000 salary, another man eighteen hundred dollars, and another twelve hundred dollars.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, I will ask the Senator whether they were Republican or Democratic cities where this was done?

Mr. OVERMAN. They were Republicans, I understand, who were put in.

Mr. GALLINGER. Appointed by Democratic mayors and other officials?

Mr. OVERMAN. Oh, no; they were put in by Republican customhouse officers. Now, if the Senator will listen to this report made to President Taft by his own Economy Commission, I think he will be astonished, as I am, as to the manner in which the law has been administered.

Mr. GALLINGER. The Senator knows, Mr. President, that I am not infatuated with the civil service——

Mr. OVERMAN. I know the Senator's views as to that.

Mr. GALLINGER. And I certainly shall welcome a careful and impartial investigation of the whole matter. I have no disposition to obstruct the proposed investigation in the least; and yet some statements have been made to-day that have struck me as being inconceivable; for instance, that so large a proportion of Republicans can be in office under the civil-service law as compared with Democrats. I know that the appointments in my own State, not very numerous it is true, have been absolutely without reference to political considerations.

Mr. OVERMAN. Mr. President, the Senator says the men who preside over the Civil Service Commission are Democrats. I do not know their politics, but if they have administered the law as this board says they have, whether they are Democrats or Bull Moosers or Republicans, they ought to go.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, the Senator says he does not know the politics of the members of the commission. The Senator knows the politics of Gen. John C. Black, and surely the Senator knows the politics of Mr. McIlhenny, the commissioner appointed from Louisiana.

Mr. STONE. I know that Gen. John C. Black voted the Republican ticket.

Mr. GALLINGER. Well, I never heard of that, but I hope he was wise enough to do so on occasions.

Mr. STONE. I understand that he did.

Mr. KERN. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from North Carolina yield to the Senator from Indiana?

Mr. KERN. I desire to ask a question of the Senator from New Hampshire.

Mr. OVERMAN. I will yield for a question.

Mr. KERN. I desire to ask the Senator from New Hampshire whether the Democrats who are on the Civil Service Commission are Democrats who voted the Democratic ticket?

Mr. GALLINGER. Well, Mr. President, I am not going to try to distinguish between the various shades of Democrats any more than I would of Republicans. It has always been understood that Gen. Black was a Democrat of Democrats, and the gentleman appointed from Louisiana, the proprietor of a noted condiment, has always been known as a Democrat, and was confirmed by the Senate with the understanding that he was a Democrat.

Mr. OVERMAN. He was a Rough Rider.

Mr. GALLINGER. He was a Rough Rider and a Democrat; nobody questions it; and nobody has ever heretofore, to my knowledge, questioned that the Civil Service Commission, or a majority of the members of that commission, have been Democrats for a great many years. I have never found any fault with that.

Mr. KERN. I submit that it has been known throughout the country for years that the Civil Service Commission is made up of men who are not Democrats, but who were appointed to office by Republican Presidents as a reward for their infidelity to the Democratic Party.

Mr. GALLINGER. That is a serious charge. The Senator surely does not make that charge against the member of the commission from Louisiana, does he? If not, it must be aimed at Gen. John C. Black, the brave old Democratic soldier.

Mr. KERN. I have not the honor of the acquaintance of the commissioner from Louisiana; but I understand that he was an associate of President Roosevelt, one of his intimates, and that he was appointed on that account, and not because he was a Democrat.

Mr. OVERMAN. I think the Senator from New Hampshire will agree with me that sometimes when a Republican President appoints a Democrat, or vice versa, when a Democratic President appoints a Republican to office, the appointee becomes the meanest kind of a partisan.

Mr. GALLINGER. I do not think that can be so. I do not think gentlemen of standing, as these men are, change their politics because a Republican President chances to appoint them to office. I have too good an opinion of Democrats to believe that.

Mr. OVERMAN. Let us see what a board appointed by a Republican President says about that. I ask Senators to listen. I want to get the full report, and I expect to have it. This is only a partial report.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, before the Senator begins with that, of course the Senator is aware that under the law it is provided that not more than two members of the commission shall be of the same political party.

Mr. OVERMAN. Yes; that is true. Here is what the Economy Commission says:

> After an exhaustive study of the records of the Civil Service Commission——

Mr. THOMAS. Will not the Senator give the date of that report?

Mr. OVERMAN. This is a report made to President Taft just before he went out of office. I presume it is not over three months old. I do not know exactly when it was made, the date not being given here, but it was a short time ago. It was made, as I have stated, by what is known as the Taft Economy Commission.

> After an exhaustive study of the records of the Civil Service Commission and of the evidence which was obtained from the departments (the results of which are shown in the pages that follow), the President's commission has come to the conclusion that the interpretation which has been given to the act by the Civil Service Commission has been such as practically to defeat its primary purpose; that instead of giving to applicants the benefit of competitive examinations, and instead of giving to the service the benefit of rules adopted for "testing the fitness of applicants," instead of making available to the Government persons who had by the rules established been given a rating of superior merit, every "condition of good administration" has been made subordinate and subservient to demands that can find no explanation except a desire to continue a system which the law was designed to supplant.
>
> The spoils system——

Mr. GALLINGER. Now, if the Senator will permit me——

Mr. OVERMAN. Yes, sir.

Mr. GALLINGER. I think I can see the reason for that finding on the part of the commission. The law provides that civil-service appointments shall be equitably apportioned among the States. I never believed in that principle; and the fact is that in many instances men and women making the highest rating, the highest percentage, are denied appointments for the reason that the quota, as they say, of the States from which they come is full. I think very likely there have been instances of that kind, but the Civil Service Commission has been compelled by statute law to make such appointments. I can not believe, I repeat, that the Civil Service Commission, a Democratic commission, has deliberately done anything to exclude Democrats from getting office when they have passed satisfactory examinations.

Mr. OVERMAN. This is a Republican commission that has reported on a Democratic commission—have it that way, then.

Mr. GALLINGER. Have it that way, then; but I do not see that the Economy Commission, as quoted by the Senator, has anything to say about politics, has it?

Mr. OVERMAN. There is no politics in it. They are trying to find the truth, and they give the truth in this report.

Mr. GALLINGER. But the point that was made which attracted my attention—I should not have said a word had it not been made—was that 95 per cent of the employees in many of the departments are Republicans. I do not see that the Economy Commission, whether it has made a good showing or a bad showing in other directions, has had anything yet to say about politics.

Mr. OVERMAN. There is not a word here about politics, except they say the effect of the administration of the civil-service law has been to bring back to us by this means, cloaking deception and deceit, the spoils system. The "spoils system" means putting into office men that belong to the party in power. That, reading between the lines, is really what this report finds.

Mr. GALLINGER. If the Senator will permit just a word, I for one will await with a great deal of interest and some degree of anxiety the report of the committee of which the distinguished Senator from Ohio [Mr. POMERENE] is the chairman on all phases of the civil-service law. I trust particular attention will be given to that question, because the Senator made the charge on the authority of somebody as to the political complexion of civil-service appointees. It has been represented to me over and over again that Republicans have not been getting a fair show in the departments, even under Republican administrations.

Mr. OVERMAN. Why, Mr. President, I have letter after letter saying that the fact is just the other way. I do not know whether the statements they contain are true or not, but this information has come to me because I have introduced the resolution. I have not been seeking information. I have letter after letter stating that in every department of the Government three-fourths of the employees are Republicans. I have not made any partisan fight about this matter. I want to get at the truth.

Mr. GALLINGER. About nine-tenths of them have not any politics. They do not go home to the States to vote as they used to do before the civil-service law was enacted.

Mr. OVERMAN. That is true.

Mr. GALLINGER. They are political somethings—I do not know what. I was going to use a word that I will not use. [Laughter.]

Mr. BRISTOW. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from North Carolina yield to the Senator from Kansas?

Mr. OVERMAN. I yield to the Senator from Kansas.

Mr. BRISTOW. I would suggest, to settle this controversy, that the Senator station tellers at the entrances of the departments, and ask every clerk who enters whether he is a Republican or a Democrat.

Mr. OVERMAN. I do not think that would do any good, for the reason that a good many would say they are Democrats who never have been Democrats.

Mr. SMOOT. Perhaps they said before that they were Republicans when they were really Democrats.

Mr. OVERMAN. Perhaps they did; but I am sorry this matter is taking a partisan turn. Let me continue reading this report.

Mr. JOHNSTON of Alabama. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from North Carolina yield to the Senator from Alabama?

Mr. OVERMAN. Certainly.

Mr. JOHNSTON of Alabama. I will say for the benefit of my Republican friends that during the past six years I found that the great body of the men in the departments with whom I came in touch were Republicans, but since the election they are nearly all Democrats. [Laughter.] There would be very little satisfaction derived from putting tellers at the doors, because they have all changed their politics.

Mr. WARREN. And a great many of them, when they went into the service, went in as Democrats, changed their politics with the change of administration, and will do so again in the future.

Mr. OVERMAN. There may be a few who have done that. I will not make any wholesale charge against the clerks in the departments.

Mr. CUMMINS. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from North Carolina yield to the Senator from Iowa?

Mr. OVERMAN. I yield to the Senator from Iowa.

Mr. CUMMINS. I do not care whether they are Republicans or Democrats. I do care, however, to know whether the Civil Service Commission is violating the law. I should like the Senator from North Carolina to read again the part of the report which alleges a violation of the law, and interpret it, and advise the Senate in just what respect the Civil Service Commission, headed by the distinguished general, John C. Black, is violating the law of the land.

Mr. OVERMAN. Mr. President, I have not finished reading the report. I will read again what I had read when I was interrupted and will read further. I am glad to furnish the information. I wish to say to the Senator from Iowa that I have not the full report. I expect to get it soon. I am only quoting now the statement made by the President's Economy Commission. They say here that they give later the facts upon which they base the statement.

Mr. CUMMINS. I know something of the work of the Economy Commission. I have collaborated a little with that commission in certain phases of the civil-service administration. I was not aware that the Economy Commission charged that the Civil Service Commission was violating the law. I was perfectly aware that the Economy Commission was of the opinion that the civil-service law is inadequate, as everybody who has read or studied the law must admit. It is very inadequate with regard to promotions in the service. But this is the first time I have ever heard that the Civil Service Commission fraudulently admitted men or women to the service contrary to the provisions of the law.

Mr. OVERMAN. Before I finish reading this document the Senator will see that the Economy Commission, before they made their report, brought to the attention of the Civil Service Commission the facts that are stated here, and the Civil Service Commission did not deny them, but evaded the very issue that is raised here—that they were administering the law in such a way as to bring back the spoils system.

Mr. CUMMINS. That, however, is a mere conclusion of the Senator from North Carolina, possibly gathered from the report of the Economy Commission.

Mr. OVERMAN. Let us see whether it is or not.

Mr. CUMMINS. I should like to know the facts. If the Senator from North Carolina alleges that the Civil Service Commission, in holding examinations, has given false ratings to applicants and has thus introduced into the civil service men who were not entitled to enter the civil service under the law, I should like to know it and I should be the first to condemn it.

Mr. OVERMAN. I knew the Senator would; and I knew, as I have said, that he would be astonished when he heard this report from the President's own commission.

Mr. CUMMINS. But the particular complaint made by the President's own commission, as I understand—I have not read it all, but I have talked with some who helped prepare the report—is as to a want of classification in the service, supplemented by the total absence of a system of promotion upon merit. I believe a great many people have been promoted in the service against merit; but that is not the fault of the Civil Service Commission.

Mr. OVERMAN. The Economy Commission say that the interpretation that has been put upon the law by the Civil Service Commission has been such as to "defeat the primary purpose of the law." Then, they go on to make other statements. I said that I had only part of the report, but that I would get it all. I am reading the summary of the report of the commission.

Mr. CUMMINS. Very well; but I hope the Senator from North Carolina will not lend the great weight of his influence to a charge of fraud against the Civil Service Commission, with regard to entrance into the service, until he has carefully examined the whole subject.

Mr. OVERMAN. I said I made no charge of fraud. I said there were charges of fraud which I did not make. This report says that the law is administered contrary to its provisions and its true interpretation, and is deceitful and a sham.

Mr. CUMMINS. There are a great many people who help to administer the civil-service law. The members of the Civil Service Commission are not the only administrators of the civil-service law. I do not believe the Economy Commission intended to charge that the Civil Service Commission had been negligent in the performance of its work or had intentionally either violated or evaded the law.

Mr. OVERMAN. The Senator from Iowa may not put the same interpretation upon this report that I do. I am reading it in order that the Senate may put its own interpretation upon it.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, I rise to a parliamentary inquiry. What has become of the morning business?

Mr. OVERMAN. Mr. President, I realize that this report is not very pleasant reading for the other side of the Chamber.

Mr. LODGE. I have no objection to the Senator's reading it, but I should like to introduce the bills that I have been waiting to introduce. The Senator can read the report or anything else he wants to read afterwards.

Mr. OVERMAN. The Senator can introduce the bills in my time, if he wishes to do so.

Mr. LODGE. If the morning business is finished, of course I have not anything to say, but I did not know that such was the case.

Mr. OVERMAN. It is not finished; but if the Senator rises to make that point, I suppose I can get time later during the morning hour in which to read this paper.

Mr. LODGE. Certainly; there is not the least objection to that.

Mr. OVERMAN. I will yield to the Senator from Massachusetts now to enable him to introduce his bills.

Mr. LODGE. I do not think the Senator has it in his power to yield. I can take him off the floor by a demand for the regular order, but I do not wish to make it.

Mr. OVERMAN. Certainly, the Senator can.

Mr. LODGE. I only thought it would be better if we could get rid of the morning business, which many Senators are desirous of transacting.

Mr. OVERMAN. I think this is more important than some of the bills we are going to introduce to-day.

Mr. LODGE. Then, Mr. President, I ask for the regular order.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The regular order is reports of committees.

Mr. CUMMINS. Mr. President, I desire to ask the Senator from North Carolina a question upon the regular order. He rose originally to submit a report of the Committee on Rules. I should like to ask him when the committee had a meeting. I was not aware that the committee had met, or had disposed of the subject concerning which the report is made.

Mr. OVERMAN. The committee met and instructed me to report a certain resolution introduced by the Senator from Nevada [Mr. NEWLANDS]. After the suggestions and agreement between him and the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. CLARK], I made the report that the committee authorized me to make, with the exception that a certain matter was referred to the Committee on Commerce instead of the Committee on Interstate Commerce, which I thought would be agreeable to the committee.

Mr. CUMMINS. I have no complaint to make of the Senator from North Carolina. He very naturally came to that conclusion, but some members of the committee desired to be heard before any change was made.

Mr. OVERMAN. Then, Mr. President, I desire to recall the report. It was my mistake.

Mr. CUMMINS. No; I do not ask that. I rise simply to say that when the report comes before the Senate for adoption I shall feel at liberty to make such suggestions as may seem best to me in regard to it.

Mr. OVERMAN. Of course. We had a unanimous agreement in the committee as to what the report should be. There was a division of sentiment on the floor of the Senate as to two things. One was as to waterways, and the other was as to the matter of conservation. In making the report on behalf of the committee I referred one of those items, as suggested by the Senator, and as I thought I was fully authorized to do by the committee, to the Committee on Commerce, and the other to the Committee on Interstate Commerce. One subject was referred to the Committee on Conservation of Natural Resources and another to the Committee on the Territories.

Mr. CUMMINS. The committee has never had under consideration, and has never decided, what part of the resolution should be referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce and what part should be referred to the Committee on Commerce.

Mr. OVERMAN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to withdraw the report.

Mr. CUMMINS. I do not ask that, but I want to have it perfectly clear that I had nothing to do with making the report.

Mr. OVERMAN. I ask unanimous consent to withdraw the report.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from North Carolina asks unanimous consent to withdraw the report. If there be no objection, consent is given.

Mr. STONE. Mr. President, before anything is withdrawn and the subject is disposed of, I desire to say just a few words.

I agree with the Senator from Iowa [Mr. CUMMINS] that we are more interested in the proper and honest administration of the law than we are in the personnel of the commission. That should go without the saying. But as to the personnel, I desire to make a remark, somewhat in the nature of a further reply to the observations of the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. GALLINGER]. He said that the Civil Service Commission was universally understood to be a Democratic commission. He said, in substance, that he had not supposed there was any question about that. I, for one, question it. I think there are a great many other people who question it.

It may not be important, Mr. President, and I do not think it is of particular importance, whether a majority of the members of the commission are Democrats or Republicans. Still, since the question has been brought before the Senate, the real facts ought to be known; and I can not permit the statement of the Senator from New Hampshire to go unchallenged.

I do not know anything about the commissioner from Louisiana beyond what has been said here to-day—that he was one of Col. Roosevelt's Rough Riders, a close personal friend of his, appointed by him in furtherance of the general policy of that distinguished President to recognize the valuable services of his Rough Riders.

As to Gen. Black, the chairman of the commission, I have not regarded him, and I do not believe Senators on this side or Democrats generally throughout the United States for some years have regarded him, as a member of the Democratic Party. There was a time when he was a distinguished and valued and important member of the Democratic Party; but we are all familiar with the fact that in the not distant past he abandoned his party organization, and supported the Republican ticket. If he has reallied himself with the Democratic Party since then, he has not given public notice of the fact.

Mr. McCUMBER. Mr. President, I rise to a point of order. I ask the Chair what is to be the effect of a demand by any Senator for the regular order. The Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. LODGE] demanded the regular order, and still we are going right on with the discussion of a matter which may be important to the Senators who are discussing it. There are a great many of us, however, who do not care a continental whether Gen. Black is a Republican or a Democrat, but who would like to introduce our bills and get through with the morning business, and then allow anyone who desires to do so to discuss this subject at length.

Mr. STONE. Mr. President, in deference to the very courteous suggestion of my pious friend from North Dakota, I will yield the floor to his demand for the regular order. I hope the Senator will take his seat now, as I do.

Mr. McCUMBER. I am gratified to know that the Senator will do so. A Senator generally takes his seat at his own volition, or upon the direction of the Chair, and not that of any other Senator.

Mr. STONE. I take it, now, upon the direction of the Senator from North Dakota.

Mr. GALLINGER and others. Regular order!

Mr. OVERMAN. I wish to give notice that there will be some other calls for the regular order during the present session.

Mr. McCUMBER. Mr. President, I ask for the regular order.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The report has been withdrawn by unanimous consent. Reports of committees are still in order.

RETIRED OFFICERS OF THE ARMY.

Mr. JOHNSTON of Alabama. From the Committee on Military Affairs, I report back with amendments Senate resolution 35, submitted by the Senator from Delaware [Mr. DU PONT] on April 9, and I submit a report (No. 30) thereon. I ask unanimous consent for the consideration of the resolution. It is a mere matter of inquiry.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Alabama asks unanimous consent for the present consideration of the resolution. If there be no objection——

Mr. GALLINGER and Mr. PENROSE. Let it be read.

Mr. LODGE. Let it be read. I reserve the right to object.

The Secretary read the resolution submitted by Mr. DU PONT April 9, 1913, as follows:

Resolved, That the Secretary of War be requested to transmit to the Senate of the United States, as early as possible, the following information:

(1) The nature and character of the duties that retired officers of the United States Army may be detailed to perform under existing laws, regulations, and orders;

(2) The laws, regulations, and orders, if any, that define what is known as active duty on the retired list, and whether such laws, regulations, and orders permit officers on the retired list to apply for such duty; and

(3) The number of retired officers of the Army who have applied for active duty on the retired list since January 1, 1908, and the percentage of those applying who have been detailed on active duty on the retired list during this period.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the consideration of the resolution?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the resolution.

The first amendment was, on page 1, line 10, after the word "duty" and the semicolon, to strike out the word "and."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 1, line 15, after the word "period," to insert a semicolon and the word "and," and add the following paragraph:

(4) The number, rank, and pay of officers now on the retired list, and the avocations in civil life in which they are now engaged.

The amendment was agreed to.

The resolution as amended was agreed to.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

Bills were introduced, read the first time, and, by unanimous consent, the second time, and referred as follows:

By Mr. GALLINGER:

A bill (S. 1690) to provide for the purchase of a site and the erection of a public building thereon at Exeter, in the State of New Hampshire;

A bill (S. 1691) to provide for the purchase of a site and the erection of a public building thereon at Lebanon, in the State of New Hampshire;

A bill (S. 1692) to provide for the purchase of a site and the erection of a public building thereon at Littleton, in the State of New Hampshire; and

A bill (S. 1693) to provide for the purchase of a site and the erection of a public building thereon at Claremont, in the State of New Hampshire; to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

By Mr. SHIVELY:

A bill (S. 1694) granting an increase of pension to Lot H. Fleming;

A bill (S. 1695) granting a pension to Edward G. Goodbub;

A bill (S. 1696) granting an increase of pension to Joel Yeager;

A bill (S. 1697) granting an increase of pension to George S. Kendall (with accompanying papers);

A bill (S. 1698) granting an increase of pension to John Marsh (with accompanying papers); and

A bill (S. 1699) granting an increase of pension to George W. North (with accompanying papers); to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. FLETCHER:

A bill (S. 1700) for the relief of the heirs of Salvador Costa (with accompanying papers); to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. PENROSE:

A bill (S. 1702) to change the name of oleomargarine to margarin; to change the rate of tax on margarin; to make margarin and other substitutes for dairy products subject to the laws of any State or Territory into which they may be transported; to afford the Internal-Revenue Bureau means for the more efficient detection of fraud and for the collection of revenues; to repeal an act defining butter and imposing a tax upon and regulating the manufacture, sale, importation, and exportation of oleomargarine, approved August 2, 1886, with amendments thereto; to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

A bill (S. 1703) for the relief of George P. Chandler;

A bill (S. 1704) for the relief of Edgar B. Strang; and

A bill (S. 1705) to correct the military record of Robert D. Magill; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

A bill (S. 1706) to authorize the provision of accommodations for the United States courts in the Federal Building at Sunbury, Pa., and to increase the limit of cost for said building accordingly; to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

A bill (S. 1707) for the relief of F. B. Schnure; to the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads.

A bill (S. 1708) for the relief of John E. Frymier; to the Committee on Claims.

A bill (S. 1709) granting a pension to Mary A. Heck;

A bill (S. 1710) granting an increase of pension to Boaz D. Blose;

A bill (S. 1711) granting an increase of pension to Robert S. Miller;

A bill (S. 1712) granting an increase of pension to John Chambers;

A bill (S. 1713) granting a pension to Kate G. Caton;

A bill (S. 1714) granting an increase of pension to Franklin Hoch;

A bill (S. 1715) granting a pension to Mary A. Dunkle;

A bill (S. 1716) granting a pension to George W. Painter;

A bill (S. 1717) granting an increase of pension to Andrew Reese;

A bill (S. 1718) granting an increase of pension to Abraham Bowman;

A bill (S. 1719) granting a pension to Susan Olewiler;

A bill (S. 1720) granting an increase of pension to William D. Martin;

A bill (S. 1721) granting an increase of pension to Thomas Jefferson Morris;

A bill (S. 1722) granting a pension to Sarah Ann Bradford;

A bill (S. 1723) granting an increase of pension to Edward D. Goss;

A bill (S. 1724) granting an increase of pension to Isaac Smouse;

A bill (S. 1725) granting a pension to Mary E. Mathews;

A bill (S. 1726) granting a pension to Philip B. Depp; and

A bill (S. 1727) granting an increase of pension to Peter Bruner; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. SHEPPARD:

A bill (S. 1728) to prevent the desecration of the flag of the United States and to provide punishment therefor; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. McCUMBER:

A bill (S. 1729) granting an increase of pension to John McCrory (with accompanying papers); to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. CUMMINS:

A bill (S. 1730) to create a trade commission, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

By Mr. BRISTOW:

A bill (S. 1731) granting an increase of pension to Martin Parker; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. LODGE:

A bill (S. 1732) providing for the establishment of a hospital ship in connection with the American fisheries (with accompanying papers); to the Committee on Fisheries.

A bill (S. 1733) for the erection of a memorial to Col. Edward Dickinson Baker at Balls Bluff, Va.; to the Committee on the Library.

A bill (S. 1734) granting an increase of pension to William Box;

A bill (S. 1735) granting an increase of pension to Cordelia R. Bragg; and

A bill (S. 1736) granting an increase of pension to Mary J. Bates; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. STERLING (for Mr. CRAWFORD):

A bill (S. 1737) granting an increase of pension to William W. Pinkerton (with accompanying paper); to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. NELSON:

A bill (S. 1738) granting an increase of pension to Amelia Hubbard; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. BORAH:

A bill (S. 1739) to reserve certain lands and incorporate the same and make them a part of the Caribou National Forest Reserve; to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

By Mr. OVERMAN:

A bill (S. 1740) to apply a part of the proceeds from the sale of public lands to the support and maintenance of farm-life schools for the benefit of agriculture and to increase the knowledge of farming; to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

A bill (S. 1741) for the relief of the estate of Henry Kizer, deceased; and

A bill (S. 1742) for the relief of W. T. Hawkins; to the Committee on Claims.

A bill (S. 1743) for the relief of Stanley Mitchell; and

A bill (S. 1744) to appoint Frederick H. Lemly a passed assistant paymaster on the active list of the United States Navy; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

A bill (S. 1745) providing for the establishment of a term of the district court for the eastern district of North Carolina at Wilson, N. C.; and

A bill (S. 1746) to codify, revise, and amend the laws relating to the judiciary, approved March 3, 1911; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

A bill (S. 1747) granting an increase of pension to Susan A. Reynolds; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. OLIVER:

A bill (S 1748) granting an increase of pension to Mary Salsgiver; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. SHERMAN:

A bill (S. 1749) granting an increase of pension to Cyrus Riley Pennell; and

A bill (S. 1750) granting a pension to Henry Swain; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. O'GORMAN:

A bill (S. 1751) providing for the presentation of medals to all surviving soldiers of the Battle of Gettysburg; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

A bill (S. 1752) granting a pension to Judson P. Adams; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. DU PONT:

A bill (S. 1753) granting an increase of pension to Wingate S. Carpenter; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. MYERS:

A bill (S. 1754) to withdraw from the Yellowstone National Park and restore to the public domain of the United States a certain tract of land lying on the north side of said park and segregated from the remainder of said park by the Yellowstone River and comprising an area of about 2,969 acres; to the Committee on Public Lands.

A bill (S. 1755) for the relief of certain nations or tribes of Indians in Montana; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. DILLINGHAM:

A bill (S. 1756) granting an increase of pension to James M. Carpenter (with accompanying papers); to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. ASHURST:

A bill (S. 1757) for the relief of the administrator and heirs of John G. Campbell to permit the prosecution of Indian depredation claims; to the Committee on Immigration.

A bill (S. 1758) for the relief of Warren E. Day; to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

LEGISLATIVE JOURNALS IN THE MAILS.

By Mr. BRYAN:

A bill (S. 1701) to admit legislative journals of State and Territorial legislatures to the mails as second-class mail matter; to the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads.

Mr. BRYAN. The bill is short, and I ask that it be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

A bill (S. 1701) to admit legislative journals of State and Territorial legislatures to the mails as second-class mail matter.

Be it enacted, etc., That legislative journals of the several State or Territorial legislatures, not exceeding 100 copies to each member of any such legislature, when mailed from the State or Territorial capitals during legislative sessions, shall be accepted as second-class mail matter.

AMENDMENTS TO APPROPRIATION BILLS.

Mr. GALLINGER submitted an amendment relative to the enforcement of the antitrust laws, etc., intended to be proposed by him to the sundry civil appropriation bill, which was ordered to lie on the table and to be printed.

Mr. McCUMBER submitted an amendment proposing to increase the appropriation for the Glacier National Park, Mont., from $100,000 to $250,000, intended to be proposed by him to the sundry civil appropriation bill, which was ordered to lie on the table and to be printed.

He also submitted an amendment proposing to appropriate $2,000 to print a report of the proceedings of the National Convention of State Railway Commissioners, etc., intended to be proposed by him to the sundry civil appropriation bill, which was ordered to lie on the table and to be printed.

Mr. OWEN submitted an amendment proposing to appropriate $10,000 for settling land suits in eastern Oklahoma, etc., intended to be proposed by him to the Indian appropriation bill, which was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs and ordered to be printed.

THE TARIFF.

Mr. FLETCHER submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill (H. R. 3321) to reduce tariff duties and to provide revenue for the Government, and for other purposes, which was referred to the Committee on Finance and ordered to be printed.

Mr. CUMMINS submitted two amendments intended to be proposed by him to the bill (H. R. 3321) to reduce tariff duties and to provide revenue for the Government, and for other purposes, which were referred to the Committee on Finance and ordered to be printed.

Mr. STERLING submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill (H. R. 3321) to reduce tariff duties and to provide revenue for the Government, and for other purposes, which was referred to the Committee on Finance and ordered to be printed.

Mr. BURTON submitted four amendments intended to be proposed by him to the bill (H. R. 3321) to reduce tariff duties and to provide revenue for the Government, and for other purposes, which were referred to the Committee on Finance and ordered to be printed.

Mr. OLIVER submitted four amendments intended to be proproposed by him to the bill (H. R. 3321) to reduce tariff duties and to provide revenue for the Government, and for other purposes, which were referred to the Committee on Finance and ordered to be printed.

Mr. SAULSBURY presented two amendments intended to be proposed by him to the bill (H. R. 3321) to reduce tariff duties and to provide revenue for the Government, and for other purposes, which were referred to the Committee on Finance and ordered to be printed.

CLAIMS UNDER MARCUS P. NORTON'S PATENTS.

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. There was referred to the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads the bill (S. 1269) for the adjudication and determination of the claims arising under joint resolution of July 14, 1870, authorizing the Postmaster General to continue in use in the postal service Marcus P. Norton's combined postmarking and stamp-canceling handstamp patents or otherwise, which both the author and the committee think properly belongs to the Committee on Claims. I therefore ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads be discharged from the further consideration of the bill and that it be referred to the Committee on Claims.

The VICE PRESIDENT. If there is no objection, the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads will be discharged from the further consideration of the bill, and it will be referred to the Committee on Claims. The Chair hears none.

STENOGRAPHER TO JOINT COMMITTEE ON PRINTING.

Mr. FLETCHER submitted the following concurrent resolution (S. Con. Res. 2), which was referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate:

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That the Joint Committee on Printing be, and hereby is, authorized to employ a stenographer, compensation at the rate of $75 per month, to be paid one-half out of the contingent fund of the Senate and one-half out of the contingent fund of the House until otherwise provided for.

THE TARIFF BILL.

Mr. SMOOT. I submit a resolution and ask for its immediate consideration.

The resolution (S. Res. 70) was read, as follows:

Resolved, That there be printed 4,750 additional copies of H. R. 3321, a bill to reduce tariff duties and to provide revenue for the Government, and for other purposes, for the use of the Senate document room.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Utah asks for the immediate consideration of the resolution. Is there objection? The Chair hears none.

Mr. OVERMAN. Mr. President, I suppose I can rise to discuss the resolution. I was about, before concluding my remarks, to read from the report of the Economy Commission. I will just go on with my remarks on that matter. As the Senator from Iowa [Mr. CUMMINS] requested that I should read over what I had read, I will read the whole paragraph of the Economy Commission report——

Mr. OLIVER. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Pennsylvania will state his inquiry.

Mr. OLIVER. I ask what is the subject before the Senate at present?

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question before the Senate is on agreeing to the resolution submitted by the Senator from Utah [Mr. SMOOT].

Mr. OLIVER. I submit that the Senator from North Carolina is not talking to the subject.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, I think under paragraph 3 of Rule VII debate is not in order. The rule provides that—

Until the morning business shall have been concluded, and so announced from the chair, or until the hour of 1 o'clock has arrived, no motion to proceed to the consideration of any bill, resolution, report of a committee, or other subject upon the calendar shall be entertained by the presiding officer, unless by unanimous consent; and if such consent be given——

Which has happened in this case—

the motion shall not be subject to amendment, and shall be decided without debate upon the merits of the subject proposed to be taken up.

I make the point of order that debate is not in order under that rule.

Mr. OVERMAN. Has unanimous consent been given for the consideration of the resolution?

The VICE PRESIDENT. It has.

Mr. OVERMAN. It is then before the Senate, and is debatable.

Mr. LODGE. At this stage of the proceedings debate is not in order. It is open to the Senator to object, of course.

Mr. OVERMAN. If it is before the Senate by unanimous consent, then I have a right to debate it.

Mr. PENROSE. Not under the rule.

Mr. LODGE. Not under the rule I have read.

Mr. OVERMAN. It seems that Senators do not want to hear the truth. I will bring it out at another time. I give that notice.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The point of order is well taken. The question is on agreeing to the resolution submitted by the Senator from Utah.

The resolution was agreed to.

WORKS OF ART IN CAPITOL BUILDING.

Mr. GALLINGER. I send a resolution with the accompanying papers to the desk and ask that it be read and that the resolution and the papers accompanying it may then be referred to the Committee on Printing.

The resolution (S. Res. 74) was read and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Printing, as follows:

Resolved, That the document herewith submitted entitled "Works of Art in the United States Capitol Building, including biographies of the artists," compiled under the direction of the Superintendent of the United States Capitol Building and Grounds, by Charles E. Fairman, be printed as a Senate document.

ALLEGED SLAVERY IN THE PHILIPPINE ISLANDS.

Mr. BORAH. I offer a resolution and ask for its present consideration. I also ask to have printed in the RECORD in connection with the resolution a certain letter which is printed in the National Humane Review for April, 1913.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Idaho submits a resolution which will be read.

The Secretary read the resolution (S. Res. 71), as follows:

Resolved, That the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, directed to send to the Senate any and all facts bearing directly or indirectly upon the truth of the charge, publicly made, that human slavery exists at this time in the Philippine Islands, and that human beings are bought and sold in such islands as chattels.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Idaho asks for the immediate consideration of the resolution. Is there objection? The Chair hears none. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

Mr. STONE. Mr. President, my attention was diverted. I will ask the Senator what he desires to do? What does the resolution call for?

Mr. BORAH. Facts.

Mr. STONE. From whom?

Mr. BORAH. The Secretary of War.

Mr. WARREN. Is there a letter accompanying the resolution which the Senator wishes to have read?

Mr. BORAH. There is a letter to be printed in the RECORD, signed by the secretary of the interior of the Philippine Islands, alleging the existence of slavery in those islands to be a fact.

Mr. WARREN. I should like to have it read if it is from the Secretary of the Interior, who has charge of the islands.

Mr. BORAH. It is from the secretary of the interior of the Philippine Islands.

Mr. WARREN. Oh!

Mr. ROOT. I should like to have the letter read.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read as requested.

The Secretary proceeded to read, and read as follows:

The Philippine Legislature has ample power to pass such humane legislation as it sees fit——

Mr. ROOT. Is the Secretary reading a letter which is addressed to anyone written by anyone? He seems to be reading from a newspaper.

Mr. BORAH. It is a letter printed in a newspaper.

Mr. ROOT. Is it addressed to anyone?

Mr. BORAH. It is addressed to some one, and it is also signed by the secretary of the interior.

Mr. ROOT. I merely want to have the whole letter read. I do not know what it is.

Mr. BORAH. That is precisely what has been requested. The part preceding the letter is simply a comment of the paper. That which the Secretary is now proceeding to read is the letter itself. I assume that is what the Senator wanted.

Mr. ROOT. That is what I wanted, but the Secretary evidently did not begin at the beginning of the letter.

The Secretary read as follows:

In a letter from the Hon. Dean C. Worcester, secretary of the interior of the United States Government of the Philippine Islands, written in Manila recently, and addressed to Dr. William O. Stillman, president of the American Humane Association, the following remarkable statement of fact appears:

* * * * * * * *

A portion of Dean Worcester's letter is here quoted, as follows:

* * * * * * * *

The Philippine Legislature has ample power to pass such humane legislation as it sees fit for the regularly organized provinces. The Philippine Commission has the same authority with reference to the so-called special government provinces. So that there is no lack of adequate authority to pass humane legislation covering the entire Philippine Archipelago.

So far as I am aware, the only laws thus far passed by the commission or the legislature which can properly fall under this head are the "Act for the prevention of cruelty to animals" and the "Act prohibiting slavery, involuntary servitude, peonage, and the sale and purchase of human beings in the Mountain Province and the Province of Nueva Vizcaya and Agusan and providing punishment therefor." This act passed by the Philippine Commission under its authority as the exclusive legislative body for the territory inhabited by Moros and other non-Christian tribes is of course applicable only to that territory. Acts similar to or identical with this act have been passed by the upper house and sent to the Philippine Assembly for three consecutive years, and, indeed, are now pending there. Up to the present time the assembly has always refused to pass such an act.

The organic act passed by Congress on July 1, 1912, provides "that neither slavery nor involuntary servitude, except as a punishment for crime whereof the party shall have been duly convicted, shall exist in said islands." Unfortunately, however, Congress provided no penalty for the violation of this provision, and the supreme court of these islands held, prior to the adoption of the act hereinbefore mentioned, that—

"There is at present no law punishing slave holding as a crime.

"The constitutional provision of the Philippine bill 'that neither slavery nor involuntary servitude shall exist in these islands,' while operating to nullify any agreement in contravention of it, requires supplementary legislation to give it effect criminally."

We are dealing not with a civil remedy but with a criminal charge in relation to which the bill of rights defines no crime and provides no punishment. Its effects can not be carried into the realm of criminal law without an act of the legislature.

The situation then, so far as concerns legislation prohibiting slavery, peonage, and involuntary servitude, is that there exists ample authority, but that the lower house declines to use its authority in this regard. We have, of course, the provisions of the old Spanish Penal Code against forcible detention, but in the large majority of cases this can not be proven, as the persons involuntarily held are afraid to tell the truth.

The legislative council of the Moro Province has passed an anti-slavery law of its own, but except in the Moro Province, the Mountain Province, Nueva Vizcaya, and Agusan the sale, barter, and purchase of human beings is still lawful in the Philippine Islands.

The Philippine Assembly excuses its conduct by the claim that slavery does not exist in these islands. This is absurd. There are Negrito slaves held to-day in the city of Manila.

DEAN C. WORCESTER,
Secretary of the Interior.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the resolution submitted by the Senator from Idaho.

The resolution was agreed to.

ASSISTANT CLERK TO COMMITTEE ON NAVAL AFFAIRS.

Mr. TILLMAN submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 73), which was read, and, with the accompanying paper, referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate:

Resolved, That the Committee on Naval Affairs be, and it is hereby, authorized to employ an assistant clerk, at $1,440 per annum, to be paid from "miscellaneous items" of the contingent fund of the Senate until otherwise provided by law.

NEGROES IN CIVIL SERVICE.

Mr. STONE. I submit a resolution for reference to the Committee on Civil Service and Retrenchment. I ask that the resolution be read.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The resolution submitted by the Senator from Missouri will be read.

The Secretary read the resolution (S. Res. 72), as follows:

Resolved, That the Committee on Civil Service and Retrenchment shall inquire into and report as to the number of negroes employed in the classified civil service, showing the number employed in each department or other governmental establishment in the District of Columbia and at other places, giving aggregate salaries paid, and as far as possible showing the kind of service in which such employees are engaged, so that the Senate may be fully informed as to the premises.

Mr. STONE. Mr. President, I hold in my hand a clipping from yesterday morning's Washington Post setting forth an account of a meeting held in this city the night before by what is known as the National Democratic Fair-Play Association. I know nothing about the association, but there are some very interesting things stated in this report. Among other things the report shows that there are 926 negroes employed in the Treasury Department, 593 in the Interior Department, and so on. I ask that the paper be referred to the committee along with the resolution I have offered.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the resolution, together with the accompanying paper, will be referred to the Committee on Civil Service and Retrenchment.

THE CIVIL SERVICE.

Mr. OVERMAN. Mr. President, in connection with the resolution heretofore submitted by me, I ask the Secretary to read, for the information of the Senate, a marked paragraph in the paper which I send to the desk, and which I had intended to read myself. After it has been read I ask that it may be referred to the committee, together with the resolution.

The VICE PRESIDENT. In the absence of objection, the Secretary will read as requested.

The Secretary read as follows:

After an exhaustive study of the records of the Civil Service Commission and of the evidence which was obtained from the departments—the results of which are shown in the pages that follow—the President's commission has come to the conclusion that the interpretation which has been given to the act by the Civil Service Commission has been such as practically to defeat its primary purpose; that instead of giving to applicants the benefit of competitive examinations, and instead of giving to the service the benefit of rules adopted for "testing the fitness of applicants"; instead of making available to the Government persons who had by the rules established been given a rating of superior merit, every "condition of good administration" has been made subordinate and subservient to demands that can find no explanation except a desire to continue a system which the law was designed to supplant. Practically the only effect of the law as interpreted has been to eliminate from the possibility of appointment to positions in the classified service such persons as had entirely failed to obtain any standing whatever; i. e., to obtain an average above the passing mark. This conclusion—that the result has been to defeat the operation of the purposes of the act—is amply supported by the facts which are shown in detail below. (Report submitted as a statement of fact.)

In submitting this report the thought has been that its chief value will lie in statements of fact. In order that controversy might be confined entirely to critical comment and constructive recommendation the statements of fact are entirely separated in the text from that part which is purely descriptive. To the end that all controversy might be eliminated from the descriptive statement this portion of the report was prepared and submitted to the Civil Service Commission on ———, 1912, with the request that it be reviewed and corrected or enlarged upon, if need be, in order that it might be accepted without question or cavil as a basis for discussion. This descriptive text having been returned, after making such modifications as would eliminate every recital concerning which question had been raised, critical comment and constructive recommendations were submitted January 28, 1913. On ———, 1913, the comment of the Civil Service Commission, as an answer to the critical statements and constructive recommendations, was returned (Exhibit —), together with a proposed change in the rules (Exhibit —). To this answer the President's commission filed a reply (Exhibit —) which, in brief, calls attention to the fact that the answer or comment of the Civil Service Commission avoided the issues which had been raised and that the proposed memorandum, while it was in the nature of an admission of past interpretation and practice that have been adverse to "good administration," does not reach nor correct the evil results that are clearly written on the face of the record as a matter of experience. (Recommendations of the President's commission.)

Mr. OVERMAN. Mr. President, in the same connection I wish to have read a paragraph from a letter which I have received, desiring that it also go into the RECORD and be referred to the committee with the resolution.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection the Secretary will read as requested.

The Secretary read as follows:

Now, sir, I happen to be a Federal employee at the New York customhouse for the past year and three months, and if you had but a faint idea of how favoritism and "pull" are worked here you would not ask for an appropriation to conduct an inquiry, but simply demand it in the interest of common decency.

In the division in which I am employed and to which I was appointed from a civil-service list there are three grades of pay—$840, $960, and $1,095 per annum. You are instructed on your appointment that you are advanced from one grade to the higher on your efficiency. After a few months in the service I learned the efficiency meant "pull," and from my acquaintance in the division it looked to me as if illiteracy was a qualification for advancement. Mr. Loeb in 1909 abolished the night inspectors and former customs watchmen, later called customs guards. He demoted day and night inspectors by the wholesale, the majority of whom were Civil War veterans. He had 250 laborers off the scales sworn in as watchmen, ranging in salaries from $840 to $1,095 per annum, placing at their head a deputy surveyor who had been an inspector for a few months (by Executive order) at $3,000 per annum. None of these laborers ever passed a civil-service examination of any kind, but they were all more or less active Republicans, the majority being district captains. All this time an eligible list for night inspector was in existence, but none were taken from it until all these henchmen were well provided for, a good number being appointed roundsmen at $1,200 per annum.

With a few exceptions, all of these laborers have been advanced in salary notwithstanding the fact that some of them have had several charges of a more or less serious nature preferred against them. Some of them are good men, but there are others who are simply a disgrace to the customs uniform. Yet they go ahead, while the civil-service man remains stationary.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The papers will be referred as requested.

Mr. ROOT. Was the signature to the letter read?

Mr. OVERMAN. If the Senator insists on it, I will have it read.

Mr. ROOT. I wish the signature read, of course.

Mr. OVERMAN. Of course you will have the writer turned out.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read as requested.

The Secretary read as follows:

Thomas O'Hara, Customs Guard, Room 135, Customhouse, New York.

Mr. BACON. Has morning business closed, Mr. President?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Morning business has closed.

EXECUTIVE SESSION.

Mr. BACON. If there be nothing further to be presented to the Senate, I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to, and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business. After 2 hours and 30 minutes spent in executive session the doors were reopened.

SPECIAL FISCAL AGENTS.

Mr. SIMMONS. I am directed by the Committee on Finance to report the resolution (S. Res. 75) which I send to the desk. I ask unanimous consent for its present consideration.

The resolution was read, considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to, as follows:

Resolved, That the Senate approve the appointment of the Right Hon. Sir Edgar Speyer, Bart., P. C., and the Messrs. Henry Oppenheimer, Henry William Brown, Henry Gordon Leith, James Speyer, and Eduard Beit von Speyer, trading under the name, style, and firm of Speyer Bros., at London, England, to be special fiscal agents of the Navy Department at that place, agreeably to the nomination.

ADJOURNMENT TO MONDAY.

Mr. KERN. I move that when the Senate adjourns to-day it adjourn to meet on Monday next.

The motion was agreed to.

AMENDMENT OF THE RULES.

Mr. CLARKE of Arkansas. I enter a motion to reconsider the vote by which the Senate on the 28th ultimo agreed to the amendment of the standing rule of the Senate numbered 12, relating to the calling of the yeas and nays.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Notice of the motion will be entered.

Mr. OVERMAN. I move that the Senate adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 4 o'clock and 5 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until Monday, May 5, 1913, at 12 o'clock m.

NOMINATIONS.

Executive nominations received by the Senate May 1, 1913.

COLLECTOR OF CUSTOMS.

John W. Martin, of Florida, to be collector of customs for the district of Jacksonville, in the State of Florida, in place of William H. Lucas, superseded.

SURVEYORS OF CUSTOMS.

Warner S. Kinkead, of Kentucky, to be surveyor of customs for the port of Louisville, in the State of Kentucky, in place of J. Frank Taylor, whose term of office expired by limitation January 17, 1913.

Charles R. Kurtz, of Pennsylvania, to be surveyor of customs in the district of Philadelphia, in the State of Pennsylvania, in place of Perry M. Lytle, resigned.

COMMISSIONER OF CORPORATIONS.

Joseph E. Davies, of Wisconsin, to be Commissioner of Corporations, in the Department of Commerce, vice Luther Conant, jr.

ASSISTANT COMPTROLLER OF THE TREASURY.

Walter W. Warwick, of Ohio, to be Assistant Comptroller of the Treasury, in place of Leander P. Mitchell, deceased.

COLLECTOR OF INTERNAL REVENUE.

Louis W. Murphy, of Iowa, to be collector of internal revenue for the third district of Iowa, in place of Michael J. Tobin, superseded.

CHIEF JUSTICE OF THE COURT OF CLAIMS.

Edward K. Campbell, of Alabama, to be chief justice of the Court of Claims, vice Stanton J. Peelle, resigned.

UNITED STATES MARSHAL.

Andrew H. Hudspeth, of New Mexico, to be United States marshal, district of New Mexico, vice Secundino Romero, resigned.

RECEIVER OF PUBLIC MONEYS.

Mrs. Annie G. Rogers, of Leadville, Colo., to be receiver of public moneys at Leadville, Colo., vice Andrew P. Adolphson, term expired.

SURVEYOR GENERAL OF WASHINGTON.

Richard Roediger, of Tacoma, Wash., to be surveyor general of Washington, vice Edward P. Kingsbury, resigned.

PROMOTIONS IN THE ARMY.

INFANTRY ARM.

Lieut. Col. Frank B. McCoy, Twenty-fourth Infantry, to be colonel from April 28, 1913, vice Col. John S. Parke, Infantry, unassigned, detached from his proper command.

Lieut. Col. Richard M. Blatchford, Infantry, unassigned, to be colonel from April 30, 1913, vice Col. Arthur Williams, Eleventh Infantry, retired from active service April 29, 1913.

Maj. John P. Finley, Infantry, unassigned, to be lieutenant colonel from April 28, 1913, vice Lieut. Col. Frank B. McCoy, Twenty-fourth Infantry, promoted.

Maj. Frederick R. Day, Thirtieth Infantry, to be lieutenant colonel from April 30, 1913, vice Lieut. Col. Richard M. Blatchford, unassigned, promoted.

Capt. Benjamin F. Hardaway, Seventeenth Infantry, to be major from April 30, 1913, vice Maj. Frederick R. Day, Thirtieth Infantry, promoted.

First Lieut. Russell C. Hand, Thirteenth Infantry, to be captain from April 30, 1913, vice Capt. Benjamin F. Hardaway, Seventeenth Infantry, promoted.

PROMOTIONS AND APPOINTMENTS IN THE NAVY.

Capt. Robert S. Griffin to be engineer in chief and Chief of the Bureau of Steam Engineering in the Department of the Navy, with the rank of rear admiral, for a period of four years from the 18th day of May, 1913.

Commander Victor Blue to be Chief of the Bureau of Navigation in the Department of the Navy, with the rank of rear admiral, for a term of four years, vice Commander Philip Andrews, resigned.

Paymaster John H. Merriam to be a pay inspector in the Navy from the 21st day of February, 1913.

Boatswain William Fremgen to be a chief boatswain in the Navy from the 31st day of January, 1913.

Lieut. Charles P. Huff to be a lieutenant commander in the Navy from the 13th day of February, 1913.

Lloyd Noland, a citizen of Virginia, to be an assistant surgeon in the Medical Reserve Corps of the Navy from the 16th day of April, 1913.

The following-named carpenters to be chief carpenters in the Navy from the 19th day of April, 1913:

Robert Morgan,
James P. Shovlin,
John A. Price,
Alfred R. Hughes, and
James L. Jones.

Milton J. Rosenau, a citizen of Massachusetts, to be an assistant surgeon in the Medical Reserve Corps of the Navy from the 28th day of March, 1913, in accordance with a provision contained in an act of Congress approved August 22, 1912.

George A. Stowell, a citizen of Oregon, to be a second lieutenant in the Marine Corps from the 4th day of April, 1913, to fill a vacancy.

POSTMASTERS.

ALABAMA.

Robert Boyd to be postmaster at Dothan, Ala., in place of Byron Trammell, removed.

Ed. G. Caldwell to be postmaster at Jacksonville, Ala., in place of Dora Crook. Incumbent's commission expired February 28, 1909.

W. L. Crew to be postmaster at Good Water, Ala., in place of Cicero A. Ross, deceased.

David M. Scott to be postmaster at Selma, Ala., in place of David M. Scott. Incumbent's commission expired January 5, 1913.

J. L. Thornton to be postmaster at Alexander City, Ala., in place of Henry C. Willis. Incumbent's commission expired February 20, 1913.

ARKANSAS.

Louis K. Buerkle to be postmaster at Stuttgart, Ark., in place of Edward Hall, deceased.

William A. Bushmiaer to be postmaster at Alma, Ark., in place of Thomas B. Murphy. Incumbent's commission expired April 28, 1912.

G. G. Dandridge to be postmaster at Paris, Ark., in place of W. M. Howard. Incumbent's commission expired January 22, 1913.

Ernest J. Patton to be postmaster at Cabot, Ark., in place of Samuel P. Beck, resigned.

CALIFORNIA.

C. W. Collins to be postmaster at El Centro, Cal., in place of Ora L. Miller. Incumbent's commission expired March 29, 1913.

Ellis T. Tanner to be postmaster at San Jacinto Cal., in place of George B. Hannahs. Incumbent's commission expired February 20, 1913.

CONNECTICUT.

Edward Perkins to be postmaster at Suffield, Conn., in place of Edmund Halladay. Incumbent's commission expired December 11, 1911.

FLORIDA.

Bessie Bryan Simpson to be postmaster at Kissimmee, Fla., in place of Frank Vane Agnew. Incumbent's commission expired December 10, 1912.

Crawford I. Henry to be postmaster at Apalachicola, Fla., in place of J. F. Warren, resigned.

William Jackson to be postmaster at Daytona, Fla., in place of William C. Smith. Incumbent's commission expired January 13, 1913.

B. P. Morris to be postmaster at De Funiak Springs, Fla., in place of William C. Eddy. Incumbent's commission expired February 9, 1913.

J. A. Williams to be postmaster at Alachua, Fla., in place of Simeon C. Dell, resigned.

GEORGIA.

B. F. Baker to be postmaster at Woodbury, Ga., in place of Mary E. Hinton. Incumbent's commission expired February 27, 1912.

W. F. Brown to be postmaster at Carrollton, Ga., in place of Claude E. Smith. Incumbent's commission expired January 26, 1913.

Charles V. Clark to be postmaster at Louisville, Ga., in place of Lewis R. Farmer. Incumbent's commission expired January 27, 1913.

Mattie E. Gunter to be postmaster at Social Circle, Ga., in place of Mattie E. Gunter. Incumbent's commission expired February 27, 1912.

Andrew J. Irwin to be postmaster at Sandersville, Ga., in place of Samuel B. Robison. Incumbent's commission expired April 21, 1912.

Samuel B. Lewis to be postmaster at Fayetteville, Ga. Office became presidential January 1, 1912.

Henry M. Miller to be postmaster at Colquitt, Ga., in place of Henry M. Miller. Incumbent's commission expired January 27, 1913.

ILLINOIS.

Clifford W. Brewer to be postmaster at Knoxville, Ill., in place of Orange L. Campbell. Incumbent's commission expired December 14, 1912.

Marshall E. Daniel to be postmaster at McLeansboro, Ill., in place of Frank J. Chapman. Incumbent's commission expired December 14, 1912.

Katherine M. McClements to be postmaster at Park Ridge, Ill., in place of William S. Chittenden, resigned.

Thomas Moyer to be postmaster at Paris, Ill., in place of Paul P. Shutt. Incumbent's commission expired December 14, 1912.

Benjamin F. Neal to be postmaster at Toledo, Ill., in place of John F. Ashwill. Incumbent's commission expired December 14, 1912.

John Odum to be postmaster at Harrisburg, Ill., in place of Thomas S. Reynolds, resigned.

INDIANA.

James E. Burke to be postmaster at Jeffersonville, Ind., in place of Albert L. Anderson, removed.

Charles B. Donovan, jr., to be postmaster at East Chicago, Ind., in place of Moses Specter. Incumbent's commission expired December 17, 1912.

Daniel Ganz to be postmaster at Odon, Ind., in place of Harry H. Crooke, resigned.

Charles L. Haslet to be postmaster at Chesterton, Ind., in place of Charles E. Hillstrom. Incumbent's commission expired December 17, 1912.

Charles L. Wood to be postmaster at Albany, Ind., in place of William A. Hayes, deceased.

IOWA.

W. H. Carmody, sr., to be postmaster at Valley Junction, Iowa, in place of Albert S. Burnett, resigned.

Harry F. Chance to be postmaster at Redfield, Iowa, in place of Edgar O. Winter. Incumbent's commission expired January 14, 1913.

Charles B. Clark to be postmaster at Ogden, Iowa, in place of Clinton L. Zollinger, resigned.

Lloyd Crow to be postmaster at Mapleton, Iowa, in place of S. H. Carhart. Incumbent's commission expired April 23, 1913.

B. W. De Vine to be postmaster at Livermore, Iowa, in place of Joseph C. Bergen. Incumbent's commission expired May 26, 1912.

S. A. Douglas to be postmaster at Adel, Iowa, in place of Albert C. Hotchkiss. Incumbent's commission expired January 11, 1913.

W. H. Dudley to be postmaster at Earlham, Iowa, in place of Eugene M. Crosswait. Incumbent's commission expired February 9, 1913.

Kaspar Faltinson to be postmaster at Armstrong, Iowa, in place of William Stuart. Incumbent's commission expired March 29, 1913.

F. M. Finnell to be postmaster at Algona, Iowa, in place of M. P. Weaver. Incumbent's commission expired January 11, 1913.

Thomas M. Fitzgerald to be postmaster at Charles City, Iowa, in place of Lyman H. Henry, removed.

Milton Funk to be postmaster at Lewis, Iowa. Office became presidential January 1, 1913.

Reuben M. Gable to be postmaster at Lost Nation, Iowa, in place of Robert M. Willard. Incumbent's commission expired April 9, 1912.

J. S. Guynn to be postmaster at Traer, Iowa, in place of B. F. Thomas, deceased.

Edwin L. Helmer to be postmaster at Sanborn, Iowa, in place of Richard M. Boyd. Incumbent's commission expired January 11, 1913.

A. D. Hix to be postmaster at Zearing, Iowa. Office became presidential January 1, 1913.

Anton Huebach to be postmaster at McGregor, Iowa, in place of Louis N. Kramer. Incumbent's commission expired December 14, 1912.

Peter Jungers to be postmaster at Hospers, Iowa. Office became presidential January 1, 1913.

A. W. Lee to be postmaster at Britt, Iowa, in place of W. A. Simpkins. Incumbent's commission expired February 20, 1913.

Ed. McConaughey to be postmaster at Allerton, Iowa, in place of John C. Meredith. Incumbent's commission expired December 14, 1912.

P. A. McCray to be postmaster at Rolfe, Iowa, in place of Marion Bruce. Incumbent's commission expired January 10, 1910.

Frank W. Miller to be postmaster at Olin, Iowa, in place of Dennis Bittner, resigned.

Walter Rae to be postmaster at Massena, Iowa, in place of William C. McCurdy, resigned.

C. W. Remore to be postmaster at Northwood, Iowa, in place of Frank Scammon. Incumbent's commission expired December 9, 1911.

John H. Schulte to be postmaster at Breda, Iowa. Office became presidential January 1, 1913.

William D. Schulte to be postmaster at West Point, Iowa, in place of Robert A. Gardner. Incumbent's commission expired January 26, 1913.

E. H. Vary to be postmaster at Mechanicsville, Iowa, in place of William L. Comstock. Incumbent's commission expired December 14, 1912.

KANSAS.

A. F. Achenbach to be postmaster at Soldier, Kans., in place of Benson L. Mickel. Incumbent's commission expired January 28, 1913.

Gus Charles Buche to be postmaster at Miltonvale, Kans., in place of James Hall, jr. Incumbent's commission expired January 12, 1913.

T. J. Doyle to be postmaster at Englewood, Kans., in place of Etta M. Townsend. Incumbent's commission expired January 28, 1913.

A. Ellingson to be postmaster at Scandia, Kans., in place of Charles C. Wilson. Incumbent's commission expired January 11, 1913.

E. P. Epperson to be postmaster at Scott City (late Scott), Kans., in place of James B. Morris, to change name of office.

E. C. Gresham to be postmaster at Bucklin, Kans., in place of Raymond S. Frazier. Incumbent's commission expired January 11, 1913.

Charles Hewitt to be postmaster at Wakefield, Kans., in place of Henry Avery, resigned.

J. R. Lovitt to be postmaster at McCracken, Kans., in place of Clarence P. Dutton. Incumbent's commission expired January 14, 1913.

C. C. McKenzie to be postmaster at Morrill, Kans., in place of Ulysses S. Davis. Incumbent's commission expired January 12, 1913.

J. W. Niehaus to be postmaster at Fort Leavenworth, Kans., in place of Guy A. Swallow. Incumbent's commission expired January 14, 1913.

Claude Rowland to be postmaster at Protection, Kans., in place of W. C. Monticue, removed.

Leonard Shamleffer to be postmaster at Douglass, Kans., in place of George W. Hill. Incumbent's commission expired April 30, 1912.

A. B. Smith to be postmaster at Robinson, Kans., in place of Harry M. Leslie, resigned.

J. H. Stanberry to be postmaster at Attica, Kans., in place of Elva B. Hilton. Incumbent's commission expired March 29, 1913.

J. H. Weltmer to be postmaster at Claflin, Kans., in place of Bert Fancher. Incumbent's commission expired January 12, 1913.

KENTUCKY.

Cleo W. Brown to be postmaster at Mount Vernon, Ky. Office became presidential January 1, 1913.

Charles M. Griffith to be postmaster at Russellville, Ky., in place of Jacob B. Coffman, deceased.

Orrin Derby Todd to be postmaster at Shelbyville, Ky., in place of Mike Hughes. Incumbent's commission expired March 29, 1913.

LOUISIANA.

Cary E. Blanchard to be postmaster at Boyce, La. Office became presidential October 1, 1912.

Mary Hunter to be postmaster at Pineville, La. Office became presidential January 1, 1913.

Adah Rous to be postmaster at Lake Providence, La., in place of Adah Rous. Incumbent's commission expired January 29, 1913.

Will A. Steidley to be postmaster at Kinder, La. Office became presidential October 1, 1912.

Theodore Tate to be postmaster at Eunice, La., in place of Hiram Fuselier. Incumbent's commission expired May 23, 1912.

MAINE.

Frank T. Clarkson to be postmaster at Kittery Point, Me., in place of Horace Mitchell, resigned.

S. H. Frost to be postmaster at Pittsfield, Me., in place of Charles B. Haskell. Incumbent's commission expired December 14, 1912.

MASSACHUSETTS.

Benjamin R. Gifford to be postmaster at Woods Hole, Mass., in place of George C. Look, resigned.

William J. O'Brien to be postmaster at Kingston, Mass., in place of Samuel Atwell. Incumbent's commission expired December 14, 1912

MICHIGAN.

Carl L. Farwell to be postmaster at Barryton, Mich., in place of James L. Campbell, removed.

John C. Hoopingarner to be postmaster at Berrien Springs, Mich., in place of Guy C. Mars. Incumbent's commission expired February 9, 1913.

Berend Kamps to be postmaster at Zeeland, Mich., in place of William Glerum, resigned.

Ray Maker to be postmaster at Bear Lake, Mich., in place of Charles W. Glover. Incumbent's commission expired December 14, 1912.

Leonard J. Patterson to be postmaster at Tawas City, Mich., in place of William B. Kelly, deceased.

Mortimer D. Snow to be postmaster at Standish, Mich., in place of Louis H. Tovatt. Incumbent's commission expired January 11, 1913.

MISSISSIPPI.

E. S. Chapman to be postmaster at Utica, Miss., in place of Alexander Yates. Incumbent's commission expired January 11, 1913.

Ollie O. Conerly to be postmaster at Gloster, Miss., in place of Jennie D. Ligon. Incumbent's commission expired March 1, 1913.

C. S. Summers to be postmaster at Charleston, Miss., in place of William Quarles, jr., resigned.

R. Parrish Taylor to be postmaster at Oakland, Miss. Office became presidential January 1, 1913.

Dora E. Tate to be postmaster at Picayune, Miss. Office became presidential July 1, 1912.

MISSOURI.

Charles C. Crickette to be postmaster at Queen City, Mo., in place of William H. Funk. Incumbent's commission expired February 9, 1913.

Abel F. Daily to be postmaster at South St. Joseph, Mo. Office became presidential January 1, 1913.

M. W. Daugherty to be postmaster at Ironton, Mo., in place of Adrian Steel. Incumbent's commission expired March 10, 1912.

Edward T. Duval to be postmaster at Skidmore, Mo., in place of George Stoolfer. Incumbent's commission expired December 14, 1912.

Patrick C. Gibbons to be postmaster at Edina, Mo., in place of Edwin S. Brown. Incumbent's commission expired January 12, 1913.

T. B. Hardaway to be postmaster at Jasper, Mo., in place of George B. Wade. Incumbent's commission expired January 11, 1913.

Hugh B. Ingler to be postmaster at Republic, Mo., in place of Martin L. Howard. Incumbent's commission expired March 20, 1912.

J. Lee Johnson to be postmaster at Flat River, Mo., in place of John A. Knowles. Incumbent's commission expired January 11, 1913.

Meredith B. Lane to be postmaster at Sullivan, Mo., in place of John H. Fisher. Incumbent's commission expired February 20, 1913.

Harvey Morrow to be postmaster at Buffalo, Mo., in place of Robert A. Booth, resigned.

De Witt Wagner to be postmaster at Memphis, Mo., in place of Robert D. Cramer. Incumbent's commission expired April 13, 1910.

William Warmack to be postmaster at Greenville, Mo., in place of Abner Barrow. Incumbent's commission expired April 8, 1913.

MONTANA.

Alice Hensley, to be postmaster at Moore, Mont., in place of Patrick H. Tooley, deceased.

Charles Lepley to be postmaster at Fort Benton, Mont., in place of George W. Crane. Incumbent's commission expired February 10, 1913.

George S. Miller to be postmaster at Deer Lodge, Mont., in place of Ithel S. Eldred. Incumbent's commission expired January 11, 1913.

T. A. Rigney to be postmaster at Laurel, Mont., in place of Edward L. Fenton. Incumbent's commission expired January 26, 1913.

NEW JERSEY.

Patrick J. Ryan to be postmaster at Elizabeth, N. J., in place of Palmer H. Charlock. Incumbent's commission expired April 5, 1913.

William J. Wolfe to be postmaster at Chatham, N. J., in place of Ezra F. Ferris. Incumbent's commission expired January 26, 1913.

NEW YORK.

Harry A. Inglee to be postmaster at Amityville, N. Y., in place of Frederick B. Powell. Incumbent's commission expired December 16, 1912.

Alfred J. Kennedy to be postmaster at Flushing, N. Y., in place of Thomas B. Lowerre. Incumbent's commission expired March 1, 1913.

William F. O'Connell to be postmaster at Andover, N. Y., in place of Arthur B. Burrows, deceased.

Frank D. Wade to be postmaster at Addison, N. Y., in place of Charles L. Crane, resigned.

NORTH CAROLINA.

L. B. Hale to be postmaster at Fayetteville, N. C., in place of Alexander L. McCaskill. Incumbent's commission expired June 7, 1910.

Russell A. Strickland to be postmaster at Elm City, N. C., in place of Jesse D. Sharp. Incumbent's commission expired February 12, 1912.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Nicholas Johnston to be postmaster at Aneta, N. Dak., in place of William T. Cameron. Incumbent's commission expired February 20, 1913.

OHIO.

David H. Heiby to be postmaster at Ohio City, Ohio, in place of Sidney J. Winney, resigned.

OKLAHOMA.

T. H. Hubbard to be postmaster at Cordell, Okla., in place of Carlos C. Curtis, resigned.

W. P. Madden to be postmaster at Cheyenne, Okla., in place of Maud A. Falconer. Incumbent's commission expired February 11, 1913.

W. F. Parker to be postmaster at Davis, Okla., in place of Charles B. Ramsey, resigned.

Samuel R. Staton to be postmaster at Cushing, Okla., in place of A. H. Holland, resigned.

OREGON.

August Huckestein to be postmaster at Salem, Oreg., in place of Squire Farrar. Incumbent's commission expired April 12, 1910.

Harry M. Stewart to be postmaster at Springfield, Oreg., in place of Byron A. Washburne. Incumbent's commission expired March 29, 1913.

PENNSYLVANIA.

Allen A. Orr to be postmaster at Lewistown, Pa., in place of William F. Eckbert, jr., resigned.

J. Frank Patterson to be postmaster at Mifflintown, Pa., in place of Andrew C. Allison. Incumbent's commission expired February 9, 1913.

George B. Richardson to be postmaster at Knox, Pa., in place of Joseph M. Brothers, deceased.

C. J. D. Strohecker to be postmaster at Zellenople, Pa., in place of Clarence L. Dindinger. Incumbent's commission expired March 1, 1913.

RHODE ISLAND.

Thomas H. Galvin to be postmaster at East Greenwich, R. I., in place of Nathaniel H. Brown. Incumbent's commission expired December 14, 1912.

SOUTH CAROLINA.

George M. Anderson to be postmaster at Ninety Six, S. C., in place of Julis E. Deloach; name changed by marriage.

TENNESSEE.

William Brewer to be postmaster at Woodbury, Tenn., in place of Andrew N. Brown. Incumbent's commission expired April 28, 1913.

Clarence W. Moore to be postmaster at Smithville, Tenn., in place of James H. Christian. Incumbent's commission expired March 3, 1913.

Charles E. Rodes to be postmaster at Manchester, Tenn., in place of Finis R. Sharp. Incumbent's commission expired January 31, 1912.

TEXAS.

Mina Daughtry to be postmaster at Chillicothe, Tex., in place of John W. Hedley, resigned.

James W. Davis to be postmaster at Alvord, Tex., in place of Henry L. Sands, deceased.

T. A. Fuller to be postmaster at New Boston, Tex., in place of Richard B. Harrison. Incumbent's commission expired May 28, 1910.

L. E. Haskett to be postmaster at Childress, Tex., in place of U. S. Weddington, removed.

Frank W. Kirkland to be postmaster at Mount Calm, Tex., in place of Lucius C. Guin. Incumbent's commission expired April 28, 1912.

T. E. Van Landingham to be postmaster at Lone Oak, Tex., in place of George L. Johnson, deceased.

VIRGINIA.

Hoge M. Brown to be postmaster at Radford, Va., in place of Warner J. Kenderdine. Incumbent's commission expired March 3, 1913.

George V. Cameron to be postmaster at Louisa, Va., in place of Codrington D. Flanagan, resigned.

Charles E. Clinedinst to be postmaster at New Market, Va., in place of Charles W. Wickes. Incumbent's commission expired May 13, 1912.

E. L. Wade to be postmaster at Vinton, Va. Office became presidential July 1, 1912.

J. R. Williams to be postmaster at Brookneal, Va., in place of Bezer Snell. Incumbent's commission expired May 20, 1912.

CONFIRMATIONS.

Executive nominations confirmed by the Senate May 1, 1913.

SECRETARY OF LEGATION.

Alexander R. Magruder to be secretary of Legation at Copenhagen, Denmark.

COMMISSIONER OF FISH AND FISHERIES.

H. M. Smith to be Commissioner of Fish and Fisheries.

GOVERNOR OF ALASKA.

J. F. A. Strong to be governor of Alaska.

COMMISSIONER OF LABOR STATISTICS.

C. P. Neill to be Commissioner of Labor Statistics.

POSTMASTERS.

ARKANSAS.

Pearl Berkheimer, Augusta.
T. G. Robinson, Marvell.

COLORADO.

Thomas Ryan, Salida.
Eva B. Hamilton, Stratton.

GEORGIA.

D. P. Philips, Lithonia.
W. B. McCants, Winder.

ILLINOIS.

W. H. Chapman, Clifton.
William Twohig, Galesburg.
G. A. Griffith, sr., Rankin.

KANSAS.

L. D. Cassler, Canton.
J. O. Ferguson, Independence.
F. M. Cook, Jamestown.
G. W. Barker, Minneapolis.
J. J. Wilson, Moran.
Agnes H. Gallagher, Summerfield.
L. G. Wagner, Sylvia.

LOUISIANA.

Overton Gauthier, Jennings.
Mattie D. Boatner, Vidalia.

MICHIGAN.

Theophilus Belanger, River Rouge.

MISSISSIPPI.

Henrietta Welch, Carrollton.
J. C. Jourdan, Iuka.
W. M. Noah, Kosciusko.
Lillie W. Nugent, Rosedale.
Truman Gray, Waynesboro.

MISSOURI.

A. L. Galloway, Cassville.
J. S. Fowler, Cole Camp.
A. P. Beazley, Eldon.
R. J. Ball, Gallatin.
John Hetrick, Laclede.

C. B. Bacon, Marshall.
T. A. Dodge, Milan.
A. H. Martin, Perry.

MONTANA.

R. M. Corley, Stevensville.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.

D. V. Cahalane, Charlestown.

NEW JERSEY.

A. L. Williams, Vineland.

NEW YORK.

John Soemann, Lancaster.
P. M. Giles, Le Roy.

NORTH DAKOTA.

John Galyen, Belfield.
A. L. Menard, Welton.

OKLAHOMA.

Sam Flourney, Elk City.
D. M. Hamlin, Newkirk.

OREGON.

L. F. Reizenstein, Roseburg.
R. E. Williams, The Dalles.

PENNSYLVANIA.

T. H. McKenzie, Barnesboro.
Hugh Gilmore, Williamsport.

TEXAS.

J. R. De Witt, Brackettville.
S. D. Seale, Floresville.
J. B. Phillips, Howe.
N. A. Burton, McKinney.
J. W. White, Uvalde.

VIRGINIA.

A. W. Sinclair, Manassas.
J. E. Rogers, Strasburg.

WEST VIRGINIA.

J. W. Dingess, Huntington.
T. H. Buchanan, Wellsburg.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

THURSDAY, May 1, 1913.

The House met at 11 o'clock a. m.

The Chaplain, Rev. Henry N. Couden, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Infinite and eternal Spirit, God over all, we come to Thee in prayer because spirit can meet spirit, be exalted, strengthened, purified, ennobled by the contact.

"Behold, I stand at the door and knock. If any man hear my voice and open the door I will come in to him and will sup with him and he with Me." Happy is the man who shall open the door of his heart that the King of Glory may come and be his guest and partake with him of the bread of life. Help us to open our hearts to that Spirit that we may be the better fitted for the duties of this new day, and all praise we shall give to Thee. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

THE TARIFF.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of H. R. 3321—the tariff bill.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the House resolved itself into Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the bill (H. R. 3321) to reduce tariff duties and to provide revenue for the Government, and for other purposes, with Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee in the chair.

The CHAIRMAN. At the time of the adjournment yesterday there was under discussion the amendment of the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. GREENE]. If there be no objection, the amendment will be again reported.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend, paragraph 169, on page 45, line 20, by striking out the figures "25" and inserting the figures "45."

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate on the pending paragraph and all amendments thereto be closed in 15 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] asks unanimous consent that all debate on the pending paragraph and all amendemnts thereto be closed in 15 minutes.

Mr. MANN. Will the gentleman state how that time is to be divided?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I want 5 minutes for this side. I am willing that gentlemen on that side may have the remaining time.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry?

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Which section is referred to?

Mr. MANN. Paragraph 169.

The CHAIRMAN. The last paragraph under the metal schedule.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. I should like 5 minutes under that.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Does the gentleman desire to offer an amendment?

Mr. MOORE. This being the basket clause, there ought to be more discussion than 15 minutes.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I will say that unless amendments are offered I shall have to try to limit debate. I am willing that gentlemen who have amendments may discuss them.

Mr. MANN. Of course there are a great many things covered by the basket clause. Gentlemen wish to discuss the provisions of the bill.

Mr. McKENZIE. I would like 5 minutes.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I will make it 20 minutes.

Mr. MANN. Let us get it by unanimous consent, and see how the time is to be divided.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I will let the Chair divide the time. I want 5 minutes on this side.

Mr. MOORE. I should like to have 5 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Alabama asks unanimous consent that debate on the paragraph and all amendments thereto close in 20 minutes.

Mr. MANN. I hope the gentleman will make it 25.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Well, Mr. Chairman, I will let the debate run, but I give notice that I intend to close it in a few minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman withdraw his request?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. If there is objection.

Mr. MANN. Make it 25.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I consent this time, but I intend to push the consideration of this bill.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Alabama asks unanimous consent that the debate on the paragraph and all amendments thereto close in 25 minutes. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

THE METAL SCHEDULE.

Mr. BARTLETT. Mr. Chairman, this is the end of the metal—the iron and steel—schedule, which provides for the rates of duty upon more articles that enter into consumption in the life of the Republic than any other. I am glad to see that this committee has so materially reduced the tariff rates in this particular schedule, because it is shown by the testimony of those who are mainly engaged in the production of the articles covered by this schedule this manufacturing business requires less protection than any other in the bill. The officers and men connected with the United States Steel Corporation so testified in the investigation carried on for a year by a committee of this House, and the man who is said to have had more information on that subject than any other man in America, or probably in the world—Mr. Schwab—testified that this industry did not need the tariff.

We have here a schedule on the basis of which rests in a great measure the prosperity of the country, and we are dealing with a subject the product and sale of which have made those engaged in it the most prosperous people in the country. They are the people of all others who do not need, who are not entitled by reason of such need, to one particle of protection. I do not say this at mere random. I do not say that we have gone beyond the principle of enacting a tariff which will provide for the difference in the cost of production at home and abroad.

I do not, as a Democrat, concede the right of the American manufacturer to have any such thing in his favor. I stand here as a Democrat in favor of a tariff in preference to direct taxation, but when that tariff is levied, I want to see it levied for the purposes of revenue, and I never shall vote for a tariff that is levied for the protection of an industry beyond the point where it will raise the necessary revenue of this Government when economically administered. That has been the faith in which I was born, the faith in which I was reared, the faith in which I have lived in public life, and it is the faith in which I propose to conduct myself as a Member of Congress.

It is said we are to bring into competition with American labor the cheap product of European labor in this particular branch of industry. The United States Steel Corporation is the most gigantic industrial giant on the face of the globe to-day. The evidence before the Ways and Means Committee, the publications in the magazines, and the evidence before a committee authorized by this House to investigate its affairs show that it claims to have a capital of nearly $2,000,000,000. The very first president of that corporation, in giving evidence before that committee, stated to that committee that at the present time that corporation did not need the tariff to protect it from European manufacturers. He stated that even taking into consideration the lower scale of wages paid in Germany and England and other countries, that corporation, nevertheless, could manufacture iron and steel and their products more cheaply than could any country on the face of the globe. I shall put into my remarks the evidence of Mr. Schwab, the first president of this corporation, for whose capacity and knowledge of the business in every detail the present president of this corporation, Mr. Farrell, on last Wednesday vouched. Mr. Schwab appeared before that committee on August 4, 1911, and I will quote a statement which is to be found on page 1303 of the hearings before that committee to investigate the steel corporation. Mr. Schwab had previously stated that they could manufacture iron and steel products more cheaply than any country in the world, a statement that rather startled the Republican members of that committee. Mr. DANFORTH asked him:

Even with the added load of labor?

He replied:

Yes; I think the reason for that is because we manufacture in such large quantities; we manufacture under the economic conditions that I speak of, and our tonnage is so great.

Though pressed and pressed again by the Republican members of that committee to retract that statement, he insisted that what he said was true, but that they needed a tariff, not for the purpose of presently protecting either their labor or themselves in the manufacture of the products of this great industry, but for the future. If, perchance, the manufacturers in Germany and England and other foreign countries should become so efficient in producing the products of iron and steel as we are now, he stated that corporation would then need the protective tariff, but for the present time, in order to produce the products more cheaply than they are produced abroad, it was not necessary to have the tariff. So that we have here an industry represented by this great industrial giant, and this officer telling the country and the Congress that it does not need a protective tariff in order to manufacture more cheaply at home than they can abroad.

What, then, becomes of that great proposition that the Democratic Party by this bill have brought in a bill which is to carry ruin to the American laborer and to destroy industries? Ah, says my friend from Pennsylvania, we by this bill give to the Steel Corporation, which has grown to be the great giant of which I have spoken, advantage over the independents. Well, independent manufacturers sounds very sweet, but the other day, in the inquiry before the same committee to which I have referred to investigate the Steel Corporation, Mr. Farrell, president, said the only difference between the Steel Corporation and the independents was that the independents were not stockholders in the Steel Corporation, but they pursued the same policy and the same methods. That is, they had an understanding, written at times, pools, independents and the Steel Corporation alike, by which they fixed the price of the products manufactured by both, and when it became a little dangerous to have those in evidence they burned up the books and they carried them along under gentlemen's agreements, and when the gentlemen's agreements became dangerous they then resorted to the famous Gary dinners by which to have an understanding. Those are the men engaged in this business so vital to the welfare and interest of our people, who charge that we, the party in power in this House, who have been endeavoring to bring some relief to the people in regard to this most important schedule, which affects the smallest implement of agriculture and household affairs up to the greatest, they charge that we are to bring ruin and destruction upon the labor of the country, these men who by reason of an unnecessary, unwholesome, and vicious protective system have been able to enlarge their business until its proportions startle not only the American people, but attract the attention of the world. For myself, I think that these men who have grown rich and powerful and strong in the commercial world, who thus declare publicly that they do not need the protective tariff to enable them to pay the present prices for labor and to compete in the markets at home and in the markets of the world, should at least have a fair proportion of these taxes, and burdens which have hitherto been borne by the people taken away, and that the people should for once be considered by the House of Representatives.

And when he was asked the question whether or not he needed the tariff in order to produce the articles as cheaply here as they could be produced abroad he said this: That taking into consideration the low scale of wages paid in Germany, England, and other countries that corporation nevertheless could manufacture iron and steel products more cheaply than could any other country on the face of the earth.

That was so startling to Republican members of that committee that they thought he had made a mistake, although Mr. Carnegie had time and time again given evidence to the same effect, and although he had stated previously, when pressed by a Republican member of that committee—he thought he would ask the question and lead the witness into retracting it—whether he could do it even with the added load of labor, Mr. Schwab said:

Yes; I think the reason for that is because we manufacture in such large quantities; we manufacture under the economic conditions that I speak of.

He said they did not need that year before last and would never need it unless, perchance, European manufacturers should by some means become so educated and progressed in the skill of manufacture that they could compete with the American manufacturers in these articles.

THE HIGH COST OF LIVING.

Quoting from the report of the Committee on Ways and Means, which reported this bill:

INCREASE IN COST OF LIVING.

Probably the most striking economic change since 1897 has been the tremendous increase in the cost of living—a situation which has attracted the anxious attention of economists the world over. The following figures represent the relative advance in living costs that has taken place during the critical part of the period in question in the United States:

Relative wholesale prices, and per cent of increase over 1897.

Commodity.	Price, 1897.	Price, 1900.	Increase over 1897.	Price, 1910.	Increase over 1897.
			Per cent.		Per cent.
Farm products	85.2	109.5	28.5	164.6	93.2
Food	87.7	104.2	18.8	128.7	46.7
Clothing	91.1	106.8	17.2	123.7	35.8
Metals and implements	86.6	120.5	39.1	128.5	48.2
Drugs and chemicals	94.4	115.7	22.5	117.0	23.9
House furnishing goods	89.8	108.1	18.1	111.6	24.2
Miscellaneous	92.1	109.8	19.2	133.1	44.5
All commodities	89.7	110.5	23.1	131.6	46.7

From this table it will appear that the wholesale prices of metals and implements, such as are embraced in this schedule, have increased from 86.6 in 1897 to 120.5 in 1900, or 39.1 per cent; and to 128.5 in 1910, or 48.2 per cent over the prices of 1897.

Now how have wages increased in the corresponding period?

The following table, taken from Bulletin No. 77, from the Bureau of Labor, published in 1908, will in a measure show the per cent of increase in wages up to 1908. These are the latest available, but my information is that wages since 1907 do not show any considerable increase.

Per cent of increase in wages per hour in 1907 as compared with the average for 1890–1899, by industries.

Agricultural implements	30.9
Bakery, bread	28.9
Blacksmithing and horseshoeing	26.4
Boots and shoes	24.3
Brick	22.7
Building trades	44.6
Candy	24.4
Carpets	17.1
Carriages and wagons	18.3
Cars, steam railroad	24.4
Clothing, factory product	15.8
Cotton goods	57.5
Dyeing, finishing, and printing textiles	11.3
Electrical apparatus and supplies	22.6
Flour	16.9
Foundry and machine shop	21.4
Furniture	27.1
Gas	7.7
Glass	20.4
Harness	25.5
Hats, fur	26.4
Hosiery and knit goods	33.4
Iron and steel, bar	40.4
Iron and steel, Bessemer converting	32.6
Iron and steel, blast furnace	19.8
Leather	11.8
Liquors, malt	32.9
Lumber	27.6
Marble and stone work	25.7

Paper and wood pulp	33.3
Planing mill	24.6
Pottery	13.8
Printing and binding, book and job	31.0
Printing, newspaper	22.6
Shipbuilding	20.9
Silk goods	16.9
Slaughtering and meat packing	16.0
Streets and sewers, contract work	45.7
Streets and sewers, municipal work	21.6
Tobacco, cigars	32.4
Woolen and worsted goods	31.9
All industries	28.8

It will be observed that this table merely shows the per cent of increase in wages per hour, not the per cent of increase per day or week.

From this table it will appear that in the iron and steel business from 1897 to 1907 the increase has been as follows: Iron and steel, bar, 33.4 per cent per hour; iron and steel, Bessemer converting, 40.4 per cent; iron and steel, blast furnace, 19.8 per cent. So in no case has the increase of wages kept pace with the increase in prices.

I call attention to a recent report of the Bureau of Labor just published showing the cost of living in 1912 as compared with the years 1890 and 1896, which is found in the New York World of May 1, 1913, and is as follows:

COST OF LIVING REACHED HIGHEST POINT IN 1912.

WASHINGTON, April 30.

During the latter part of 1912 the cost of living in the United States was higher than at any other time during the last 23 years. The Bureau of Labor Statistics has just issued a report on retail prices from 1890 to 1913.

The lowest cost was reached in each of the geographical divisions and in the United States as a whole in 1896. From that date to 1912 the total increase in the cost of living per year for a workingman's family, by geographical divisions, was: North Atlantic, $166; South Atlantic, $152; North Central, $187; South Central, $186; and Western, $152.

The approximate cost of a year's food supply for an average workingman's family at average prices of each year, by geographical divisions, for 1890, 1896 (the low year), and 1912 was:

Divisions.	1890	1896	1912
North Atlantic	$319	$300	$466
South Atlantic	274	265	417
North Central	299	276	463
South Central	260	255	441
Western	309	277	429

I have taken the pains to present in a concise form the great business done in the iron and steel manufacture during the last year, showing the immense amount of export to foreign countries and the inconsiderable imports from foreign countries; also a table showing, article by article, the difference in the rates in the Dingley bill and the Payne bill and the bill now under consideration. I do that so that the country can see the great reduction made in the rates in these articles and that the people of America shall get what they are entitled to—relief from these unnecessary burdens of taxation which for years and years have been placed upon the importation of these articles, not for the purpose of bringing revenue to the Government but for no purpose in the world but to add to the already full and overflowing coffers of the men in this industry. In my judgment this tariff bill on this particular schedule—and I do not believe upon any other—will not have any deleterious effect upon the men engaged in it, because the chief head of this great industry, the men who have organized the Steel Corporation and know more than anybody else about it, have said under oath that they did not need a tariff of any sort upon these articles in order to manufacture more cheaply than they can abroad, or to enable them to successfully compete with the world; and then when they pay the wages they do in comparison with the low wages at home and abroad. I present the following analysis of the iron and steel trade for the past year, as shown by the imports and exports, and a comparison of the rates contained in the Dingley, Payne, and the pending bill. From these I am confident it can not be truthfully maintained that this industry needs any protective tariff, and that rates fixed by this bill are both just and fair to the manufacturer and, at the same time, will bring relief to the American consumer from unjust and burdensome taxation, which has heretofore been imposed mainly for the benefit of those who did not and do not now need it, and under which the most gigantic financial corporation and trust in the world has been organized, flourished, and prospered. [Applause.]

Our export trade of iron and steel and manufactures in 1911 and 1912, as taken from the Monthly Reports of Commerce and Finance and Imported Merchandise entered for Consumption in the United States, issued by the Department of Commerce and Labor.

Exports of iron and steel.

Items.	1911	1912
Iron ore	$2,496,291	$2,806,636
Pig iron	2,475,009	2,658,428
Scrap and old iron	794,686	1,196,409
Bar iron	691,770	577,898
Wire rods	729,204	1,416,271
All other bars of steel	4,486,705	5,395,652
Billets, ingots, and blooms of steel:
To England	2,983,876	3,939,099
To Canada	1,113,957	1,200,710
To other countries	1,739	14,412
Steel rails for railways:
To Canada	1,168,000	2,360,894
To Central America	460,009	416,611
To Mexico	1,854,484	893,758
To West Indies	902,000	1,260,691
To South America	2,009,699	3,882,126
To Japan	1,467,337	1,118,942
To other Asia	2,341,650	866,155
To other countries	424,139	326,869
Total steel rails	11,377,444	12,134,446

In 1911 we imported $107,567 and exported a value of $11,377,444. In 1912 we imported $87,392 and exported $12,134,446. The present bill is right in placing steel rails on the free list.

Sheets and plates.

	1911	1912
Iron	$6,545,585	$11,320,829
Steel	8,563,840	12,327,561
Tin	2,489,094	6,269,325

In 1912 we imported $277,805 worth of sheets and plates of iron and steel and $288,014 worth of tin plate and exported $29,916,715 worth of the three sorts combined.

Structural iron and steel.

	1911	1912
To Canada	$3,096,033	$5,150,353
To Mexico	1,653,228	358,716
To Panama	.....	2,416,388
To Cuba	814,697	548,593
To South America	664,645	787,955
To Japan	476,727	807,803
To British Oceania	288,774	184,857
To Philippine Islands	185,746	107,890
To other countries	1,104,001	719,602
Total	8,683,851	11,082,133

In 1912 we imported a value of $123,642 of building forms at from 23 to 35 per cent tax.

Wire.

	1911	1912
Barbed	$4,643,391	$5,469,398
All other	5,556,577	6,511,490
Total	10,199,968	11,980,888

We imported in 1911 and 1912 as follows: Barbed wire, 1911, $4; 1912, $7. All other wire, 1911, $1,166,277; 1912, $1,401,793.

Builders' hardware and tools.

	1911	1912
Locks, hinges, and other builders' hardware	$7,759,509	$5,703,223
Saws	1,137,787	1,471,384
All other tools	8,167,517	10,430,434
Total	17,064,813	17,610,041

In 1912 we imported $1,992 worth of hammers; files, $62,094; nippers, $67,410; saws, $37,040, against an export of $17,610,041.

	1911	1912
Car wheels	$367,453	$327,285
Castings	3,213,737	2,964,471
Cutlery	1,083,891	1,162,203
Firearms	2,916,217	3,358,419

Machinery, machines and parts.

	1911	1912
Adding machines	$845,802	$928,878
Brewers' machinery	175,461	321,955
Cash registers	3,224,886	3,585,192
Electrical machinery	8,024,628	8,444,863
Metal-working machinery	9,626,965	12,151,819
Laundry machinery	1,233,613	1,132,782
Mining machinery	7,017,486	6,869,591
Printing presses	2,854,210	3,050,372
Pumps and pumping machinery	3,562,438	4,031,933
Ice-making machinery	616,187	830,678
Sewing machines	9,039,840	9,947,312
Shoe machinery	1,633,670	1,911,824
Steam engines, locomotives	3,953,648	3,298,182
Stationary engines	4,042,793	750,581
Traction engines	3,627,837	906,882
All other engines	4,424,303	4,256,371
Sugar mills	2,590,739	1,782,504
Electric locomotives		88,902
Stationary gas engines		393,683
Gasoline engines		9,014,665
Typewriters	9,778,498	11,423,691
Wind mills	1,929,991	1,876,164
Woodworking machinery	1,827,963	2,368,578
All other machinery	24,497,774	25,913,213
Total machinery	104,528,732	115,406,132

In 1912 our imports of machinery were:

Cash registers, at 30 per cent	$4,836
Embroidery and lace machines, at 45 per cent	494,720
Other embroidery machines, free	125,016
Linen-making machines, free	11,628
Jute machinery, at 30 per cent	51,514
Machine tools, at 30 per cent	154,786
Printing presses, at 30 per cent	31,390
Sewing machines, at 30 per cent	70,146
Steam engines, at 30 per cent	183,539
Typesetting and linotype machines, at 30 per cent	148
Typewriters, at 30 per cent	401
All other machinery, at 45 per cent	6,025,149

Thus we have a total import of machinery having a value of $7,129,977, against an export of $115,406,132. In other words, our exports are 16 times our imports and, as will be seen from the comparative table following this, many of these items of machinery have been very properly placed on the free list in the Underwood bill.

Nails and spikes.

	1911	1912
Cut	$434,788	$472,217
Wire	2,363,671	2,865,980
All other	737,131	811,751

All these have been carrying a duty of about 15 per cent, but in the present bill are carried to the free list.

	1911	1912
Pipes and fittings	$10,735,167	$13,063,737
Radiators	268,654	306,885
Safes	496,437	481,531
Scales and balances	1,061,388	1,074,630
Stoves and ranges	1,582,387	1,862,732
All other manufactures	22,982,480	24,506,663
Grand total of all iron and steel manufactures exported	230,725,352	268,154,262
To which add agricultural machinery	35,973,398	35,640,005
Our entire imports were	34,205,968	26,551,040

Our imports are a mere bagatelle compared with the immense value of our exports, and justify every reduction shown in the following comparative table:

Comparison of the Dingley and Payne laws with the Underwood bill on iron and steel.

	Dingley.	Payne.	Underwood.
	Per cent.	Per cent.	Per cent.
Iron ore	17.84	5.72	Free.
Pig iron	27.95	16.87	8
Spiegeleisen	16.72	12.44	8
Both together	23.36	15.64	8
Wrought and scrap iron	28.94	8.72	8
Ferromanganese	12.28	6.97	15
Chrome metals	20	20.26	15
Ferrosilicon	8.17	19.59	15
All other pigs	23.29	16.44	15
Slabs, blooms, etc.	15.62	23.66	8
Muck bars		14.74	8
Bar iron	14.80	10.64	8
Bars or shapes of rolled or hammered iron	11.93	11.20	8
Round iron	20.47	15.67	8
Square iron	16.42	10.39	8
Charcoal bars	32.89	20.76	8
Beams, girders, etc.	32.78	31.72	12

Comparison of the Dingley and Payne laws with the Underwood bill on iron and steel—Continued.

	Dingley.	Payne.	Underwood.
	Per cent.	Per cent.	Per cent.
All building shapes	32.78	32.75	12
Boiler plate	43.11	42.99	15
Sheets	40.52	28.53	15
Sheets, cold rolled	40.67	33.36	20
Crucible plate steel			15
Circular saw plates	27.89	23.08	15
Anchors	38.18	27.47	15
Forgings	35	30.47	15
Antifriction balls	36.04	42.21	35
Hoop iron	30.35	25.01	12
Barrel hoops		29	Free.
Cotton bands			Free.
Bands, cut to lengths for hay, etc.	60.32	36.26	Free.
Railway bars	34.73	17.40	Free.
Railway fishplates	35.52	21.23	10
Galvanized plates, sheets, or strips	23.48	34.37	20
Galvanized hoop, band or scroll	28.95	38.36	20
Layered sheets	34.33	33.70	20
Pickled sheets or plates	37.06	24.98	20
Bands or sheets, cold rolled		35.84	20
Plates or sheets, hammered	57.58	30.24	20
Tin and terne plate	53.12	43.20	20
Steel ingots, blooms, or slabs	20.37	21.77	10
Mill shafting	20.37	21.77	10
Other sheets and plates	22.67	20.86	15
Steel wool		40.00	20
Grit, shot, and sand		75.01	30
Iron and steel wire rods	20.51	14	10
Round wire of iron or steel	42.31	38.43	20
Iron bars, cold rolled	17.41	14.96	10
Wire covered with cotton, silk, etc.	44.99	35.42	20
Wire tempered cold	60.56	36.92	20
Barbed wire		7.77	Free.
Wire coated	16.84	37.92	20
Heddles of wire		85	20
Manufactures of wire	46.11	43.81	20
Telegraph and telephone wire	40	40	20
Wire rope	50.64	46.10	30
Anvils	30.33	30.88	15
Galvanized wire for fencing			Free.
Wire for baling hay			Free.
Automobiles, finished	45	45	45
Automobile chasses			30
Bicycles	45	45	25
Motor cycles	45	45	40
Axles	20.83	15.30	10
Tools	19.05	17.66	10
Bolts, nuts, etc.	23.73	19.21	15
Spiral nut, locks, and washers			35
Card clothing	64.09	60.06	40
Cast-iron pipe	18.52	18.10	12
Cast-iron andirons, etc.	15.42	10.87	10
Castings of iron		26.16	10
Castings of malleable iron	18.67	13.76	10
Cast hollow ware, coated or otherwise	35.71	20.01	10
Chain	46.93	48.85	20
Tubes, pipes, flues, or stays	34.81	29.97	20
Furnaces	36.01	44.98	20
Pen knives, pruning knives, etc.	79.50	76.51	35 to 55
Razors	54.54	71.34	35 to 55
Scissors and shears	52.53	52.10	30
Sword blades	34.98	46.35	30
Table knives, etc., without handles	50.20	43.26	25
Table knives, etc., with handles	50.20	43.26	30
Files	67.93	68.06	25
Muskets, shotguns, and rifles	25	25	15
Breech-loading guns	51.01	46.53	35
Table utensils, enameled or glazed	40	40	25
Needles	34.71	41.93	25
Fishhooks, rods, reels and baits	45	45	30
Engraved plates, electrotype, etc.	25	20.60	15
Lithographic plates of stone			25
Rivets, studs, and steel points	27.58	39.95	20
Cross-cut saws, mill saws, etc.	25	20	12
Band saws	30	25	12
Screws	63.01	54.76	25
Umbrella ribs	50	50	35
Wheels for railways	55.85	48.80	25
Aluminum scrap	33.36	47.56	25
Antimony	11.05	22.61	10
German silver	25	25	15
Bronze powder	41.36	39.95	25
Copper plates	11.28	9.68	5
Sheathing copper	14.74	10.97	5
Gold leaf	38.71	39.61	35
Silver leaf	126.83	94.50	30
Tinsel wire	12.41	10.28	10
Bullions and metal thread			30
Manufactures of tinsel ware			40
Hooks and eyes	46.85	36.94	15
Lead-bearing ore	88.18	63.12	(1)
Lead sheets, pigs, or bars	58.99	46.88	25
Gas mantles	36.75	40	25
Crude metallic minerals			10
Nickel	17.20	15.41	10
Pens, metallic	49.50	49.19	(2)
Pens, with nib and barrel in one piece			(3)
Penholder tips	25	23.85	25
Gold pens	25	25	25
Fountain pens	30	30	25
Pins	38	35	20

[1] One-half cent per pound. [2] Eight cents gross. [3] Twelve cents gross.

Comparison of the Dingley and Payne laws with the Underwood bill on iron and steel—Continued.

	Dingley.	Payne.	Underwood.
	Per cent.	Per cent.	Per cent.
Quicksilver	15.07	12.95	10
Type metal	42.90	36.40	15
New type	25	25	15
Watch movements	53.36	53.51	30
Jewels for watches and clocks			10
Enameled dials			30
Zinc in blocks	29.15	32.44	10
Zinc in sheets	28.08	25.45	10
Zinc ore		36.37	10
Bottle caps	49.70	50.24	30
Decorated bottle caps			40
Steam engines and locomotives	28.93	29.96	15
Printing presses and machine tools	45	30	15
Embroidery machines	45	45	25
Nippers and pliers	58.04	59.74	30
Other machinery	45	45	25
Carriages	45	45	25
Aeroplanes	45	45	25
Jute machinery	30	30	25
All other iron	44.95	45	25
Hoop iron cut to lengths	36.09	15.96	Free.
Barbed wire and all other fence wire		7.77	Free.
Cut nails	17.74	17.76	Free.
Horseshoe nails	12.88	12.08	Free.
Wire nails	6.64	17.70	Free.
Spikes	16.64	25.87	Free.
Nuts and washers	21.02	4.34	Free.
Horse and mule shoes	17.91	4.72	Free.
Cut tacks and brads	14.68	14.68	Free.
Tungsten ores		10	Free.
Cash registers	45	30	Free.
Linotype machines	45	30	Free.
Typesetting machines	45	30	Free.
Sewing machines	45	30	Free.
Typewriters	45	30	Free.
Tar and oil spreading machines		Free.	Free.
Bauxite	20.10	21.60	Free.
Shoe machinery	45	45	Free.
Shotgun barrels	Free.	Free.	Free.

Mr. FARR. Mr. Chairman, I am certain that Mr. Schwab could not have had the making of pumps and pumping machinery under consideration when he stated, as is alleged by the gentleman from Georgia, that we could make these articles and sell them against foreign competition without the tariff. The testimony before the Ways and Means Committee indicated that the cost of materials is about the same in foreign countries as it is here. The cost in the making of pumps in this country is in the labor, that amounts to 77 per cent of the cost of the product as against one-half of that in foreign countries. We have an industry of this kind in the city of Scranton, and I know that to-day it is in financial distress, and if the tariff is lowered it will greatly lessen the chance to reorganize the works and give their workmen an opportunity to earn their livelihood.

I simply want to quote the deadly parallel as regards the wages of the two countries. I will not do that in detail now, except to say that where men in Germany, France, England, and Belgium get $8 or $9, our men, for similar work, get twice and sometimes two and a half times.

All over this country we see along railway lines—notwithstanding the feeling shown on the majority side against manufacturers—great signs asking manufacturers to locate in towns, sites free. I know in Scranton our anxiety is to have more manufactories, and particularly those industries employing male help. All through this Schedule C, my friends, you are displacing male workers. Reference yesterday was made to the clause covering tires for wheels for railways, which will displace male workmen.

And so will this section, with respect to ironworkers, displace large numbers of male help in many of the States of this Union. In many cities in those States are industries making pumps and pumping machinery; and where we have been able to sell abroad it has been largely due to some specialized machine whose merits for particular purposes create a demand.

Now, we talk a great deal here about human welfare, and about our interest in the welfare of women, and shorter hours of work for the women, and better conditions for them, and against child labor. I agree fully on these propositions, and no country is doing quite so much for its women and children as this country is doing. But here you propose to legislate out of existence industries that employ male labor. I ask the gentlemen on that side this question: With the men out of work, what are we going to do for the women and children? [Applause on the Republican side.]

I now ask your attention to this detailed statement of wages paid in pump works in this country and foreign countries:

Comparative statement of wages per week.

	Laidlaw, Cincinnati, Ohio.		Snow, Buffalo, N. Y.		Worthington, Harrison, N. J.		Blake, East Cambridge, Mass.
	Minimum.	Maximum.	Minimum.	Maximum.	Minimum.	Maximum.	Minimum.	Maximum.
Fitters (bench department)	$16.50	$18.00	$15.40	$20.62	$10.80	$17.28	$13.75	$20.00
Turners	15.00	18.00	13.75	20.62	10.80	19.98	13.75	23.65
Pattern makers (wood)	17.70	21.90	16.50	23.37	15.10	27.00	16.50	22.55
Blacksmiths	17.10	21.00	18.25	22.00	20.25	25.12	16.50	24.20
Laborers	9.60	14.40	9.07	10.45	9.10	10.80	9.35	9.35

	England and Wales.[1 2]		Germany.[3]		France.[4]		Belgium.[5]
	Minimum.	Maximum.	Minimum.	Maximum.	Minimum.	Maximum.	Minimum.	Maximum.
Fitters (bench department)	$8.00	$9.00	$6.50	$8.00	$6.00	$7.20	$4.93	$5.70
Turners	8.00	9.00	6.75	8.25	6.00	7.02	5.12	6.08
Pattern makers (wood)	8.50	9.50	6.37	7.50	6.37	7.43	4.89	6.00
Blacksmiths	8.00	9.00	7.12	8.25	6.29	7.93	5.02	6.12
Laborers	4.50	5.50	4.50	5.50	3.89	4.79	3.22	4.06

[1] British Board of Trade Report Cd. 5609, 1911.
[2] The wages in England in February, 1909, were about 1½ per cent higher than in 1905.
[3] British Board of Trade Report Cd. 4032, 1910.
[4] British Board of Trade Report Cd. 4512, 1909.
[5] British Board of Trade Report Cd. 5065, 1910.

I shall include in my remarks the following communication:

HAZLETON, PA., April 2, 1913.

Hon. J. R. FARR,
House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

SIR: We understand that the tariff will be the principal business taken up at the present session of Congress, and as manufacturers of machinery here in Pennsylvania we are very much concerned regarding any reduction in the present tariff on machinery such as we manufacture, which at the present time carries a duty of 45 per cent, and is under the basket or omnibus clause of Schedule C, "Metals and manufactures of." In the tariff bill passed by the House and Senate last year the duty on steam pumps and other machinery such as we manufacture was reduced from 45 to 25 per cent. This bill was vetoed by the President, and we are fearful that the new tariff bill proposed will carry the same reduction.

At the hearing before the Ways and Means Committee on the 14th of last January Mr. Walter Laidlaw, a representative of our company, appeared and presented data and endeavored by his testimony to show the Ways and Means Committee that no reduction in the duty on machinery such as we manufacture should be made. By consulting his testimony, which can be found in "Tariff schedule 8½, hearings before the Committee on Ways and Means, House of Representatives, on Schedule C, metals and manufactures of," January 14, 1913, you will find that Mr. Laidlaw presented exemples showing that on machinery such as we manufacture the percentage of labor to shop cost is as high as 77 per cent, and that the duty in some cases should be as much as 62 per cent, and that it is necessary to maintain the present duty on machinery such as we manufacture in order that we may keep the wages of our workmen up to the present high standard and that the standard of living of the American workmen will not be reduced.

We find from our own investigation, and from reference to official Government reports, that European manufacturers of machinery similar to that manufactured by our company pay at the most one-half the rate of wages that we pay to the same class of workmen here in Pennsylvania, and in several of the European countries less than one-half of our wage rate, notwithstanding the fact that in some of the European countries, particularly in Germany, the efficiency of the workman is fully as high as that of the workman in this country. Prices of material in Europe and material in this country are practically the same, so that the only protection we need is for the benefit of the American workmen.

A reduction in the tariff will enable the European manufacturer to take the business in our home markets, and in order to protect our investment we would then be obliged to reduce the wages of our workmen so that we can hold the business in this country.

Therefore, as manufacturers of machinery from the State of Pennsylvania our purpose in writing to you is to endeavor to enlist your support in preventing any reduction in the tariff on machinery such as we manufacture, so that the wages of our workmen will not be reduced and that the standard of living of our American workmen will be maintained.

Thanking you in advance for your assistance in connection with this matter, we remain,

Yours, very truly,

THE JEANESVILLE IRON WORKS CO.,
A. B. JENNINGS,
Vice President and General Manager.

Mr. TREADWAY. Mr. Chairman, I wish to call attention again to the amendment offered by my colleague from Massachusetts [Mr. GREENE] last evening in behalf of an industry in his district. I stand alike for all the industries of Massachusetts, and therefore I wish to ask the adoption of the amendment which he offered in behalf of jewelry employees, whom you will recognize, from the petitions he presented and the introductory remarks he made, as good and regular members of the Democratic Party. I particularly want to urge the adoption of that amendment because it is directly along the line affecting the particular industry of which I wish to speak, and for which I offered an amendment yesterday afternoon.

Now, we have heard a good deal said here by the distinguished leader on the opposite side of the aisle in reference to "special interests." I do stand for just such a special interest as I referred to here yesterday, namely, the workingman. At this time I particularly speak in behalf of the workingmen in the wire mills of my district who have asked me to urge a continuance of the present tariff rates affecting their industry. This same purpose will be accomplished if you adopt the amendment offered by my colleague [Mr. GREENE], increasing the rate in the basket clause from 25 per cent to 45 per cent.

Now, that kind of a "special interest" is one which it seems should not be advocated by a Representative in Congress, if I correctly understand the attitude taken by the gentlemen on the other side. We tried to get an explanation last evening through the gentleman from Wyoming [Mr. MONDELL] as to just what "special interests" are. But I consider a proper special interest in my district to be especially the employees in that district. [Applause on the Republican side.]

Now, just another word, my friends. I realize that I am a new Member of this body, and I do not wish to intrude either personally or officially on our friends on the other side, who are in the great majority over there and who are against us here, but I do stand for the workingmen in my district, and I think when I put a clean-cut proposition to the leader of the committee who was in charge of this matter yesterday, I should have received at least the courtesy of a reply as to why the duty on Fourdrinier wire or bronze wire cloth was reduced from 45 per cent to 25 per cent. There was no kind of a reply vouchsafed in any shape or manner. I do ask that the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. PALMER] extend at least that courtesy to me, not personally but as representing an industry in my district, as to why that change was made. And in that connection I want to say that I stand here for the preservation of that industry as well as other local and general industries.

In reply to the gentleman whom he designated as coming "from Philadelphia," which is an honor in itself, although it would be a still greater honor if he were designated as coming from the State of Pennsylvania, he answered last evening in these words—and I quote from the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, page 731:

> Mr. PALMER. Mr. Chairman, I will say in answer to that that if the gentleman from Philadelphia could say that he was here trying to save an industry from destruction there might be some logic in his position.

That is exactly the logic for which I stand here to-day.

I am trying to the best of my ability as a representative of that industry to save it from destruction, and we want to save it from destruction for the benefit of the employees in that line of industry. If the votes on this side will do it, and will save, likewise, from destruction the industries represented by my colleague from Massachusetts [Mr. GREENE] and the rest of the industries of Massachusetts, then I know these industries will be saved. That is the logic of the situation in the amendment offered by the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. GREENE], and that is the logic of our attitude toward all our industries. [Applause.]

The words of the Democratic platform adopted at Baltimore last year, and the further explanation by the Democratic candidate, now President, made in a speech at Pittsburgh on October 18 last, although they have already appeared in a speech by a Republican Member during this debate, are especially appropriate at this time as directly bearing upon my argument.

The platform says:

> We recognize that our system of tariff taxation is intimately connected with the business of the country, and we favor the ultimate attainment of the principles we advocate by legislation that will not injure or destroy legitimate industry.

Mr. Wilson said:

> I welcome the opportunity of stating what I believe to be the well-considered position of the Democratic Party with regard to the tariff. It is absolutely essential that we should be entirely frank with one another in the discussion of this fundamental question. The Democratic Party does not propose free trade or anything approaching free trade. We favor the ultimate attainment of the principles we advocate by legislation that will not injure or destroy legitimate industry.

I respectfully ask, How do these statements made before the election harmonize with the conditions to-day, six months after election, in this very industry, as evidenced by the testimony of the wire weavers of Massachusetts? I submit similar evidence is available from the workingmen in many other industries, not only in Massachusetts but throughout the United States.

Mr. LENROOT. Mr. Chairman, this is the basket clause of the metal schedule and carries a rate of 25 per cent. In the Underwood bill of last year the basket clause carried in it shoe machinery, made almost exclusively by the United Shoe Machinery Co. When the bill was up for consideration last year I made some inquiries of the gentleman from Alabama as to why shoe machinery, the product of a trust, was put into this basket clause and carried a duty of 25 per cent ad valorem, and at that time the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] gave an explanation of why this shoe machinery carried that duty of 25 per cent, and this was the explanation. He said:

> Now, as to not putting this machinery on the free list, the reason it was not put on the free list was because it would have been of no avail. It is a patented article; it is a monopoly by reason of the patent rights. It can only be made where the owners of the patent desire it to be made. A tariff will not protect it, because the patent protects it. A reduction of the tariff would not have helped anybody, because the patent protects the owners of the article, so that it would simply have been a matter of absurdity to take that article out of the basket clause, where it happens to fall, because it is not fixed in the bill, and place it on the free list, and then gone to the country and said we had done something. That would be merely fooling the country, and we did not want to do that.

That is what the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] said about shoe machinery being put upon the free list last year, that if they did it they would be merely fooling the country. I am sorry the gentleman is not in the room, because I would like to ask him whether in putting this machinery upon the free list now they are fooling the country, as they said they would be doing if they had done a year ago what they have now done in this bill. [Applause on the Republican side.]

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. PALMER] last night stated with dramatic gesture and still more dramatic effect that his colleague, Mr. MOORE, had been guilty of such conduct in proposing protective duties on some of the articles mentioned in this schedule that he blushed for shame for the people of his State. If there is any occasion for anyone in the State of Pennsylvania blushing for shame with reference to the conduct of any of her Representatives—and I say it not in any invidious sense, but merely by way of comparison—if there is any occasion for any blushes here, it is because a Representative of the State of Pennsylvania, in making up this schedule, has so prepared it that it will drive out the small manufacturer or put him entirely at the mercy of the trusts.

Mr. MOORE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Yes.

Mr. MOORE. If under American policy, as we understand it, as it is taught in the common schools of the land and as it is authorized by law, it is proper for a man to engage in an industrial enterprise, in the construction of a building or a mill, would not the gentleman "blush for shame" if a lawmaker in Congress should undertake by an act of Congress to drive that man out of business without any consideration whatever?

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. I think the gentleman is correct.

Mr. MOORE. Will the gentleman yield for just one more question? I have been bowled out of time this morning, and on behalf of one of my constituents who employs a large number of people I should like, in the gentleman's time, to introduce a letter showing the effect on labor of the policy of the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. PALMER]. May I introduce the letter in the gentleman's time?

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. The gentleman may.

The letter referred to is as follows:

R. H. HOOD CO.,
Philadelphia, Pa., April 30, 1913.

The Hon. J. HAMPTON MOORE,
Congressman, Washington, D. C.

HONORED SIR: I desire most earnestly to protest against the tariff bill now before Congress. If it should pass, it will ruin my business and throw my men out of employment. If this is not the result, my men will have to consent to work at a greatly reduced rate of wages.

The proposed bill reduces the tariff on manufactures of metal from 45 to 25 per cent. While the tariff may have been too high on some commodities, it certainly never was too high on machinery.

I make fine comb circles for machine wool combs, also faller comb bars, which work in connection with the same machinery. These are all fine machine parts, involving a great deal of skill and a high labor cost. I submitted a small sample of our work to the Ways and Means Committee and filed a brief.

I think it is a shame that men in my business, whose mechanics are far superior in skill than, say, the building trades mechanics, do not receive anywhere as large wages. No builder in this country, were he subject to foreign competition, could maintain such a standard of wages unless he had a tariff of over 100 per cent.

Even postmen in America receive three times the wages that the same men do in England; yet our Congress wants to reduce men employed in the machinery trades away below the wages of the postman or hod carrier.

Everyone knows who knows anything about Europe that mechanics are cheap there. I have English and Italian mechanics in my employ who acknowledge that they receive wages here from two to three times as much as what they received in the old countries. Yet the proposed bill is giving us only 25 per cent to compensate for this vast difference in wages.

However slow Europe may be on other lines they are not slow in the manufacture of machinery. They make good machinery, and make it very cheaply, and 25 per cent will not even make competition, but it will surrender our market to them.

If it were possible for us to make machinery in competition with Europe on this 25 per cent basis, no one would be more delighted than I to do so; but it is a physical impossibility, unless, as I have said before, there occurs a sweeping reduction in the price of labor.

On going over the various schedules of the proposed tariff I find on certain goods a tariff of 40 per cent. These goods do not have anywhere near as large a labor cost as the goods which we manufacture. I will instance one class of goods as an illustration. The one I have reference to is card clothing, which cards the wool on the machine, while the goods which I manufacture combs the wool after it is carded preparatory to spinning it into worsted yarns. I am prepared to prove to anyone that the labor cost on the goods that I make is greatly in excess of the labor cost on card clothing. Yet in the old tariff they had 65 per cent, while we had 45 per cent, and a discrimination equally as gross is proposed in the new.

Trusting you will use your influence in an endeavor to defeat this bill, I remain,

Ever truly, one of your constituents,

R. H. HOOD.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Mr. Chairman, the manufacturers of brads, of tacks, of cut nails, of wire nails, of barbed wire, or galvanized fence wire find, when they come to purchase the materials they must use in their factories, that a tariff has been put upon them and that the Steel Trust holds control over those substances.

When they come to sell their products, after they have taken them into their factories and put the work of American laborers upon them, they find they must market them in a market which is entirely unprotected, for all of those articles are put upon the free list. And why are these articles upon the free list? Is there any scientific reason that can be given therefor? No. No matter what you say about how this tariff schedule ought to be prepared, nobody would claim anything of the kind. It is simply economic blundering. They are put there solely for political effect. As the gentleman from Wisconsin has intimated with reference to some other items, they were put there for the purpose of fooling the farmer and the producer, and that is the reason why this schedule is made up in this manner. And yet they will not fool the farmer nor will they fool the producer; they will find simply that the small manufacturer will be compelled to go out of business and that the trust is enabled to keep up its prices. The consumer will gain nothing by having these articles put upon the free list. Now, the gentleman from Pennsylvania said something about platforms. Neither the gentleman from Pennsylvania nor any of his party is in a position to talk about platforms in connection with this tariff schedule. Why, the Democratic platform declares a protective tariff to be unconstitutional. Will the gentleman think when he comes to vote for a protective tariff upon wool and hair of the Angora goat, and cloth made from it, that it is in accordance with his platform? Does the gentleman think, when he puts a tariff on raw material and makes the finished product free of duty, that it is in accordance with his platform? Does he think, when he puts a duty upon the partly finished product that must be used in a certain line of manufacture and takes it off or makes it lower upon the completed product, that that is in accordance with the provisions of the platform that say they intend to injure no legitimate industry? If that is so, what are legitimate industries? I leave it for the gentlemen to answer. [Applause on the Republican side.]

Mr. PALMER. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. GREEN] has taken unnecessary pains in his expression of the thought that I, as a Pennsylvanian, should blush for shame for anything that has been done in this steel and iron schedule. I want to say to him that I have been as deeply in the fight for tariff reform in Pennsylvania during the last four years as has any man in that State. I think I know the feeling of our people in the great industrial State of Pennsylvania upon this tariff question, and I assert it as my deliberate judgment that there is no State in the Union where the demand for a reduction in the burdens of tariff taxation is greater or louder to-day than in our State. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

It is evidenced by the fact that in the year 1912 no political party in our State had the nerve to write into its platform a demand for a continuance of the high protective rates. Every political party which wrote a platform in our State that year contained a demand for a reduction of the Payne rates and a demand for the lightening of the burden of tariff taxation. I come from one of the great industrial districts of the country. We have some of the largest industrial plants in the United States within that district. We have the greatest cement mill in the world, the great Atlas Portland Cement Mill, at Northampton, which took the enormous contract for nearly 5,000,000 barrels of cement for the Panama Canal. We have the Bethlehem Steel Works, employing nearly 15,000 men. We have 90 per cent of the slate mined, manufactured, and produced in the United States. All of these things have been highly protected in the Payne law as in previous laws. We have gone into that district with the fight for lower tariff taxes. This tariff question has been the issue in many a hard-fought battle, waged from corner to corner of that district, and upon that issue the present Representative has been returned by such majorities as conclusively prove that our people believe in a reduction of these tariff taxes. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired; all time has expired. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. GREENE].

The question was taken, and the Chairman announced the noes seemed to have it.

Upon a division (demanded by Mr. GREENE of Massachusetts) there were—ayes 54, noes 80.

So the amendment was rejected.

The Clerk read as follows:

SCHEDULE D—WOOD AND MANUFACTURES OF.

170. Briar root or briar wood, ivy or laurel root, and similar wood unmanufactured, or not further advanced than cut into blocks suitable for the articles into which they are intended to be converted, 10 per cent ad valorem.

Mr. MOORE. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. I would like to ask the gentleman in charge of the bill where briar root or briar wood or laurel root are obtained in the United States.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. My information is that this wood is almost entirely, if not entirely, grown in foreign countries. I can give the gentleman the information as far as I have it:

Briar root or briar wood is the root of white heath, which often grows to large size. The roots are gathered extensively in the south of France and in Corsica for the purpose of being made into tobacco pipes commonly called briar-wood pipes.

Mr. MOORE. That is the foreign wood. But I was asking where it is obtained in the United States.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. It is imported.

Mr. MOORE. There is none in the United States?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. None of which I know.

Mr. MOORE. I have been advised that in North Carolina they undertake to develop brierwood.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I think the gentleman's information is entirely incorrect. I never heard of it.

Mr. MOORE. You think my information is entirely incorrect?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Yes.

Mr. PAYNE. I think the gentleman will find it in his hearings of four years ago.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Well, I was reading from the notes on the Payne bill, to give the gentleman the information. [Laughter.]

Mr. PAYNE. That was before we had the hearings. When we had hearings we paid attention to them. That was made up a year before the hearings.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. The gentleman ought not to deny his own authority.

Mr. PAYNE. You will catch up in five years.

Mr. MOORE. What I want to say in connection with this question of duty on brierwood is this: It is in the interest of brierwood raisers in North Carolina, and I am glad of it. Ten per cent is imposed; and in addition, unmanufactured amber and amberoid, which enter into the manufacture of pipes, are taken from the free list and put on the dutiable list, the apparent purpose being to raise revenue. I would say that most of the users of the pipes made from brier root and brierwood are of the poorer classes. Many of them are from the South, and some of them being Congressmen, smoke their brierwood pipes here in Washington with a great deal of pleasure. Hereafter, instead of obtaining the pipes as cheaply as before, the users of the pipes in the United States will pay the duty, and the price to the consumer, who likes to smoke his old-fashioned pipe, will not be reduced. In other words, in this particular instance the committee has raised the price to the consumer rather than to reduce the cost.

The Clerk read as follows:

171. Sawed boards, planks, deals, and all forms of sawed cedar, lignum-vitæ, lancewood, ebony, box, granadilla, mahogany, rosewood, satinwood, and all other cabinet woods not further manufactured than sawed, 10 per cent ad valorem; veneers of wood, 15 per cent ad valorem; and wood unmanufactured, not specially provided for in this section, 10 per cent ad valorem.

Mr. PALMER. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Pennsylvania offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 46, line 3, strike out the word "other."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HUMPHREY of Washington. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Washington [Mr. HUMPHREY] offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 46, line 7, after the words "ad valorem," insert the words, "shingles, 30 cents per thousand."

Mr. HUMPHREY of Washington. Mr. Chairman, the purpose of this amendment is to restore the present duty upon shingles—shingles being on the free list in this bill.

There are about 440 shingle mills in the State of Washington that cut shingles alone. A large number of shingles are also cut in the mills that cut lumber as well. The 440 straight mills are mostly small and mostly situated in the country. The shingle mills in the State of Washington employ about 15,000 men and pay them about $15,000,000 annually in wages. These men are all white and nearly all American citizens.

Their direct competitors, separated from them only by an imaginary line, are the orientals working in the shingle mills of British Columbia. More than 75 per cent of the labor employed in the shingle mills of British Columbia are Hindus, Chinese, and Japanese. This oriental labor works for far less than the white labor of Washington. They live differently from the white labor of Washington.

Yesterday I received an affidavit, which I hold in my hand, from a man who has recently inspected 16 shingle mills in British Columbia. These mills are typical of all the mills in this Province. This affidavit shows that 75 per cent of the men employed in those mills are Chinese and 5 per cent are Hindus; or, in other words, 80 per cent of the labor working in the shingle mills of British Columbia is oriental.

Here are the latest figures that I have been able to obtain showing the difference in wages in British Columbia and my State:

	Cents.
Sawing, per 1,000, in British Columbia	12
Sawing, per 1,000, in Washington	19
Packing, per 1,000, in British Columbia	7
Packing, per 1,000, in Washington	10

A common laborer in British Columbia receives $1.50 a day.
A common laborer in Washington receives $2.50 to $3.25 a day.
Filers in British Columbia, $6 per day.
Filers in Washington, $9 per day.
Price of logs in British Columbia, $8 to $9 per 1,000.
Price of logs in Washington, $11 to $14 per 1,000.

Owing to the character of the timber, it also costs more to work it than it does the timber of British Columbia. Mr. J. H. Bloedel, who is one of the foremost millmen of the State of Washington and who owns shingle mills both in British Columbia and the State of Washington, has testified that the labor cost in British Columbia is 25 cents a thousand. In the State of Washington it is 55 cents a thousand.

Is it expected that American labor shall compete with this oriental labor, or shall the shingle mills of Washington close? One result or the other is inevitable.

In the State of Washington the shingle mill is largely the scavenger of the forest. It cuts what the sawmills leave. It takes the stumps and pieces of logs generally charred and blackened by fire. In British Columbia the oriental labor cuts mostly clean and green timber. Not only does the shingle mill in the State of Washington give employment to labor at high and living wages but it also conserves our forests by largely cutting timber stumps, tops, and parts of logs that would otherwise rot or be burned clearing the land.

In order that the House may understand more fully the character of the labor in British Columbia that the Democratic Party proposes that American labor should directly compete with, I will show a few pictures taken at the mills in British Columbia.

Here are the photographs of British Columbia mills taken only a few days ago. [Exhibiting pictures.] In this photograph you see the Chinaman and in this one you see the Hindu. I ask the Democratic majority, Do you intend to bring American labor in the State of Washington into direct competition with this oriental labor, with the Hindus and the Chinese? And that is precisely what this bill will do if you pass it. If you pass this bill and compel American labor in the State of Washington to compete with oriental labor just across the national border, then I hope no gentleman on the Democratic side will again attempt to mislead the House and the country by making speeches against oriental labor, as has recently been done by the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. SISSON] and the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. STANLEY].

The Democratic Party is welcome to any glory that it can obtain by bringing American labor into contact with this oriental labor. And what reply has the Democratic Party made to the American laborer working in the shingle mills in the State of Washington? What consolation has been given him? The Democratic Party, speaking through President Wilson, tells the American workman in the State of Washington that he will have the high privilege of whetting his wits in competition with oriental labor.

The Democratic Party gives the American workingman in my State the privilege of whetting his wits until he can live as the Japanese live, until he can live on the pay that the Japanese receives. The Democratic Party gives him the privilege of whetting his wits until he can live as the heathen Hindu lives. The Democratic Party gives the American workingman the high privilege of whetting his wits until he can live as cheaply as the Chinaman lives. [Applause on the Republican side.]

There are 300,000 voters in my State that live directly upon wages earned in the forests that, by this competition with oriental labor will have their wits so sharpened that they will demonstrate at the next opportunity that they are not so stupid as to vote the Democratic ticket. [Applause on the Republican side.]

Admitting shingles free into the State of Washington will not lower the price to the consumer. In Canada they have a Shingle Trust. No attempt is made to conceal the fact. The Government does not attempt to prohibit it. They permit only so many machines to be run. Each community is allotted its number, and can not operate any more. This is avowedly done for the purpose of keeping up the prices. When we have free shingles, the prices will only be lowered sufficiently to get into our market. As soon as our mills close prices will be increased. The Canadian is selling his shingles in our country not for our advantage but for his own. We know by experience what they will do. We do not have to guess. At one time Canada sold to us 5,000 carloads in a single year; but the American consumer did not get his shingles for any less. Our mills were closing six months in the year, while the mills across the line were busy. The work and wages were simply transferred from Washington to British Columbia—from the American workman to the oriental. But the American consumer still paid the same price for his shingles.

The history of the shingle industry is the history of every industry in America that has been protected from the destruction of cheap foreign labor. Every time we buy a bale of shingles from British Columbia we take just that much work and that much labor from the Americans and give it to the foreigners.

The result of this bill will be to again largely transfer the shingle industry from the State of Washington to British Columbia. It will mean that $10,000,000 annually in work and wages will be taken from American labor in the State of Washington and given to the oriental labor across the line. It means that the Democratic Party will take the daily bread from 60,000 men, women, and children in the State of Washington, and in the name of free trade, low prices, and college statesmanship give it to the Hindu and the Chinaman and the Japanese.

They may give us cheap prices. They did once before. We had a "Prof. Wilson" then as we have a "Prof. Wilson" now that was the high priest of Democracy and the anointed prophet of free trade. Yes; prices were low—so low that you could get a good meal in many cities of the United States for 5 cents. That this bill may bring again those splendid days of Democratic cheapness I admit. There is no reason for placing shingles upon the free list but a sectional one and a political one. If it were a little peanut industry in the South, it would be protected as rice and peanuts are protected. If the shingle industry was located in Pennsylvania or Indiana or Minnesota or in any State that had a Democratic member of the Ways and Means Committee, it would have been protected. It is sacrificed for political purposes only, because it is a Pacific coast industry. This bill will destroy this industry as it will many others, but there is no hope of amending it, so let it be enacted quickly. Let the tragedy be perpetrated at once in order that the people may the more quickly have the experience and the more quickly determine, as they will, to wipe the sectional monstrosity from the statute books.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I ask unanimous consent that the debate on this schedule—I understand that gentlemen all want to talk about lumber—close in 35 minutes, and that 25 minutes of that time go to the other side.

Mr. MURDOCK. The gentleman from Washington [Mr. FALCONER] wishes to talk on an amendment that he will offer.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] has the floor.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I am willing to agree about the length of the debate on this schedule, but I do not want a prolonged debate.

Mr. MANN. The gentleman does not wish to cut off Members who desire to offer amendments to the lumber schedule?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Oh, no; all gentlemen who desire to do so can offer amendments.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. The Asiatic, oriental proposition that is involved in admitting the lumber of British Columbia is the most important question now before the people of the United States. It overshadows the whole tariff bill.

Mr. LANGLEY. I am going to object to the limitation of time suggested by the gentleman from Alabama.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I shall be very glad to see if we can make an arrangement with the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] if other gentlemen will keep quiet.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will state that the matter can be accommodated much more readily if gentlemen will be in order. All gentlemen will please be seated.

Mr. MANN. Now, let us see if we can come to an agreement. How many gentlemen on this side desire time?

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. I desire time.

Mr. MANN. That will be 5 minutes.

Mr. POWERS. I desire time.

Mr. MANN. That will be 10 minutes.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I desire 5 minutes.

Mr. MANN. That makes 15.

Mr. FALCONER. I desire 5 minutes.

Mr. MANN. That makes 20.

Mr. FORDNEY. I desire 5 minutes.

Mr. MANN. That makes 25.

Mr. HUMPHREY of Washington. I desire 5 minutes.

Mr. MANN. That makes 30.

Mr. MOORE. I desire 5 minutes.

Mr. MANN. That makes 35.

Mr. LANGLEY. I desire 5 minutes

Mr. MANN. That makes 40. On this side there are gentlemen who desire a total of 40 minutes.

Mr. FORDNEY. Make it an hour.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I ask unanimous consent that the debate on Schedule D—the lumber schedule—conclude in 50 minutes—40 minutes to go to that side of the House and 10 minutes to this side of the House—and that all amendments may be pending and voted on at the conclusion of the debate.

Mr. MANN. Make it so that gentlemen may offer their amendments to be voted on when the paragraphs are read.

Mr. FORDNEY. You will have to dispose of a million dollars a minute. There is $40,000,000 involved in this.

Mr. GARNER. We can do that. [Laughter.]

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] asks unanimous consent that all debate on Schedule D close in 50 minutes.

Mr. MANN. I understand there will be 50 minutes' debate. The 50 minutes does not include the reading of the paragraph or the offering of amendments.

The CHAIRMAN. No; 50 minutes' debate—40 minutes to go to the minority side of the House and 10 minutes to the majority, the time to be controlled by the Chair.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. The Chair may make the recognitions.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

There was no objection

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. Mr. Chairman, 65 per cent of all the wooden shingles consumed in the United States are made in the State of Washington. One-fourth of all the men in British Columbia are orientals, and there are few oriental women. Nearly 80 per cent of all the workingmen in British Columbia are either Chinese, Japanese, or Hindu. The shingle industry in the State of Washington can not go against this competition. I desire to read to you a short telegraphic dispatch printed in the Seattle Post-Intelligencer under date of April 22, this year:

VANCOUVER, BRITISH COLUMBIA,
Monday, April 21, 1913.

Under the terms of the Anglo-Japanese treaty, recently ratified by the Canadian Government, and going into effect May 1, 1913, the Japanese have practically an open door to Canada.

Prominent Japanese recently in Vancouver are authority for the above statement. The McBride government has recently ratified the action of the Dominion Government.

The Anglo-Japanese treaty prohibits any action being taken by the provincial governments.

Now, then, in order that this may be thoroughly understood, I desire to make a few explanatory statements of the immigration laws of Canada.

First. Natives of India—that is, Hindus—are British subjects, and under the law of Great Britain and Canada have the right to enter the latter Provinces and work there, provided that they pass a medical examination and have sufficient money on their person at the time of entering the country to insure their not becoming a public charge until they have had reasonable time to find employment. The sum of $25 on his person is a passport for the Hindu into British Columbia.

Second. The Chinese are permitted to enter and work in British Columbia on payment of a head tax of $500 in each case and the passage of a medical examination.

Let me say here that I want to thank the gentleman from Texas [Mr. DIES] for the introduction into the RECORD of the paragraphs from President Wilson's books, showing the mechanical ability of the Chinese, and I propose to place in the RECORD, if my searchers now at work in the Congressional Library can find copies of the speeches made by the present Secretary of State, William J. Bryan, concerning the Japanese, at the time when he declared that imperialism was the paramount issue.

To revert to the head tax, and treat it from an economical standpoint, it costs $500 and traveling expenses to put a Chinese workman into a lumber job in British Columbia. That $500, borrowed at 6 per cent interest, amounts to a yearly cost of $30, or about 10 cents per working day. Therefore the present difference between the cost of obtaining Chinese labor and other labor in British Columbia is fundamentally 10 cents per day.

Third. Under a treaty between Great Britain and Japan, which goes into effect May 1, Japanese subjects have a right to freely enter British Columbia and to work therein in the shingle industry, the lumber industry, the lime industry, and nearly every other industry. Perhaps Vancouver, British Columbia, will become the shoe center of the United States.

Mr. KEATING. Will the gentleman state how he accounts for the fact that 50,000 American farmers have crossed the line to Canada, seeking homes, if this horde of laborers is about to deluge Canada?

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. These hordes have not crossed the divide yet; they are still west of the Cascades clearing timber, grubbing 2 feet to get to the ground before they can get to agriculture. This shingle bill will stop our people from clearing the land that they are going to live on.

Mr. KEATING. It will keep our people at home, will it not?

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. I can not yield any further. The gentleman and myself can talk it over when we reach the schedule of agriculture.

Vancouver, British Columbia, lies close to our territory, and if the old "fifty-four forty or fight" had prevailed, as our fathers hoped for, Vancouver should now be an American city, with, thank God, the Chinese barred and the Japanese restricted, while the Hindus could be run out of there just as we ran them out of Grays Harbor, my home.

Fourth. While Japanese may enter British Columbia freely, there is, however, what might be termed a gentleman's agreement between some of the officials of the Dominion of Canada and those of the Japanese Empire, by which Japanese immigration is limited as occasion requires. A similar policy prevails as to the Chinese.

The Chinese head tax is used as a sliding scale, letting Chinese coolies in when there are openings for them and excluding them by raising the head tax when there are no labor opportunities. In other words, the Dominion lets Chinese labor in or shuts them out just as it regulates the shipment of wood pulp into the United States. I have very little time in which to go into the dangers of Asiatic immigration across the boundaries of the State of Washington. Bubonic plague, riots, and all those troubles are with us. In the city of Bellingham, Wash., the white race recently lined up against the Asiatics. The papers are full of California's struggle against the Japanese. In passing I would like to say, "How would you like to have your little 6-year-old daughter sit in school beside a 25-year-old Japanese fresh from the manure pile?"

Mr. Chairman, I desire to reintroduce into the RECORD some remarks on the necessity for lumber and shingle duties made a few years ago by my illustrious and honored predecessor, Francis W. Cushman, who on this floor sacrificed his life as truly as any soldier on any battle field to the cause of the Constitution, the flag, and the state. [Applause.]

I will also introduce the timber laws of British Columbia, showing the terms by which that Province gives Crown grants, special leases, and how they print the United States tariff schedules on lumber in their Timberman's Guide for the benefit of their lumbermen. Oh, if we had only had a tariff commission to do as much for us. Then perhaps we new politicians would not be obliged to dodge the name of Payne as if he were the ghost that pursued Tam O'Shanter.

I desire to introduce into the RECORD the text of the Anglo-Japanese alliance, and I commend to every member of the majority this book, The Valor of Ignorance, by Homer Lea.

I want to also introduce into the RECORD the protest of the Shingle Weavers' Union and statements against reduction on shingles and protests from many civic organizations with regard to the jeopardizing of our industries in the West by continuing the lax so-called gentleman's agreement between the high officials of the United States and those of Japan.

I want to prove to you by actual reports that British Columbia shingles, after paying a duty of 50 cents a thousand, sell in the New York market to-day at just exactly 10 cents higher than our shingles.

Mr. Chairman, I represent a district which has a thousand miles of shore line—enough to reach from Boston, Mass., to Charleston, S. C. I have an interest in that shore line. My district has two great forest reserves, two gigantic national parks; one-half of the district is conserved, and in the remaining territory there are about 60,000 Republican voters of all varieties, and I represent them. There are about 15,000 Democratic voters in all of that great district of 20,000 square miles, and I represent them, as well as 60,000 Republicans of various degrees. There are about 200 shingle mills in my district, and I represent them, although I have no interest in any one of them, and after this bill is passed I would not accept the whole 200 as a gift.

I can almost regret that in all the great Northwest not a single Democrat came to Congress to sit in that secret "caucus Congress" which framed this bill. A single Democrat from our great section could have told that caucus some startling things. But I need not worry, for your great Democrat, your peerless leader, W. J. Bryan, the Secretary of State, will come back from the Pacific in a few days with information that will startle the President of the United States, who wants to match wits with the world.

How can the sizzling solon from Mississippi [Mr. SISSON] in the last month of the last session of Congress vote against a battleship program, and in the first month of this Congress cry out on the floor these words: "If we must have war or submit to this indignity, I am for war." How can he vote for this tariff bill in view of this statement?

And my far-sighted friend, the gentleman from Alabama, Capt. HOBSON, who knows all these facts, how can he vote for this bill? Will the income tax alone be enough to build the battleships that he knows we must have? [Applause.]

I will print as a part of my remarks the following:

To the CONGRESSMAN SECOND DISTRICT, WASHINGTON:

Twenty-five thousand organized workmen in State of Washington vigorously protest against reduction of tariff on lumber. We do not want our wages reduced.

CHAS. PERRY TAYLOR,
Secretary Washington Federation of Labor.

Also the following telegrams:

ROCKPORT MILL CO.,
Seattle, Wash., April 15, 1913.

Hon. ALBERT JOHNSON, M. C.,
Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: If you want to put the hundreds of little shingle mills, that give employment to thousands, out of business, then help take off the tariff on shingles.

It is absolutely a question of a living with us, and we should be protected and for at least 50 cents a thousand.

We use timber that would be a complete waste were it not for this industry.

Now, all we can do is to ask your help in our protection.

Yours, very truly,

ROCKPORT MILL CO.,
By GEO. C. LEMCKE, President.

ABERDEEN, WASH., April 15, 1913.

Hon. ALBERT JOHNSON, Washington, D. C.:

Realizing that any material reduction of the duty on shingles would throw vast quantities of British Columbia shingles, manufactured by cheap oriental labor, into competition with our shingles, and thus practically kill this industry in Washington, the Aberdeen Chamber of Commerce earnestly request you to exert your utmost power in procuring the same provision in the new tariff law as is now in effect.

N. P. BRYAN.

HOQUIAM, WASH., April 16, 1913.

Hon. ALBERT JOHNSON, M. C.,
Washington, D. C.:

One thousand men living in Chehalis County, earning $4,000 per day, and $6,500,000 invested in cedar mills and timber, demand protection from cheap oriental timber and oriental labor. If you remove shingle tariff you kill American shingle business.

HOQUIAM COMMERCIAL CLUB.
W. L. ADAMS.
J. A. LEWIS.
THOS. HUTCHINSON.

SEATTLE, WASH., April 9, 1913.

Hon. ALBERT JOHNSON, Washington, D. C.:

When we had a 30-cent duty on shingles British Columbia mills with oriental labor shipped 5,000 cars annually into United States. Western Washington mills now cut and ship 35,000 cars a year, supplying 65 per cent of shingles consumed in United States; most of these shingles are cut from low-grade cedar from stumps, broken and burned cedar, and windfalls by white labor. Much of the credit for the agricultural development of Washington is due to the small Washington shingle mills utilizing what would otherwise be an economical waste. Free shingles will give British Columbia mills our American markets and cause great suffering and loss to citizens of Washington. We should at least have a 30-cent duty, and we urge and expect your untiring efforts to that end.

PACIFIC COAST SHIPPERS' ASSOCIATION.

RAYMOND COMMERCIAL CLUB,
Raymond, Wash., April 18, 1913.

Hon. ALBERT JOHNSON, M. C.,
Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: As the tariff revision is to be undertaken by the present Congress, and as this section of the country depends upon the lumber industry almost entirely for its prosperity, we earnestly urge that the duty on lumber and shingles be at least maintained and if possible advanced.

We believe that by voting for the protective tariff on lumber and shingles that you will be carrying out the wishes of the majority of your constituents.

Very truly, yours,

RAYMOND COMMERCIAL CLUB,
Per W. W. HAYS, Secretary.

Mr. Chairman, I have hundreds of other protests, with which I will not burden the RECORD. I thank you.

STATEMENT NO. 1.

As an appendix to the book of Homer Lea, entitled "The Valor of Ignorance," will be found the Anglo-Japanese alliance, adopted at the time of Japan's war with Russia. A copy of the new Anglo-Japanese alliance, by which the Japanese receive additional favors in Canada, will soon be available for this record. In this connection read Homer Lea's The Day of the Saxon.

STATEMENT NO. 2.

I desire to take from the appendix of the book of Homer Lea, entitled "The Valor of Ignorance," the following statements concerning the first expression of the anti-Japanese sentiment in California, and I desire to add that an anti-Chinese sentiment has existed in the State of Washington since before the State was admitted to the Union in 1889 and prevailed to such an extent that Chinese were not allowed to remain among us:

The first expression of anti-Japanese sentiment did not occur until 1900, when a mass meeting was held in San Francisco.

In 1904, at the twenty-fourth annual session of the American Federation of Labor (2,500,000 members), resolutions were passed to permanently exclude the Japanese from the United States and its insular Territories. These resolutions were reaffirmed at the annual sessions in 1905 and 1906. During 1905, 12 great national conventions indorsed and adopted the same resolutions, as did 539 other organizations, comprising civic, fraternal, political, and labor associations.

* * * * * * *

In 1908 there was established in general convention the Asiatic Exclusion League of North America, the outgrowth of the Japanese-Korean Exclusion League of 1906. This league has branches in all of the Western States.

STATEMENT NO. 3.

Memorial of the First Convention of the Asiatic Exclusion League of North America in a regular session held in Seattle, Wash. They entered requests and protests as follows:

Request the immediate passage of a law which will exclude, absolutely and emphatically, all Asiatics from the mainland and insular possessions of the United States; and your memorialists do hereby emphatically

Protest against the administrative and executive officers of the United States entering into any agreement which will permit the ruler of any foreign country to make stipulations as to what class of persons, and in what numbers, shall leave said foreign country for the purpose of immigrating to the United States; and your memorialists

Declare that any such agreement with a foreign power is a subversion of the traditions and policies of the United States and a betrayal of the rights of American citizens. Your memorialists further

Protest against the employment of Asiatics on board vessels flying the American flag to the exclusion of American seamen and in violation of American law; therefore, your memorialists

Pray for the speedy enactment of a law which will prohibit the employment of Asiatics upon all vessels flying the American flag, or in any branch or department of the public service; your memorialists again emphatically

Protest against the continuance of Asiatic immigration upon the exalted grounds of American patriotism, for the reasons—

First. That these Asiatics come to the United States entirely ignorant of our sentiments of nativity and patriotism, and utterly unfit and incapable of discharging the duties of American citizenship.

Second. The introduction of this incongruous and nonassimilable element into our national life will inevitably impair and degrade, if not effectually destroy, our cherished institutions and our American life.

Third. These Asiatics are alien to our ideas of patriotism, morality, loyalty, and the highest conception of Christian civilization.

Fourth. Their presence here is a degrading and contaminating influence to the best phases of American life.

Fifth. With their low standard of living, immoral surroundings, and cheap labor, they constitute a formidable and fierce competition against our American system—the pride and glory of our civilization—and unless prohibited by effective legislation will result in the irreparable deterioration of American labor.

Sixth. The living in our midst of a large body of Asiatics, the greatest number of whom are armed, loyal to their Government, entertaining feelings of distrust, if not of hostility, to our people, without any allegiance to our Government or our institutions, not sustaining American life in times of peace, and ever ready to respond to the cause of their own nations in times of war, make these Asiatics an appalling menace to the American Republic, the splendid achievements wrought by the strong arms and loyal hearts of Caucasian toilers, patriots, and heroes in every walk of life.

I desire to quote Senator LODGE in commenting upon the anti-Japanese movement in a speech at Boston as saying:

Such a movement of people as this is in itself a historic event of great magnitude, deserving the most careful consideration; but what we are concerned with is its effect upon and its meaning to the people of the United States and the future of our country.

STATEMENT NO. 4.

I wish to present a statement prepared and presented to the House of Representatives by my lamented and honored predecessor, Francis W. Cushman, as to the position of our lumber industry in relation to Canada:

Look at that part of the chart that deals with shingles. In the year 1908 Canada sent into the United States 329 times as many shingles as we sent into Canada in the same year. And yet we boast that we believe in protecting home industries and home labor. Any American who has any red corpuscles left in him can not look at that chart and not blush. The American tariff on shingles ought to be raised from 30 cents to 60 cents a thousand, and then we would begin to manufacture our own shingles at home, and the price to the consumer would be little, if any, greater than it is now.

I will add another table of figures showing the shingles and lumber exported and imported between the United States and Canada during the past five years:

Shingles imported into the United States from Canada and exported from the United States to Canada.

	1904	1905	1906	1907	1908
Imported...	770,372,000	758,725,000	900,806,000	880,903,000	987,266,000
Exported...	7,009,000	6,867,000	8,005,000	2,013,000	2,955,000

Total imports shingles for 5 years from Canada..... 4,298,072,000
Total exports shingles for 5 years to Canada..... 27,809,000

Excess imports over exports..... 4,270,263,000

In 5 years 158 times as many.

Valuation of shingles imported and exported between the United States and Canada.

	1904	1905	1906	1907	1908
Imported...	$1,602,998	$1,581,421	$1,852,512	$1,939,791	$2,376,394
Exported...	14,186	13,212	16,377	4,265	8,873

Total value shingles imported 5 years from Canada..... $9,353,071
Total value shingles exported 5 years to Canada..... 56,913

Excess imports over exports..... 9,296,158

In five years value one hundred and sixty-four times as much.

Please note the steady increase in the quantities of the stuff that Canada is sending to us and the steady decrease of similar products we are sending to her. If that chart were a little wider and contained the record of a few more years, the United States would be clear off the commercial map.

STATEMENT NO. 5.

I also desire to present the following affidavit of Charles C. Hone, who was employed by the Pacific Coast Shippers' Association, of Seattle, Wash., and the Red Cedar Manufacturers' Association, also of Seattle, in which is set forth the relative number of Chinese, Hindus, and whites employed in the shingle mills of British Columbia which he investigated. I would like to direct particular attention to the wages paid Asiatic employees working in these shingle mills.

The statement of Fred A. Traill, treasurer and manager of the Red Cedar Shingle Manufacturers' Association, sets forth the scale of wages of the white employees in the shingle mills of the State of Washington. This statement follows the statement of Mr. Hone.

STATE OF WASHINGTON, County of King, ss:

Charles C. Hone, being first duly sworn, on oath deposes and says:

That he was employed by the Pacific Coast Shippers' Association, of Seattle, Wash., and the Red Cedar Shingle Manufacturers' Association, of Seattle, Wash., to inspect shingle-manufacturing plants in western British Columbia, and to investigate and determine the capacity of said plants and the number and races of the employees of each of said plants.

That he personally inspected, from April 15, 1913, to April 18, 1913, inclusive, plants of the following concerns:

Robertson & Hackett, Vancouver, British Columbia, on April 15, 1913.
Robert McNair Shingle Co., Vancouver, British Columbia, on April 15, 1913.
Albert Cotton, Vancouver, British Columbia, on April 15, 1913.
Thomas Kirkpatrick, Vancouver, British Columbia, on April 15, 1913.
Imperial Shingle Co., Vancouver, British Columbia, on April 15, 1913.
Joseph Chew Lumber & Shingle Co., Vancouver, British Columbia, on April 15, 1913.
Lulu Shingle Co., Eburne, British Columbia, on April 15, 1913.
Westminster Mill Co., New Westminster, British Columbia, on April 16, 1913.
Royal City Lumber & Shingle Co., New Westminster, British Columbia, on April 16, 1913.
Brunette Saw Mill Co., Sapperton, British Columbia, on April 16, 1913.
Cascade Mills (Ltd.), Vancouver, British Columbia, on April 17, 1913.
Thurston Flavelle Lumber Co., Port Moody, British Columbia, on April 17, 1913.
Port Moody Shingle Co., Port Moody, British Columbia, on April 17, 1913.
New Ladysmith Lumber Co., Nanaimo, British Columbia, on April 18, 1913.
Victoria Lumber & Manufacturing Co., Chemanius, British Columbia, on April 18, 1913.
Victoria Shingle Co., Victoria, British Columbia, on April 18, 1913.

As the result of my personal investigation and inspection I found that the number and races of the employees engaged in and about the plants of the above-named concerns were as follows:

	Chinese.	Hindus.	White.	Total.
Sawyers	58	.....	12	70
Packers	69	.....	.....	69
All other employees [1]	94	5	53	152
Total	221	5	65	291

[1] Covers bolt passers, cut-off men, block pilers, hand sawyers, clipper men, refuse movers, band nailers, car loaders, and common laborers.

From these figures the percentage of white employees compared with the percentage of oriental employees engaged is as follows: Asiatic employees, 80 per cent; white employees, 20 per cent.

On inquiry as to the wages paid Asiatic employees by the above-mentioned concerns, I have arrived at the following averages:

Shingle sawyers (Asiatic employees), 12 cents to 13 cents per thousand.
Shingle packers (Asiatic employees), 6 cents to 7½ cents per thousand.
All other (Asiatic employees), $1.40 to $1.70 per day.

CHAS. C. HONE.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 24th day of April, 1913.
[SEAL.] JOSEPH B. ALEXANDER,
Notary Public in and for the State of Washington, Residing at Seattle.

STATE OF WASHINGTON, County of King, ss:

Fred A. Traill, being first duly sworn, on oath deposes and says that he is treasurer and manager of the Red Cedar Shingle Manufacturers' Association, an organization incorporated under the laws of the State of Washington, composed of about 200 shingle manufacturers who manufacture about 65 per cent of the shingle output of the State of Washington.

That I am entirely familiar with the wages paid shingle sawyers (white employees), shingle packers (white employees), and all others (white employees) in the shingle manufacturing plants on the Puget Sound, State of Washington.

The following is the scale of wages:
Shingle sawyers (white employees), 16 cents to 19 cents per thousand.
Shingle packers (white employees), 9 cents to 10 cents per thousand.
Knee bolters (white employees), $3.50 to $4.50 per day.
Drag sawyers (white employees), $3.50 to $5 per day.
Common laborers (white employees), $2 to $2.50 per day.

F. A. TRAILL.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 24th day of April, 1913.
[SEAL.] JOSEPH B. ALEXANDER,
Notary Public in and for the State of Washington, Residing at Seattle.

I am in possession of fully 1,000 letters and telegrams protesting against the destruction of the shingle industry, but as no opportunity has been given to present these in a hearing on the lumber schedule, and as no Democrat has voted otherwise than directed by his leaders, it seems useless to carry them in the columns of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

Let me, in conclusion, add a condensation of the British Columbia timber laws and taxation rules. Notice the simplicity and the low price for leasing:

STATEMENT NO. 6.

All land in the Province of British Columbia not the subject of private ownership is subject to the disposal of the provincial authorities, save the lands in the railway belt. The railway belt is a strip of about 20 miles on each side of the Canadian Pacific Railway as far west as Port Moody, the statutory terminus. The timber on provincial lands up to the present time has been disposed of either by Crown grant, lease, or license.

Crown grant or patent gives absolute ownership in fee simple to land and timber thereon, and on the timber taken from land covered by deeds issued prior to the 7th of April, 1887, there is a tax of from $1 to $4 per 1,000, which is refunded if the logs are manufactured into lumber in Canada. On all timber cut on deeded Crown-grant lands issued since the 7th of April, 1887, and prior to the 12th of March, 1906, there is a royalty of 50 cents per thousand and no tax. Both these classes are exportable.

On any timber cut from Crown lands or from Crown-granted lands deeded since the 12th of March, 1906, there is a royalty of 50 cents per thousand, but the logs are not exportable until manufactured.

Dominion leases give the holder the right of all the timber on the land held under lease until cut. The charges on the same are as follows: A ground rent of 5 cents per acre per year in advance and a stumpage or royalty of 50 cents per thousand when cut. There is a charge for fire dues, which is too small to take into consideration.

Prior to 1905 the provincial government, which controls all the timber of British Columbia outside of the Canadian Pacific Railway belt, issued leases covering timberlands, which gave the holder of such leases the right to all the timber on the lands covered by the lease for a period of 21 years, with a ground rent of 10 cents per acre per year and 50 cents per thousand stumpage when cut. These leases can be surrendered at any time and renewed for another 21 years under existing laws in force at time of surrendering.

The provincial government up to 1908 issued special provincial licenses for 21 years from date of issue, which gave the holder the right to all the timber on the land for 21 years, at a ground rent of $140 per annum per section of 640 acres and 50 cents per thousand stumpage when cut.

Mr. FORDNEY. Mr. Chairman, I would like to call the committee's attention to the fact that on page 46 cedar lumber is put on the protected list at 10 per cent ad valorem, and on page 128 cedar shingles are put on the free list. It costs twice as much in labor and other expenses to convert a thousand feet of cedar logs into shingles as it does to convert a thousand feet of logs into lumber. You have therefore put a duty of 10 per cent ad valorem on lumber when imported into this country which sells at about $25 per thousand feet, or $2.50 a thousand feet protection, and you can not truthfully call it anything else, and you have put the product of that thousand feet of logs in shingles on the free list. Shingles are made out of many kinds of wood—cedar, redwood, cypress, pine, fir, and many other kinds of timber.

The gentleman will say that this is cabinet wood. You have made no distinction between Spanish cedar and British Columbia cedar, or any other cedar; so that cedar lumber will come in under that paragraph and pay a duty of 10 per cent ad valorem, and you put shingles on the free list. Show me the consistency between the two when one costs twice as much as the other.

Again, gentlemen, you forget. Remember now this is a special interest. I have got some personal interest and therefore I should not be permitted to talk on the subject. If I do I may be subjected to severe criticism as was my friend from Pennsylvania yesterday when he talked about shoe eyelets. I am a lumberman; I am not a shingle manufacturer. My wife had an uncle whose cousin had a brother married to a girl whose uncle was in the shingle business. [Laughter.]

Mr. HAMILTON of Michigan. What relation are you to her?

Mr. PALMER. Can the gentleman describe that again and get it the same way? [Laughter.]

Mr. FORDNEY. There are 49,000 saw and shingle mills in the United States, employing 800,000 laboring men. These men and their families get their bread and butter from that industry. Talk about monopoly! The Bureau of Corporations spent half a million dollars and five years time in trying to find a monopoly or a trust in the manufacture of lumber and shingles in this country, and then reported their absolute failure to do so. My friends, you are striking a blow at an industry the product of which last year amounted to $40,000,000, one-half of which went into the pockets of the men who were employed in that industry, not including the men in the lumber camps. I am speaking of the men in the saw and shingle mills of this country. You are going to do this. You are going to put shingles on the free list and lumber on the free list. Lumber is now on the protected list and pays the smallest rate of duty of anything mentioned in the protective law, with the single exception of fish. You are going to take away that little morsel of protection, when everything that the manufacturer of lumber and shingles uses in the way of tools, machinery, clothing, food supply, everything that is used in the sawmill or in the lumber camp, is on the protected list. You propose now to give them free potatoes and free pork——

Mr. RAKER. And free beef?

Mr. FORDNEY. Beef! Oh, granny's nightcap! Cattle on the protective list and beef on the free list! Another inconsistency from the Democratic side of the House—raw material on the protective list and the finished product on the free list. Not protection. Do not use the word "protection," for your life. Revenue, revenue—cattle on the protective list because we need the revenue, and we are going to get it, too. So it goes all down the line. But gentlemen on that side of the House forget when putting shingles on the free list that the industry in the Northwest, where the great bulk of the shingles come from, needs that protection.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Michigan has expired.

Mr. FALCONER. Mr. Chairman, it was my intention to offer an amendment to the amendment; but when this Ways and Means Committee can dispose of $40,000,000 in 40 minutes, I will say that they are moving too rapidly for me, and I will not offer the amendment.

I want to submit, however, that 54 per cent of the standing timber in the United States is in the States of Washington, Oregon, California, Idaho, and Montana, and yet the men who are at the head of affairs in this House have not seen fit to put one man from any of these States on the Committee on Ways and Means.

In your reckless revelry of tariff tinkering you are putting an industry in the State of Washington out of business. I am not here to talk for a duty on lumber; that is a different matter. But I do say that any man who stands up on the floor of this House and says that shingles should be put on the free list has a very crazy idea of the economics that affect much of the territory in the northwestern part of the United States.

Labor! You Japanese, Chinese, Hindu lovers! [Laughter on the Republican side.] I hope the gentleman from Illinois who talked for the laboring man yesterday will vote right this morning. He says he is a man who was elected for the welfare of and to protect the labor interests. Any man who has an ounce of brains in his cranium knows that he is putting the labor interest in the shingle industry in this country to the bad, and so far to the bad that men engaged in it will be looking for other employment inside of the next two years. What are the conditions obtaining in the shingle industry?

Mr. RAKER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FALCONER. Yes; briefly.

Mr. RAKER. Does the gentleman know what percentage of Japanese, Hindu, and Chinese——

Mr. FALCONER. Yes; 80 per cent are working in the shingle mills of British Columbia, and I will file an affidavit of an investigation showing that.

Mr. RAKER. I mean in Oregon and Washington.

Mr. FALCONER. Less than 1 per cent. [Applause on the Progressive side.] More than 99 per cent of the men in the shingle industry in the States of Washington, Oregon, Montana, and Idaho are American citizens, or eligible to be so.

Mr. MANN. And the gentleman from California will vote for the Chinese, Japanese, and Hindus who work in British Columbia.

Mr. FALCONER. I have not time to yield more.

Mr. RAKER. I want to call the gentleman's attention to the fact that it is the Republican Party that is responsible for the Chinese, Japanese, and Hindus up to the present time.

Mr. FALCONER. The gentleman and his party are trying to let in the Japanese now.

Mr. RAKER. And you have never raised your voice——

Mr. FALCONER. Your party is trying to put them in California—you and your President, who is a master of fine phraseology, but who knows nothing about the economics involving the shingle industry——

Mr. RAKER. Your President recommended that——

Mr. FALCONER. This is not a question of anyone's President or party. I am dealing with the item involving the shingle industry. Mr. Chairman, these gentlemen who are so enthusiastic in protecting the Chinese, Hindus, and Japanese, are the men who are working for the special interests; special interests that control certain lines of industry and who make a vast amount of money importing just this kind of labor, and you know it and the gentleman from Chicago who spoke yesterday knows it.

Mr. RAKER. Mr. Chairman——

Mr. FALCONER. I am not going to yield. We do not allow Chinese to stay in Snohomish County or any of those counties in Washington where shingles are made. With regard to the gentleman from California who persists in interrupting, I will say that he demonstrates the fact that when you get a Democrat started on the wrong road—and he is wrong on this subject—he does not know when to stop, and he exhibits his inconsistency now on the floor of this House.

What does it mean to labor? You talk of the exclusion of the Chinese. Eight thousand Chinese went into British Columbia in two years. There is supposed to be a tax of $500 per capita to enter. They do not pay $500 per capita. The Dominion of Canada has a "gentleman's" agreement with the Japanese Government that only 500 a year shall have passports to British Columbia; and the fact of the matter is that 11,000 came in 1907 and 1908.

I have been in the shingle business, not, however, for 10 years. I now have no interest, either directly or indirectly, but I do know the business, gentlemen, and I want to say that I or anyone, if shingles are placed on the free list, together with the opening of the Panama Canal, can ship shingles from British Columbia, in foreign ships through the canal, to every seaport city in the United States. Under the present conditions of 50 cents duty, Canada has imported about 6 per cent of the shingles used in the United States. Why take the duty off now? [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Washington [Mr. FALCONER] has expired.

Mr. FALCONER. I wish to extend my remarks and include a clipping from the Everett Morning Tribune of April 22, and the following affidavits:

[From the Everett Morning Tribune, Apr. 22.]

JAPANESE NOW HAVE OPEN DOOR TO CANADA.

VANCOUVER, BRITISH COLUMBIA, April 21, 1913.

Under the terms of the Anglo-Japanese treaty, recently ratified by the Canadian Government and going into effect May 1, 1913, the Japanese have practically an open door to Canada.

Prominent Japanese recently in Vancouver are authority for the above statement. The policy of the McBride government has apparently been against oriental immigration, but only recently it ratified the action of the Dominion government.

The Anglo-Japanese treaty prohibits any action being taken by the provincial governments.

—

STATE OF WASHINGTON, County of King, ss:

Charles C. Hone, being first duly sworn on oath, deposes and says:

That he was employed by the Pacific Coast Shippers' Association of Seattle, Wash., and the Red Cedar Shingle Manufacturers' Association of Seattle, Wash., to inspect shingle manufacturing plants in western British Columbia and to investigate and determine the capacity of said plants and the number and races of the employees of each of said plants.

That he personally inspected from April 15, 1913, to April 18, 1913, inclusive, plants of the following concerns:

Robertson & Hackett, Vancouver, British Columbia, on April 15, 1913.

Robt. McNair Shingle Co., Vancouver, British Columbia, on April 15, 1913.

Albert Cotton, Vancouver, British Columbia, on April 15, 1913.

Thos. Kirkpatrick, Vancouver, British Columbia, on April 15, 1913.

Imperial Shingle Co., Vancouver, British Columbia, on April 15, 1913.

Jos. Chew Lumber & Shingle Co., Vancouver, British Columbia, on April 15, 1913.

Lulu Shingle Co., Eburne, British Columbia, on April 15, 1913.

Westminster Mill Co., New Westminster, British Columbia, on April 16, 1913.

Royal City Lumber & Shingle Co., New Westminster, British Columbia, on April 16, 1913.

Brunette Saw Mill Co., Sapperton, British Columbia, on April 16, 1913.

Cascade Mills (Ltd.), Vancouver, British Columbia, on April 17, 1913.

Thurston Flavelle Lumber Co., Port Moody, British Columbia, on April 17, 1913.

Port Moody Shingle Co., Port Moody, British Columbia, on April 17, 1913.

New Ladysmith Lumber Co., Nanaimo, British Columbia, on April 18, 1913.

Victoria Lumber & Manufacturing Co., Chemanius, British Columbia, on April 18, 1913.

Victoria Shingle Co., Victoria, British Columbia, on April 18, 1913.

As the result of my personal investigation and inspection, I found that the number and races of the employees engaged in and about the plants of the above-named concerns were as follows:

	Chinese.	Hindus.	White.	Total.
Sawyers	58	.....	12	70
Packers	69	.....	.....	69
All other employees [1]	94	5	53	152
Total	221	5	65	291

[1] Covers bolt passers, cut-off men, block pilers, hand sawyers, clippermen, refuse movers, band nailers, car loaders, and common laborers.

From these figures the percentage of white employees compared with the percentage of oriental employees engaged is as follows: Asiatic employees, 80 per cent; white employees, 20 per cent.

On inquiry as to the wages paid Asiatic employees by the above-mentioned concerns, I have arrived at the following averages:

Shingle sawyers, 12 cents to 13 cents per thousand.

Shingle packers, 6 cents to 7½ cents per thousand.

All others, $1.40 to $1.70 per day.

CHAS. C. HONE.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 24th day of April, 1913.

[SEAL.] JOSEPH B. ALEXANDER,

Notary Public in and for the State of Washington, Residing at Seattle.

—

STATE OF WASHINGTON, County of King, ss:

I, Fred A. Traill, being first duly sworn, on oath depose and say:

That I am treasurer and manager of the Red Cedar Shingle Manufacturers' Association, an organization incorporated under the laws of the State of Washington, composed of about 200 shingle manufacturers, who manufacture about 65 per cent of the shingle output of the State of Washington.

That I am entirely familiar with the wages paid shingle sawyers (white employees), shingle packers (white employees), and all others (white employees) in the shingle manufacturing plants on the Puget Sound, State of Washington.

The following is a scale of wages:

Shingle sawyers (white employees), 16 cents to 19 cents per thousand.

Shingle packers (white employees), 9 cents to 10 cents per thousand.

Knebolters (white employees), $3.50 to $4.50 per day.

Drag sawyers (white employees), $3.50 to $5 per day.

Common laborers (white employees), $2 to $2.50 per day.

F. A. TRAILL.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 24th day of April, 1913.

[SEAL.] JOSEPH B. ALEXANDER,

Notary Public in and for the State of Washington, Residing at Seattle.

—

STATE OF WASHINGTON, County of King, ss:

I, F. D. Becker, being first duly sworn, on oath depose and say:

That I am secretary and manager of the Pacific Coast Shippers' Association, an organization incorporated under the laws of the State of Washington, composed of wholesalers and manufacturers of lumber and shingles, whose combined output is approximately 70 per cent of the rail lumber trade of western Washington, and about 80 per cent of the rail shingle trade of western Washington.

That I employed Mr. Charles C. Hone on April 14, 1913, to inspect British Columbia manufacturing plants; that the said Charles C. Hone is the same person who has testified to the foregoing affidavit.

F. D. BECKER.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 24th day of April, 1913.

[SEAL.] JOSEPH B. ALEXANDER,

Notary Public in and for the State of Washington, Residing at Seattle.

STATE OF WASHINGTON, County of King, ss:

I, Fred A. Traill, being first duly sworn, on oath depose and say:

That I am treasurer and manager of the Red Cedar Shingle Manufacturers' Association, an organization incorporated under the laws of the State of Washington, composed of about 200 shingle manufacturers, who manufacture about 65 per cent of the shingle output of the State of Washington.

That I employed Charles C. Hone on April 14 to inspect British Columbia shingle manufacturing plants, and that the said Charles C. Hone is the same person who testified to the foregoing affidavit.

F. A. TRAILL.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 24th day of April, 1913.

[SEAL.] JOSEPH B. ALEXANDER,

Notary Public in and for the State of Washington, Residing at Seattle.

Mr. POWERS. Mr. Chairman, I desire to offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Par. 172½. Rough lumber, $1.25 per thousand feet board measure.
Par. 172½. Railroad ties, 10 per cent ad valorem.

Mr. POWERS. Mr. Chairman, I do not care to be heard upon this amendment at any great length. The Democratic Party has determined to pass the Underwood bill without amendment, and for the purpose of putting before the general public one of the ablest speeches I have read for a good while I shall read into my remarks a speech made by former Senator Chauncey M. Depew before the Montauk Club, of Brooklyn, at a dinner given in celebration of the seventy-ninth birthday of Mr. Depew. His speech, published in the New York Evening Mail in its issue of April 28, 1913, is as follows:

"MR. PRESIDENT AND GENTLEMEN: With each recurrence of these anniversaries I am more impressed with the permanence of friendship. The proof is here to-night. For 22 years the members of this club in celebrating my birthday added to the pleasure of the first meeting an original compliment. In 22 years several generations of club members come and go, but there is always a central phalanx of veterans to keep up principles and traditions of the organization.

"I have been greeted to-night by fathers who have brought their sons, and by sons who have brought the grandsons of those who welcomed me within these walls 22 years ago. The political revolutions which have taken place in the country and in the State, the financial crises which have for a time paralyzed our industries, and the agitations which seemed revolutionary, but disappeared, have neither interrupted nor impaired our numbers or the pleasures of our anniversaries.

"Lucian, the famous gossip of antiquity, the predecessor and originator of the immortal Pepys, in one of his stories says that he called upon a famous centenarian named Gorgias, who lived at Corinth 1,700 years ago, anxious to put the questions to which every centenarian has been subjected ever since, and probably before, for there is nothing new under the sun.

"ATE THE HERRING ALONE.

"Lucian called upon Gorgias to find out the secrets of his extreme age. He said to him, 'You have just had your one hundred and eighth birthday and are enjoying splendid health, vigor, and vitality. Now, to what do you ascribe it?' Gorgias answered, 'To the fact that I never have accepted an invitation to dine out.' One of our centenarians a few days ago, answering the same question at 103, said in his case it was due to the fact that he had eaten a red herring every day. I think the American had the better time. He certainly did not eat that herring alone, and it created a thirst which led to companionship in quenching it.

"What a ghastly century was that of Gorgias who had never dined out. The brilliant men of his period, the sculptors who are the despair of our artists, the architects whom we can never equal, the philosophers and poets who have been models of all succeeding generations, the orators, statesmen, and soldiers whom subsequent history has never eclipsed, all were visitors during his long life to beautiful and artistic Corinth, and he might, at the dinners which were invariably given them, have enjoyed the pleasures of their society and left an autobiography of personal reminiscences of incalculable value to posterity.

"I have met most of the distinguished men and women of my time in this and other countries, and with scarcely an exception the best I ever knew of them occurred at dinner. An evening with Gladstone was a liberal education. He possessed the most comprehensive mind of his generation and was gifted with the most graphic power of expressing his opinions.

"A formal interview with him was of little value, but in the confidences and intimacies of a long dinner at a friend's house Gladstone could be more eloquent, more impressive, and more delightful than in his best efforts in the House of Commons. It was possible on such occasions to study the workings of that marvelous mind and get an insight into the sources of his magnetic power.

"BROWNING CHARMING AT DINNER.

"To read Browning's poems was one thing, but to hear Browning talk at dinner was much more human, informing, and charming. He said to me that when at the request of the Government, the Duke of Sutherland gave a dinner to the Shah of Persia at the Stafford House, he was one of the guests. In order to impress this semisavage monarch, every one was requested to wear all their regalia. The Prince of Wales and members of the royal family, the dukes, marquises, and earls came in all the medieval splendor of their rank and order, and with all their jewels, real and paste.

"Mr. Browning said that, having no rank, he came in the crimson gown of an honor man of Cambridge University. Diamonds did not impress the Shah, because the buttons on his coat were real stones as big as horse-chestnuts. The ermine and tiaras produced no impression upon him, because he and his suite were arrayed in more barbaric splendor. But his wild eye roving around the table came upon this crimson Cambridge robe at the foot, where, as a commoner, the poet sat.

"The Shah instantly said, 'Who is that great man?' 'Why, that is Mr. Browning.' 'What is he?' 'He is a poet.' 'Command him to come here and sit beside me.' So a royalty or a prime minister was displaced and the embarrassed poet was put beside the autocrat. The Shah said, 'I understand you are a poet, a great poet,' which Browning modestly admitted. 'Well, then,' he said, 'I want you to stay here with me, because more than the fact that I am the supreme ruler of Persia, I am a great poet myself.

"Mr. Browning assured me that the story was true; that the Shah said to the then Prince of Wales, afterwards King Edward VII, 'This is a magnificent palace.' The prince said, 'Yes; this is the finest palace in Great Britain.' 'Well,' said the Shah, 'let me give you a little piece of advice. When one of my nobility gets rich enough to live in a house like this, I cut off his head and take what he has. It is very simple and saves a great deal of trouble.'

"DOLLAR FEASTS DELIGHTFUL.

"But the night will not permit an enumeration. I have learned more state secrets from cabinet ministers abroad in the confidences of the dinner table than I could have had in years of residence, and under similar circumstances the armor of reserve has dropped from Presidents of the United States and their troubles, their anxieties, their wishes, their ambitions, their friends, and their enemies have been an open book.

"'Ah, but,' says the philosopher who is eternally denouncing the opportunities of wealth, 'dinners are all very well for you, but how about the rest of us?' Why, my dear sir, the dullest, most stupid, and most boorish dinner I ever attended cost $100 a plate, while my most delightful evenings have been with a bohemian coterie, where a dollar was the limit. The cost of the dinner, the rarity of its wines, and the brand of its cigars are of no account unless about the table are men and women of mind, of individuality, of versatility, of something to give which is worth receiving, and a willingness to listen to the message which you think is worth delivering.

"Senator Hoar, who in his long, brilliant, and most distinguished career had met everybody worth knowing, told me that no gathering, however small or however large, equaled in wit and wisdom, in flashes of genius, in things always to be remembered and never to be forgotten, the weekly luncheons at Parker's, in Boston, where Longfellow, Hawthorne, Ralph Waldo Emerson, Theodore Parker, and others, and Judge Hoar, the brightest of them all, met for a week-day luncheon.

"Judge Robertson, of Westchester, and I were invited by Secretary of State Seward to dine with him in Washington on our way to the Republican national convention which renominated President Lincoln. That dinner changed the Vice President from Daniel S. Dickinson, of New York, to Andrew Johnson, of Tennessee, and made a different chapter in American history.

"The newspapers, which tell us everything, say that the present tariff and income-tax bills were perfected at a dinner at the White House. This brings us in immediate and acute contact with the most interesting of current events.

"NO EXCITEMENT OVER TARIFF.

"In my 57 years in public and semipublic life I have participated in many political revolutions, and in none of them have these changes, especially of the tariff, been received with so little excitement and scarcely a suggestion of passion. There are no editorials or flaming speeches predicting direful disasters or indignation meetings resolving that we are on the brink of financial and industrial ruin.

"These tariff propositions, going as they do to the very foundation of our financial and industrial system, and the manner in which they are received are high indications of that much-abused word 'progress.' We have become a deliberative and contemplative people. Without inherited prejudices or partisan bias we can calmly weigh measures and policies and arrive at individual conclusions as to results when they crystallize into law. We all recognize that at some time these theories must be tried. We have all recognized that at some time the theorists must have devolved upon them the responsibilities of government.

"There has been no period since the Civil War when experiments could be tried with less danger than now. The country was never so prosperous, employment was never so general, wages were never so high, the farmer was never so rich or receiving such returns for the product of his field and his live stock, the output of the manufactories was never so great, the expansion of our credit and the amount of our exchanges were never so large, and our imports and exports never reached such a volume.

"The fly in the amber, or, to put it more seriously, our irritation and discontent under these otherwise happy conditions, is the high cost of living. The laws which our new rulers are putting in force will affect equally all the people; therefore it is the duty of all of us to wish them Godspeed and good luck. It is the hope of all of us that the realization of their dreams, which some of us have feared, will be in the line of their most sanguine hopes. Their problem is a difficult one. In simple form, it is how to reduce the cost of living without impairing opportunities of earning a living. In that is the whole crux of the situation.

"AMENDMENTS TO CONSTITUTION.

"It has been our habit to touch lightly and, if possible, informingly upon the things that have happened since our last gathering. The Constitution of the United States has not been amended in over 100 years. The fourteenth and fifteenth amendments, which were passed after the Civil War, were really not amendments, but simply declarations of principles which were in the Declaration of Independence and in the spirit of the original instrument.

"But after over 100 years of satisfaction with the Constitution, within this year two amendments have been added, one an income tax, the other for the election of United States Senators by the people. I am not going to discuss these measures. They are here to stay. But when the history of their passage comes to be written it will be disclosed that there are some curious phases of human nature.

"When the amendment to the Constitution of the United States for an income tax came before our New York Legislature, it was defeated by a message from Gov. Hughes. That message did not oppose an income tax, but clearly stated that the needs of our Commonwealth were growing so rapidly and the sources of State taxation were so limited that the income tax should be left to the States, and the General Government, with its infinite possibilities, could raise revenue from other sources.

"When the income-tax amendment was under discussion in the Senate, I had a heart-to-heart talk with a group of Senators from the Western States who were urging its adoption. I said to them, 'Our revenues at present are furnishing a surplus; we never will need to resort to this method of taxation except in a great emergency. Then why do you want it now?' Their answer was, 'Because with an income tax we can collect one-half of the expenses of the Government from your State of New York and the other half from New England, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Ohio, and Illinois.'

"The exemption of $4,000 a year in the present bill shows that these gentlemen control this legislation, because very few in their States have an income of that size. It is an interesting question in legislation of this kind, since in no country in the world where they have an income tax is the exemption equal to $1,000, whether in order to have the whole people alert, inquisitive, and critical upon the expenses of government and in checking extravagance, the largest possible number should not have their attention called to those expenditures by contributing something toward the support of the Government.

"BECAUSE BRYAN WANTS IT.

"When the income-tax amendment was before our New York Legislature I said to a man who as much as any other controlled that body, 'Did you think Gov. Hughes was right?' He said, 'Yes.' I then told him what these western Senators had said to me. He said, 'That I believe, too.' I said, 'Then why are you urging the adoption of this amendment by our State?' His answer was, 'Because Bryan wants it.'

"When the amendment for the election of the United States Senators by the people was so framed that the United States Government had the power to see that all the people voted and that none was disfranchised, I said to the Senators from the States where the negro is disfranchised, 'Do you see danger of a force bill if this amendment is adopted? Don't you think that as crises arise, and they will arise, where a majority of the States feel that certain measures in which they are interested could be passed if all the people, including the negroes, in your States voted, they will pass laws under which the Government will see that they do vote, at least for United States Senators?' They said, 'Yes; we see all those dangers.' I said, 'Then why are you voting for it?' Their answer was, 'Because Bryan wants it.'

"This brings us to a horizontal view of one of the paradoxes of our American life. We are rushing with unprecedented rapidity for us, for we are a conservative people, toward the breaking down of the safeguards which are in the Constitution against hasty and inconsiderate action by the people. We are proceeding upon the theory that leadership no longer does or ought to exist, that all matters should originate with and be decided upon by the people as a mass on the passion or emotion of the moment and without the intervention of representative bodies or interpretations by the courts, and yet there never was a time when leadership counted for so much as it does to-day.

"There never was a time when leaders asserted themselves with such confidence and autocratic authority. More than 4,000,000 Republicans followed Col. Roosevelt in the last campaign, not because they wanted to break up the Republican Party, not because they adopted all the doctrines of his platform or of his speeches, but because they believed in Roosevelt and wanted for President of the United States a strong, militant, aggressive, and audacious leader.

"CALLS FOR LEADERSHIP.

"The national convention of the Democratic Party at Baltimore was swayed by Mr. Bryan. It was recognized that the great mass of his party recognized him as a supreme leader whom they were willing to follow wherever he chose to go. For the first time in 123 years the President of the United States leaves the Executive Mansion and appears at the Capitol to impress upon the legislative branch of the Government his views upon pending legislation. These are not symptoms, but facts. With all the shouting and the trumpeting for a pure democracy, the exactions of our busy, hurried, rapid, nervous life call for a leader in every department more than at any other period in our history.

"The same is true in the industrial disorders which are now so acute. In their more revolutionary phases they are governed by a leader with very few assistants, whose power is unlimited, whose authority is unquestioned.

"Another curious phase of this trend to pure democracy is that its leaders are opposed to majorities. Ten per cent of the voters initiate a number of radical measures. They are submitted to a referendum at the next election, and a plurality of the votes cast make them laws or insert them in the Constitution. In the history of these referendums the vote has averaged about 20 per cent of the total vote at any election. The measures have been adopted by the petitioners who constitute one-half, and many times more than one-half of those voting carrying the day because the majority of the electorate have not cast their ballots.

"When it is proposed that no law by referendum shall become a law and no amendment shall be attached to the Constitution unless it receives a majority of all the votes cast at the election when it is submitted, without exception the reformer cries 'No'; reforms must be carried not by the unintelligent mass, but by the few who understand the needs of the people.

"BELIEVES IN TRADE-UNIONS.

"I believe in trade-unions and trade organizations. In the railway world I have been their best friend, but there is a new movement now progressing all over the world and forging to the front with us with lurid exhibitions of its power. As a student all my life of every idea which has captured any considerable number of people, whether upon religious, or social, or industrial, or economic questions, I bought the book which gives the most authoritative and vigorous exhibition of syndicalism by one of its ablest and most eloquent writers.

"It is very interesting, though not yet very alarming, except in its fierce and bloody riots to compel other unions to join. He says:

"We have in the United States to-day nearly 500,000 organized fighting soldiers. In the whole world we have 7,000,000. We are comrades with a common purpose. The cry of our army is 'No quarter.' We want all you possess. We will be content with nothing less than all you possess. Here are our hands. They are strong hands. The able-bodied workers would not have to labor more than two or three hours every day to feed everybody, clothe everybody, house everybody, and give fair measure of little luxuries to everybody.

"Then he goes on to say:

"When all these things are accomplished, then all the world will be impelled to action—scientists formulating law, inventors employing law, artists and sculptors painting canvases and shaping clay, poets and statesmen serving humanity by singing and by statecraft. Our intention is to destroy present-day society as a fact, and also to take possession of the world with all its wealth and machinery and government.

"Here are a few of the bunkers over which this army must successfully propel its bomb: There are about 8,000,000 people, men and women, in this country who own their own homes and will fight to retain them. There are over 4,000,000 who own their own farms, other millions who get their living from farms, and none are so tenacious of their rights as the farmers. There are about 11,000,000 who are engaged in various industries in a way that interests them to a point where they will not tamely surrender their rights in raising stock, or as florists, or horticulturists, or nurserymen. There are the millions of small shopkeepers everywhere whose living and the future for their families are in the goods in their stores.

"A NATIONAL CONSCIENCE.

"Our eyes are so blinded by the increase in the capitalization of great corporations like the steel or tobacco or sugar that we lose sight of the fact that there never were so many small manufacturers with limited capital, employing few men, among whom the proprietors are the hardest workers, scattered all over the United States. The foundations of our society are deep in the selfish interests, in the ambitions, in the hopes, and in the affections for their offspring of 99 per cent of our people. Besides all that is the national conscience, with an irradicable sense of right and wrong, based upon respect for the property and lives and liberties of others, for which every church, every common school, every agency of education and instruction, every fraternal lodge, is a recruiting station.

"Now, the crux of that idea is that when this millennium has been brought around nobody will have to work over 2 hours in 24. During the rest of the day everybody will be happy because industrially occupying their time in creating or making or producing things which are useful and helpful to their fellows. A distinguished philosopher has said that the mainsprings of action are ambition, necessity, and greed. It may be growing out of what happened in the Garden of Eden that effort requires a spur. Every one of us knows that in our own experience. There is no one at this table here to-night who would be what he is unless there had been a motive to accomplish something for himself. There is no truth more self-evident than that this selfishness has in it also the elements of patriotism.

"The man who forges ahead and in his advance creates continually larger opportunities for others to get on is selfishly a climber and unselfishly a philanthropist. The curse of the youth of our country is idleness. Our hooligans, our gang men, our gunmen, our young criminals are all the products of idleness. The ambition of the boy at school is aroused first by competition with his fellows. As he advances to the high school or the college it is for the honors which can be achieved.

"IDLE MEN NOT HAPPY.

"I look back over 60 years of continuous effort, and when I try to differentiate the causes of my health and happiness I come back always to work. I never yet knew an idle man who was a happy one. I mean an idle man who was such from choice. Every man I ever knew who was doing the best he could in the line of his talent and equipment, and who became fond of his work, and who outside of his regular occupation had some fad which interested him, and who could on occasion play as hard as he worked, was healthy and happy himself and radiated happiness and inspiration to every one about him.

"We are all workingmen, but I have known thousands of what are known as laboring men—that is, those who earn a living by the work of their hands—who in their little gardens found repose and recreation, who in their church, or in their lodges, or in their social work discovered never-ending sources of education in broadmindedness, in higher ideals of citizenship, and material, spiritual, and intellectual advancement.

"It is an old charge that republics are ungrateful. Perhaps that is a mistake, and they are only forgetful. I recall on this question three of my late colleagues in the Senate, who were among its most distinguished and useful Members and are now in private life.

"When the case for the expulsion of Senator Lorimer, of Illinois, was tried before the Committee on Privileges and Elections a large majority of the committee, though they knew that the newspapers generally demanded Mr. Lorimer's expulsion, and such was the sentiment of a majority of the people, yet acting as judges they could not find in the testimony sufficient warrant for a verdict against him.

"SENATOR BEVERIDGE'S CASE.

"Senator Beveridge, one of the most brilliant Senators of his term in the Senate, made a minority report and led the fight against Lorimer. He had often before proved himself to be an accomplished and brilliant debater, but he never was so able, resourceful, and eloquent as in this battle. It was on the eve of his fight for a reelection to the Senate, and he and his friends felt that his reward was certain. He made one of the most thorough and able canvasses of Indiana that any candidate ever did, and yet he was beaten.

One of the most useful and able Senators in my time was Norris Brown, of Nebraska. Mr. Brown believed that nine-tenths of the people of his State were in favor of a constitutional amendment for an income tax. He introduced the amendment and gave his time, energy, and remarkable diplomacy to secure its passage. I am quite certain from my own familiarity with the course of that legislation that except for Mr. Brown's advocacy and support the amendment would not have passed the Senate. When he came before his people for the approval of his course, he was beaten.

"My captivating friend, Jonathan Bourne, of Oregon, was the author of most of the so-called reforms which have substituted the initiative, the referendum, and the recall in Oregon for representative government and made the governor and the legislature rubber stamps. In season and out of season, in the Senate and on the platform and in the press, he portrayed the merits of this return to a pure democracy and this recovery by the people from an obsolete system of their full rights.

"It is said that the placing of one of his greatest speeches on this question in the hands of every voter in the newly admitted State of Arizona led to the adoption of the most radical constitution ever known. We all thought that whatever might happen to the rest of us, the call for reelection of Jonathan Bourne was to come with a unanimity never known before by a grateful people. Yet he was beaten.

"It is an interesting study in politics whether people are ungrateful, which I do not believe, or forgetful, which may happen, or whether their tribune is not sometimes mistaken in thinking that he knows just what they want.

"DOES NOT LAMENT THE PAST.

"It has been the fashion in all ages for elderly people to lament the good old times and long for their recall. I do not share in any way in this desire. Solomon repudiated it, but then Solomon had more things than all his predecessors put together, including the family, and notwithstanding his hundreds of wives and thousands of concubines, seems to have been very happy in his domestic relations. George Washington, on the other hand, thought that the times as they were in the few years preceding his death far worse than in earlier days, and that they gave little hope for the future.

"As I look back over 57 years of intense activity in many departments of life, of a full share of both successes and failures, of hard knocks and compensating triumphs, of sorrows and joys, I come to the conclusion that while one year may be very bad, very miserable, and very hopeless, yet take time by decades every 10 years as a whole is infinitely better than all the preceding ones.

"Still, there are some things which seem to be permanently lost, and are to be greatly regretted, for the enjoyment of life. One of them is conversation. The most charming volumes in history are made up of the conversation of agreeable talkers, but it is a general complaint that now conversation is a lost art. Some say it is because bridge whist has so shortened the dinner as to make it a feed instead of a function, and the craze for gambling in bridge whist has destroyed the freedom from care and elasticity of mind which are necessary for the interchange of thought, of humor, of anecdote, of argument, and of raillery. We ought to be grateful, therefore, to anyone who can help in the restoration of that most charming, I almost say indispensable, medium for the enjoyment of friends and acquaintances—conversation.

"WILSON'S 'NEW FREEDOM.'

"President Wilson is happily contributing to this end. He is advocating in a series of brilliantly written magazine articles what he calls 'The New Freedom.' There is intense curiosity to know what the 'New Freedom' means. This century and a quarter of unexampled and unparalleled growth and prosperity under our Constitution and laws has given us the freedom so gloriously expressed in the Declaration of Independence. The Declaration of Independence was a philosophic statement of liberty, but the Constitution of the United States crystallized it into law. Jefferson's idea of liberty was that governments are based upon the individual and that he must have the largest freedom with the fewest possible restrictions and the least possible legislation.

"President Wilson now has an opportunity of which he must avail himself of putting into law his 'new freedom.' We are told by the press, always so Argus-eyed and so truthful, that at a conference at the White House a few days since the President agreed with the chairmen of the committees of the Senate and House of Representatives which have charge of appropriation bills that the one now passing should have on it a rider exempting labor unions and farmers' associations from the restrictions and penalties of the Sherman antitrust law. They get a liberty which no one else enjoys and become a privileged class. Now, this is practical. It is a new freedom.

"The first restraint ever put since the adoption of our Constitution in 1787 upon the activities of the individual when acting in great combinations was by the Sherman antitrust law. Under prosecutions commenced by Cleveland and continued by McKinley, Roosevelt, and Taft these combinations have been relentlessly pursued because violating the Sherman antitrust law. Some of them have been put out of business, and many of them have been dissolved. Decisions have been rendered in these cases which bring every great combination within the restrictions of this law. Now a new freedom is to be given by legislation to labor unions to do as they please and farmers to form associations and combinations for the marketing of their products.

"PRACTICAL DEMONSTRATION.

"There is no suggestion that those who are engaged in iron or steel or tobacco or oil, in hats, shoes, or clothing, or printing, or anything else shall be relieved from the beneficent restrictions of the Sherman Act, in which I think most of us heartily believe. But labor unions and farmers can club together and by the processes which are so successful in protection Germany, and called cartels in free-trade England, and called combinations in protection America, and called trusts, can have—the one in doing what it likes and the other in raising the price of bread and meat—all the advantages of the freedom which everybody had before the Sherman antitrust law.

"Now, this practical demonstration of the new freedom has led to more conversation everywhere than anything which has occurred for many years. It is an enlightening, illuminating, and instructing conversation. It raises that one topic of intense interest at all times where everybody is affected, 'Who will next receive the new freedom?'

"Vice President Marshall is a charming gentleman and a delightful speaker. I have heard him on many subjects upon which he talks so well, and none better than upon brotherhood in Masonry, he and I being both brethren of the thirty-third degree. Two weeks ago to-night he attended the Jeffersonian banquet in New York. He there delivered an address which was as novel as it was original. He claimed that the inheritance of property from one's parents is not a natural or a constitutional right but purely a privilege granted by statute, and so to prevent accumulations of property all that the legislatures have to do is to repeal the laws of inheritance, and then whatever a person acquires will go not to his natural heirs but to the State.

"Of course if such a law was passed there would be no accumulations afterwards, because the main incentive for saving money is to take care of those who are dependent upon us; in other words, our wives and children. There would be people so masterful and with such genius in that line that they could not help making money. If they were not to have the pride and joy and comfort of its enjoyment in the benefits it would give after their death, they would squander it.

"The first line in which a man begins to squander money is self-indulgence. Drunkenness would become the attendant of prosperity, and the prohibition States, which are now doing fairly well in restricting the consumption of liquor, would discover that their laws were universally nullified. The new view of life would be 'Let us eat, drink, and be merry, for to-morrow we die.'

"This speech was delivered on Saturday night two weeks ago and published in the Sunday morning papers. It made conversation all over the United States. When I came out of church and met the people of all the other churches I was stopped dozens of times, not to talk about the sermons which had been heard, but to discuss the speech of Vice President Marshall.

"CONVERSATION REVIVED.

"I lunched with some friends and dined with others that day, and both functions were prolonged far beyond the usual time by an animated discussion of Brother Marshall's deliverance. If Eugene Debs had said this it would have passed unnoticed because expected. It is the unexpected which inspires conversation. So from the new Vice President of the United States it became a matter of interesting talk in every gathering, private or public.

"Well, these things have helped in bringing into activity again the almost lost art of conversation. Still, these subjects are not so fine as those which prevailed in the good old times. We used to long for a new novel by Dickens or Thackeray and talk over the old ones until the new ones came, and then the new ones until others were published, until David Copperfield, Micawber, Capt. Cuttle, Jack Bunsby, Dora, Becky Sharp, and Col. Newcome were intimate members of our families. They inspired and radiated the home.

"We eagerly discussed Hawthorne's latest novels and what Whittier, Lowell, Emerson, and Dr. Parker, Dr. Storrs, or Henry Ward Beecher had contributed to the wisdom and enjoyment of the world. John Stuart Mill and Herbert Spencer had their audiences and their admirers, and the Shakespeare and Browning societies found opportunities in every hamlet in the country.

"I am at a loss to know why there are no writers of equivalent reputation and equivalent consideration contributing now to the cordiality and camaraderie of us all. Why, we carry the shop everywhere and talk of either what we want or what we have or what the other fellow possesses and how he got it. It is very depressing.

"But, my friends, I do not despair. On my doctrine of decades I isolate this 10 years. I avoid the calamity howlers. I expel from my reading desk and my mind the preachers of disorder or destruction or despair. I place my trust, my hope, my optimism in that fine, discriminating, cordial, loving association of the people with each other and of their trust in and courage for the rights and the liberties of all."

Mr. MOORE. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 46, line 4, after the word "sawed," strike out "10 per cent ad valorem" and insert "15 per cent ad valorem."

Mr. MOORE. Mr. Chairman, the strange political philosophy of my friend from Pennsylvania [Mr. PALMER] would provide through this bill for the increase of factories to manufacture cigar boxes in Cuba. We have a large concern in my city which is engaged in the business of taking sawed cedar which comes up from Cuba and the former Spanish-American possessions and turning it over to American workmen, who at American wages shape it into cigar boxes, and I wish we had them in Florida, or in Georgia, or in South or North Carolina, nearer the supply of the raw product. They would all be worthy of protection, but that is not the proposition in this bill. According to the gentleman's philosophy, instead of encouraging a man to invest his capital here or to employ Americans in the manufacture of cigar boxes of raw material coming from Cuba to Pennsylvania, we are to encourage the men in Cuba to retain their cedar wood and build factories and employ cheaper labor there to make cigar boxes for us.

It seems to be the philosophy of the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. PALMER] not to attempt to do any business in the United States, not to encourage anyone to rear a factory and employ labor, but to let this be done in foreign countries. This bill proposes that the man who does rear a factory in the United States shall pay a duty on the raw material of 10 per cent, and then it removes from him the protection he gets on the product that is finished here. We have asked in this instance that the duty which enables the American workman to manufacture cigar boxes in competition with Cuba be restored. We have asked that the Democratic majority shall see the error of its ways and adopt this amendment.

Mr. PALMER. Will the gentleman yield just a moment?

Mr. MOORE. Yes.

Mr. PALMER. He probably did not catch the tenor of this paragraph. By striking out the word "other" it means the cedar wood would come in at 10 per cent.

Mr. MOORE. I think the amendment contemplated changing from 10 to 15 per cent in order to protect sawed cedar.

Mr. PALMER. There was not a question of changing the rate to protect anything. It was in order to get rid of that very question as to what cedar should come under the 10 per cent rate, and there would come in free under the paragraph as now changed cigar boxes, and cedar wood would come in free when manufactured; and unmanufactured, in the shape of logs, it comes in free.

Mr. MOORE. That is the very point I am making, namely, that the gentleman has increased the opportunity to manufacture in Cuba and reduced the opportunity to manufacture here.

Mr. PALMER. It is just exactly the contrary.

Mr. LANGLEY. Mr. Chairman, it is not my purpose to offer an amendment to this lumber schedule, because I realize that it is useless to do so. Nor is it my purpose to take up but two or three minutes of the time of the committee in discussing it, because I realize that is also useless for this side to discuss it further.

We have not the acute situation with reference to oriental competition in my State that the gentlemen from the Northwest who have spoken have, but we sympathize with them. We are interested in the lumber industry in Kentucky. We have thousands of men employed in that industry and hundreds of thousands of dollars invested in it. I wish the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] and those who are helping him in this assault upon the lumber industry could take a look into the humble homes of the men who are earning their daily bread for themselves and their families. They would realize that this question about cheaper lumber for the home builders is a two-sided one. In every race I have made for membership in this body in that district I have contended that if Democracy obtained the power to do so it would injure the lumber industry and the coal industry. I have contended also that the party is utterly opposed to the principle of protection in any shape. Many Democrats in that district who are interested in the development of the great resources that we have there have denied that proposition. I am glad that the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] and the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. PALMER] and other leaders of the Democracy have made it perfectly clear now that I was correct when I said that they are opposed entirely to the policy of protection. It will relieve me of the necessity of rearguing that question when I run again.

Mr. HAMILTON of Michigan. Does the gentleman say that he will not make an occasional casual reference to it in the course of his campaign?

Mr. LANGLEY. Yes; I guess I will; and I will also have my distinguished friend from Michigan [Mr. HAMILTON] come down there and help me do it. He does it so handsomely. [Laughter.]

Mr. Chairman and gentlemen, mind what I tell you, when this bill goes into operation the lumber industry and the coal industry will suffer. Leaders of Democracy in Kentucky contend that taking the duty off of coal will not reduce the price to the consumer, and putting lumber on the free list will not reduce the price to the consumer. If that is so, then why take the duty off of these articles and give up that much revenue, which you say you were after in framing this bill? In the name of the people——

Mr. HARDWICK. Will the gentleman yield to me?

Mr. LANGLEY. No. The gentleman never yields to me, and I take great pleasure in declining to yield to him. [Laughter.]

In the name of the great industrial district which I represent, which is just now starting on an era of prosperity that will be almost unparalleled if they are let alone, I desire to protest against this lumber schedule as well as many other schedules in the Underwood bill that will deal a staggering blow to my district and State. [Applause on the Republican side.]

Mr. BRYAN. Mr. Chairman, as a Representative of the State of Washington, I desire to say something on this shingle schedule.

Now, to begin with, I want to make perfectly plain the fact that as far as I am concerned, speaking for myself alone and for nobody else, I believe in the substantial immediate reduction of the tariff schedules. I believe in revising the tariff schedules downward, and I believe it is the duty of this Congress to reduce these schedules generally, and the statute that is passed by this Congress ought to show that kind of legislation. I do not believe it is the movement of the Democratic Party or the Progressive Party; I do not believe it to be the movement of any party. I believe it to be a movement that has the backing of the great body of the American people, and I believe if this Congress did not substantially reduce these tariff schedules there would be almost a revolution in this country. I believe the people have demanded it, and I believe it is the duty of every Congressman sitting on the floor of this House to cooperate in endeavoring to reduce generally the tariff schedules that have been forced on the people for all these years.

I believe they have been essentially wrong in almost every instance. But I desire to say to you that this question of the shingle industry of the State of Washington presents a special problem. [Laughter on the Republican side.]

SEVERAL MEMBERS. Oh, yes! [Laughter.]

Mr. BRYAN. That is all right. I am willing to stand for a reduction in all the schedules and a reduction in the rate on shingles, but I do not believe that this Congress ought to wipe out all of those duties. You have not wiped them out on all of the various articles. You have, in a number of cases, maintained a duty, and here we have a duty of 50 cents a thousand that you are wiping out entirely, and putting shingles on the free list. I say to you that the shingle industry is situated differently from the lumber industry.

Mr. FARR. Of course. [Laughter on the Republican side.]

Mr. BRYAN. I do speak for the shingle industry, and the argument that is made on behalf of the shingle industry in this House ought to appeal to every honest and sincere man as he studies the situation in the State of Washington. I will not repeat the figures already presented by my colleagues from the State of Washington. If you put shingles absolutely on the free list, if you cut off entirely the duty on shingles, I am sure that the competition that has been suggested here from oriental labor will interfere, not with any great industrial enterprise so much as with the many small mills of my State.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman yield?

Mr. BRYAN. I have no time to yield.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman declines to yield.

Mr. BRYAN. These mills are located on the shores of Puget Sound and on the little streams that empty into the Sound, and the men who work in these mills are right close to their homes, and they are working there in the mills, and I say they ought to be maintained in that work.

These mills are located on the shores of Puget Sound and on the little streams that empty into the Sound, and the men who work in these mills are right close to their homes, and they are working there in the mills, and I say they ought to be maintained in that work.

I say that the particular situation with respect to British Columbia labor does affect us more than any other industry, perhaps, that has been referred to here. I believe the committee ought to take this up. So far as I am concerned, I would like to vote for this bill. I want to see the tariff reduced. I am sincere about it.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. Mr. Chairman, I want to call the attention of my colleague to the fact that there was not a single Democrat from the great Northwest in the caucus-congress held here for several weeks by the majority—not an individual to point out to the men making this bill this terrible and desperate situation.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman yield?

Mr. BRYAN. I yield to no one. [Laughter and applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman declines to yield.

Mr. BRYAN. I do not care by what party name a man be called in this controversy. This is not a controversy of parties. This is a controversy in which the people of this country have spoken. It does not make any difference about the party lines, and it does not make any difference about the catchwords you have been using all these years. You have got to meet this issue and recognize the fact that the people have demanded a revision downward. The Republican platform demanded a revision of the tariff, and it was claimed it meant a revision downward. The Democratic platform provided for a revision downward and the Progressive Party platform demanded a revision downward. I intend to stand for that, and I stand for what I claim all the parties stand for and what the American people stand for; and there is going to be no compromise on that.

But when you come to figure out the various schedules, as explained by the able leader of the majority in this House, you must consider business conditions to a certain extent. You ought to consider this particular industry at this time. There is no reason, there is no ground, for turning this industry over to British Columbia labor. It is not right, and it does not correspond with those principles that are fundamental in the human breast. It does not give the people a square deal or that which is right and just. And I think if you reduce the schedule not more than about 50 per cent, you will comply with your platform and with the demands of the people. I am willing to cut the present duty in two in the middle. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I move that all debate upon the paragraph and amendment be now closed.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Alabama moves that all debate on the pending paragraph and amendment thereto be closed.

Mr. MOORE. I desire to offer an amendment.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. The gentleman can offer an amendment later. I am moving to close debate on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Washington.

Mr. FORDNEY. I wish to speak on that amendment, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. HUMPHREY of Washington. Two of my colleagues, Mr. Chairman, are very much interested in this matter. They have not had an opportunity to speak, and this means the death of this industry if you put it through.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I am perfectly willing that the gentlemen may speak on their own amendments.

Mr. MANN. If the gentleman will pardon me, how many amendments on this side will be offered to this paragraph?

Mr. MOORE. I have one.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. I have one.

Mr. MANN. The gentleman from Washington [Mr. JOHNSON] wants five minutes?

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. Yes.

Mr. FALCONER. Mr. Chairman, as a matter of information, will it be in order to offer an amendment at this point to fix a less duty on the next paragraph or on the same paragraph?

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman could offer an amendment to the amendment.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all amendments that may be desired may be presented to this schedule.

Mr. MANN. This paragraph?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. They all want to speak on lumber. It is all one thing.

Mr. MANN. This is on shingles.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I know. If we can have unanimous consent, I want to close up this schedule. I ask unanimous consent that the debate on this schedule be closed in 20 minutes. Is that the amount of time the gentleman wants?

Mr. MANN. They want 20 minutes on the shingle proposition.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I can not agree to that. I insist on my motion.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Alabama moves that the debate on this paragraph and amendments be now closed.

Mr. FORDNEY. I want to appeal to the gentleman not to do that.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I want to give the gentleman a chance to offer his amendment.

Mr. FORDNEY. I do not want to offer any amendment to any paragraph in the schedule.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. Chairman, the Democratic Party has gone on record as believing in a tariff for revenue. The shingle business at the present time is to some extent competitive, and we have been getting a revenue from 6 per cent of the shingles that have been used in the United States—these having been imported into this country from Canada.

The gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] in his opening speech to this House said that the Democratic Party was not going to cut the tariff schedules with an ax, but intended letting them down gently with a jackscrew. I would like to know just whereabouts he applied the jackscrew to the shingle industry. It looks to me as though he went at it ruthlessly with an ax or butcher's cleaver, without taking into consideration the nature of the business, the men who were employed in it, and whether or not it was operated by a trust or by small concerns. I think his committee gave this question absolutely no thought. Why should they wipe out an industry that supports from 150,000 to 200,000 people in the United States? There is nobody who can show that in any way shingle manufacturing ever has been in the hands of a trust or monopoly.

Neither has there been any widespread demand for cheaper shingles. Taking the country over, I think shingles have been sold at a very reasonable rate. In the census of 1910 it was shown that the shingles in the State of Washington only brought an average of $1.81 a thousand, and I think that is a very reasonable price for shingles at the factory.

Mr. Chairman, it is not necessary for me to go into any extended remarks on this question. Your minds are made up, but I want to say to you that some of these rates are coming back, and some of these things you are doing now will come back to plague you in the future. [Applause on the Republican side.]

The gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] in his report to the House when submitting this bill from the Ways and Means Committee, quoted from the Democratic platform and summarized the basic principles from which the committee worked in formulating this bill, as follows:

(1) The establishment of duties designed primarily to produce revenue and without thought of protection.

(2) The attainment of this end by legislation that will not injure or destroy legitimate industry.

Mr. Chairman, has the Democratic Ways and Means Committee in any sense of the word carried out the principles laid down in these two propositions? I say "no." In article 1 they say:

The establishment of duties primarily to raise revenue for the Government.

Under this bill you wipe out all revenue to the Government from shingles. They were imported into this country in 1912, 508,415,000 shingles of a value of $1,194,113, which paid duty to the amount of $254,222. Under this bill you do not leave any tariff for revenue at all, but relieve Canada of this burden of a quarter of a million of dollars which that country has had to pay this Government for the use of our market. I presume that in thus relieving Canada you were applying the principle that "It is more blessed to give than to receive."

Your Ways and Means Committee does not carry out the idea or plan laid down in article 2 of their basic principles, for therein they say they expect to accomplish this purpose, "The raising of revenue to support the Government by legislation that will not injure or destroy legitimate industry." In the face of that declaration you turn around and deliberately place on the free list the shingle industry, which in my State alone employs more than 15,000 American laborers, placing them in direct competition with the Hindus and other oriental labor employed in shingle manufacturing in Canada.

Affidavits are now on file with your committee showing that fully 80 per cent of the Canadian labor is oriental. I suppose we are to judge by this action of the Ways and Means Committee that they do not regard the shingle business a legitimate business, and those who labor in our shingle factories not engaged in legitimate industry. "O consistency, thou art a jewel," but thou dwellest not with the Ways and Means Committee.

You say, in laying down your principles, article 1, "Revenue without thought of protection." You protect the goat industry of Texas by placing 10 per cent ad valorem on the animal and 20 per cent on the fleece. The great Democratic State of Texas raises more goats than all of the rest of the United States combined. Raising goats is a "legitimate industry," hence you did not wish to "injure" it. As Texas is to Angora goats and mohair the State of Washington is to the shingle industry. Washington makes more shingles than all of the rest of the United States, but evidently, as I have remarked before, shingle making is not a "legitimate industry," as you make them duty free. "Oh, upright judge." The same inconsistency permeates this entire joker. As you have treated shingles you have treated about all of the products of the North and West.

One of the farm products extensively raised in my State is oats, and at the present rate of duty on oats my State often has felt the effects of Canadian competition. You have reduced the rate of duty under this bill one-third on the grain and on its finished product—rolled oats, meal, and so forth—you have removed it entirely, so that they come in free, injuring not only the farmer's feed market, but destroying absolutely his milling market and obliterating the oatmeal miller and his employees' chances for remunerative business and labor. O, wise and far-seeing statesman, Canada should sincerely appreciate your generosity!

Mr. Chairman, in a speech I made on the floor of this House in the Sixty-second Congress, when we were discussing the reciprocity measure, I said the name was a misnomer, and that in my judgment it should be entitled "An act of discrimination against certain of our people in favor of Canada." I thought my judgment was good regarding the title of that bill, and I think the same title is even more pertinent to this one. We did receive a little something in return for our concessions to Canada under that ill-advised measure. On a basis of 1910 business we gave Canada about 70 per cent of the best trade, but did receive some 30 per cent (using 100 as a base) in return.

This Democratic Congress is giving Canada vastly more under this bill than it received under that and receives absolutely nothing in return.

Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] in the House of Representatives, February 14, 1911, speaking on Canadian reciprocity, said:

Now, as to agricultural machinery and meat, I recognize this bill is not well balanced, when you put cattle on the free list and leave a prohibitive tax on meat, as you do in this bill.

Under the Canadian reciprocity bill cattle came in free, and beef paid 1½ cents a pound duty, which would be about 10 per cent ad valorem for the average price of the beef carcass. "Not properly balanced?" The gentleman recognized it. I wonder if he thinks this bill is properly balanced.

It puts the meat, hide, hoofs, hair, and horns on the free list. The only thing that does not come in free is the life, and on that they charge 10 per cent ad valorem. Oh, yes; the gentleman has it properly balanced in Canada's favor and in the Canadian butcher's favor. What do Democratic Ways and Means Committees care for the American laborer in that line, anyway? All they care for is the "consumer." About all we have heard from that side of the House during this debate is the "consumer." They "expect to benefit the consumer."

Mr. Chairman, practically all of our people are both producers and consumers, all acting in one capacity or the other to one another, and if the Ways and Means Committee could realize that, they would be a little more careful in framing tariff measures, realizing that discrimination is bound ultimately to injure all, as all except the idle rich and the genus hobo are producer and consumer alike. We prosper as a whole, or vice versa, but it is not worth while to discourse on economics—that is the last thing, and probably the least thing, within the knowledge of the caucus that agreed to this measure. I do wish, though, that your committee would have shown as much real, genuine solicitude for the American consumer, which embraces all of our people, as you have for the foreign consumers.

Mr. Chairman, I hope when this measure reaches the other end of the Capitol it will receive most careful consideration, and, by amendment, be returned to us more evenly balanced, showing more desire for equality of opportunity than does this misfit, rough-hewn, discriminating, unpatriotic misnomer at the present time.

Mr. HUMPHREY of Washington. Mr. Chairman, first I want to congratulate my new colleague from Washington [Mr. BRYAN] that in his first speech, fresh from the people, newly baptized in righteousness, with the words "Onward, Christian Soldiers," still upon his lips, he classifies himself as one of those speckled and spotted protectionists who wants protection for himself and free trade for everybody else. [Laughter on the Republican side.]

When this schedule was under consideration four years ago I stood here upon the floor of this House and pleaded with the Republicans that they should not reduce the tariff upon lumber; that they should not reduce the tariff upon coal; and that they increase the tariff upon shingles. They did reduce the tariff upon lumber; they did reduce it upon coal; they did increase it upon shingles, and some of my Republican colleagues were almost moved to tears at that time as they thought of the great hardship that would be worked upon the poor man who wanted to buy shingles; but they were comforted by the thought that lumber and coal would be cheaper.

Now, what has been the result in the State of Washington? You reduced the tariff upon lumber, and immediately the price of lumber went up and it has been up ever since. The Government lost the revenue, and no man in the State of Washington or anywhere in the United States has bought a foot of lumber for a cent less.

You reduced the tariff upon coal, and coal immediately went up, and in my country the railroads that owned both the mines and the railroads put the difference of the tariff in their pockets, and no consumer in the State of Washington has ever bought a bushel of coal for a cent less. The Government lost the revenue; that is all. You increased the tariff upon shingles, and what was the result? Immediately the price of shingles went down. Our mills began to run 12 months instead of 6 months in the year. That gave employment to American labor. That increased their wages over $3,000,000 each year, and since the Payne law went into effect the American workmen in the shingle mills of the State of Washington have received over $12,000,000 in wages that otherwise would have gone to the Chinamen and the Hindus in British Columbia, and no man in the United States has paid a penny more for a bale of shingles.

Now, they have a combination over in British Columbia. They restrict absolutely the output of the shingles there. They will permit only so many shingle mills to run in each community. It is an absolute trust, and if you strike down the shingle industry in the State of Washington it will only result in an increase in the price of shingles. The only result of this bill will be that our mills will again stand idle——

Mr. HARDY. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. HUMPHREY of Washington. No; I do not wish to yield to the gentleman.

Mr. HARDY. Mr. Chairman——

Mr. HUMPHREY of Washington. I must refuse to yield to the gentleman.

Mr. HARDY. Then do not comment.

Mr. HUMPHREY of Washington. The gentleman ought not to object if I comment. He is my friend, and I do not want to say anything unkind about him——

Mr. PALMER. You ought not to comment on anybody that you will not yield to.

Mr. HUMPHREY of Washington. I do not ask the gentleman from Pennsylvania to give me any instructions. He has strutted around here in his egotistical manner and berated everybody in this House, and it does not become him to be calling anybody to order, because if there is any man in this House that has never been accused of being a gentleman he is one of them.

Now, the result of putting shingles upon the free list will be that a large amount of our product will rot in the forests or be burned that would otherwise be manufactured into shingles. It will transfer the work and wages now given to Americans to the laborers in British Columbia, and it will not cheapen shingles to any consumer. There is no reason that can be given why any industry should be protected, or why there should be a duty on any industry that does not apply to the shingle industry in this State. [Applause on the Republican side.]

Mr. PALMER. [Applause on the Democratic side.] Mr. Chairman, having heard considerable from the lumbermen, whose remote blood relations we are told are extensively interested in this tariff on lumber, perhaps it is time that a word was said on behalf of the lumber purchasers of this country. [Applause on the Democratic side.] While I expect, in view of the excoriation which I have just received from the gentleman from Washington [Mr. HUMPHREY] I ought to be good and sit silent, I can not allow the opportunity to pass to say a word on behalf of the people of this country, who have been demanding free lumber in tones of a trumpet voice for many years. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

The gentleman from Washington has a personal grievance against me, but I am surprised that he should display it in the manner in which he has. His grievance grows out of the fact that I led a fight two years ago to cut out the mileage graft, of which he is one of the chief beneficiaries in the House, for he collects out of the Treasury for travel expense by way of mileage something like $4,000 in a single term of Congress. He has ever since been making remarks about me somewhat on the order that he has just made.

Mr. MANN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PALMER. Yes.

Mr. MANN. I think the gentleman is mistaken as to the amount.

Mr. PALMER. In three sessions of a single Congress, I think the gentleman draws $1,400 each session, which would be about $4,000. What are these gentlemen complaining about? The gentleman from Washington asserts that if we put lumber on the free list the price of lumber will not go down. He points to something in the past to prove that. If that is true, how are you going to be hurt? Your cries in this House and the lumber dealers' loud protests are a sufficient indication that if we put lumber on the free list the price of lumber to the American home builder will go down, and that is the reason we are putting it on the free list. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

It is as the gentleman from Washington [Mr. BRYAN] has asserted, and, by the way, I would like to commend to him and to his colleague from Washington, Mr. LA FOLLETTE, the example of those distinguished men whose names they bear, William J. Bryan and Senator LA FOLLETTE, who led the fight from coast to coast for free lumber for the American people. [Applause.] It would be better for them to follow the example of those great patriots than to look to the interests of their own districts alone.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PALMER. I can not yield now. I repeat, it is as the gentleman from Washington [Mr. BRYAN] has said, if you do not do this thing you will have almost a revolution in America. In 1908 the Democratic Party went out to Denver, and in the very center of the great lumber district of the country they declared to the world that, in behalf of the man who wants to build his home on American soil and rear his children around his own hearthstone, they would remove the tax from lumber. Since that time in the House of Representatives the Democratic Party moved to recommit the Payne bill in order to put lumber on the free list. A revolution within your own party began when you opposed putting lumber on the free list. The demand is widespread and universal. Every party is committed to it, and gentlemen who sit on this side of the Chamber, excepting only those who confessed their interest in the matter, believe that we ought to do this thing, and we propose to do it. [Applause.]

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. Mr. Chairman, I wish to correct that statement.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Pennsylvania has expired.

Mr. CALDER. Mr. Chairman, I speak on this matter for the purchasers of lumber—the men who consume the lumber. The city of New York, which in part I represent on this floor, during the past 12 years has built over 163,000 buildings, costing over $2,200,000,000. We use more lumber in the city of New York than any three States in the Union put together. Now, when the Payne bill was under discussion four years ago I talked with the lumber merchants in New York as to the effect of free lumber on the price to the consumer. I must confess to having some little interest in the matter, for of the 163,000 houses constructed in New York City in the last 12 years I have built nearly 1,000. I use lumber in my business, and I made it a point to make some inquiries about it. I asked these lumber merchants, "If we reduce the duty on lumber, how much cheaper would the builders of New York City and those who wish to build homes be able to buy lumber?" They said not one penny. "The minute you put lumber on the free list, that moment the Canadian will raise his price." And what happened? We reduced the duty on rough lumber from $2 to $1.25 per thousand, and the next day the Canadian raised the price for his lumber, increasing it to the extent of the amount of duty reduced. I went home a week or two ago and again interviewed our lumber dealers. I told them Congress intended to put rough lumber on the free list and asked how much cheaper can we buy it this winter, and they replied "Not one cent." They informed me that they were making their contracts now with the Canadians to be delivered after the Underwood bill becomes a law, and that these contracts were based on an arrangement whereby the Canadian lumber dealer increased his price to the extent of one-half the duty and the New York merchant got the other half. So, Mr. Chairman, what is the consumer going to get out of it—those of us who buy lumber and cut it up and put it into buildings? I asked that question and was informed, "You are not going to get any advantage, and if you want to place an order for lumber such as you did last spring you can have it for just the same price and consider yourself lucky to get it."

Mr. LANGLEY. The gentleman from New York [Mr. CALDER] then thinks the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. PALMER] is slightly mistaken when he speaks so eloquently about what he is going to do for the home builders?

Mr. CALDER. I know whereof I speak when I say that the reduction of the duty on lumber is not going to make a bit of difference to the consumer.

Mr. HARDY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CALDER. I beg the gentleman's pardon, but I can not yield. It is going to make this difference: We are going to take out of the Treasury of the United States the revenue that the lumber producer in Canada puts into the Treasury for duty, and we are going to compel the people of this country in some other way to make that up.

Mr. FARR. Just as we lost the duty on coffee.

Mr. CALDER. Just as we lost the duty on coffee.

Mr. HARDY. Will the gentleman now yield for one brief question?

Mr. CALDER. Yes.

Mr. HARDY. If the taking of the duty off lumber and putting lumber on the free list is not going to reduce the price, how will it reduce necessarily the wages to the workingman?

Mr. CALDER. I am not discussing it from that standpoint. [Laughter on the Democratic side.] I am discussing the question solely and purely from the standpoint of the consumer.

Mr. HARDY. That was the question I wanted to ask the gentleman from Washington. It was a simple question.

Mr. SLAYDEN. Mr. Chairman, the speech just made by the gentleman from New York [Mr. CALDER], if he be correct in his statements, suggests the necessity for some additional legislation to reach the Lumber Trust, which seems to be operating in New York. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

Mr. CALDER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Texas yield to the gentleman from New York?

Mr. SLAYDEN. If the gentleman will be quick and prompt.

Mr. CALDER. I will say to my friend that he will have to legislate in some way to reach the Lumber Trust in Canada.

Mr. HARDY. And in the United States.

Mr. SLAYDEN. Leaving that aside, Mr. Chairman, I believe that if there is an industry in this country, or a commodity in the entire list of all of the commodities produced in this country, that needs no protection, it is lumber. So far as my observation in my own State and in the adjacent State of Louisiana goes, it is absolutely true that there is no class of manufacturers in the country who are so uniformly prosperous as the producers of lumber. Some of the greatest fortunes in the Southwest—and if newspaper reports be true, one of the greatest fortunes in the entire country—have been made out of the natural increase in the value of that commodity, due to the constantly diminishing supply. Those are factors which will be uninfluenced by the tariff. I do not know that I entirely agree with the suggestion made by my friend from Pennsylvania [Mr. PALMER], that the abolition of tariff duty will reduce the price of lumber to the consumer, at least for any prolonged length of time, but it will have this effect: It will arrest for the time being and cause to come more slowly the inevitable advance in the price of lumber, due to the diminishing supply. [Applause on the Democratic side.] I was told the other day by a constituent of mine, who has made a considerable fortune out of lumber as a merchant and in manufacturing, as a producer of lumber, that within his knowledge 67 producers—I am not sure whether he said corporations or individuals, or both—in the Southwest would go out of business in less than five years because of an exhaustion of their supply. Now, lumber is not an annually renewable crop. We ought to do all we can to encourage its importation from other countries. We ought to conserve our own supply, because it is one of the products that is essential to the comfort and convenience of the human family. For that reason, if for no other, I would be in favor, as I have always been, although not committed at all to the doctrine of free trade, I would be in favor of removing all tariff from any products of lumber in any form, manufactured or unmanufactured. This manufacturer of lumber—this owner of timberlands—told me when I had my conversation with him that he was on his way to complete a purchase of additional lands involving an expenditure of $2,000,000, and that as a producer of lumber and as a lumber merchant he had no objection whatever to the removal of the duty. He said it would not interfere a particle with the general prosperity of the lumber trade of the country, and the reason I suggested, the diminishing supply, was that he said in his judgment it would cause a constantly increasing cost to the producer.

Why, Mr. Chairman, within the last few years I have known timberlands to sell in southeastern Texas at $15 an acre, which at that time was thought to be an exorbitant price, which since have changed hands at $75 an acre. My informant, who has prospered so well in the lumber trade, tells me that in his judgment investments in timberlands at current prices, swollen though they may be in comparison with the prices of less than five years ago, will yield as big a return in the way of dividends on the investment as any enterprise in which any man can engage. Why, sir, I believe that the lumber dealers are engaged in a conspiracy against the interests of consumers, in so far as a conspiracy may be made out from their evident purpose of maintaining a uniform standard of prices. It is notorious that there is only a show of competition. A prospective buyer gets the same prices from all the dealers to whom he applies. At least that is my information, and——

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. SHARP. Mr. Chairman, I wish to speak upon this, unless there is a limitation——

The CHAIRMAN. There is a limitation. All debate upon this schedule is now closed. The Clerk will report the first amendment in the order in which amendments come in the bill, the amendment proposed by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MOORE].

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 46, line 4, after the word "sawed," strike out "10 per cent ad valorem" and insert "15 per cent ad valorem."

The question was taken, and the amendment was rejected.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment offered by the gentleman from Washington [Mr. HUMPHREY].

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 46, line 7, after the word "ad valorem," insert "shingles, 50 cents per thousand."

The question was taken, and the Chairman announced the noes seemed to have it.

On a division (demanded by Mr. HUMPHREY of Washington) there were—ayes 55, noes 104.

So the amendment was rejected.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the next paragraph.

The Clerk read as follows:

172. Paving posts, railroad ties, and telephone, trolley, electric-light, and telegraph poles of cedar or other woods, 10 per cent ad valorem.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will now report the amendment of Mr. POWERS.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 46, after line 10, insert two new paragraphs, as follows:
"Par. 172½. Rough lumber, $1.25 per 1,000 feet b. m.
"Par. 172¾. Railroad ties, 10 per cent ad valorem."

The question was taken, and the amendment was rejected.

The Clerk read as follows:

177. Porch and window blinds, curtains, shades, or screens, any of the foregoing in chief value of bamboo, wood, straw, or compositions of wood, not specially provided for in this section, 20 per cent ad valorem; if stained, dyed, painted, printed, polished, grained, or creosoted, and baskets of like material, 25 per cent ad valorem.

Mr. PALMER. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 47, line 15, after the word "baskets," insert the words "in chief value."

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. PALMER].

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HUMPHREY of Washington. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will state to the gentleman that debate is closed.

Mr. HUMPHREY of Washington. Does that include the entire wood schedule?

The CHAIRMAN. The entire schedule.

The Clerk read as follows:

SCHEDULE E—SUGAR, MOLASSES, AND MANUFACTURES OF.

179. Sugars, tank bottoms, sirups of cane juice, melada, concentrated melada, concrete and concentrated molasses, testing by the polariscope not above 75 degrees, seventy-one one-hundredths of 1 cent per pound, and for every additional degree shown by the polariscopic test, twenty-six one-thousandths of 1 cent per pound additional, and fractions of a degree in proportion; molasses testing not above 40 degrees, 15 per centum ad valorem; testing above 40 degrees and not above 56 degrees, 2¼ cents per gallon; testing above 56 degrees, 4½ cents per gallon; sugar drainings and sugar sweepings shall be subject to duty as molasses or sugar, as the case may be, according to polariscopic test: Provided, That on and after the 1st day of May, 1916, the articles hereinbefore enumerated in this paragraph shall be admitted free of duty.

Mr. FORDNEY. Mr. Chairman, I want to offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Michigan [Mr. FORDNEY] offers an amendment which the Clerk will report.

Mr. FORDNEY. The amendment covers both of the paragraphs, but I would like to have it read now, if agreeable.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Strike out paragraphs 179 and 180, pages 47 and 48, and substitute the following:

"179. Sugars, tank bottoms, sirups of cane juice, melada, concentrated melada, concrete and concentrated molasses, testing by the polariscope not above 75 degrees, ninety-five one-hundredths of 1 cent per pound, and for each additional degree shown by the polariscope test, twenty-six one-thousandths of 1 per cent per pound additional, and fractions of a degree in proportion; molasses testing above 40 degrees and not above 56 degrees, 3 cents per gallon; testing above 56 degrees, 6 cents per gallon; sugar drainings and sugar sweepings shall be subject to duty as molasses or sugar, as the case may be, according to polariscope test: Provided, That every bag, barrel, or parcel in which sugar testing by the polariscope less than 99 degrees is packed shall be plainly branded by the manufacturer or refiner thereof with the name of such manufacturer or refiner, and the polariscope test of the sugar therein contained, accurately within one-half of 1 degree, and a failure to brand any such bag, barrel, or parcel as herein required shall be deemed and taken to be a misbranding of food within the meaning of the act of June 30, 1906, entitled 'An act for preventing the manufacture, sale, or transportation of adulterated or misbranded or poisonous or deleterious foods, drugs, medicines, and liquors, and for regulating traffic therein, and for other purposes.' And the requirements of this proviso shall not apply to any sugar shipped or delivered to a refiner to be refined before entering into consumption.

"180. Maple sugar and maple sirup, 4 cents per pound; glucose or grape sugar, 1½ cents per pound; sugar cane in its natural state or unmanufactured, 20 per centum ad valorem; sugar cane defecated, shredded, artificially dried, or which has been subjected to any manufacturing or other process, 50 per centum ad valorem."

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I reserve a point of order on that. I may withdraw the point of order, but the gentleman's amendment really covers the whole issue in this paragraph.

Mr. FORDNEY. It covers the whole schedule.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. It covers the whole schedule, because the other points in the schedule—saccharin and candy—are not really at issue. Would 30 minutes' debate on this paragraph be satisfactory?

Mr. PAYNE. I want to offer an amendment.

Mr. MANN. There will be several amendments offered to this schedule besides the amendment offered by the gentleman from Michigan. Probably most of the discussion will be disposed of on the amendment of the gentleman from Michigan, although I think there should possibly be some debate after that. The gentleman from New York [Mr. PAYNE] intends to offer an amendment, and I may offer one myself.

Mr. MURDOCK. And the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. WOODRUFF] will offer an amendment.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I think there is about 50 minutes' debate desired on that side of the House, as indicated by the gentlemen standing up.

Mr. MANN. A good deal more than that.

Mr. BROUSSARD. Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask the gentleman [Mr. UNDERWOOD] if it is not possible for me to get some time, whatever agreement will be made on this schedule. As the gentleman knows, I was not able to secure any time in general debate. I would like to get at least 20 minutes.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I must say to my friend that I have refused to let anybody violate the five-minute rule, and I can not do that.

Mr. PAYNE. Of course, this is as important a schedule as there is in the bill.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I will say this: If the gentlemen on that side of the House are willing to agree to two hours' debate, and allow the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] and some one on this side to control the time, and divide it, you can make as long speeches as you desire. You can divide it to suit yourselves. But if we go on under the five-minute rule——

Mr. BROUSSARD. Would the gentleman allow me in his hour——

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I can not surrender the time on our side of the House in opposition to the bill.

Mr. BROUSSARD. I take it that I am acting strictly within the rules of the party to which the gentleman and I belong. The fact that I am opposed to the schedule and acting strictly within the lines of the party ought to give me some consideration on this side. The gentlemen on the other side yielded some six hours to the gentlemen who belong to the Progressive Party and who are also opposed to the bill.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I think the gentleman is opposed to the proposition, and ought to take his time from the opposition.

Mr. MANN. We granted time to certain gentlemen who announced in their speeches that they were supporting the bill.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. No.

Mr. MANN. Yes.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I do not recall that.

Mr. MANN. That is the fact, and we have always done that.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I am willing to agree to two hours' debate, and the time to be equally divided, and I will give the gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. BROUSSARD] 10 minutes of my time if that is agreed to.

Mr. MANN. The gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] well knows that in this debate at present the minority side of the House need more time than the majority and should be granted more time. This is rather an important schedule to some districts of the country. I hope the gentleman will be willing to grant this side of the House at least an hour and a half.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I will say to the gentleman from Illinios [Mr. MANN] that on most of the schedules we did grant the minority more time. But this is a vital schedule, and our side of the House is entitled to be represented on it.

Mr. MANN. I do not care how much time you take, but I do not see how we can get along without a good deal of friction with less than that time.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I will make a proposition to the gentleman. I was going to give 10 minutes of my time to the gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. BROUSSARD], who is on your side. If you will take care of the gentleman from Louisiana, I will agree to 2 hours' debate, 1 hour and a quarter to go to your side and the balance to this side.

Mr. MANN. I will be glad to do that if the gentleman from Alabama will give the gentleman from Louisiana 5 minutes.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I will not stand on that proposition. I am willing that you shall have 5 minutes more of our time, so that you would take 1 hour and 20 minutes, and we will take 40 minutes.

Mr. MANN. And you are to yield to the gentleman from Louisiana 5 minutes.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I am about to yield you an hour and 20 minutes, and you are to yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Louisiana. That is your own proposition.

Mr. MANN. No; that was 2 hours' time.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. No; I said we would have 2 hours, and we would give you an hour and a quarter, and you were to yield to the gentleman from Louisiana. You said you would not do that and suggested that I should yield only 5 minutes to the gentleman from Louisiana. Now, I am going to give you the other 5 minutes.

Mr. MANN. I did not understand that. If you will give us an hour and a half, I will yield to the gentleman.

Mr. FORDNEY. I hope the gentleman from Alabama will not be technical.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I took the gentleman from Illinois at his word.

Mr. MANN. Oh, do not say that. You did not do that.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. The gentleman from Illinois said he would be agreeable if I would give the gentleman 5 minutes.

Mr. MANN. I will agree, if the gentleman from Alabama will give me 1 hour and 20 minutes, to give the gentleman from Louisiana 5 minutes if the gentleman from Alabama will also give him 5 minutes.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I had already agreed——

Mr. MANN. That is the only proposition I made at the best.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I agreed to give the gentleman from Illinois one hour and a quarter, and the gentleman from Illinois proposed to give him five minutes. That is the best I can do.

Mr. MANN. I do not want to assume the task of dividing up the time with so many gentlemen desiring time.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I am willing to leave it with the Chair to divide up the time.

Mr. MANN. That will be still worse. If one man controlled the time, some others would get less than five minutes.

Mr. LANGLEY. Oh, I don't know about that. I would be willing to risk the Chair. I think myself that he has been pretty fair.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Well, if that proposition is not agreeable, we shall have to read.

Mr. MURDOCK. Is it quite possible that a gentleman will use an hour's time or 50 minutes?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. It is quite a vital question. I think it should be agreeable if we gave all but 40 minutes to the other side.

Mr. MURDOCK. That is not the proposition.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I make the request.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] asks unanimous consent that the debate on this schedule be limited to 2 hours; 1 hour and 20 minutes to be controlled by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] or the gentleman from New York [Mr. PAYNE], whoever is selected, and the remaining 40 minutes to be controlled by the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD], at the end of which time all debate on the schedule shall cease.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. And a vote shall be taken on the amendments that are pending.

The CHAIRMAN. And a vote shall be taken on the amendments pending.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. That may be offered at any time.

Mr. MANN. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Chairman, I would like to say that if that arrangement is made I would yield only 5 minutes to the gentleman from Louisiana, and would reduce the time among other gentlemen, probably to 3 or 4 or 5 minutes, for them to determine.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Alabama?

Mr. BROUSSARD. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Chairman, I would like to know whether the 10 minutes I desire are coming to me?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I will say to the gentleman from Louisiana that I tried to take care of him; and if I can not, then I can not.

Mr. BROUSSARD. I think I should have some time. I have not had any time heretofore. I could talk 5 minutes in sections and be able to get in 20 minutes in four 5-minute talks.

Mr. MURDOCK. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Chairman, I wish the gentleman would couple with his request the proposition that we should have 5 minutes of that time.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I think the gentleman from Illinois can arrange that.

Mr. MURDOCK. The gentleman from Illinois says that if you go to scaling down we might lose our 5 minutes at that rate.

Mr. MANN. I think some gentlemen would be entitled to 5 minutes. If that understanding goes through I will yield only 5 minutes to the gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. BROUSSARD].

Mr. BROUSSARD. Can not the gentleman from Alabama yield me 5 minutes?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I wanted to arrange it, but I can not.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

Mr. FORDNEY. Mr. Chairman, I ask that the Clerk read the remainder of the schedule before I speak upon this amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will suggest that it is in order to read paragraph 180.

Mr. HAYES. Before that is done, I wish to offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Michigan [Mr. FORDNEY] has proposed an amendment which is, in effect, an amendment to two paragraphs. The Chair does not understand whether the gentleman from Michigan asks unanimous consent that, as has been done before, two paragraphs be considered together.

Mr. FORDNEY. That was my intention.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I am willing to give unanimous consent that there may be a vote upon his amendment as a single amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Michigan [Mr. FORDNEY] asks unanimous consent that the amendment which he has offered, and which has been read at the Clerk's desk, shall be considered as a whole, it being an amendment to two paragraphs—179 and 180. Is there objection?

Mr. MANN. Of course, that will not affect the offering of further amendments to the first of those two paragraphs.

The CHAIRMAN. It will not. The Chair hears no objection, and it is so ordered; and the Clerk will read paragraph 180, with the understanding that opportunity will be given later to offer amendments to paragraph 179.

The Clerk read as follows:

180. Maple sugar and maple sirup, 3 cents per pound; glucose or grape sugar, 1½ cents per pound; sugar cane in its natural state, or unmanufactured, 15 per cent ad valorem: Provided, That on and after the 1st day of May, 1916, the articles hereinbefore enumerated in this paragraph shall be admitted free of duty.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from California [Mr. HAYES] desire to offer his amendment now and have it pending?

Mr. HAYES. I am willing to do so. I will offer it now and have it pending.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from California offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 48, strike out the proviso in lines 11, 12, and 13.

Mr. MANN. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. FORDNEY] five minutes.

Mr. FORDNEY. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the committee, I offer my amendment for more than one reason, but one particular reason for offering that amendment in its present form is this: When the free-sugar bill passed this House last year and went to the Senate this amendment was known as the Bristow-Lodge amendment to that bill, and when voted upon in the Senate it received every vote cast there with the exception of three, one Senator from Idaho and two Senators from Louisiana, who voted against the bill because they did not believe in any reduction of the duty on sugar.

Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. HARDWICK] frankly and openly stated the other evening in this committee that he believed if the rate of duty proposed in this bill is put into effect at the end of three years the sugar industry of the Southern States—Louisiana and Texas—must die, must go out of existence. Gentlemen, I want to say to you that before the Ways and Means Committee and before the investigating committee on sugar last year—the so-called Hardwick committee—there was not one man, woman, or child who appeared in the interest of any lower rates of duty, or free sugar, with the single exception of importers or the manufacturers of refined sugar who import raw sugar.

The gentleman has said that he is going to put lumber upon the free list for the masses of the people. Not a single soul has been present asking for what he proposes either in lumber or in sugar, but all admit that if sugar goes upon the free list your domestic cane industry in this country must die and the beet-sugar industry of this country will either be crushed or greatly injured. All admit that, and yet to-day you know and I know that the reason for low prices of sugar in this country is because of the keen competition between the domestic manufacturers of sugar, and when our domestic sugar goes off the market—which is about this time of the year or a few days later—the price of sugar generally goes skyward. Then it is furnished to the consumers by the great sugar-refining companies.

I am going to give you this statement for what it is worth: A Member of the House only yesterday told me that he saw in a newspaper—I did not see the article—that in a short time a president of the American Sugar Refining Co. will be elected. It has been stated on the floor of this House that the only independent manufacturer of refined sugar is the Federal Sugar Co., of which Mr. August Spreckels is president. That gentleman appeared before the Hardwick Committee and the Ways and Means Committee asking for free sugar. The newspaper report is to the effect that this gentleman, Mr. August Spreckels, is about to be elected president of the American Sugar Refining Co. That means a merging of the Federal Sugar Co. with the American Sugar Refining Co., if that statement is correct, thus leaving the consumers of sugar in this country—after this bill goes into effect and the domestic sugar industry is crushed—absolutely in the grasp of the American Sugar Refining Co. and the Arbuckle Bros.' Sugar Refining Co., which two companies refine 92 per cent of all the refined sugar made in this country, exclusive of the domestic industry. [Applause on the Republican side.]

I appeal to you, gentlemen, not for this industry alone but for the consumers of this country. Do not put the consumers of sugar in this country absolutely in the hands of what you admit is a monopoly—the great sugar refining companies of this country, three in number to-day, two if the Federal merges into the American, with August Spreckels at the head of the sugar refining company in New York. As I stated, he is in New York and his brother, Rudolph Spreckels, is on the Pacific coast, and between the two the industry will perish. [Applause on the Republican side.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. MANN. I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Wyoming [Mr. MONDELL].

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Chairman, there are no beet-sugar factories in the State which I have the honor to represent. We have hoped, however, and have had good ground to hope, that eventually, with the growth and development of this great industry, we would have many factories. But I have a duty to perform here to-day somewhat unusual in its character. The great State of Montana, lying north of Wyoming, has beet-sugar factories. It has localities of wide extent which a prominent Democrat in the State told me the other day would suffer injury from which they would not and could not recover in a decade if this bill passed. That State has no one on this floor who will speak for that great industry. To the south lies the imperial Commonwealth of Colorado. Within her borders are 17 beet-sugar factories. Last year there was paid to her farmers for sugar beets between twelve and fifteen millions of dollars. She has no one here who will speak for her people depending on this mighty and growing industry.

One of the gentlemen hailing from that State will, I imagine, a little later tell you that Colorado is willing to dismantle her 17 sugar factories; that she is willing to have her beet fields sown with ragweed or any old crop, provided he can retain his regularity as a Democrat.

He will tell you that he told the people of Colorado that he would vote for free sugar. He is unsophisticated enough to imagine that his position in the matter of the duty on sugar had any effect whatever on the fact of his being here as a minority Representative of that great Commonwealth. He might have been singing any kind of a song, in the frame of mind that the people of Colorado were in last year, with the Republicans divided squarely in two, and have been elected. Dismantle her factories, destroy one of the most important and valuable crops of her fertile acres, reduce the income of the population of her beautiful sugar-growing sections, and the gentleman will hear from his constituents in no uncertain way.

The gentleman from Alabama has said that in the main this bill has been constructed with the use of a jackscrew and not an ax. Here is a case of dynamiting. Here is a case of confiscation. The sugar factories north and south represent an investment of over a hundred million dollars. These will be actually confiscated. Sixty to sixty-five millions of dollars annually are paid to the farmers of the country for beets and cane, and no man whose opinion is worth paying any attention to, here or elsewhere, can deny the fact that when sugar goes on the free list the sugar industry, beet and cane, is destroyed under the American flag.

There are men on that side honest enough—and I hope in this debate they will say what they have said in private and sometimes almost said in public—that this mighty industry is an expensive luxury and they are willing to destroy it because in their opinion it is in the interest of the American people.

If I was on that side of the aisle and intended to vote for this bill that is the position I would take, for it is the only logical, tenable position in connection with the proposition contained in this bill to destroy the American sugar industry.

What is going to happen is that, after our beet fields no longer produce sugar beets, after our factory wheels cease to turn, the lawbreaking Sugar Trust at home, and foreign combines, will have the American people by the throat and raise the price of sugar higher than it has been for years. [Applause on the Republican side.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. MANN. I yield two minutes to the gentleman from California [Mr. HAYES].

Mr. HAYES. Mr. Chairman, I do not at this time desire to enter into any extended discussion of this schedule. A few days ago I gave at some length my reasons for believing that the tariff on sugar ought not to be reduced, much less should sugar be placed on the free list. I have offered an amendment which is now pending and which will permit this House to vote directly on the question whether or not it is in favor of putting sugar on the free list.

I desire at this time, Mr. Chairman, to ask unanimous consent to withdraw that amendment in order that the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN], the minority leader, may offer the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN (Mr. MCKELLAR). The gentleman from California asks unanimous consent to be allowed to withdraw his amendment which he has offered on the sugar schedule. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I believe it is in order to offer an amendment at this time. There is an amendment pending.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair thinks so.

Mr. SHERLEY. I will state, if the gentleman will permit me, that my understanding of the agreement is that these amendments might be considered as pending and then voted on afterwards.

The CHAIRMAN. The present occupant of the chair was not present when the agreement was made.

Mr. SHERLEY. That was my understanding, that the amendments could be offered during the debate.

Mr. MANN. Then, Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment to perfect the paragraph:

Strike out of lines 11, 12, and 13, page 48, the following language:
"That on and after the 1st day of May, 1916, the articles hereinbefore enumerated in this paragraph shall be admitted free of duty."

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois has offered an amendment, which will be considered pending.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. SAMUEL W. SMITH].

Mr. SAMUEL W. SMITH. Mr. Chairman, it is always a pleasure, in the discussion of the tariff question, to be able to quote the opinion of some one of the opposite political faith. It is my good fortune at this time to be able to give to you the views of a leading Democratic national committeeman on the subject of sugar. I quote from what Col. Robert Ewing, Democratic national committeeman of the State of Louisiana and owner of the New Orleans States, is reported as having said in the Washington Post February 26, 1913:

There are two industries in Louisiana on which we need protection—sugar and rice. I am a tariff-for-revenue Democrat and have never been any other kind of a Democrat. Sugar and rice must be protected, however, in order that these industries may survive and that we may get revenue from them. Sugar is the only necessary of life, the only staple commodity, that has fallen in price, notwithstanding the duty.

I invite attention now to the next few words that Col. Ewing said:

Free sugar would not mean any material benefit to the consumer. The price might fall for a short time, but it would be only a matter of months when the refiners would put the price back where it was.

Mr. Chairman, I will tell my Democratic friends when sugar will fall in price, and that will be after the 1st day of May, 1916, if this bill becomes a law. If the refiners have any gratitude in their souls to the Democratic Party they will put the price down from that time until after the November election of 1916. To continue what Col. Ewing said:

In other words, free sugar would mean merely that the Government would be playing into the hands of a trust.

Mr. Chairman, I want to say that, if he is correctly quoted, the senior Senator from the State of Louisiana, in this morning's Washington Post, confirms every word that I have quoted as coming from Col. Ewing.

Last Saturday night, in this Chamber, the able gentleman from Georgia [Mr. HARDWICK] expressed his views on the subject of sugar, and in the course of his remarks said that in 20 years either under this pending bill or under the present law the industry would be wiped out in Louisiana.

In Michigan, as in many other States, we have millions of dollars invested in factories. The farmers have hundreds of thousands of dollars in machinery, and the laboring men, as well as women, are paid splendid wages for the work they do in the sugar fields in connection with the sugar-beet industry of our State. I have no hesitation in saying that the prophecy which the gentleman from Georgia made with reference to Louisiana will be true with reference to the sugar-beet industries of Michigan, Colorado, Utah, and other States. But it will only be in keeping with every other bit of tariff-for-revenue and free-trade legislation that has ever been written upon the statute books since the birth of this Republic. It is not possible for one of you gentlemen to point to any free-trade or tariff-for-revenue legislation in this country under which we have not had results like we had in 1837, in 1857, between 1893 and 1897, and I am frank to say to-day that I would like to have somebody give to the country some consolation and comfort that we can hope that this bill will be an exception to every other tariff for revenue or free trade piece of legislation that has been written on the statute books. [Applause on the Republican side.]

"THORNTON FREE-SUGAR FOE—LOUISIANA SENATOR FIRST DEMOCRAT TO ATTACK PROPOSED SCHEDULE—ASSERTS CUT WOULD PLACE CONTROL OF INDUSTRY IN HANDS OF MONOPOLY OF REFINERS.

"The first outspoken attack on the Democratic tariff bill by a Democrat came yesterday, when Senator THORNTON, of Louisiana, in a public statement scored the sugar schedule. The Louisiana Senator said the sugar schedule was bound to defeat the one object which has been claimed by President Wilson and Leader UNDERWOOD as the primary purpose of the proposed legislation. Senator THORNTON said:

"'I am in thorough accord with the view expressed by President Wilson that a tariff bill should be so framed as to encourage competition and prevent monopoly. But the pending tariff bill, in so far as it concerns sugar, will have just the opposite effect. The provision for free sugar, without doubt, will put the entire control of the sugar industry of the United States in the hands of the big refiners. At the present time they are meeting with very effective competition from the domestic sugar industry. Its effect has been, and now is, to cheapen the cost of sugar to the consumer.

"'The admissions of the refiners themselves under examination before various congressional committees show that for several years they have been annoyed and embarrassed by the rapid growth of this competition, which cuts into the profits from the operation of their refineries for several months each year. They have declared that without tariff they have nothing to fear from the competition of foreign refiners. They are seeking the removal of the only competition from which they have anything to fear.

"'In view of this situation, it is easy to see that free sugar will result only in the destruction of competition and the opening of the way to the establishment of a burdensome and oppressive monopoly, able to impose its will upon the public and to exact higher prices from the consumer.'"

I will also append the following letter:

WAIALEE, HAWAII, April 10, 1913.

Hon. SAMUEL W. SMITH,
Washington, D. C.

SIR: Several years ago you very kindly used your influence to try to secure for me the appointment of collector of customs at the port of Honolulu, so that I now take the liberty of asking you to give me another lift. This is not for myself, but for all the people of Hawaii. If you can possibly do so, I should like to ask you to vote against the reduction of the tariff upon sugar, as such reduction will surely spell the ruin of this Territory. The revenue received from the tax upon the sugar industry in Hawaii amounts to 55 per cent of all the revenues. If this industry is crippled, where shall we turn for revenue? A great many will say that we must turn to other crops, but this is impossible on account of the climate, soil, and the countless insect pests which are able to live through the entire year, as we have no cold weather to exterminate them.

Hoping that you may be able to help us, I remain,
Yours, respectfully,

H. M. TUCKER.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I yield five minutes to the gentleman from California [Mr. J. R. KNOWLAND].

Mr. J. R. KNOWLAND. Mr. Chairman, the peculiar climatic conditions of California make that Commonwealth a State of wonderful and diversified interests. If there is any industry in that great State that will not be injuriously affected if this bill goes into effect, I have failed to find it.

One of the chief industries of California is the beet-sugar industry. We have in that State 13 beet-sugar factories and are to-day the chief beet-sugar producing State in the Union. I want to present a few figures in order to impress upon this House the importance of this great industry to the State I in part represent. We paid last year for beets to the farmers $6,701,582. We paid for labor in the factories and fields over $3,900,000. We paid for fuel oil $500,000. We paid for bags $391,000 and for other supplies $542,000, making the total expenditures due to this industry in the State of California over $14,100,000. The number of acres harvested is 112,000. The tons of sugar beets grown are 1,037,000. The tons of sugar produced are 168,000 and the total investment in factory, land, and equipment in the State of California is over $19,904,823. This is but one of the great industries of California that is going to be disastrously affected by the passage of this law. In the beet-sugar industry alone we employ in California 25,000 men, and it can readily be appreciated that with the expenditure of this vast sum of money and the employment of this number of men that to strike down this industry and close these 13 factories you inflict a severe blow upon California. No doubt the rising generation in California do not recall the effects of the Wilson law upon the industries of the State, but if this bill is enacted as at present written they will have a bitter experience that will not so soon be forgotten. Not only have we an interest in the beet-sugar industry in our own State but we are interested in the cane-sugar industry of the Hawaiian Islands. We sympathize with those people. The Hawaiian Islands are good customers of California and the United States. The total value of domestic merchandise shipped to Hawaii from the mainland for the 12 months ending December, 1912, was $28,029,240. The total for the same period, 1911, was $21,917,747. The total for the same period, 1910, was $21,637,751. Hawaii's products sold to the United States mainland increased approximately 5½ per cent from 1911 to 1912. Hawaii's purchases from the United States mainland increased approximately 30 per cent from 1911 to 1912. Strike down this industry in Hawaii and this entire country will suffer. Destroy the beet-sugar industry and you play into the hands of the Sugar Trust and do not benefit the American consumer. I shall support the amendment which has been offered to restore the rates upon sugar and to strike out the proviso for free sugar in three years. While I realize that this amendment will not be adopted because of the fact that the majority are bound and gagged by caucus rule, I am glad to go on record. [Applause on the Republican side.]

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. WOODRUFF].

Mr. WOODRUFF. Mr. Chairman, I also come from one of the great beet-sugar producing States of this Union. There is more beet sugar produced in my district, I believe, than in any other district in that State. There is more beet sugar produced in my city than in any city in the United States, and I believe, Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of this committee, that the effect of this tariff will be to absolutely throttle and destroy this great industry. The Democratic Party, as represented by the membership in this House, proposes not a reduction of the tariff for the purpose of placing the producer of this country on a basis of competition with those abroad, but they propose to enact into law a measure that will absolutely annihilate an industry that represents an investment of more than $100,000,000 in this country, claiming that any industry that can not compete in the open market with a like industry abroad without the benefit of the protective tariff is an illegitimate industry and should be destroyed. Much has been said both for and against this theory in this House in the past week, and I say to you of the majority that when the American farmers and the American laborers realize the fact that you propose to place them upon an absolute basis of equality with the Asiatic and European farmers and laborers, they will have an answer to that argument that will be most displeasing to you. It is a well-known fact, Mr. Chairman, that at such seasons when the beet sugar is not on the market that the great Refiners' Trust of this country absolutely monopolizes the market and fixes the price of sugar. It is also a well-known fact that at such times the price of this commodity is much higher, and I say to you, gentlemen, that if this bill becomes a law, and it will, and if the production of sugar in this country ceases, and it will, that the people of this country will be at the absolute mercy of this great Refiners' Trust. Within the past two years in my home city I have paid 9 cents a pound for granulated sugar. That was at a time when the beet sugar was not on the market.

The excuse offered for the rise in the price of sugar at that time of more than 2 cents was that there was a rumor of a shortage in the beet crop of Germany. Now, gentlemen, there are produced in this country 625,000 tons of sugar annually by the beet-sugar producers. There are something like 350,000 tons of cane sugar produced in this country, and I say to you, gentlemen, that if a mere rumor of a shortage of a crop in Germany would produce a rise in that price of some 2 cents per pound, what rise, in God's name, would an actual shortage of nearly 1,000,000 tons of sugar create?

Gentlemen, there is one schedule in this bill that I would like to vote for. I would like to vote for the income-tax measure, but, coupled as it is with a measure that strikes at the very foundation of all our industrial institutions, I can not support it. [Applause on the Republican side.]

Mr. FOWLER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield for a question? I do not believe his time has expired.

Mr. WOODRUFF. I yield my time back to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN].

Mr. MANN. Was there any time left?

The CHAIRMAN. One minute.

Mr. FOWLER. I desire to know why the falling off per acre in the production of beets in your State was so great last year?

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Michigan yield?

Mr. WOODRUFF. I do, sir.

Mr. FOWLER. I see you produced only 6.75 tons per acre last year. I see that California produced 9.1.

Mr. WOODRUFF. I can answer the gentleman. It was due to the climatic conditions in the State. For the past two years the beet-sugar producers in the State of Michigan have lost money on account of having so much rain. In many instances it has been impossible for the farmers to get into their fields to harvest their crops, owing to the wet condition of the ground. I would ask the gentleman to go back further and look at the statistics.

Mr. FOWLER. Is it not true that the forces that make sugar are lacking to an extent, as they are in other States, and prevent you from raising beet sugar?

Mr. WOODRUFF. Absolutely not. The gentleman can find that I am right if he will go back and look at the statistics.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I yield to the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. KEATING] 10 minutes.

Mr. KEATING. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Wyoming [Mr. MONDELL] has taken occasion to refer to me and my views on the sugar tariff. I appreciate it is just a trifle difficult for the gentleman from Wyoming to believe, in view of the fact that his State has tolerated the representation it has had for the last 10 or 12 years, that the people of the West give intelligent consideration to political problems. The gentleman complains that Colorado has no one on this floor to protest against the removal of the tariff on sugar. The reason for that, Mr. Chairman, is because the people of Colorado at the last election voted to instruct their Representatives to remove the tariff on sugar, and they voted in that way after a most thorough and exhaustive discussion of the question, and they voted that way because they were convinced that the removal of the tariff on sugar would not destroy the beet-sugar industry in that State or in any other State where God Almighty intended that men should raise sugar beets. And I submit that the people of Colorado, who have 17 sugar factories in operation, are better judges of the effect of the removal of the tariff on that great industry than is the gentleman from Wyoming [Mr. MONDELL], who has no sugar factory within the boundaries of his State.

I want to call the gentleman's attention to the fact that he has no sugar factory there, not because the people of Wyoming can not raise sugar beets, because in the irrigated sections of Wyoming they can raise sugar beets of as good a quality as they can in the irrigated sections of Colorado or Utah or Idaho, but you have no sugar factories in Wyoming because the Sugar Trust will not permit you to erect sugar factories in Wyoming. Evidently the Sugar Trust has felt that it could depend upon the vote of the gentleman from Wyoming without offering anything to the people in that State.

The reason that the people of Colorado are willing that this sugar tariff should be removed is because they want to save the beet-sugar industry from the malign influence of the Sugar Trust. Let us trace the story of the Sugar Trust's interest in beet-sugar factories.

Ten years ago, during the discussion of the Cuban reciprocity bill, the representatives of the beet-sugar interests came before Congress and declared that if you gave them 10 years more of protection the industry would be able to stand on its own legs. We have given them 10 years more of protection and, as a matter of fact, the industry is able to stand on its own legs. About 10 years ago the men who were then, and are now, in control of the beet-sugar industry in the Western States went down to New York and met with Mr. Havemeyer, of the Sugar Trust, and entered into a deal with him by which they sold to him the control of the beet-sugar industry in this country.

Mr. Morey, the president of the Great Western Sugar Co., and Mr. Boettcher, of the same concern, and a number of other sugar magnates, including Eccles, of Utah, have so testified in the case of the United States against the American Sugar Refining Co. They have told how they went down there; they have told of the price they got for a controlling interest in the stock; and then they have confessed that they entered into an arrangement with Mr. Havemeyer by which they became his western representatives. And the correspondence submitted in that hearing proves that Mr. Morey and Mr. Boettcher and the others were hired at salaries ranging from $10,000 to $15,000 a year to go back to the West and see to it that new sugar factories were not established there.

The correspondence is complete and conclusive. These men were the hired spies of the Sugar Trust. Their own letters prove that they went from point to point where they heard that sugar factories were about to be established, and that they used all their influence to prevent the development of the sugar industry.

When they found that the sentiment of a community was so strong that the people themselves were about to erect beet factories they went in and endeavored to secure the control of the majority of the stock, and in most instances they did secure the control of the majority of the stock.

As late as 12 or 18 months ago an attempt was made in the town of Durango, in the southwestern corner of my State, to establish a sugar factory. The farmers came forward and pledged the necessary acreage. The business men pledged generous subscriptions. A banker in that town undertook to finance the factory, and then the whole deal was called off. According to the sworn testimony which appears in the case of the United States against the American Sugar Refining Co., it appears that the banker was called up by the representative of the Sugar Trust and told to abandon the project. The trust's hired man simply put the screws on the Durango financial interests and prevented the establishment of this factory, which meant so much to southwestern Colorado.

That is only one of many instances. And, my friends, as a result of these experiences the people of Colorado and, I believe, the people throughout all that intermountain country, have come to the conclusion that the only way to put the beet-sugar industry on its feet is to demonstrate that it is a legitimate industry, that it can exist without the protection of a tariff, and that it will return to investors a fair rate of interest upon the investment. And that fact can be demonstrated.

We can raise in Colorado and in Utah and in Idaho and in most of those Western States as many pounds of sugar beets to the acre as can be raised anywhere, and they will average as high a percentage of saccharine matter as beets grown in any country on the face of the globe.

Our farmers get more for these high-grade beets than do the farmers of Germany. If our factories get their beets for as low a price as do the German factories why should not they be able to produce sugar at as low a figure? I know of no reason, and gentlemen have submitted no reason.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. Chairman, may I ask the gentleman a question?

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman yield?

Mr. KEATING. Yes.

Mr. AUSTIN. What, in your opinion, will be the effect of this change in the law placing sugar on the free list as to the price in the market to the consumer?

Mr. KEATING. The price to the consumer will drop the full amount of the tariff at once. Out of all this discussion concerning sugar one fact stands out, so that no man can question its accuracy, and that fact is that the tariff is added to the price of sugar and that the American consumer pays $115,000,000 more a year for his sugar than he would if the tariff were not added.

The other day the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. KELLEY] questioned my statement that there were no independent beet-sugar factories in this country, that there was an understanding or trade arrangement or selling arrangement—whatever you want to call it—by which the price of sugar was fixed in every town in this country.

He said that was not true, and I want to submit to him what I consider to be splendid authority, the statement of a beet-sugar man, R. A. Wagner, the president of the Wisconsin Sugar Co. Mr. Wagner also says that my statement is not true, and yet I want to read you his letter and submit it as absolute evidence that my statement is true. He says:

> The price of sugar is higher in Colorado because over three-quarters of the sugar used in this country is imported and refined at the seaboard and must pay rail freight to Colorado.

Think of that statement, when there is not a pound of sugar imported into Colorado, but all that is used there is produced within the State. Why, we export five or six times as much as we use in the State. Yet he says that every pound must pay rail freight to Colorado. Continuing, he says:

> In other words, the price is based on the cost of foreign sugar f. o. b. our seaboard, plus freight to point of consumption. The Colorado sugar producers naturally meet these conditions, and in order to get the business make their quotation a few points lower.

And that is true in every town in the United States. The trust, in determining how much it will charge the American people for refined sugar, ascertains first of all the cost of raw sugar at New York. Then it adds the tariff. Then it adds the cost of refining. Then it adds to that a profit, and then it adds to that the cost of the freight from New York to the point where the sugar is consumed, without regard to where the sugar may be produced. And, as I stated on the floor of this House the other day, the result is that down in Arizona, in the shadow of a sugar factory, where they are producing many times the amount of sugar consumed in the State, the people of Arizona pay $1.34 per hundred pounds freight for the sugar that never saw a box car, in addition to the tariff. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

Mr. MANN. I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. KELLEY].

Mr. KELLEY of Michigan. Mr. Chairman, under section 179 of this bill sugar, both raw and refined, is proposed to be put upon the free list at the end of three years. I have not risen to discuss the effect of the removal of the duty upon the sugar industry of the country for two reasons: First, it would not do much good, and, second, because my colleagues from Michigan and elsewhere have done and will further do so. But what I have risen to inquire about, in good faith and for information, is the effect of the provisions of the antidumping clause in this bill upon this section now under consideration.

As I understand it, practically all the sugar-producing countries of Europe levy an internal-revenue tax upon sugar for home consumption. When the manufacturer of sugar in Germany or any other European country where this internal-revenue tax is imposed invoices his sugar to the wholesaler for local consumption, of course such invoice includes the cost of his raw material, his labor cost, any government charges, organization charges, and profits. Necessarily such price will include any internal-revenue tax levied in those countries on local consumption. Now, the purpose of this antidumping clause, as I understand it, is to prevent foreign countries from selling in our markets cheaper than they sell to their own people. What I want to know is, under the provisions of this antidumping clause, how the sugar refiners of Europe are going to sell in our markets cheaper than they sell at home, and how are we to get cheaper sugar when the price of sugar there for home consumption is equal to or greater than the price of sugar to our consumers here at the present time? If they do sell sugar cheaper here than at home, the antidumping provision puts a 15 per cent duty upon the sugar so imported into the United States. And here is the secret of the whole business as it looks to me: This provision, coupled with the antidumping clause, enables the American refiner to get free raw sugar from Cuba and protects him from the sugar refiner of Europe by a 15 per cent duty.

Mr. HARDWICK rose.

Mr. MANN. Let the gentleman from Georgia answer in his own time.

Mr. KELLEY of Michigan. Will the gentleman from Georgia answer in his own time? That is the only question I have to ask. [Applause on the Republican side.]

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman yield back the remainder of his time?

Mr. KELLEY of Michigan. Yes.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I understood that the time which was not consumed would not be charged to either of us.

Mr. MANN. I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CRAMTON].

Mr. CRAMTON. Mr. Chairman, as I listened to the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. KEATING] in his demonstration of the reason that there were not more beet-sugar factories established in the State of Colorado or in Wyoming, it seemed to me that he had convinced me that the sugar-refining interests did not want the sugar factories and that at the present time they are doing what they can to keep them down. That is what I understand was the gentleman's argument. I understand he is about to vote for this bill, and thereby is going to try to strike a terrific blow at the sugar-refining interests. My friends, in striking that blow you are simply putting out of business all of the beet-sugar factories, and the sugar-refining people, instead of thinking that you have struck a terrific blow at them, will simply think that you have given them a slap on the wrist, or it may be a love pat.

The distinguished and affable gentleman from Alabama said that the duties were being reduced with a jack, and as we notice you are letting the sugar interests down with two bumps instead of one, and we are to wait three years to see how hard the last bump will be. As I recollect, in one county of my district—and I believe I have a right to speak here on behalf of the interests of my people—in one county, Huron, there were 10 years ago 6,000 tons a year of sugar beets produced. Now there are better than 96,000 tons a year, and at the same time the valuation of the farm lands has doubled, indicating that the farmer does get some benefit from protection. As I remember that and think of the disaster that is impending over these farmers in that county, it occurs to me that the jack that was instrumental in the reduction of the tariff in this bill was not the jackscrew that the gentleman has referred to, but that guardian angel of the Democratic Party, the blundering jackass. [Laughter.]

Now, Mr. Chairman, I am not going to presume to discuss further this bill, but I believe it will be proper here in the midst of all these discussions, at least some of them from men who are assuming their statistics, or at least picking them up out of dusty volumes, that it would only be fair to call to the witness stand for a minute one of the men who has got his living out of the business, trying to make something for himself and his family, and also to afford a market for the manufactures of the cities. Hence, I am going to read this letter from a farmer who is engaged in the production of sugar beets:

CROSWELL, MICH., April 26, 1913.

Hon. LOUIS C. CRAMTON,
Representative Seventh District, Michigan.

DEAR SIR: I earnestly beg of you to do all in your power to prevent the removal of duty from sugar. I think I express the sentiments of all the farmers of this beet-growing district.

On Friday, the 18th instant, the report was started that the Croswell plant of the Michigan Sugar Co. had turned down all contracts and was not going to operate the coming campaign. Well, you ought to have heard the "holler" that the farmers and the residents of Croswell put up until they found the report was not true.

Whenever two or more farmers met the question was, "What can we put in to take the place of sugar beets?" And I say nothing will take the place of sugar beets on Michigan farms to-day, on account of the intensive cultivation and deep-rooting system of the sugar beets, as they bring up fertility from the soil that we would get in no other way. It is the indirect benefit we get from the sugar beet that pays us more than direct benefit. We will take my own farm here for example.

When I bought this farm 10 years ago I harvested from 17 to 30 bushels of oats and about 1 ton of hay per acre. Now, after growing sugar beets for 7 years, I get from 50 to 60 bushels of oats and 2½ tons of hay, and from a worn-out farm I have built up a farm as good as any in Sanilac County.

I raise from 12 to 18 acres of beets on my 80-acre farm every year, and it is getting richer all the time—thanks to sugar beets.

As a cash-money crop the beets are ahead of any other crop we can grow. Of course, it costs more to grow an acre of beets than any other crop, but we get paid for it in the benefit it does our land. As for growing them for less per acre than we are getting now, I know there is not a farmer in this neighborhood that would contract for an acre. It costs us $20 per acre to get the hand labor done. This labor is done by the foreigners, and we are making good citizens and good farmers out of these foreigners; in fact, four of the families I have had in the past seven years have bought farms within 2 miles of my farm.

You gentlemen in the city are worrying about your foreign population. Let them go out into the country and help produce what you in the city want to eat.

The letter continues:

Our land has increased in value, in fertility, and we have made good citizens out of these foreigners, and it is all through sugar beets. When the farmer prospers everybody else prospers.

Thanking you in advance for anything you can do to help the farmer, I remain,

Yours, very truly, E. C. WESTBROOK,
Croswell, Sanilac County, Mich.

[Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, by the courtesy of Members on this side of the House I yield to the gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. BROUSSARD] an additional 10 minutes.

Mr. BROUSSARD. Mr. Chairman, I had hoped that, acting strictly within the rules of my own party, formulated and adopted in a Democratic caucus, I should have obtained from the Democratic leader time to present the case of the Democratic constituency that I represent here. I have sought in vain to get recognition which I think I am entitled to receive in a Democratic House. Failing in that, I want to express my appreciation of the courtesy extended to me by the leader of the Republican Party in permitting the constituency which I represent—which was 90 per cent in the last election in the votes of that district—in affording me an opportunity to present their case.

I have no desire to be an obstructionist or to criticize the leader of the Democratic Party, but it seems to me that one or the other thing ought to be done. If I come strictly within the rules of my party, opposing the measure as I do oppose it, I ought to get time from the leader of my own party. [Applause on the Republican side.] And if I can not get the time from him I ought to be excluded from the Democratic caucus, that the people at home may know that the Democratic leadership of this House, without personal reflection on the gentleman who now is here in control of the Democratic forces, may know whether they have friends here in their own party or whether they must appeal to the leaders of the other party in order to secure time to present their cause. [Applause on the Republican side.]

I am not going to deal with the subject at length. My personal relations with the gentleman who occupies the leadership of my party on the floor are very agreeable, and in my estimation he stands as high as does any other Member in this House [applause]; but I do desire to express in behalf of my constituents the thought that at least within the ranks of their party they should be able to get as frank a recognition as they get from the party for which they do not vote.

My time is so limited that I will not deal with that very much, but I make this acknowledgment to the gentleman leading the forces of the minority upon this floor, in order that he may understand not only my appreciation of the courtesy which he has extended to me, but the appreciation of the people whom I represent on this floor.

I want to get to the meat of this subject. I have long contended in this House that the destruction of the domestic sugar industry in this country will lead us back into conditions which existed long ago, when there was no domestic industry, and permit the refiners operating along the coast of the Atlantic Ocean, the Gulf, and the Pacific to dominate the American sugar market. I believe in the little time allotted to me I can demonstrate that the efforts of the gentlemen who are now using their means, their money, and efforts to secure, not free sugar, as some claim, but to secure very low duties, in order that they may, with the destruction of domestic sugar, dominate the American market and raise the price of sugar to the American consumer.

A man working for wages in this city brought me this morning this card which I hold in my hand. He got it from a package of sugar of 20 pounds, refined from cane sugar, coming from the Tropics, which he bought in the market on yesterday for 4½ cents a pound. That sugar was refined by the Spreckels Refining Co., which my friend from Georgia [Mr. HARDWICK] will at once recognize is the employer of Mr. Lowry, the man who has taken charge of the propaganda for free sugar, and it reads as follows:

Tariff on sugar is an advantage to the Sugar Trust and its allies only. With free raw sugar this sugar would cost you about 2 cents per pound less. Urge your Congressman to insist on the removal of the tariff on sugar.

This card was in a package of 20 pounds of sugar bought by this man, and he brought the card to me. He paid 4½ cents a pound for the sugar only yesterday. Now, let us look the facts squarely in the face. I once before took the position in the House that this refiner, including what he calls the Sugar Trust, which is generally accepted to mean the American Sugar Refinery, the Arbuckles and himself, were in alliance not to put sugar on the free list, but to so reduce the duty as to put the beet-sugar people in the West out of business, and also the sugar-cane people in Louisiana and Texas out of business, in order that together they might dominate the market. Their efforts have been directed, first, to control the beet production in the West by controlling the factories in the West. They have never worried about us. These refiners have robbed us of Louisiana, so far back that no man's memory runneth to the contrary.

They saw the beet industry developing in the West absorbing a large proportion of the sugar being supplied to the American people, and my friend from Colorado [Mr. KEATING], I believe, will agree with me, and they started first by trying to absorb a majority of the stock in the beet industry in the West. They failed in that. The industry developed too fast. In 10 years there was 1,500 per cent of production increase, and they had to abandon that plan of controlling the domestic sugar output. Then they adopted another plan—that of discouraging men from putting money into the development of the sugar industry in the West, in order that they might stop the increased production of sugar in continental United States. They failed in that. Then they appealed to Congress, not to put sugar on the free list, but to reduce the duty on sugar to the extent of destroying the industry, in order that they might again absorb the control of the American market and then lift the price of sugar to the consumer as best suited them. This card comes from Mr. Lowry. It is issued by his employer. It is printed in the same way that numerous articles you have received in your mail, each and every one of you, are printed. I have here a document published by him on the 12th day of April, this year, only a few days ago. In that document at the head of it, as has appeared on every recent document issued by him, including the two that came this morning, he does not advocate free sugar as appears upon this card, but a duty of 0.624 cent; but he advocates and he speaks for Spreckels, because the evidence is before at least three committees of the Congress—the Hardwick, the Ways and Means Committee of the House, and the Finance Committee of the Senate last year—that every bit of the expense incurred in the propaganda which he is conducting is paid out of the pocket of Spreckels, who claims, according to him, to be fighting the Sugar Trust. Mr. Atkins, the vice president of the American Sugar Refining Co., speaking before the Committee on Ways and Means the other day, said he did not want free sugar, but wanted to reduce the rates of duty. The Arbuckles took the same position before the Ways and Means Committee in my presence here recently.

Mr. HARDWICK. The Arbuckles were for free sugar.

Mr. BROUSSARD. They are not, any more than Spreckels is; and right at the head of every document that you receive now that calls for free sugar, as on this card, you will see printed:

The rate we propose, 0.624 cent per pound; raw sugar, 96 test, 0.60 cent per pound.

Sixty one-hundredths cent per pound means that every domestic refiner in this country, every domestic producer in this country, must go out of business. What follows? Domination of the American sugar market by the refiners.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. MANN. How much time have I remaining?

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman has 36 minutes.

Mr. BROUSSARD. May I get 10 minutes more?

Mr. MANN. I will yield the gentleman 10 minutes more in view of his very interesting statement and the courtesy of some Members here. [Applause.]

Mr. BROUSSARD. I thank the gentleman very much; 0.624 puts the domestic producer out of business, the beet and the sugar men in the West and South, and it gives the market entirely of at least 3,600,000 tons of sugar a year into the hands of the refiners. This card of the refiner pleads for free sugar and tells the consumer that he can get 2 cents per pound reduction on his sugar. These circular letters of this same refiner pleads for a small duty, just as the American and other refiners desire. Give just enough duty so we may put the domestic producer out of business and then what?

Let us see, by this document—I take the gentleman's very statement—paid for, printed, and posted, the efforts and time of the gentleman who issues it, paid for by Spreckels, the refiner. What does it show? It was alleged here when Cuban reciprocity was up, when the proposition was a reduction of 50 per cent, that the reduction was to help the Cuban planter. When the proposition of 20 per cent, which finally became law, was under consideration, the argument was that we owed that much to the Cuban planter. The bill had not been law more than 18 months when the Cuban planters were complaining to Congress that the refiners, including Spreckels, the employer of Lowry, was absorbing the entire 20 per cent which Congress supposed they had given the Cuban planter. Now, what appears here in this document? Lowry says this on the 12th of April:

Cuban sugars are to-day selling at 2 cents, cost and freight, and pay a tariff of 1.348 cents. San Domingo sugars (nonprivileged) are offered at 2.06 cents per pound, cost and freight New York, and pay a duty of 1.685 per pound.

We gave 20 per cent, according to this gentleman's statement—and I have verified the statements and I know they are correct—we gave 20 per cent to the Cuban planter. That sugar, bought in bond, upon which the refiner pays 1.348, sells for less than the sugar that is brought from San Domingo that pays 1.685. It is therefore evident to any man who will stop to look into the matter, that the Cuban planter does not get one cent of the 20 per cent reduction. Now, then, does the consumer of this country get the reduction? Will any man get up and say so? This card which my friend handed me gives the difference between the New York price of sugar that come from Cuba and the New York price of the sugar that come from San Domingo. Both sugars once refined sell for the same price to the consumer, and if the Cuban planter sells his sugar cheaper in bond to the refiner, including Mr. Spreckels, for less money—despite the 20 per cent preferential he has—than the San Domingo planter, who pays the full duty, it is evident that the Cuban planter gets none of the benefit of the 20 per cent reduction. On the other hand, if the consumer of this country can not distinguish between the Cuban and the San Domingo sugar after Mr. Spreckels has refined it, but must pay the same price for each, it is evident to any man who will think about it at all that the entire difference between the difference in duty on San Domingo and Cuban sugar is absorbed by the refiner. [Applause on the Republican side.]

The American producer does not get a cent of the 20 per cent reduction. He can not possibly get a cent of it in spite of this card, saying that free sugar would give my friend the same sugar which he purchased only yesterday at 4½ cents a pound for 2½ cents a pound. Besides, note the bunco game attempted upon the consumer. Free sugar, it urges on the card, while to you gentlemen of the House the same sympathetic gentleman tells you daily he does not really wish free sugar, but six hundred and four one-thousandths of a cent, so as to enable him at one and the same time to kill his competitors and permit him to continue to reap the benefits of the 20 per cent Cuban preferential.

As a matter of fact, the refiner buys his sugar cheaper from the man who produces it in Cuba than from the man producing sugar elsewhere, despite the advantage of 20 per cent on the rate of duty fixed in the law; but when he comes to sell it to you and to me he sells both for the same price, and thus absorbs the entire 20 per cent. This is not a novel proposition. Back in 1872 or 1873 this Republic made a treaty with the then Kingdom of Hawaii by which the sugar from those islands should come in free. This was done, so it was claimed, to reduce the price of sugar to American consumers on the Pacific coast. Three years after that treaty was enacted, in 1876, and for the entire term of the treaty this disproportion was maintained, that sugar sold on the Pacific coast at 10 cents a pound, with free raw sugar upon the Pacific coast, as against 7½ cents a pound on the Atlantic coast, with a duty of over 2 cents per pound.

This condition continued for over a quarter of a century until annexation. Nor did this condition cease until beet sugar began to be produced on the Pacific coast, when the refiner was forced to sell his sugars for less. It is the policy of the refiners of the country to destroy the domestic production when they will again dominate this market. Mark what I say. After sugar shall have become free you will find that the refiners in this country will be exerting their influence with whatever party may be in power, for these being in a trust, belong to no party, will be exerting their influence to permit them to have this Government send a party to represent this Republic at the Brussels conference, and when they shall have done that they will exclude from the United States European beet sugar in competition with themselves. Through this instrumentality in 1911, with a dearth of sugar on the American market, the Brussels conference, forbidding Russia to ship to us any portion of her 2,000,000 tons of surplus sugars, enables the refiners to lift the price of sugar to the American consumer to 7½ cents, and Spreckels was the worst offender of them all. They have absorbed the Cuban crop, they have absorbed the Hawaiian crop, they have absorbed the Porto Rican crop, and after they have done that, and they have no further competitors in continental United States and after, with your assistance, they shall have destroyed the beet sugar in the West and the cane sugar of the South, the price of sugar will rise, boosted by the refiners, as it was when they secured Hawaiian reciprocity. [Applause on the Republican side.] That is their purpose, judging from the evidence that appears in the three separate efforts of theirs.

Let me show you how much money they made out of Cuban reciprocity when they told us then, through a similar propaganda, conducted by the American then, much in the way that Spreckels conducts this one now. They have absorbed under that treaty, as I have just shown, and do now absorb, the entire 20 per cent reduction upon the tariff rate. There has been imported into this country since the Cuban reciprocity treaty from Cuba, in round figures, 28,000,000,000 pounds of sugar, and they have declared in dividends, that ought to have gone either to the Cuban planter or to the American consumer, over $96,000,000.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. BROUSSARD. I would like to get just two or three minutes more.

Mr. MANN. I yield to the gentleman five minutes more. [Applause on the Republican side.]

Mr. BROUSSARD. Thank you.

Now, what does that mean with regard to our trade with the islands which we own and with which we are in treaty relations? Let us take Hawaii. There was exported to Hawaii from the United States in 1911, $21,000,000 of goods. There was imported into the United States from Hawaii $40,250,000 worth of goods, of which sugar formed $36,500,000. Last year there was an increase of 30 per cent in this trade. What will become of that trade? If I am correctly informed by the resolution of boards of trade of Honolulu, Iloilo, and our islands of the Pacific; if I am correctly informed by the gentlemen who are here and have come here to protest against this freeing of sugar after three years, it means that that industry must go. There is no question about the destruction of the Louisiana industry. The gentleman from Georgia [Mr. HARDWICK], who investigated the Sugar Trust, says frankly that it must go at the end of three years. The gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] has been frank and fair enough in the debates in this House to say that in his judgment it must be abandoned; that $100,000,000 worth of investments in Louisiana must disappear as the result of this policy.

What will become of this trade of Hawaii? I will tell you what will become of it. There are 80,000 Japanese in Hawaii to-day. The moment you reduce this duty to the extent of making it impossible for any but the most favored plantations to continue, the moment you reduce it to the extent that these people must reduce the cost of production in order to be able to compete against the world on this market, that minute the American white man in Hawaii will move away from there and come back to his native country and engage in some other pursuit. What is left? The Jap is not going back to Japan. He is getting an outpost in the Pacific, 7,000 miles closer to the United States than before.

He will be a dominating influence; he will become the sole laborer. And do not make a mistake about it. The Japs understand the industry. They developed the sugar industry in Formosa after the Jap-Chinese War. They have sent men down to my State to learn from the agricultural college that furnishes the sugar chemists the world over to-day—sent men down there, as I know personally to learn that industry. And instead of continuing importers of sugar, they are preparing, according to our consular reports, to become exporters of sugar.

They will be the people who will handle those plantations in Hawaii, so well favored as to survive this disastrous legislation and to compete with the world with Japanese labor; and instead of that $40,000,000 of trade coming to the United States you will find that trade going to Japan, because the control of the islands will be in the hands of the Japanese, who will stand the cut in wages when the white man shall have been driven from those islands. [Applause on the Republican side.]

What about Porto Rico? Every cablegram, every resolution of every commercial body in the island of Porto Rico, as well as the statements of men whom I have seen here from Porto Rico, assures me that in consequence of the annexation of the island, bringing about American labor and methods of living in Porto Rico, they must go under with free sugar. And yet the trade with Porto Rico is thirty-three and three-quarters million dollars. The importations from the island to the United States are thirty-four and three-quarters million dollars, of which over twenty-five million dollars is sugar.

What else will occur there? We have been able to put our rice—our surplus rice, our low-grade rice, raised in Arkansas and Texas and Louisiana—into Porto Rico in competition with the world.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. BROUSSARD. It surely is not 10 minutes, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] yielded five minutes to the gentleman the last time.

Mr. BROUSSARD. Can I get a few minutes more—just two minutes?

Mr. MANN. I will yield to the gentleman three minutes. [Applause on the Republican side.]

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. BROUSSARD] is recognized for three minutes more.

Mr. BROUSSARD. Now, the grade of rice that is sold in Porto Rico is not consumed in the United States at all, and the loss of that part of the crop means the putting of that industry out of business in all three of the States I have mentioned. Why do I say that? Under the treaty with Cuba we have a 40 per cent preferential rate on the Cuban market, and the duty on rice in Cuba is more than 3 cents a pound. With 40 per cent advantage on that market we have never yet been able to ship from this country as much as a thousand sacks of rice to Cuba per year.

We are selling now in Porto Rico one-fifth of the entire production of rice in the United States, and of that grade that is not consumed in this country. This proposes to cut the duty 50 per cent. If we can not ship into Cuba, as we believed we could, when Cuban reciprocity was adopted, with a preferential of 40 per cent on 3 cents per pound duty, how can we ship a pound of rice into Porto Rico, with a cut of 50 per cent and a duty of only 1 cent per pound?

We shall lose that market, and not only will those people quit trading with us in rice but they will get their main supply of food from Europe, where they take the brown rice of the Orient, and in fitting it for market in Germany and Spain send their low-grade rice to the West Indies. Not only will we lose that market, so far as the rice produced in this country is concerned, but we will also lose the other part of that market, which represents this $34,750,000.

How about Cuba? We got last year from Cuba $60,000,000 worth of trade, and we shipped into Cuba $110,000,000 worth, of which $81,500,000 was sugar. And this last year there was an increase of 12 per cent, making over $90,000,000 worth of sugar.

The moment sugar is free, which is the basis of our treaty with Cuba, there will be no more incentive to continue the treaty, and of itself it must become inoperative and void. And that trade will go where the Cuban can get the best prices; we will lose most of it. All this trade with Hawaii and Porto Rico and Cuba must be lost absolutely as the result of free sugar at the end of three years.

Now, I did not want to discuss this matter very much further, except as to Cuba. Here is a report which has just been made, on March 24, by one of our consuls to the State Department regarding the sugar crop in Cuba. There is a great increase in the sugar production in Cuba this year, even as there was last year over the previous year. There will be over two million and a quarter tons of sugar produced, and yet the planters are in bad shape, says the consul, because the American refiner has already absorbed the 20 per cent preferential. [Applause on the Republican side.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I yield 15 minutes to the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. HARDWICK]. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

Mr. HARDWICK. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the committee, I want first to answer in my own time the question propounded by the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. KELLEY] which he would not let me answer in his time, although his language and matter invited an immediate answer.

The antidumping clause will have no effect whatever on the sugar situation, for the simple reason that if the gentleman will read the dumping clause carefully he will find that it applies only to a commodity upon which a duty is established, and it applies to no commodity that is on the free list, and so far as free sugar is concerned, it could have no effect.

It is possible that the dumping clause might have an effect during the three years of reduction, but my own belief is that when the Treasury Department construes the dumping clause in regard to refined sugar during these three years, it will be bound to hold that local taxes, in the nature of consumption or internal revenue taxes, will not be considered a part of the retail price in foreign countries.

Mr. KELLEY of Michigan. Would it not be better to amend the bill in harmony with my suggestion?

Mr. HARDWICK. No; I rather think not. I do not think it is necessary. Of course the main question is what the effect of the antidumping clause will be upon free sugar. It will have no effect whatever upon that, as I have explained, and gentlemen can form their own conclusions as to effect during the three-year period when we will have a duty that is reduced 25 per cent.

I want to cover, if I can, in my own way, some of the facts in reference to the sugar situation, and I am not trying to make a speech about it. But before I start to do that I want to say that if gentlemen will withhold their questions until I finish developing an idea, I will then yield to them as long as I have a second of time left. I will yield then to any gentleman on either side, so far as the time will permit.

As far as Louisiana cane sugar is concerned, before this debate began to-day many gentlemen on that side and on this side came to me and asked me if during the closing hours of the general debate the other night I did not admit that putting sugar on the free list would eventually put Louisiana out of the sugar-cane business. I did so admit, and I went even further than that, and I now repeat it. Even the present duty, in my judgment from an exhaustive examination of this question, could not keep Louisiana in the sugar business a dozen years.

Mr. BROUSSARD. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. HARDWICK. Yes; if it is a brief question.

Mr. BROUSSARD. Does the gentleman believe that in the three years before sugar becomes free under this bill the sugar industry can prosper, even for one more year or two more years?

Mr. HARDWICK. I do not think it can prosper during the three years, and I do not think the gentleman's industry is prospering now, and I will tell him why in a minute. Even if the American consumer would consent to keep the present duty, nobody knows better than my friend from Louisiana [Mr. BROUSSARD] that the Louisiana cane-sugar industry can not live anyhow. We are not murdering that industry. We are not sending it to an untimely and unmerited death. The God of nature is sending it there.

This is the best illustration I have ever seen, according to the way I view this situation, of a hothouse industry. The gentlemen in Louisiana have splendid rich lands upon which this sugar cane is grown. When I ask them why they do not plant those lands in cotton, they tell me that if they should plant cotton there the stalks would grow so high that they would have to use stepladders to pick the cotton out of the bolls. They can raise vegetables, grains, cotton, or anything, and they ought to raise something adapted to that climate and that soil, instead of raising this tropical product which they can not raise on even terms with other countries more adapted by nature to its cultivation.

Let us see if the figures do not prove that. The facts which I am going to give you during the course of these remarks are mainly taken from the report of a committee which is unanimous—agreed to by gentlemen on both sides of this Chamber—so there can be no question about its fairness, nor do I think there can be any reasonable question about its accuracy.

In Java raw cane sugar is being produced to-day at 1½ cents a pound, and in the Philippines at 1¾ cents a pound; and one of the greatest experts in all the world, Mr. Prinsen Gerliggs, of Holland, says that in the Philippines, when they get modern machinery there and when they get transportation to the sugar fields, the Philippines alone can produce all the sugar this world can consume at a lower price than any other country on earth. Already Philippine sugar delivered costs 1¾ cents per pound, but they have to pay tremendous transportation charges to get their sugar to the market. In Porto Rico, Cuba, and Hawaii the cost of production is about 2 cents a pound. Now, against that cost of production of raw sugar our friends from Louisiana are here with an industry which they admit can not produce raw sugar for less than 3¾ cents a pound, or almost double the cost. It seems to me that it is our bounden duty to save our Louisiana friends, both politically and industrially, from themselves—from the serious and fundamental mistake they are making—and to do so in the hope that they may soon turn to other industries better adapted to their splendid soil and therefore more profitable. They ask us to continue the policy that has been maintained in this country to the detriment of the American consumer these many years of taxing all the people in order that a few may maintain this hothoused industry. It is undemocratic, it is unfair, and it is unrighteous; and I stand to-day with that great commoner who came out of Virginia and founded a great party, to whom the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. STRINGER] so eloquently referred the other night as saying, in effect, that it was absolutely unjust and unrighteous to fasten a duty on any product which could not be permanently produced in this country, in the end, as cheap as anywhere else. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

Oh, but gentlemen speak of destroying the industry. In a meeting held in New Orleans on the 12th of November, 1912, after our first free-sugar bill had passed the House, there were resolutions adopted and speeches made. Some of those speeches are not very complimentary either to my friend from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] or to myself, but we will let that pass. They did pass a resolution stating the condition of the industry, so far as the capital invested therein was concerned. What did they say? They said that the industry had invested in it $119,000,000, and they itemized it—$70,000,000 in land, $10,000,000 in mules, $35,000,000 in factories, $2,000,000 in farm implements, $2,000,000 in plantation railroads. Now, we are not going to confiscate the land, and it is land on which they can raise better cotton than we can anywhere else. We are not going to do anything with the mules, and as to confiscating the machinery, they can sell that like they would any secondhand stuff.

Mr. BROUSSARD. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HARDWICK. Yes.

Mr. BROUSSARD. To whom shall we sell the machinery that is not worth a thing to any man?

Mr. HARDWICK. I do not know; you could sell it to Cuba or the Philippines.

Mr. BROUSSARD. No; we could not; their system is different.

Mr. HARDWICK. The gentleman said they came over here and got machinery and learned our methods. But I can not waste time on that minor detail. You can probably get something for it. So they ask us to preserve an industry that represents a total investment of thirty-odd million dollars, and to do it they want to tax the American people $140,000,000 a year. It is not Democratic and it is not right. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

Mr. BROUSSARD. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HARDWICK. Not just now.

Mr. BROUSSARD. Just one question.

Mr. HARDWICK. Very well.

Mr. BROUSSARD. Has the gentleman read Mr. Lowry's statement this morning?

Mr. HARDWICK. Yes.

Mr. BROUSSARD. And he says the consumer does not get it; the refiner gets it.

Mr. HARDWICK. I will tell the gentleman before we pass that point that the gentleman's description of what happened when the Cuban reciprocity bill passed is entirely wrong and is absolutely incorrect. Here is what happened: The Cuban reciprocity act passed and the refiners obtained 6 cents per 100 pounds benefit from the Cuban preferential, Cuba 10 cents per 100 pounds, and the American consumer 18 cents a hundred pounds. That is the estimate of the best expert in the country.

Mr. BROUSSARD. Who?

Mr. HARDWICK. Mr. Wallace P. Willett. The gentleman will admit that Mr. Willett is one of the best sugar experts in the country?

Mr. BROUSSARD. Yes.

Mr. HARDWICK. That is what he swore to, and I will refer the gentleman to pages 3551 and 3741 of the hearings of the special committee, and he will find that that is exactly what he swore to. I tell you what I thought would happen when we passed the bill. I thought the Cubans would get right under the tariff wall just as the Hawaiians did, and take the full benefit of the duty against the rest of the world, at the expense of the American consumer. They could not do it. Why? Because the refiners had loaned them money and were pressing them to pay the debt. So that the refiners were able to take from them 24 cents per 100 pounds of the reduction of 20 per cent, leaving to the Cuban planters the remaining 10 cents per 100 pounds.

The refiners would have kept all of this 24 cents if they had been in combination, as the gentleman indicated, but competition was so keen between them that for every 10 cents they kept they gave the American people 18 cents. I did not expect when I voted for the bill to get anything in the way of reduction for the American consumer, but in point of fact did get the 18 cents reduction, as I have stated.

As far as the Hawaiian business is concerned, of course, when we put Hawaii within the tariff walls and kept up that tariff wall against the balance of the world the Hawaiians just said, "You can not buy your sugar from Germany or Java or anywhere else without the duty added, and you will have to pay us the amount of the duty," and that answers the gentleman's whole argument upon that point. The gentleman from Louisiana or some other gentleman spoke about American labor. If he will examine the sworn evidence—I believe my friend from Louisiana made some statement about labor?

Mr. BROUSSARD. No.

Mr. HARDWICK. I am glad the gentleman did not, because if he will examine the evidence in this case he will find that, according to what his own people swore before the special committee, they pay for field labor from 75 to 85 cents a day for men and a dollar a day in the harvest time, and for women 75 cents a day.

Mr. BROUSSARD. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HARDWICK. Not at this time.

Mr. BROUSSARD. Oh, the gentleman wants to be fair.

Mr. HARDWICK. I am absolutely accurate in that statement. It is taken from pages 1816 and 1817 of the hearings of the special committee.

Mr. BROUSSARD. But the Louisiana people furnish these people with homes and fuel.

Mr. HARDWICK. In Cuba, where they furnish all these things, too——

Mr. BROUSSARD. Oh, they do not. I beg the gentleman's pardon. I have been there and his committee has not. They sleep in the open—in the cane fields.

Mr. HARDWICK. I do not wonder that the gentleman does not want me to emphasize this matter. In Cuba they are paying from $1 to $1.25 a day for the same class of labor. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

Mr. BROUSSARD. But the gentleman wants to be fair.

Mr. HARDWICK. Yes; but I have not the time now to permit the gentleman to take it all up. Please do not bother me now. In Cuba the factory cost is about the same as it is in America. The labor cost of manufacturing a pound of cane or beet sugar is not very much. It costs about 14 cents a hundred pounds; and I do not think they need any protection, as far as the factories go, either beet or cane, because of factory labor.

Mr. BROUSSARD. That is where the trust comes in.

Mr. HARDWICK. Besides that, in Louisiana the sucrose content of the cane is from 6 to 7 per cent. In Hawaii it is from 14 to 15 per cent. In Cuba it is from 10 to 12 per cent and sometimes 14. In Louisiana they plant almost every year, and they have to cut the cane in October in order to keep the frost from getting it. In Cuba and Java and these other countries the frost never bothers, and they do not have to plant more than once in 10 years. It is perfectly apparent why Louisiana can not continue this industry. It is not the unkindness of the Democratic Party. It is simply the decree of the God of nature. It ought never to have been attempted in that climate. It never has been successful. The only time in its history that it has ever paid was during those palmy days to them, to which the gentleman referred, when the people were paying 7 and 8 and 10 cents a pound for sugar.

I want to give a moment now to the beet-sugar factories. That is not the situation as far as the beet-sugar factories are concerned. There are not a dozen fairly well organized factories in this country that can not live and make more than 10 per cent on the investment under this law, and I defy any man to disprove it in this Chamber or elsewhere.

Mr. FORDNEY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HARDWICK. Let me call attention to some of the facts and then I will yield. There are 76 beet-sugar factories in the country—17 in the State of Colorado, 16 in Michigan, 13 in California, 6 in Utah, 5 in the State of Idaho, 5 in the State of Ohio, 4 in Wisconsin, 2 in Nebraska, and 1 in each of the following States: Montana, Minnesota, Kansas, Iowa, Illinois, Indiana, and Arizona. The total capital of these 76 beet-sugar factories is $141,410,000, according to the last statement they rendered. Their total capacity for slicing beets per day in tons is 63,550. That is the total capacity of them all, and that, according to the admissions of these same men when they were in effect pleading for continued high duties, does not mean a real investment of more than sixty-three and a half million dollars in these entire 76 factories. In the report in which the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. FORDNEY] agreed with me, we valued them all at sixty million, not quite as much as I have estimated it here to-day.

Say $63,000,000 is the total of factory valuations in this country. So, taking $39,000,000 in cane and $63,000,000 in beet factories you have a total real capital of about $100,000,000 invested in this industry, which every year levies tribute on the great masses in this country under the tariff of from $125,000,000 to $141,000,000, in order that a few may be "protected" at the expense of all.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I yield the gentleman five minutes additional.

Mr. FORDNEY. Will the gentleman now permit a question?

Mr. HARDWICK. Let me go on; not at present. I will yield later, if possible.

Mr. FORDNEY. The gentleman will yield before his time has expired?

Mr. HARDWICK. If I possibly can. Now, I want to take three of the great beet-sugar companies as examples and show how they are capitalized and organized and why they are pleading for this continued high protection. I will take first the Great Western Sugar Co., one to which reference has been made here to-day. It was started in 1906, chartered under the laws of New Jersey—and that was before the regeneration of New Jersey [laughter and applause on the Democratic side]—with a capital of $30,000,000, one-half common and one-half preferred stock, the preferred representing to a certain extent real value and the common in every instance promoters' profits—water, pure and simple. In five years that company has accumulated on its real investment of about $12,000,000, $9,000,000 surplus, besides paying 12 per cent interest on the real capital invested—7 per cent on the preferred stock and 5 per cent on the common. They have done pretty well. Do you know why? Because they can make sugar there in the best factories of that concern within a few points of the cost in Germany. Let us take another one, the American Beet, a California concern. Our friend Mr. Oxnard, of whom we have all heard in connection with sugar, is at the head of it, or was until recently. The American Beet Sugar Co. has a capital of $5,000,000 preferred and $15,000,000 common; real value according to the slicing capacity of this factory about $5,000,000 and the $15,000,000 common—water—and yet in 1911 it paid 6 per cent profit on the actual investment of preferred stock and passed a surplus of $1,643,659, a dividend of 10.95 per cent on water pure and simple; and in 1912 paid 6 per cent on its preferred and laid up a surplus that would have paid a dividend of 13.5 per cent on its common. So that this common stock, representing no investment save a capitalization of the tariff, paid 10.95 per cent in 1911 and 13.5 per cent in 1912. Let us next take the Michigan Co. The Michigan Sugar Co. was capitalized originally at $9,000,000, one-half common and one-half preferred—one half possible value, the other half certainly water—and the gentleman agreed to that in the report, too. [Laughter.] It was organized in 1906 with a little over 5,000 tons slicing capacity for all these factories, and it has paid during all the time 6 per cent on its preferred stock, representing value, and 7 per cent on the common stock, or water, a total of 13 per cent dividends per year on its actual invested capital; and in 1910, besides paying this dividend, it declared a stock dividend of $2,000,000 and passed $1,000,000 to its surplus.

And if we can believe the American Sugar Industry, a paper published in Detroit, Mich., the common stock, that in the beginning represented nothing on God's earth but water and a capitalization of the tariff, was quoted in March, 1912, at $121 a share, which was $1 more than the value of the preferred stock. [Applause on the Democratic side.] These are the lusty infants that will perish unless we give them protection. Oh, but they say: "We can not stand the foreign competition without a tariff." Let us see. The German cost of production for beet sugar is 2.41 cents a pound; the best factories of the great West, 2.56. Spreckels, according to his own statement—I mean John D. Spreckels this time, and not Mr. C. A. Spreckels, whom they abuse simply because he carries on a propaganda in the interest of the American consumer as well as himself for free sugar. What does John D. Spreckels say on this subject? He says he produces it for 2.70 cents a pound. What else? The best factory of the Oxnard plant produces it for about 2.80 cents; so I say when you remember the German cost is 2.41 cents and when you consider the ocean freight charges and insurance, 14 points, from Germany to New York, and remember that it is not disputed that every one of those factories has about 80 or 90 points in freight-rate protection before any sugar can reach the territory they can supply, you will readily see that these beet factories have "protection" of about 1 cent per pound entirely independent of all tariff duty, which more than equalizes any difference in cost of production between foreign and domestic beet sugar and about equalizes the difference in cost of production between domestic beet and foreign cane.

It is doubtless true that without a duty these beet factories will not be able to continue to pay excessive dividends on vast issues of watered stocks, but they will be able to pay a good dividend on the actual investment, and that without reducing the price they pay to the farmer for his beets, for to-day our beet factories pay the farmer rather less than more than the German factories pay for beets, though the German tariff duty is only about one-fourth as high as the present American duty. But gentlemen insist that the American consumer will get no benefit from the reduction or removal of the duty.

I deny it. I deny it on the authority of history, on the authority of the sworn evidence from the highest protectionists in this land. What happened? In 1890, when you put sugar on the free list in the McKinley bill, and you did not think it was so awful then, according to the sworn testimony of Mr. Willett, sugar went down to the full extent of the reduction in duty—it went down that extent within a few days, and it remained that much lower in price during the time the McKinley bill was in force. Mr. Willett proved by tables that every time the United States has reduced the duty on sugar the price went down just that much. Not only that, but Mr. C. A. Spreckels; Mr. Jameson, of Arbuckle Bros.; Mr. H. A. Oxnard; Mr. Atkins; and every other sugar man examined by your committee gave evidence to the same effect. But it is insisted that after all the duty is removed the refiners will combine and raise the price of sugar——

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I yield two minutes more to the gentleman.

Mr. FORDNEY. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HARDWICK. I have only a moment. The contention is absurd. The refiners now have no substantial domestic competition, except from each other. The Louisiana cane people have never been competitors of the trust. They furnish it with its raw material and have always been at its mercy and under its thumb. The beet people might be competitors, but the American Sugar Refining Co. owns nearly half of all their stock, and I do not think under those circumstances there is liable to be any serious competition between people who have that sort of business relations with each other. Not only that, but you talk about reducing the total of the world's production of sugar by the destruction of the domestic supply. What is our total domestic production? A few hundred thousand tons out of a total world production of about seventeen and one-half or eighteen million tons. They say competition will be forever destroyed if the amount of sugar that competes for our markets is all the sugar of the world, rather than the small amount, relatively, that we produce ourselves. A most remarkable argument, but one I can not subscribe to; besides, there is no limit to the world's production of sugar in favorable climates. It is the product of sunshine and air, and can be produced in limitless quantity.

So long as the Brussels convention continues to authorize the imposition of a duty of about a half cent per pound on imported sugar in European countries the cane sugar of every tropical country on earth will find in our country their largest and best market, unfettered by discriminatory duties and open to the sugars of all the world on even terms, and will out of self-interest seek our markets first and will furnish us with an abundant supply of sugar at a much lower price than it can be obtained anywhere else on earth. This means a great saving of many millions of dollars per year to the American consumer. It means sugar about 2 cents per pound cheaper than it could be bought if the duty remained. It means the greatest good for the greatest number, which is or ought to be the one object of American statesmanship. I therefore earnestly urge upon the committee the support of this schedule. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

Mr. MANN. I yield one minute to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. FORDNEY].

Mr. FORDNEY. In the time limited, let me say, Mr. Chairman, that the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. HARDWICK] has not a particle of evidence presented to the Hardwick investigation committee to the effect that there is a beet-sugar factory in the United States that ever produced a pound of sugar below 2.7 cents—none except the factory he referred to in California; whereas in the State of Michigan the average cost of production of beet sugar is 3.54 cents per pound. You speak about the price of sugar being lower in this country under the McKinley law. It is true; but the Government paid 2 cents bounty at that time, and it is true that the consumers of this country received cheap sugar.

You speak about the Michigan Sugar Co. stock being watered. You should tell the gentlemen of this House that when that company was organized in 1906 it purchased eight sugar factories in that State and put in additional money to pay outstanding debts, and new stock was issued for all the new money that had been put into those factories. It was not watered stock. Every dollar of it was money—100 cents on the dollar. Why do you not state the facts? [Applause on the Republican side.]

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, how much time is remaining on the two sides?

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] has 8 minutes and the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] 17 minutes remaining.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Hawaii [Mr. KALANIANAOLE].

Mr. KALANIANAOLE. Mr. Chairman, I will not attempt to go into the facts and figures on sugar, but will say a few words as to the effect of free sugar on Hawaii and especially upon its citizenship. Before we were annexed to this country we were a prosperous nation, and in the belief that that prosperity would continue, Hawaii voluntarily ceded its sovereignty to this country.

Yet, to-day Congress is proposing in three years' time to enact free sugar, thereby annihilating Hawaii's chief industry, the source of its prosperity.

Hawaii, unfortunately, is a one-industry country. The sugar industry was begun 40 or 50 years ago by the missionaries sent there from this country, and since its establishment there has been a continuous growth. Should the sugar industry be wiped out it will be impossible to substitute any other industry in its place.

The effect of this legislation on the citizenship of Hawaii will be to turn Hawaii over into the hands of the Asiatics. No people have done more—and I say this earnestly—since annexation than the people of Hawaii to Americanize that country. Hawaii has expended millions of dollars to bring Europeans into the Territory to replace the Asiatics that are there. And yet when you have enacted this law, placing sugar on the free list, gentlemen, you place Hawaii, the paradise of the Pacific, under Asiatic control. [Applause on the Republican side.]

We Hawaiians have a majority of votes there; and yet, gentlemen, we have brought into that country thousands upon thousands of white people. Why? To stay in that land and make it an American community. To-day you are attempting to stop the further bringing of those white people from Europe through the attempted enactment of new immigration laws. Now, you are jeopardizing our hopes of Americanizing those islands through this radical policy of reduction.

Gentlemen, it is hard for the people of Hawaii, but they are Americans to-day, and they must bear the consequences. We are not grumbling, but we do ask for justice at the hands of the Federal Government. Under the treaty between this country and Hawaii you guaranteed to us justice and a continuance of that same prosperity that we had before we joined our fortunes with this country. We of Hawaii ask for justice. [Applause on the Republican side.]

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I yield three minutes to the gentleman from California [Mr. CURRY].

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from California [Mr. CURRY] is recognized for three minutes.

Mr. CURRY. Mr. Chairman, the manufacturers of cane sugar are said to be operating under an international agreement, with headquarters at Berlin and a substation at New York. They can take care of themselves under free trade, whether it comes now or three years hence. But the Lord have mercy on the sugar planter of Louisiana that is being betrayed in the house of his friends!

This bill gives the beet-sugar industry of the United States, the only competitor of the Sugar Trust, three years' notice to wind up its affairs and get out of business. It has been stated on this floor that the beet-sugar industry is in the hands of the trust. So far as California is concerned, the trust has nothing whatever to do with any of the 13 factories in that State. They are absolutely independent. They have to fight the Sugar Trust, and they have reduced the price of sugar.

It has cost us on the average during the past three years $2.88½ a hundred to manufacture beet sugar in California, and yet to-day that sugar is transported to New York and sold for $4.06 a hundred. If it was not for the competition of the beet-sugar factories and the beet sugar in this country, the price of sugar would be nearly twice as high as it is at the present time, and the American consumer of sugar would be absolutely in the power and at the mercy of the Cane-Sugar Trust, which is international and has only the beet-sugar people to fear. [Applause on the Republican side.]

Mr. MANN. I yield one minute to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. WILLIS].

Mr. WILLIS. Mr. Chairman, in the minute I have I simply want to utter some words of consolation for the benefit of my friend from Louisiana [Mr. BROUSSARD]. I want to read to him what Mr. Spreckels says about this proposed tariff on sugar. He says:

> I am much pleased with the proposed reduction in the sugar tariff. Personally I would have liked to see free sugar declared at once, as there is no need of protection for the sugar-refining industry.

I call the attention of gentlemen to the fact that this bill is in the interest of the great sugar refiners of this country. Why is it that every time Mr. Spreckels, Mr. Atkins, Mr. Heike, or Mr. Gilmore, the representatives of the great sugar trusts in this country, have spoken they have spoken in favor of free sugar? Why is it, I say? Because they want the beet-sugar industry of this country destroyed so that they can levy their tribute upon every pound of sugar that comes into this country. And then Mr. Spreckels is good enough to say that the only reason why three years is allowed for the tariff on sugar to be done away with is to give the Louisiana planters time to settle up their affairs.

It is pleasant to the farmers who raise sugar beets and sugar cane to have notice that they are to be executed in three years. [Applause on the Republican side.]

On this important subject of the duty on sugar the Fremont Chamber of Commerce recently adopted the following resolutions:

> FREMONT CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.
> Fremont, Ohio.
>
> Resolutions.
>
> Resolved by the Chamber of Commerce of the City of Fremont, Ohio, That we protest against any legislation by Congress removing the duty on sugar; and believing that the beet-sugar industry, recently started and now being developed, is one of very great importance to the people of this country, and that the removal of the present duty on foreign sugar at this time is calculated to and will destroy this important industry and will result in no appreciable benefit to the consumer in the way of cheaper sugar, we therefore most earnestly and respectfully request that the Senators and Members in Congress from Ohio oppose any measure interfering with the present rate of duty on imported sugar, and that they most earnestly oppose any measure or legislation placing sugar on the free list.
>
> Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be transmitted to each of the Senators and Members in Congress from Ohio.
>
> The foregoing resolutions were adopted by the Chamber of Commerce of the city of Fremont at its meeting held on March 12, 1913.
>
> THE FREMONT CHAMBER OF COMMERCE,
> By W. G. WAITT, its President.
>
> Attest:
> CARROLL COX, Secretary.

The Ohio Farmer, a representative agricultural paper of the State of Ohio, has the following editorial in its issue of February 15, 1913:

> FREE SUGAR.
>
> The people of the United States should wake up to the real importance of the attempt to remove the tariff on sugar. The plea is made that this tariff lays a burden on everyone who eats sugar. That means everybody. If the removal of the duty would mean cheaper sugar, the fight would be a just one. But free sugar would not necessarily mean cheaper sugar, while it would mean wiping out the American sugar interests—both beet and cane—and make us dependent upon the foreign producers and the great American refiners—the Sugar Trust—with nothing to hold them in check. The following quotation from a letter recently received at this office is significant:

"I was in Washington attending the hearing on sugar before the Ways and Means Committee, and it does look like the legislation was bound to go through that will kill the sugar interests of the United States, including both beet and Louisiana cane; and the parties that are doing it are the three sugar refineries of the United States. If the people think that they are going to get cheaper sugar by putting into the hands of these people the entire sugar bill of the Nation, they will wake up some day and find themselves mistaken. Besides all of this, I can absolutely prove that growing beets increases the yield of everything that is grown on the same soil for four years thereafter. * * * The tremendous yields of continental Europe come from the use of a root crop in the rotation."

The beet-sugar makers of the central West have been able to furnish dangerous competition to the sugar refiners, and that is the reason for the powerful attempt to put sugar on the free list. The farmers of the central West are beginning to realize what they can do if they have a sale for the sugar beet. They should bring all of the pressure that they can exert to induce their representatives to kill the free-sugar bill. It would work great damage to the American sugar interests without permanently benefiting the general public.

The Findlay Morning Republican comments editorially in its issue of January 16, 1913, and says:

[From the Findlay Republican, Jan. 16, 1913.]

BEET-SUGAR INDUSTRY.

One of the Ohio and Hancock County industries which is in danger of being hurt by the revision of the tariff by the Democrats, if they carry out their announced program, is the beet-sugar industry. Perhaps no other product of the farm, unless it be wool, is in such imminent danger, and certainly a reduction of the tariff on no other product would bring such immediate and telling results to our community.

The possibilities of this industry are not generally understood by the public, but the records show that Ohio alone consumes $20,000,000 worth of sugar per year, while she produces only about $8,000,000 worth. She now has only 5 factories, but those who are in position to know state that we could support 30 factories, which would mean that Ohio could not only supply her own sugar but could supply the demand from other States which do not produce any, to the extent of $25,000,000 annually.

The five factories now in operation in the State paid last year to the farmers for beets more than $2,500,000, to the railroads for transportation of the product $600,000, and for wages and salaries $450,000. It is estimated that the farmers' profits were from $30 to $70 per acre in addition to the increased fertility of the soil which comes from a proper rotation of sugar beets with other crops. Careful experimentation has demonstrated that by proper rotation of crops the yield of corn has been increased 27.6 per cent, oats 48 per cent, barley 52 per cent, wheat 49 per cent, and potatoes 46 per cent since the sugar beet has been included in the plan of rotation over the yield in former years before the introduction of the sugar beet. If this be true, and it is claimed to have been carefully worked out by experts, then the growing of sugar beets is not only a direct profit producer for the farmer, but indirectly it is the best crop he can grow.

Taking all these facts into consideration, it would be a calamity to remove the tariff from sugar in order to help out the cane-sugar refiners, who largely import their raw materials from Cuba and whose sole object in advocating free sugar is first to check and eventually to stamp out the beet-sugar industry in this country. If they can not get free raw sugar, then they want to get such a material reduction as would crush out the domestic industry, or at least stop the building of additional factories.

This is a vital matter for the farmers of Hancock and surrounding counties, which constitutes one of the most productive fields for the growing of sugar beets.

On April 3, 1913, the editor of the Mount Victory (Ohio) Observer writes as follows:

OHIO CAN GROW NATION'S SUGAR—1 ACRE IN 10 OF IMPROVED LAND WOULD YIELD THIS RESULT—GOVERNMENT IS AUTHORITY—MILLIONS NOW SENT ABROAD TO PAY FOR FOREIGN-GROWN SUGAR SHOULD BE PUT INTO POCKETS OF AMERICAN FARMERS INSTEAD, IT IS DECLARED.

That the average American consumes 82 pounds of sugar each year; that only 10 pounds of this ration are now produced in this country; that vast sums are now sent abroad to pay for imported sugar which should be kept at home and put into the pockets of American farmers; and that Ohio alone could produce all the sugar required by the Nation—and with a tremendous addition to the wealth and prosperity of the State—are some of the striking facts set forth in a recent report of the Department of Agriculture at Washington on the sugar industry of the United States.

That it would be a simple matter for the United States to produce at home the sugar now brought from abroad is shown by the department's report that if 2,000,000 acres of land were devoted to sugar-beet culture the Nation would be entirely free from dependence upon foreign-grown sugar. As the present acreage devoted to this crop is about 500,000, this means that four times the land now utilized for sugar-beet growing should be devoted to this purpose in order to avoid the tribute which the American people are now paying to foreigners for their sugar.

On the other hand the department produces figures to show that there are 274,000,000 acres of improved land in the 19 States in which it has been demonstrated that sugar beets may be grown successfully.

"If one farmer in four in these States," reads the report, "were to plant a 3-acre patch and give it the care that could readily be bestowed upon so small a plot it would be unnecessary for us to buy foreign sugar. Two-thirds of 1 per cent of the improved land in this area is all that would be required to accomplish this result. More than that acreage lies idle, absolutely unused, every year. Any one of the States of Illinois, Iowa, Kansas, Missouri, Minnesota, Nebraska, and Ohio could produce all this sugar and then have the beets occur only once in a 10-year rotation; several others could do it alone on a five-year rotation."

In Europe, it is pointed out, the importance of a hoed root crop and of sugar beets as the most desirable of such crops is fully recognized. In fact, in the leases for many German and Austrian farms it is provided that a certain proportion of the land must be planted in sugar beets each year. As showing how the various European governments have done everything in their power to encourage sugar-beet growing, on account of its influence in increasing agricultural production, the report says:

"It will be seen that the culture of the sugar beet plays a very prominent rôle in the agriculture of northern Europe and that it occupies a correspondingly prominent place in the national economy. The industry from its foundation has been fostered by national legislation in every country of Europe. It is thoroughly protected from the competition of the cheaply produced tropical sugars and is by means of excise taxes made to yield large sums for the support of the governments. Europe as a whole derives $200,000,000 per annum from sugar taxes, yet this is a minor factor in its national economy in comparison with the wealth added by the beet-sugar industry, the money saved by the home production of all the sugar consumed, the receipts from heavy exports of sugar, the employment of many thousands of people, and the indirect agricultural benefits which have accrued from beet culture."

Applying the experience of Europe to conditions in the United States, the report continues:

"With due recognition of the fundamental agricultural principles involved and with adequate tariff protection, the conditions in the near future will become favorable for a very rapid expansion of the beet-sugar industry in the United States. If this is to be of the greatest good to the country at large the raising of the beets should not be developed as a specialized business, but should be undertaken in limited acreages by general farmers and in rotation with grains and other crops. The indirect benefits of beet culture can thereby be fully realized."

It is the recognition of the great saving that would result to the American people from growing their own supply of sugar, the widespread benefits of sugar-beet culture in adding to the agricultural wealth of the country, and the vital necessity of increasing the acreage output of American farms in order to halt the rapid rise in the cost of living that has induced officials of the Department of Agriculture, including Secretary Wilson and Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, regardless of politics, to appear before Congress and to urge that no reduction should be made in the present tariff on foreign sugar that would destroy or hamper the progress of the beet-sugar industry in this country.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I believe I have 11 minutes remaining, and the gentleman from Alabama has 8 minutes remaining in the debate.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois has 11 minutes and the gentleman from Alabama has 8 minutes.

Mr. MANN. The gentleman from Michigan [Mr. FORDNEY] has an amendment pending which I would like to have disposed of before the debate is concluded.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, my understanding was that all amendments were to be disposed of after the debate was concluded, but I understand why the gentleman wishes this disposed of at this time, and I have no objection to a vote on it now.

The CHAIRMAN. What amendment is that?

Mr. MANN. The amendment offered by the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. FORDNEY]. I ask for a vote on that.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. That only relates to this one amendment.

Mr. PAYNE. Let it be reported.

Mr. MANN. I ask to have it reported again. Gentlemen are asking to have it reported.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment proposed by the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. FORDNEY]. If there be no objection, that amendment will be again reported.

There was no objection.

The amendment of Mr. FORDNEY was read, as follows:

Strike out paragraphs 179 and 180, pages 47 and 48, and substitute the following:

"179. That from and after March 1, 1914, there shall be levied, collected, and paid upon sugars, tank bottoms, sirups of cane juice, melada, concentrated melada, concrete and concentrated molasses, testing by the polariscope not above 75 degrees, ninety-five one hundredths of 1 cent per pound, and for each additional degree shown by the polariscope test twenty-six one thousandths of 1 cent per pound additional, and fractions of a degree in proportion; molasses testing not above 40 degrees, 20 per cent ad valorem; testing above 40 degrees and not above 56 degrees, 3 cents per gallon; testing above 56 degrees, 6 cents per gallon; sugar drainings and sugar sweepings shall be subject to duty as molasses or sugar, as the case may be, according to polariscope test: Provided, That every bag, barrel, or parcel in which sugar testing by the polariscope less than 99 degrees is packed shall be plainly branded by the manufacturer or refiner thereof with the name of such manufacturer or refiner, and the polariscope test of the sugar therein contained, accurately, within one-half of 1 degree, and a failure to brand any such bag, barrel, or parcel as herein required shall be deemed and taken to be a misbranding of food within the meaning of the act of June 30, 1906, entitled 'An act for preventing the manufacture, sale, or transportation of adulterated or misbranded or poisonous or deleterious foods, drugs, medicines, and liquors, and for regulating traffic therein, and for other purposes.' And the requirements of this proviso shall not apply to any sugar shipped or delivered to a refiner to be refined before entering into consumption.

"180. Maple sugar and maple sirup, 4 cents per pound; glucose or grape sugar, 1½ cents per pound; sugar cane in its natural state or unmanufactured, 20 per cent ad valorem; sugar cane, defecated, shredded, artificially dried, or which has been subjected to any manufacturing or other process, 50 per cent ad valorem."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment which has just been read.

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I yield two minutes to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. FOWLER].

Mr. FOWLER. Mr. Chairman, we are pledged by the Baltimore platform to place on the free list all articles produced by the trusts of this country.

The people, outraged by the systematic increase of prices by these unlawful combinations, gave us their confidence in the November election of 1912. They gave us an overwhelming majority in this House, a safe majority in the Senate, and placed in the White House a President pledged to this platform. They have commissioned us with ample authority to place on the statute books a law in harmony with our pledges. We are now writing that law, and I maintain that it is our duty to see that no trust-made article is sheltered by a protective duty in our tariff bill when it leaves this House for the Senate. It will not do to say that the Senate will correct our mistakes. Our bill should be free from error, so that the Senate will have nothing to do but to ratify our action.

Mr. Chairman, linseed oil, red and white lead are the principal ingredients of paint, which is used by the home builders of this country to beautify and preserve their homes. Under the prevailing prices of these articles for the last 10 years many of the poor people throughout the land have been unable to paint their houses. High prices have put them to great straits in supplying themselves and their families with a meager and often inadequate supply of food, raiment, and shelter. They have neither time nor means to beautify and no leisure to enjoy the beautiful. Their struggle is for existence.

Mr. Chairman, it is well known that these articles are now and have been for many years produced and controlled by a trust. Prior to the passage of the Dingley bill in 1897 linseed oil and red and white lead were produced in America by many independent companies, competing with each other in our markets and the markets of the world for trade. On December 5, 1898, the American Linseed Co. was incorporated under the laws of New Jersey, with a capital stock of $50,000,000, of which $25,000,000 is preferred and $25,000,000 is common stock. This was the beginning of the Linseed Oil Trust in our country, for it took over at that time 47 independent oil-producing companies scattered throughout the United States, as follows:

1. Crown Linseed Oil Works, St. Louis, Mo.
2. Close Linseed Oil Works, Iowa City, Iowa.
3. Burlington Linseed Oil Works, Burlington, Iowa.
4. Hawkeye Linseed Oil Works, Marshalltown, Iowa.
5. Hall Linseed Oil Works, Chicago, Ill.
6. Mankato Linseed Oil Works, Mankato, Mo.
7. Sioux City Linseed Oil Works, Sioux City, Iowa.
8. Missouri Linseed Oil Station, St. Louis, Mo.
9. Woodman Linseed Oil Works, Omaha, Nebr.
10. Grove Linseed Oil Co., Philadelphia, Pa.
11. Ottumwa Linseed Oil Works, Ottumwa, Iowa.
12. Des Moines Linseed Oil Works, Des Moines, Iowa.
13. Dubuque Linseed Oil Works, Dubuque, Iowa.
14. Kansas City Lead and Oil Works, Kansas City, Mo.
15. St. Paul Linseed Oil Works, St. Paul, Minn.
16. Northwestern Lead and Oil Works, Chicago, Ill.
17. Cedar Rapids Linseed Oil Station, Cedar Rapids, Iowa.
18. Evans Linseed Oil Works, Indianapolis, Ind.
19. Topeka Linseed Oil Station, Topeka, Kans.
20. Leavenworth Linseed Oil Works, Leavenworth, Kans.
21. Gilman Linseed Oil Works, Gilman, Ill.
22. Marion Linseed Station, Marion, Ind.
23. Logansport Linseed Oil Works, Logansport, Ind.
24. Leonard Linseed Oil Works, Piqua, Ohio.
25. Detroit Linseed Oil Works, Detroit, Mich.
26. Dayton Linseed Oil Works, Dayton, Ohio.
27. Portland Linseed Oil Works, Portland, Oreg.
28. La Crosse Linseed Oil Works, La Crosse, Wis.
29. Wright & Lawther Oil and Lead Works, Chicago, Ill.
30. Buffalo Linseed Oil Works, Buffalo, N. Y.
31. Emerson Linseed Oil Works, Racine, Wis.
32. W. P. Orr Linseed Oil Works, Piqua, Ohio.
33. Mansfield Linseed Oil Works, Mansfield, Ohio.
34. Cleveland Linseed Oil Works, South Chicago, Ill.
35. Metzer Linseed Oil Co., Toledo, Ohio.
36. Leonard & Daniels, Piqua, Ohio.
37. Douglas & Co., Cedar Rapids, Iowa.
38. Cleveland Linseed & Oil Co., Cleveland, Ohio.
39. Metzer Linseed Oil Co., Toledo, Ohio.
40. Douglas & Co., Minneapolis, Minn.
41. Archer & Co., St. Paul, Mo.
42. Toledo Linseed Oil Co., Toledo, Ohio.
43. Campbell & Thayer, New York City.
44. Dean Linseed Oil Co., New York City.
45. Griswold Linseed Oil Co., Warren, Ohio.
46. Wright & Hills Linseed Oil Co., Chicago, Ill.
47. Western Linseed Oil Co., Minneapolis, Minn.

Since the incorporation of this company it has acquired other interests as I am informed, so that this trust now controls about 90 per cent of the linseed oil produced in America. It is dominated by the Rockefellers, John D. Rockefeller, jr., being a member of the board of directors. In 1909 its net earnings were more than a million dollars. Its president and treasurer, J. A. McGean; vice president, Henry E. Cooper; secretary, W. A. Jones; assistant secretary, R. H. Adams; and assistant treasurer, E. V. Cary, live in New York City, and its principal or general office is located at 100 Williams Street, New York City. It is purely a Wall Street property, controlled by Standard Oil influences—hence a trust.

This tells only half of the story. Paint not only requires linseed oil but lead must be used. To leave lead open to competition would interfere materially with the Linseed Oil Trust in controlling the price of paints. So in January, 1903, Standard Oil influence incorporated in New Jersey the "United Lead Co.," which was a complete union of the Rockefeller-Guggenheim interests and the Whitney-Ryan interests, thereby destroying practically all of the competition in the production, smelting, and refining of lead in this country. Three of the Guggenheims and Thomas F. Ryan were placed on the directorate.

It took over at this time 19 of the leading independent lead companies scattered over the country, as follows:

1. James Robertson Lead Co., Baltimore, Md.
2. Omaha Shot & Lead Co., Omaha, Nebr.
3. Northwestern Shot & Lead Works, St. Paul, Minn.
4. Collier Shot Tower Works, St. Louis, Mo.
5. Bailey & Farrell Shot Works, Pittsburgh, Pa.
6. Markle Lead Works, St. Louis, Mo.
7. Gibson & Price, Cleveland, Ohio.
8. Le Roy Shot & Lead Works, New York.
9. Union Oil & Lead Works, Brooklyn, N. Y.
10. Sportsman's Shot Works, Cincinnati, Ohio.
11. Chicago Shot Tower Co., Chicago, Ill.
12. Hoyt Metal Co., St. Louis, Mo.
13. Tatham & Bros., New York City.
14. Raymond Lead Co., Chicago, Ill.
15. E. W. Blatchford & Co., Chicago, Ill.
16. Thomas W. Sparks, Philadelphia, Pa.
17. Chadwick-Boston Lead Co., Boston, Mass.
18. Lansten Lead Works, Chicago, Ill.
19. McDougal White Lead Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

The capital stock of this concern was fixed at $25,000,000; $10,000,000 is 6 per cent cumulative preferred and $15,000,000 common stock. They have united with other companies until they own and control 28 companies and are allied with 93 corporations and control from 85 per cent to 95 per cent of all the properties engaged in the smelting and refining of lead, with a total approximate capital par value of $201,550,400, with a market value in January, 1904, of $108,460,000.

The Linseed Oil Trust and the Lead Trust are affiliated and controlled by the Rockefellers, Guggenheims, and Ryans, forming one gigantic trust, with no other object than to stifle competition and control the production and price of minerals, oils, and paints. This is the class of men Mr. Bryan denounced at Baltimore, and the Baltimore convention passed a resolution denouncing them as unfit to take part in nominating a candidate for President, and our platform declared that the products of such trusts as the "Linseed Oil and Lead Trusts" should be placed on the free list.

But let us see how they have been dealt with in this bill. Under the present law—Payne-Aldrich law—linseed oil has a duty of 15 cents a gallon. Our bill places it at 12 cents a gallon. This is but a very short step toward the free list for a trust-made product. In fact it is only a society hobble-skirt step. In 1912 the equivalent ad-valorem rate on white lead was 38 per cent. Our bill places the rate at 25 per cent ad valorem. Another feeble effort to carry into effect our pledges in the Baltimore platform.

It will be remembered that linseed oil and white and red lead are placed in the chemical schedule. It will also be remembered that the gentleman from New York [Mr. HARRISON] had charge of this schedule.

It will also be remembered that he is a great free trader, especially in the press and when out among the people, but when he is a Member of Congress, clothed with authority to revise the tariff, he writes rates on trust-made products, which are approved by the trusts. Here is what the Paint, Oil and Drug Review said in its issue on the 16th of April, 1913, page 27:

> The duty on flaxseed in the Underwood bill is no reduction, because no rebate is allowed on cake, which just about equals the 5-cent reduction in the duty. The reduction in the tariff will have little effect on the flaxseed or oil market, and years when America raises a normal crop of seed we can compete with the world.

There is no doubt that this gigantic oil and lead trust can compete with the world in our markets as long as they are sheltered by these high protective rates.

The Paint, Oil, and Drug Review of April 23, 1913, on page 27, had this to say:

> The reason we favor the Underwood tariff on flaxseed is because it gives the farmers the protection needed and only a nominal advance in duty, and the feature which does not allow a drawback on oil cake appeals to us because the American farmers are just beginning to learn the great value of oil cake as a feed and a fertilizer.

The gentleman from New York [Mr. HARRISON] prepared the chemical bill a year ago, which we passed. At that time I called his attention to the fact that he had made but little reduction in the rate on linseed oil, which was a reduction of only 2 cents per gallon. He then claimed that as his bill could not deal with the duty on flaxseed he was not warranted in making a further reduction in the rate on linseed oil.

A few days ago, while the present bill was before our caucus, I called his attention to the rates now carried in this bill on flaxseed and linseed oil and suggested that he had an opportunity to lower the rates on each of them. He promised to look into the feasibility of lowering them, but I have heard nothing from him since. It is clear to me that there is a common understanding that the products of the Linseed Oil & Lead Trust are to continue to be sheltered by protective rates. Under the rates proposed in this bill, when white lead sells for 7 cents a pound or $140 per ton, the Lead Trust will receive a protection of $35 per ton. Linseed oil will have a protection of $6 per barrel of 40 gallons to the barrel. This will give this Linseed Oil & Lead Trust a magnificent opportunity to rob the consumers out of millions of dollars annually. I apprehend that the poor man's cottage will still go without a refreshing coat of paint. With these high rates of protection, are not the protectionist journals and dailies justified in predicting that the price of linseed oil and white lead will not be materially lowered, and are they not justified in saying that they like the rates fixed by the gentleman from New York on these articles?

But what will the consumers say and what will they do? Let the gentleman from New York answer this question. He has consumers in his district, I presume, and the chief owners and operators of this trust live in his home city.

It has been claimed by some that linseed oil can not be produced in this country if placed on the free list unless the duty on flaxseed is taken off. Let us see how this figures out under the rate on flaxseed proposed by this bill, which is 20 cents per bushel. One bushel of flaxseed will produce 2½ gallons of linseed oil of 7½ pounds to the gallon, and there will be left a flaxseed cake or oil cake of 30 pounds. This oil cake has a commercial value of $40 per ton. Thirty pounds is worth thirty two-thousands or three two-hundreds of $40, which is 60 cents.

Under normal conditions flaxseed sells at about $1 per bushel. Subtract from this the 60 cents the trust gets for the oil cake and we have 40 cents left per bushel as first cost for the flaxseed, but the trust has 2½ gallons of linseed oil in its hands to balance this item, which would amount to 16 cents per gallon for the oil. Add to this the cost of refining the oil, which is only a few cents, and we get the first cost of the oil—about 18 or 19 cents. It has retailed in my home town for more than $1.25 per gallon.

But let us consider the advantage the linseed oil people will get from the proposed rate on linseed oil, which is 12 cents per gallon. We have already seen that flaxseed has a duty of 20 cents per bushel, and that a bushel of such seed will produce 2½ gallons of linseed oil.

The rate on this oil is 12 cents per gallon, which is equal to 30 cents per bushel. Add to this the 60 cents per bushel it gets for the oil cake and we have 90 cents per bushel and 2½ gallons of linseed oil. Flaxseed costs from $1 to $1.15 under ordinary conditions. It is clear that the original cost of linseed oil per gallon will not exceed more than from 6 to 10 cents, if the proposed rates are enacted into law. This looks very small as compared with the retail prices which we have been compelled to pay in our home towns. Who will claim that a rate of 12 cents per gallon is not a protective rate, even though a rate of 20 cents per bushel on flaxseed should be retained?

But when we consider the production of flaxseed in America, we will be driven to the conclusion that 20 cents per bushel is a protective rate. Flaxseed is produced in this country in Minnesota, the Dakotas, and in a few of the Northwestern States. A normal crop ranges from 20,000,000 bushels to 30,000,000 bushels. While we usually import more or less flaxseed, yet ordinarily we export more than we import. The Argentine Republic produces more flaxseed than any other country in the world, most of which is exported, and America comes next. The following table, furnished by Mr. Ennis, gives the world's flaxseed crop for one year under average conditions:

Country.	Production.	Exports.	Consumption.	Imports.
United States	$36,000,000	$2,000,000	$24,100,000	$100,000
India	16,000,000	15,000,000	1,000,000
Russia	17,000,000	1,425,000	15,575,000
Argentina	30,000,000	29,500,000	1,500,000
Uruguay	5,000,000	4,800,000	200,000
England			18,800,000
France	500,000		7,000,000	6,500,000
Germany			18,500,000	18,500,000
Holland	300,000		7,800,000	7,500,000
Denmark	325,000		650,000	325,000
Total	95,125,000	53,725,000	96,125,000	32,925,000

While this table gives the figures in dollars, it is based on the assumption that the seed costs $1 per bushel, and the table can be read in bushels as well as in dollars.

The following table is taken from estimates made by the Department of Agriculture. It reveals that under ordinary conditions we produce more flaxseed than we consume. For the last three years our crops have been short, and we have imported considerably more than we have exported, but when we examine this table closely it will be seen that for the last two decades our imports exceed our exports only in a few instances. This being true, the duty on flaxseed could have been reduced much lower. It yields about the same income per acre as wheat, yet the rate on wheat is reduced by this bill from 25 cents per bushel to 10 cents per bushel. With equal propriety the rate on flaxseed might have been reduced to 10 cents per bushel. I now submit the table for your inspection:

Flaxseed: Quantities produced, 1886 to date, and amounts imported, exported, and retained for consumption, 1886 to date.

Years ending June 30—	Production.	Imports.	Exports.		Retained for consumption.
			Domestic seed.	Foreign seed.
	Bushels.	Bushels.	Bushels.	Bushels.	Bushels.
1886	13,000,000	1,634,576		30,914	14,603,662
1887	10,000,000	415,179		44	10,415,135
1888	10,500,000	1,793,964	37,265		12,045,699
1889	9,000,000	3,259,460		25	12,259,435
1890	[1] 10,250,000	2,391,175	14,678		12,626,495
1891	8,500,000	1,515,546	144,848	1	9,870,697
1892	19,000,000	285,140	3,613,187		15,671,953
1893	11,104,440	112,615	1,837,370		9,379,685
1894	10,000,000	592,829	2,047,836		8,544,984
1895	7,500,000	4,166,222	1,224		11,664,998
1896	15,000,000	754,507	80,453	90,478	15,583,576
1897	17,402,000	165,222	4,713,747	19,892	12,773,583
1898	12,500,000	136,098	257,228	2,172	12,376,698
1899	16,460,000	81,053	2,830,991		13,650,962
1900	[1] 19,979,492	67,379	2,743,266		17,303,605
1901	17,902,000	1,631,726	2,755,683	21,112	16,446,331
1902	25,319,000	477,157	3,874,033	64,748	21,857,376
1903	29,284,890	129,089	4,128,130	20,211	25,265,638
1904	27,300,519	213,270	738,379		26,755,401
1905	23,400,534	296,184	1,338	3	23,695,377
1906	28,477,753	82,240	5,988,519		22,541,474
1907	25,576,146	90,358	6,636,310	2,044	19,028,148
1908	25,851,000	67,419	4,277,313	11,391	21,630,715
1909	26,805,000	293,608	882,899		25,815,709
1910	[1] 19,512,764	5,002,495	65,193		24,450,067
1911	12,718,000	10,490,227	976		23,716,251
1912	19,370,000	6,841,305	4,323	21,919	26,185,564

[1] Census figures.

NOTE.—Production figures for years 1902–1912, inclusive (excepting census year 1910), are estimates of the Department of Agriculture; those for prior years (excepting census years 1890 and 1900) are commercial estimates.

Mr. Chairman, I insist that linseed oil and white and red lead ought to be placed on the free list and remain there as long as they are controlled by a trust, and that the tariff on flaxseed should be reduced to 10 cents per bushel. The gentleman from New York [Mr. HARRISON] has given us no sound reason for maintaining the protective rates which he has fixed on these articles; in fact, he has given no reason at all.

Mr. Chairman, it is said that the mills of the gods grind slowly but surely. Can not as much be said of the mills of the trusts? Yea, more. High protective rates stimulate them to grind day and night at a rapid rate, and they are surely grinding the people all the time. Thou shalt not furnish the trusts with human grindstones; neither shalt thou furnish power to turn such stones to wear away human flesh and human energy.

Mr. MANN. I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. CAMPBELL].

Mr. CAMPBELL. Mr. Chairman, if the proviso was stricken out of this provision, the bill would not be so bad. If the proposition without the proviso stood alone, I would vote for it. The proviso puts raw sugar on the free list in three years. Few Members of this House realize what this schedule means to the people of Porto Rico, Hawaii, the Philippines, Louisiana, and the people engaged in the sugar beet industry in other States. In Porto Rico and Hawaii the people are being held by the throat by the Sugar Trust to-day for money with which to harvest their crop. They are constantly under the control of the Sugar Trust.

This schedule is in the interest of the Sugar Trust and not in the interest of the consumers of sugar. There is not a consumer in the United States to-day who buys raw sugar that is made free after three years under the provisions of this bill. The Sugar Trust is the beneficiary. Raw sugar is their raw material, and they are the direct beneficiaries. Before the refined product reaches the table of the consumer every particle of the reduction that is made will be absorbed by the refiners or the trusts and the dealers in sugar. But the sufferers will be the men in Hawaii, in the Philippines, in Porto Rico, and Louisiana, in the sugar-beet raising States, who are paying the American scale of wages to men employed in growing cane and beets and making these products of the farm into sugar.

The gentleman from Georgia [Mr. HARDWICK] concedes that the proviso will destroy the sugar industry in Louisiana. He might also concede that it will destroy the industry in Porto Rico and Hawaii and in the beet-sugar States. Everyone knows the supply of sugar, and not the tariff, controls the price to the consumer. We produced last year 500,000 tons in Hawaii, 160,000 tons in Louisiana, 340,000 tons in Porto Rico, 606,033 tons of beet sugar in 1911. When you destroy that American production of sugar you put the American consumer absolutely at the mercy of the sugar grower of other countries and of the Sugar Trust, that will then import its raw material free of duty and sell its refined product at its own price, unaffected by the addition to the world's sugar supply of what our own country could produce. You will not raise revenue, and in the end sugar will be as high as now or higher.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Chairman, I desire to offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

On page 47 strike out lines 24 and 25, and also lines 1 to 5 on page 48, including the word "proportion," in line 5, and insert:

"179. Sugars, tank bottoms, sirups and cane juice, melada and concentrated melada, concrete and concentrated molasses, 1.4 cents per pound on the sugar content thereof; the sugar content shall be determined by tests which shall be made according to regulations which the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe."

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Chairman, the provision in the bill follows the classification that has usually been in the sugar schedule from time out of memory. Commencing with 75-degree sugar at a certain rate it advances in this case six-thousandths of a cent on every degree up to 96 or 97 degree sugar. This results in an injustice to the producer of raw sugar and results in a better differential, a larger differential, to the refiner of sugar. For instance, take the Underwood schedule. Seventy-five-degree sugar is seventy-one one-hundredths of a cent a pound duty. Under what I propose it would be ninety-five one-hundredths of a cent a pound duty. It would look at the first blush as if mine was the higher, but when we add the fact that practically all of the importations of sugar are over 92 degrees by the test, and that these duties more nearly approach each other when we get up to 92 degree—for instance, in the Underwood bill 92 degree sugar is 1.152 cents and in mine 1.288 cents—on 97 degree his would be 1.282 and in my proposition 1.358, or seven-hundredths of a cent more in my proposition than his. While we start out with raw sugar at a higher rate, when we get into the refined sugar my proposition would be 1.4 cents, and his leaves a greater differential. That difference has run all through tariff bills up to this time and is continued in the Underwood bill. But what I want to get at is to get the exact duty per pound on the sugar content of that pound, whether it is 75-degree sugar or whether it is absolutely pure sugar.

While the rates are not far different, very nearly approaching each other and less than the present rate, they are better and more just and more equitable. I have not said anything in my amendment about striking out this proviso making sugar free at the end of three years. That is provided for in the amendment contained in the amendment offered by the gentleman from Illinois. But if that proviso is left in the bill, I state, not on the authority of the gentleman from Georgia, not on the authority of what people may claim who are raising sugar beets, but I state it on the admission of gentlemen opposed to these industries, to wit, the sugar refiners, that if you wipe out the duty on sugar you wipe out the Louisiana industry and you destroy the sugar industry in the United States.

Before the Hardwick committee refiner after refiner came and testified that that would be the result, and that was what they wanted. Why? They said that this beet-sugar crop came in every year, came in on top of the Hawaiian crop and the crop from Cuba, and destroyed their markets. It took away the market that belonged to them, cut down the price—and it has cut down the price this year and will cut it down every year as long as they continue to live. If you do this thing, gentlemen, you take out of the production of the world's sugar a million tons produced in this country. You cripple the industry in Hawaii and in our insular possessions, and when you have done that the law of supply and demand begins to work, and the result will be that sugar will go up, because there will be less of it to supply the demands of the market of the world. [Applause on the Republican side.]

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, while I shall vote for the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York [Mr. PAYNE], I shall also ask the House to vote upon the amendment which I offered striking out the proviso which puts sugar upon the free list at the end of three years.

I take it, Mr. Chairman, that it is unquestioned that the beet-sugar industry has not started or thrived in any country of the world without favorable legislation or financial aid in its behalf. The gentleman from Georgia [Mr. HARDWICK] speaks of a hothouse industry. The beet-sugar industry in all parts of the world wherever it has existed has received the beneficent influence of governmental agency, and there be no man so ignorant to-day, whether in hovel or palace, who does not know that the price of sugar to-day would be from 100 to 300 per cent more than it now is if we had to supply our demands without the aid of this beet-sugar industry in the world. [Applause on the Republican side.] You propose now, however, to strike down the industry in the United States on the assumption that the State aid given by other countries to their beet-sugar industries will keep the price of sugar down for your benefit in the United States. No one else has ever cast such ignominious suspicion upon the authorities of other countries. It is true that we are legislating here without regard to the interests of our own industries, but that is not the case with the legislators of other countries. In other lands, and in this land when the Republicans are in control, the legislators are seeking for opportunities to increase industry, to build new establishments, to start up new lines of work, while you, with the ghoulish glee displayed by the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. HARDWICK] in describing the destruction of "only a hundred million dollars' worth of property," as he said—you seek opportunity and search every corner of the country for the chance to strike down some industry, some machinery you can render valueless except for old iron, some manufacturing establishments which you can close. Make the most of your opportunities. The country is already prepared to say that your tariff legislation is a mistake. The first opportunity it has will be the last opportunity you will have. [Applause on the Republican side.]

Mr. CROSSER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MANN. No; I do not think it is worth while.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I was surprised at the statement of the venerable and usually well-informed senior minority member of the Committee on Ways and Means upon that side of the House, if I understood him correctly when he said that the rate on sugar as fixed in this bill amounted to 1.85 per cent.

Mr. PAYNE. I did not say that. I said 1.282 cents on 92° sugar.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. The actual rates fixed in this bill on 92° sugar coming from all countries is 1.15 per cent; on 92° sugar coming from Cuba it is 0.992; on 96° sugar coming from the world it is 1.254; coming from Cuba it is practically 1 per cent on 90° sugar.

Mr. PAYNE. That is exactly what I said.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I must have misunderstood the gentleman.

Mr. PAYNE. Else I did not read my figures correctly. I had them here.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. In other words, the reduction in this bill from the rates in the Payne bill, so far as the polariscope test is concerned, is almost exactly a 25 per cent reduction, or a cut of one-quarter, but the reduction amounts to more than that, because we have stricken out of the schedule the differential that went to the sugar refiner under the Dutch standard, with the result that as the bill stands to-day, and will stand for the next three years, there will be a reduction of forty-six one-hundredths of 1 cent on refined sugar, or, in round terms, there will be a half cent reduction at the customhouse on the duties levied on raw sugar, and at the end of three years' time sugar will absolutely become free, so far as the customhouse is concerned. Now gentlemen on that side are appealing for the protection of American labor in these sugar fields. I hold in my hand a paper that has come to me—the Sacramento Bee, of Saturday, April 5, 1913—which contains a letter in reference to the sugar situation in Sutter County, Cal., and I only read you one paragraph from the letter, because that is the pertinent one. It says this:

This year's crop of beets grown here will be handled by the Alvarado factory of the company. The company has finished planting beets on 3,500 acres of its holdings, and the plants are all coming up in fine shape. Part of the crop has been let to a colony of Japanese for cultivation. The Hindus are also busy on their knees weeding with their little hoes. A number of Mexicans have been brought in and are attending to the irrigating.

[Applause on the Democratic side.]

That is merely a news item that has incidentally and accidentally fallen into my hands with reference to the labor on one of these great sugar plantations—not in Hawaii, not in Porto Rico, but in the State of California.

Mr. CURRY. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. No; I can not yield. Now, the real proposition involved here is not the protection of labor, because I believe as firmly as I am standing here the great beet-sugar industry of the West can produce its beet sugar on an equality with its European rivals, that it is protected in its home market by railroad freight, so that there is no possibility of competition within a reasonable zone, but what these men want and what they are striving after is to tax the American people in order that they may bring their beet sugar to the Atlantic seaboard and drive out all competition. [Applause on the Democratic side.] That is all they are after. It is a question of freight rates. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired; all time has expired. The question is on the amendment proposed by the gentleman from New York [Mr. PAYNE].

The question was taken, and the amendment was rejected.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN].

Mr. MANN. I ask to have the language reported.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the amendment will be again reported.

There was no objection.

The Clerk read as follows:

Strike out the proviso in lines 11, 12, and 13, page 48, as follows: "Provided, That on and after the 1st day of May, 1916, the articles hereinbefore enumerated in this paragraph shall be admitted free of duty."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Illinois to strike out the language just read.

The question was taken, and the Chairman announced the noes appeared to have it.

On a division (demanded by Mr. MANN) there were—ayes 68, noes 160.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I ask for tellers.

Tellers were ordered.

The committee again divided; and the tellers (Mr. UNDERWOOD and Mr. MANN) reported that there were—ayes 88, noes 186.

So the amendment was rejected.

The Clerk read as follows:

181. Saccharin, 65 cents per pound.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, did the Clerk finish reading paragraph 180?

The CHAIRMAN. Paragraph 180 was read at the time the amendment proposed by the gentleman from Michigan was offered.

Mr. MANN. I think it was not read.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will state to the gentleman he is mistaken. The Chair ordered the paragraph read.

Mr. MANN. I did not so understand.

The CHAIRMAN. If the gentleman desires to offer an amendment the Chair is willing to entertain it.

Mr. MANN. I move to amend by striking out the proviso to that paragraph.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Strike out the proviso in paragraph 180, which is as follows: "Provided, That on and after the 1st day of May, 1916, the articles hereinbefore enumerated in this paragraph shall be admitted free of duty."

The question was taken, and the amendment was rejected.

The Clerk read as follows:

SCHEDULE O—AGRICULTURAL PRODUCTS AND PROVISIONS.

188. Cattle, 10 per cent ad valorem.

Mr. FORDNEY. Mr. Chairman——

Mr. SLOAN. Mr. Chairman——

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Michigan [Mr. FORDNEY], a member of the committee, is recognized.

Mr. FORDNEY. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Michigan offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

In line 17, page 50, after the word "cattle," strike out "10" and insert "25."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. FORDNEY].

The question was taken, and the amendment was rejected.

Mr. SLOAN. Mr. Chairman, I wish to offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. SLOAN] offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend line 17, section 188, page 50, so as to read:
"Cattle, 15 per cent ad valorem."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Nebraska.

Mr. SLOAN. Mr. Chairman, I desire to discuss the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Nebraska is recognized.

Mr. SLOAN. Mr. Chairman, I desire to call the attention of the committee to what appears in the report submitted by the Ways and Means Committee. It states that the average price of cattle under the Wilson law was $6.89; under the Dingley law, $14.19; under the Payne bill, $14.20. Under the Wilson bill was the time when a man out in our country, as the story goes, purchased 100 head of cattle for $100, and the man who made the sale was being congratulated. He said: "That is all right, but you do not know all. That old fellow to whom I sold the cattle was a little nearsighted, and so I ran a hundred extra in on him, and he took them away." [Laughter.]

That, gentlemen of the committee, is a part of the much-mooted restoration that you heard so eloquently discussed in front of this Capitol on the 4th day of last March—a return to $6 cattle. Now, assuming the figures to be accurate which the committee has furnished, I want you to notice this especially, that the value of imports of cattle during 1912 was $4,486,306. The forecasted value for the first year of that divine charter of the "new era" is to be $5,570,000. That is an increase of $1,083,694, but there is an attendant loss of revenue to the Treasury of $457,481. There will be, therefore, paid by the Treasury, in effect, by foregoing the collection which is proper under the present law, the sum I stated, namely, $457,481, which amounts to a subsidy for importing every additional dollar's worth of cattle of 42 cents. This side for years has been in favor of so levying duties that they might encourage competition among stock dealers and raisers in this country; but here is a bald proposition to practically pay out of the Treasury 42 cents for the purpose of bringing in $1 of competition to be furnished by the foreigner.

I was wondering, Mr. Chairman, what the peculiar disposition of the Ways and Means Committee is that they would prefer to forego 42 cents out of the Treasury for the purpose of bringing in $1 worth of additional importations to the country. I wondered if they thought so much more of the Mexican greaser than they did of the Texas ranger. I believe in this country that everything that Americans produce should be moderately protected against every competing article, wherever it may be produced. I am not in favor of prohibitive tariff, but I am in favor of giving the long end of the lever in every market, whether it be from farm, factory, or mine, to the American producer. In the interests of that proposition I ask that cattle be given a duty of 15 per cent. If I were inclined to argue it from the other standpoint, from the standpoint of a competitive tariff, I would say that the more they reduce this the more they pay out or lose for the slight importation. Therefore the reduction should be greater. To make a competitive tariff, as I understand it, the rule is, first, to ask, Is there any importation? Second, What is the source of importation? Has it increased during the last few periods or has it decreased? In other words, is there an increase of the units, increase of the values, increase of the duties? All three are present here.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. KINKEAD of New Jersey. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New Jersey moves to strike out the last word.

Mr. KINKEAD of New Jersey. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen, I believe that the Committee on Ways and Means, when it reduced the duty on cattle and on sheep and placed meats on the free list, acted in compliance with the express pledge made to the people of the United States in the platform adopted in the national convention of the Democratic Party in Baltimore and repeated in every congressional district during the last campaign. Personally I felt that in considering cattle schedules they might have gone further and placed cattle on the free list as they did beef and mutton and other meat supplies. And in answer to the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. SLOAN], who demands an increase in the proposed duty on cattle, I want to read an article that was printed on Saturday last in the Hudson Observer, a leading newspaper published in my home county. It quotes from a pamphlet issued by Swift & Co., one of the three constituent companies which go to make up the Beef Trust, and is a complete answer to his argument in favor of an increase in the duties on cattle. I read:

THAT DUTY ON FOOD ANIMALS.

President Wilson's attention is respectfully called to the pamphlet issued this week by Swift & Co., of Chicago, a copy of which has been sent to his secretary, Mr. Tumulty, together with the announcements that Representatives KINKEAD and BEHMNER, of New Jersey, have decided to bolt the Democratic caucus and vote against the proposed 10 per cent duty on cattle and other food animals.

Why should the 10 per cent duty be imposed? In their pamphlet Swift & Co. show from the records that in 1912 the cattle raisers sent to market 560,265 fewer animals than in 1911. There was also a decrease of 18 pounds per head in the cattle marketed, or a total decrease for the year of 704,498,365 pounds.

This was not a temporary diminution in the supply. Though the population of the United States increased about 16,500,000 in the decade ending last year, the number of cattle in the country had decreased 7,468,000 in the same period. Unless the people eat something else—rice, for instance—and the slaughter of calves is stopped, the price of beef must go to prohibitive figures the packers say.

When it is so frankly confessed that the producers of the United States can not supply us with beef, why should any impediment, even a 10 per cent obstacle, be put in the way of the free importation of cattle on the hoof?

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from New Jersey yield to the gentleman from Minnesota?

Mr. KINKEAD of New Jersey. Yes.

Mr. ANDERSON. Why does not the gentleman offer an amendment striking out that 10 per cent duty?

Mr. KINKEAD of New Jersey. I will state to my friend from Minnesota that I am moving in what I consider the most practical way. I believe and I hope that this duty will come off in the Senate, and when the bill comes back here I am sure that every man on this side of the House will vote for free cattle, as I will, although I am sincerely doubtful as to the attitude that you gentlemen will assume toward the amendment.

I continue from the editorial:

All duties are laid either by Republicans to "protect home industry from competition" or by Democrats for the purpose of raising revenue. Obviously an industry which can not supply the demand needs no protection, and the customhouses have never yielded from the importation of cattle enough to buy gasoline for the President's car.

But we are told by the consul at New York from that country that thousands of cattle are slaughtered on the plains of Argentina, in the luscious grass of the best grazing land in the world, for their hides and horns, the meat being left to rot because it is shut out of the United States by the tariff. Mexico and Canada also stand ready to provide us with the beef we need if we will let them.

Why, then, a 10 per cent duty on cattle? Is is true that the beef barons and not the cattle raisers asked for and secured this tariff? In any event, why does not President Wilson join the New Jersey Congressmen in the demand that this chief necessary shall be put in the free list? One message from him before the Underwood bill leaves the House might accomplish wonders.

Mr. Chairman, in view of the statements that are made in this editorial demonstrating the justice of admitting cattle free of duty, in view of the pledges made during the last campaign to reduce the cost of living in this country, I hope that the House will refuse to pass the amendment offered by the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. SLOAN]. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Do three gentlemen on the other side want to speak?

Mr. LANGLEY. I want two minutes only.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate close in 20 minutes on the paragraph.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] asks unanimous consent that debate on the paragraph and amendments thereto close in 20 minutes. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

Mr. GOOD. Mr. Chairman, it appears from the statement made by the chairman of this committee [Mr. UNDERWOOD] at the opening of this discussion that we are legislating through an irrevocable proxy. I do not hope by anything I may say to change a single vote upon that side of the Chamber, because by the chairman's own statement every man on his side of the Chamber is bound and gagged to vote against every amendment offered by this side, no matter how meritorious.

Since you refuse to take advice from Republican sources, I want to bring to you on that side of the Chamber the words of a distinguished Democrat who knows something of the agricultural schedule, and particularly of stock raising in the United States. I refer to Judge Cowan, who, in an article published in an agricultural paper, says he feels it his duty "as a citizen who seeks no office to call attention to the real grave and supreme danger confronting the stock-raising and agricultural interests." That article is as follows:

COWAN SOUNDS WARNING TO CATTLEMEN AND FARMERS.

"We now have the tariff bill before us," said C. H. Cowan, attorney for the Cattle Raisers' Association of Texas and the American National Live Stock Association, "and within it sufficient evidence that a serious blow to the live stock and farming interests of the United States has been struck. It needs no explanation or argument to show it.

"Manufacturers organized as they are and labor organized as it is may have looked after their interests sufficient to secure a reasonable preference in our home markets wherever they needed it for their output and to force us to work for them on the lowest level, but it is certain that the live-stock raisers and farmers have not successfully looked after their interests. Like 'snipe hunters' they are left with the bag to hold.

"This bill with free meats, free flour, free wool, free sugar, free potatoes, and other free-list farm products, together with duties so low on many others as to amount to nothing, manifests the intent to place the stock raisers and farmers of this country on a world-lowest level of prices for what they raise and reduce the meager profits by free competition with the cheapest labor and land and cheapest method of living of the countries which we invite to invade our markets, while nothing is demanded in return. The majority of the people of the United States surely are not in favor of that, and there ought not to be a single farmer or stock raiser so dense as to favor it.

"If we had the referendum independent of politics, every State west of the Alleghany Mountains would vote overwhelmingly against the free-trade scheme. The time has come for stock raisers and farmers to rise up and express themselves and get their friends to do likewise. The man who neglects to register his protest to his Senators and Congressmen and in the press, is by his silence acquiescing in this plan for his own undoing which will surely follow. The agricultural interests will be the increasingly greatest sufferers, for, as the opening of our great markets will invite production in other countries to supply us and take the place of what we should and would produce, it will in the end bring our stock raisers and farmers to a level with them. Thus we turn our trade—our home market—over to those who do not support our Government, pay taxes, support our institutions, perform the duties of citizens, or protect it in time of war.

"A fair preference in our home markets should be demanded. Congress is giving it to some, denying it to others—especially to farmers and stock raisers. If it turns out as intended it will impoverish our farmers and reduce their capacity to buy from the work shop or other producers and reach every avenue of trade. If it does not reduce prices, then those from the center of population who are forcing this thing upon us while keeping a preferential duty for themselves, will not get cheaper farm products which they seek.

"Every other important agricultural country in the world has a tariff designed to encourage agricultural pursuits. Why should we, the greatest in agriculture, deliberately discourage it by inviting the surplus producing countries to our markets free? The matter is in the hands of the stock raisers and farmers, and those interested in agriculture, to prevent this calamity by asserting themselves so that their voices are heard. He does not have to be a high protectionist to do this, he simply subscribes to fair play and acts in righteous self-defense against free trade.

"For over 26 years the attorney for the Cattle Raisers Association of Texas and many years for the American National Live Stock Association, acquainted with the business and conditions surrounding it, I feel it my duty on that account and as a citizen who seeks no office to call attention to this real grave and supreme danger confronting the stock raising and agricultural interests, and to urge each individual to act direct for himself.

"We have never had a tariff that enabled the producer to get unreasonable profits on live stock or other agricultural products. We have done nothing to demand punishment; we could not monopolize; we ought not to be selected for sacrifice just because we have not been able to make others afraid of us or produce.

"A general demand by each individual stock raiser and farmer will bring the result."

But my good friend, Judge Cowan, forgot that the literature circulated in the cities in the congressional campaign of 1910 by the Democratic congressional committee pledged the Democratic Party to enact a tariff law that would reduce the cost of food articles to the bankrupt prices of 1896. The Democratic committee in that year distributed to the thousands of voters in the cities of this country a circular entitled "The high cost of living." The following is a copy of that circular:

Voters and householders read the within carefully. How to save your money. Take into booth with you when you vote. Vote for your families. High cost of living facts. Read carefully. Ponder well. Vote right.

1896—PRICES—1910.

The Republican Party has been in complete control of every department of the Government since 1896—President, Senate, and Congress. They have given you a government of trusts—Beef Trust, Sugar Trust, Flour Trust, Clothing Trust, and the "daddy" of them all, the Tariff Trust. See the result below:

St. Louis prices.

OCTOBER, 1896—TWO WEEKS' STORE BILL.		OCTOBER, 1910—TWO WEEKS' STORE BILL NOW.
2 pounds salt pork	$0.10	2 pounds salt pork	$0.40
5 pounds pork chops	.50	5 pounds pork chops	1.25
5 pounds pork ribs	.30	5 pounds pork ribs	.75
4 pounds smoked shoulder	.30	4 pounds smoked shoulder	.54
2 pounds sausage	.15	2 pounds sausage	.35
5 pounds lard	.35	5 pounds lard	.85
5 pounds corned beef	.25	5 pounds corned beef	.62½
4 pounds butter	.40	4 pounds butter	1.20
2 dozen eggs	.20	2 dozen eggs	.50
1 pound cheese	.13	1 pound cheese	.25
1 barrel flour	3.50	1 barrel flour	5.65
4 pounds chicken	.40	4 pounds chicken	.72
21 pounds sugar	1.00	21 pounds sugar	1.16
2 pounds steak	.20	2 pounds steak	.35
5 pounds roast beef	.50	5 pounds roast beef	1.00
	8.28		15.59½
LOOK AT THESE TWO STORE BILLS.		VOTE TO PROTECT YOUR POCKETBOOK.

Your table bill has doubled; have your wages doubled? You pay 100 per cent more for your clothing, blankets, and household goods; has your salary kept pace with the increased cost of living? Your rent is higher and your fuel is higher; how much higher is your weekly wage check? Don't you think you had better help put the trusts that have doubled the cost of living out of business? Congressman GOOD'S vote helped to make the bill $15.59½ instead of $8.28.

In this circular you on that side of the House pointed to the prices of 1896 on farm produce as ideal prices, and you promised to enact a tariff law that would bring back those prices. If that is not the implied promise, what was the purpose and object of the circular? The first article named in this circular, and the price you promised to the consumer, is 2 pounds of salt pork for 10 cents. Think of it, Mr. Farmer, salt port at 5 cents per pound. Hogs are selling to-day in the Chicago market for $8.70 per hundred pounds, and yet you promised to enact a tariff law that would bring to the consumers of this country pork at 5 cents per pound. You gentlemen on that side who represent farming interests find that a caucus rule, for which you voted, absolutely binds you to support this program. But how will your farmer constituents like the result?

Let the Members of this House who are farmers, or let the farmers of the country take this Democratic document and analyze it, taking each article separately, and ascertain how much the farmer will obtain for his produce if the prices above given on farm products should prevail.

Yesterday cattle in the Chicago market sold for $8.90 per hundred pounds, but this Democratic circular promises to the consumer that he should buy his beefsteak at retail at 10 cents per pound. I think I am reasonably safe in asserting that when salt pork and pork chops are selling at retail at 5 and 6 cents per pound live hogs will bring not to exceed $2.75 or $3 per hundred pounds. That when beefsteak sells at retail, allowing for packers', jobbers', and retailers' profits, at 10 cents per pound fat cattle will sell at not to exceed $4.50 or $5 per hundred pounds. Gentlemen on that side may be willing to return to the low bankruptcy prices for farm products and live stock that prevailed in 1896, but the Republican Party believes that the prosperity of the farmer should go hand in hand with the prosperity of the manufacturer and the laborer and every other industry in this country, and that our tariff laws should give that degree of protection that will measure the difference in the cost of production at home and abroad.

Mr. Chairman, recurring to this Democratic circular, what fair inference can be drawn regarding the duties levied by the Payne law upon the articles named? The ordinary reader would fairly infer that the Payne law greatly increases the duty upon those things. Now, what are the facts? The facts are that the Payne law did not increase the duty on a single article on the list. Here is a table showing the duty on those articles in the Dingley law and the changes made in the Payne law:

Table comparing duties in Dingley law and Payne law.

Articles named in circular.	Duties in Dingley law.	Duties in Payne law.	Decreases Payne law.
			Per cent.
Salt port[1]	25 per cent ad valorem	25 per cent ad valorem
Pork chops	2 cents per pound	1½ cents per pound	25
Pork ribs	....do	....do	25
Smoked shoulder[1]	25 per cent ad valorem	25 per cent ad valorem
Sausage[1]	....do	....do
Lard	2 cents per pound	1½ cents per pound	25
Corned beef[1]	25 per cent ad valorem	25 per cent ad valorem
Butter[1]	6 cents per pound	6 cents per pound
Eggs[1]	5 cents per dozen	5 cents per dozen
Cheese[1]	6 cents per pound	6 cents per pound
Flour[1]	25 per cent ad valorem.	25 per cent ad valorem.
Chickens[1]	3 cents per pound	3 cents per pound
Sugar	$1.95 per hundred-weight.	$1.90 per hundred-weight.	2½
Steak	2 cents per pound	1½ cents per pound	25
Beef	....do	....do	25

[1] No change.

No increases under Payne law.
Number of decreases under Payne law, 6.

Here we have a concrete statement of the changes made in the Payne tariff on these articles. Of the 15 articles named, the duty on 9 was not changed. On the remaining 6 articles the duty on 1 was reduced 2½ per cent, and on the other 5 articles the Payne law reduced the duty 25 per cent. We are told by this campaign circular, which is a lie upon its face, that the Payne law increased the price of pork chops 150 per cent, when in fact the Payne law reduced the duty on pork chops 25 per cent.

Mr. Chairman, in the name of the honest and hard-working farmer, I protest against the lies that are now being circulated about his industry. We ought to encourage farming and stock raising. We should induce the men and women who are annually flocking to our shores to leave the overcrowded cities and take up agricultural pursuits. But if you on that side can not say a good word for the farmer, you should at least quit lying about his industry.

Mr. LANGLEY. Mr. Chairman, earlier in the day I said I was not going to take up any of the time of the committee, because I knew it was useless; but as we proceed step by step in this bill you are rubbing it in so hard on many of the industries of the district which I represent that I am bound to say a few words more.

Cattle raising is one of the great industries of our State. To my mind it is an economic absurdity to put a duty on cattle and then put on the free list that which cattle are converted into. The effect of it, as I view it, is to bunco the farmer and whipsaw the packing industry of the United States and the laboring men employed in that industry. Watch the price of cattle go down after this bill goes into operation.

Mr. Chairman, I shall say nothing further at present, but I want to have read in my time a resolution adopted at a recent nonpartisan mass meeting in the city of Buffalo, attended by about 2,500 citizens, in which they expressed their views upon this matter. I send it to the Clerk's desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

APRIL 26, 1913.

Hon. JOHN W. LANGLEY,
House of Representatives, City.

DEAR SIR: The city of Buffalo is up in arms over the provision——

Mr. LANGLEY. I only asked to have the resolution read.

SEVERAL MEMBERS. Read it all.

Mr. LANGLEY. I have no objection to the Clerk reading it all.

The CHAIRMAN. What was the request of the gentleman from Kentucky?

Mr. LANGLEY. My request was that the Clerk read the resolution adopted at that meeting.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Whereas we, the citizens of Buffalo, in a mass meeting assembled this 23d day of April, 1913, upon consideration of the proposed changes in tariff schedules now pending in Congress as affecting wheat, oats, wheat flour, cereals, live stock, and dressed meats, by which all raw materials in each case would be left subject to a substantial tax, while the finished products of such materials would be admitted to this country free of duty; and

Whereas we are advised and believe that the certain effect of such legislation would be to destroy live stock, milling, and packing industries in this city and elsewhere now engaging vast amounts of capital and employing thousands of workmen; and

Whereas we believe that the Congress of the United States would not wittingly enact such disastrous legislation if the situation were thoroughly understood: Therefore be it

Resolved, That if flour, cereals, and meats are admitted free, then the raw materials—wheat, oats, and live stock—should also be admitted free; and be it further

Resolved, That we do earnestly protest against legislation that imposes a duty on wheat, oats, and live stock, while permitting free entry to this country of wheat flour, cereals, and dressed meat, and we beseech Congress to give further serious consideration to the far-reaching effects of such legislation, and not to pass a tariff bill containing such unjustifiable and disastrous measures.

Mr. LANGLEY. I commend these resolutions to the prayerful consideration of the distinguished gentleman from Buffalo.

Mr. KENT. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen, I do not suppose I ought to say anything about the meat schedule, because I am interested in the meat business. I am a cattle feeder and a cattle breeder on a considerable scale. To my mind the Democratic Ways and Means Committee made a serious mistake in not putting cattle on the free list, and I am going to move to amend the bill to that effect. Our pasturage in this country is well taken up to-day. We all know, if we are experienced in the cattle-raising business, that in most parts of the country it is a great expense to carry the breeding cow through the winter. This is one of the heaviest costs in raising cattle. Northern Mexico is a wonderful place for cheaply producing calves and young cattle. They can there be started much cheaper than in most parts of this country, and provided they can be taken out and brought to a northern climate where they will make good growth the result is a great cheapening of our meat supply.

The difference between a 3-year-old steer in Arizona, New Mexico, or Mexico and his brother sent north as a yearling is at least 300 pounds. Therefore, as a citizen hoping for a more adequate meat supply, I believe in free cattle, and as a cattle raiser and cattle breeder I am in no fear of damage to my business or the wages of my employees from free cattle.

Mr. Chairman, we have had a lot of misinformation in this House concerning the packers. For 25 years I have been up against the Chicago packers. I know what they have taken that did not belong to them, and how much they have taken that did not belong to them, but to-day they have a very small influence on the cost of the best meat. Their charges for handling a standard steer are, I believe, less than $3, possibly a little over $2. That on an animal that is worth $110 is a small percentage. This talk of the farmer being wrecked and ruined by the advent of free meat from Argentina and other places is the veriest nonsense.

The proof of that is in Panama, where Col. Wilson, living in a free-trade market, where he can get Argentine meat, prefers to stock his commissary with the more expensive corn-fed cattle from the Middle West, as it is better stuff and can be handled without much waste. He furnishes the best porter-house steak at 20 cents a pound, and he gets rid of all unconscionable distributing charges that are common in the butcher shops throughout the country. I do not blame the butcher; he is not getting rich; he is wasting too much and he is paying out money in rent and all sort of delivery charges. The great trouble with us to-day is this waste in distribution.

I am selling upward of 5,000 corn-fed cattle a year and a good many grass cattle. I wish to state frankly that I am not afraid of the influx of cattle or beef from other countries. It is not going to hurt anybody or do anyone much good. The world demand for meat is greater than the supply. I have in my office the statement of a great concern in England which handles frozen meat; this statement shows that our American export has dropped off to almost a negligible quantity. Almost every country in Europe is trying to import frozen meat. It is being kept out of France by ridiculous agrarian legislation. Even Switzerland is importing meat. Meat is a luxury and always will be. It will never be cheap again, and beef is the most costly of meats. It is our obvious duty to conserve the grass and to study cheaper methods of feeding that we may produce as reasonably as possible.

A mere statement of costs of feeding shows the extravagant nature of beef as a human food.

It takes 56 pounds of corn to make 4 pounds of beef with 2 pounds of pork as a by-product. With high-priced land we can not produce corn-fed beef at prices below what means luxury. We ought to save in the cost of the calf; we must mature our meat more cheaply. There is no sense nor logic in a duty on cattle. There is no danger to anyone in free meat or untaxed imports of live cattle.

Mr. Chairman, I move to amend to the effect that cattle be put on the free list.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from California offers an amendment to the amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend the amendment by striking out "15 per cent ad valorem" and inserting "free of duty."

Mr. BROUSSARD. Mr. Chairman, I know full well that it is believed that the only thing I know in regard to this tariff is the sugar schedule. As a matter of fact, I have given more study personally, theoretically, and as a concrete proposition, to the meat question than I have given to the sugar question. The tariff on beef and meat has not now, and never has had, anything to do with the price of meat in this country. I have been in Sonora, Mexico, on the Couchiverrichi ranch, where I have a camp, at different times, and last year when the Madero revolution was in force in Mexico—the undivided one-half of that ranch being owned by an American friend of mine—I obtained permission from the Treasury Department to transfer from that ranch, which runs up to the international line—the line along Arizona and New Mexico—several thousand head of cattle, and they were permitted to enter this country upon a bond being furnished to return them within six months. These steers were transferred and they lived among the cattle in Arizona and New Mexico for six months. Then, as I recall it, I obtained a further extension of time under the law from the Secretary of the Treasury, which permitted them to stay for six months longer. They had finally then to be brought back onto the Couchiverrichi ranch.

The result of all this was that when they brought these steers back into Sonora, across the line from Douglas, Ariz., the owners, I am informed, as I know was done with other cattle in Sonora, killed the steers in order to sell the hides in this country, and they let the meat rot on the field. This is a fact. I bought meat—and I have been under contract for the last five years to buy half a steer twice a week at my camp—for 25 Mexican cents a kilo, which is approximately 4½ cents a pound. The other half of the steer is brought to Douglas, Ariz., and the duty there is paid upon it and the meat is then sold for 35 cents gold a kilo. I paid 4½ cents in my camp in Sonora and the American consumer at Douglas, right across the way, paid 35 cents for the other half of that same steer. No man can contradict that statement, because for four years that has been my experience. It is 34 miles from the border. Half of the steer came into my camp at 4½ cents and the American consumer—and I and my men were consumers of this meat—paid in Douglas 35 cents a pound from the retailer—the restaurant man. What did the duty have to do with that?

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Louisiana has expired.

Mr. BROUSSARD. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that I may be permitted to proceed for five minutes more.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I can not consent to an extension of this debate. I would like to, but if I do it for one gentleman, I would have to for another.

Mr. BROUSSARD. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent and the gentleman may object if he desires.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I am compelled to object.

Mr. MONDELL rose.

The CHAIRMAN. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

Mr. MONDELL. I rise to oppose the amendment offered by the gentleman from California.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will state that debate has been closed upon this amendment by unanimous consent of the committee.

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that I may address the committee for five minutes.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I am compelled to object to that.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Alabama has objected. All time has expired. The question is on the amendment to the amendment.

Mr. MURDOCK. Mr. Chairman, what is the amendment?

The CHAIRMAN. The amendment to the amendment proposed by the gentleman from California to place beef upon the free list.

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. MONDELL. Is all debate on the paragraph and all amendments thereto closed?

The CHAIRMAN. Debate on the paragraph and all amendments thereto, by order of the committee, has been closed. The question is on the amendment to the amendment offered by the gentleman from California.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. MANN) there were—ayes 13, noes 99.

So the amendment to the amendment was rejected.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. SLOAN].

The question was taken, and the amendment was rejected.

Mr. GOOD. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment as a new paragraph.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend by inserting as a new paragraph, at the end of line 17, page 50, the following:

"Fresh beef, veal, mutton, lamb, pork, and venison, and other game, except birds, 25 per cent ad valorem."

Mr. GOOD. Mr. Chairman, the paragraph which I have offered restores the present duty on fresh meat. I believe that the present law, so far as the duty on cattle and on fresh meats is concerned, is practically a competitive duty, as described by the gentleman from Alabama. In 1907, during the eight months ending with the month of February, there were imported into this country 12,513 head of cattle. During the eight corresponding months of last year there were imported into this country 222,000 head of cattle, upon which the duty of 27½ per cent ad valorem was paid. I realize that the cattle industry and the live-stock industry has undergone some great changes in the past six years. There is to-day a shortage of more than 15,000,000 head of cattle in the United States, and other countries have noted that shortage and desire to take advantage of it. I hold in my hand the Daily——

Mr. GOULDEN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GOOD. Not at present.

Mr. GOULDEN. Just a simple question.

Mr. GOOD. By reference to the Daily Consular and Trade Reports of January 23, 1913, I find this quotation:

Australian meat has been put on sale at San Francisco, Cal. The ship which has just brought the trial order left 300,000 pounds of beef and mutton at Honolulu for the Army in the Hawaiian Islands.

Also, in the issue of the Daily Consular and Trade Reports of August 19, 1912, is found an item relative to prices on meats in Peru:

Lima does not suffer from high cost of meats. The ruling prices in the central market are 12, 20, and 25 centavos (5½, 9½, and 12½ cents American) a pound, the latter for choice loin cuts, and it is excellent beef at that.

Mr. KINKEAD of New Jersey. Will the gentleman permit an interruption there?

Mr. GOOD. I can not; I have not the time. The gentleman can get time. To show that this bill has been framed in the interest of the Beef Trust, I want to say that gentlemen on that side of the aisle—Democratic members of the Ways and Means Committee—have said they did not experience any difficulty with the West in reducing the duties on cattle and meat products, but they experienced their difficulty in the East. Well, I guess that is true. The western farmer realized that you were opposed to his industry, and they are willing to submit this bill to the test of actual experience. The difficulty you encountered was Wall Street, and that difficulty was met by putting beef on the free list and a duty on cattle. The Daily Consular and Trade Reports of May 18, 1912, states:

It is reported that work has been commenced on the new freezing works that are to be built at Zarate. The concession for these works belongs to one of the Beef Trust companies. * * * The report of the directors of the River Plate Fresh Meat Co. for 1912 shows a net profit of $279,000, out of which a dividend of 10 per cent is recommended, $50,000 placed to reserve, and $41,000 forward.

Beef Trust plants located in Argentina and Australia can under this bill bring in their meats free of duty, but this bill denies to the independent packers, whose only plants are located in this country, the right to bring their cattle in free. Yes; you met your trouble down East unquestionably; you met it by yielding to these trust magnates who receive these large dividends.

The big four are already firmly established in South America. Swift & Co. control the La Plata Cold Storage Co. (Ltd.), at La Plata, which is just south of Buenos Aires, and also operate a plant at Montevideo, Uruguay. Morris & Co. control the Sociedad Anonima La Blanca, in which for the present Armour & Co. are interested. Armour & Co. also have a plant now in course of construction in South America. Schwarzschild & Sulzberger Co. have men on the ground now building a plant in Buenos Aires.

The voice of the lowly farmer could not reach the Ways and Means Committee and secure the protection which his industry demands. It required greater influence, and that influence put meats on the free list and gave to the Beef Trust a great advantage over the independent packer. It is to be regretted that the spirit of fair play did not prevail to the extent of writing in this bill a fair protection both on cattle and on meats. But our Democratic friends are unfair to the farmer and dishonest with his industry. The fact is that during the past decade prices have been advancing the world over, and in no place have they advanced more rapidly than in free-trade England. The Dingley law became effective in 1897, and the Payne law wrote scarcely a single increase in the duties on agricultural products. Hence the increase in prices on farm produce that has taken place during the past 10 years can not be charged to the tariff. It is traceable to some other cause.

The finding of the commission appointed by Gov. Dix to investigate the cost of living is most instructive. It gives this incident showing the relation between prices received by the farmer for his product and the prices the consumer is obliged to pay for the same article. A farmer on Long Island sent to the New York market 25 bushels of string beans. At the end of 10 days he received a check for 76 cents for his product. The commission also found that at the time of this transaction string beans were sold at retail in New York City at 10 cents per quart, or $3.20 per bushel. I suppose our Democratic friends will claim that the tariff on string beans was the cause of the high price which the consumers of New York were compelled to pay for those beans, but they will have great difficulty in convincing the farmer who received 76 cents for his 25 bushels of string beans that the tariff cut very much figure in the transaction.

Our Democratic friends claim that the tariff is responsible for all the evils in our body politic. If prices are too high, they assign the evil to the tariff. If the prices are not high enough, the tariff is responsible. And so, to correct the existing evils, they propose to tear down, to destroy industry. I submit that if this bill shall become a law the sober sense of the American people will record its verdict in favor of a policy to regulate and not destroy, to protect and not to kill American enterprise and American industry.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I have heard of some animals that move backward, and I have discovered in this tariff debate that there are some mentalities that move backward. When you hear it announced on the floor of this House that legislation is in favor of a great monopoly when you put the article that that monopoly makes on the free list, it is mental gymnastics that I am not able to grasp. But, as a matter of fact, the gentleman's party, when they reduced their rates under the present law to ad valorem rates, were in exactly the position that this bill is in except their rates were higher. The duty to-day on cattle, on an average, is 27 per cent. This bill reduces it to 10 per cent, or cuts off 17 per cent of tax. The duty on fresh beef, reduced to an ad valorem, is about 17 per cent. The legislation in this bill is to reduce it to no per cent, cutting off 17 per cent.

Now, I do not say that those mathematics on the part of the Ways and Means Committee were intentional, but, as a matter of fact, the rate produced the result, and the rate on cattle and the rate on beef are both reduced by just 17 per cent of a cut. Now, I can not see where the gentlemen on that side of the Chamber can find, if it is merely a question of adjusting these duties to similar rates, any great amount of criticism, because the balance remains as it is under the present law, except under this law the American people will have free meat and a very great reduction on cattle.

Mr. BROUSSARD. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I can not yield. The gentleman from Iowa [Mr. GOOD] talks about sausage meat, I suppose.

Mr. GOOD. That is one of the items contained in your bill.

Mr. BROUSSARD. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I can not yield now.

The gentleman from Iowa [Mr. GOOD] overlooked the fact that so far as his criticism in reference to that proposition is concerned, both swine and swine meat are placed on the free list in this bill. He forgot that in his argument.

The whole proposition, though, is this: That this party on this side of the House promised to the American people free bread and free meat, and we are keeping our promise to the American people to-day as we have done in the past. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

Mr. Chairman, I move that all debate on the pending amendment be now closed.

Mr. McGUIRE of Oklahoma, Mr. MONDELL, Mr. CAMPBELL, and Mr. MANN rose.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I am closing it on the amendment of the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. GOOD].

Mr. MONDELL. Is the gentleman proposing to close debate on the paragraph?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. On the new paragraph offered by the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. GOOD].

Mr. McGUIRE of Oklahoma. It is already closed on the main paragraph.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I have entered into an agreement with the House as to debate on the paragraph.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Alabama moves that debate on the pending amendment be now closed.

Mr. MANN. This amendment is to place meat on the dutiable list. The gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. McGUIRE] and the gentleman from Wyoming [Mr. MONDELL] are both very much interested. Will not the gentleman make it 10 minutes?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I will. I ask unanimous consent, Mr. Chairman, to make it 10 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Alabama asks unanimous consent that all debate on this amendment be closed in 10 minutes.

Mr. BROUSSARD. Mr. Chairman, reserving the right to object, will not the gentleman make it 15 minutes, so that I can get 5 minutes?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Yes; I will.

Mr. GARDNER. Will not the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] yield to a question before he sits down?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Let us get through with this first.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Alabama asks unanimous consent that all debate on this amendment be closed in 15 minutes, 5 minutes to be yielded to the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. McGUIRE], 5 minutes to the gentleman from Wyoming [Mr. MONDELL], and 5 minutes to the gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. BROUSSARD]. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. GARDNER. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from Alabama may have time sufficient to answer a question. The gentleman stated that the duty of 1½ cents a pound, which is the present duty on beef, was the equivalent of 17 per cent. At what price per pound does he calculate his meat?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I did not make the calculation. It is the calculation of the Treasury Department for the year 1910, and the Treasury Department says the unit of value for that year was 8.4 per cent.

Mr. GARDNER. That is what I made it. I wanted to show that it was calculated incorrectly on beef that was worth less than 9 cents a pound.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I refer the gentleman to the Treasury Department.

Mr. GARDNER. That was in 1910.

[Mr. McGUIRE of Oklahoma addressed the committee. See Appendix.]

Mr. MONDELL. The gentleman from Oklahoma is the most conservative man I know. He has placed the number of lies told about the Payne bill at only 1,000,000.

Mr. McGUIRE of Oklahoma. I mean the number of liars.

Mr. MONDELL. Still more conservative.

This bill places meats on the free list. It has retained a 10 per cent duty on cattle. That means that the gentleman from New Jersey can assure his people that meats are going to be cheaper, while the gentlemen from Texas and Missouri can assure their people that the placing of meats on the free list is going to make no difference, because cattle are still taxed.

The fact is there is no logic whatever in placing meats on the free list and taxing live animals; and if the gentlemen were entirely honest in their endeavor to reduce the price of beef in this country, and were willing to sacrifice the American farmer to do it, they would put both cattle and meat on the free list. You say to the dwellers along the seaboard that you are going to give them cheaper meats, and if you do, you place all the cattle growers of the country in competition with the Argentine and Australia, and at the same time you refuse to allow the cattle growers to secure their stock at a lower price from the only country where we can secure it in any large numbers, to wit, Mexico. But Mexico happens to lie adjacent to the empire State of Texas, hence the duty of 10 per cent on cattle and no duty on meats. Open the gates of Texas to the cattle of Mexico without a duty and the cheapest yearlings grown on earth will come in to feed on the grasses of Texas and the country to the north, where the great ranges lie. While the cattle raisers would suffer from the lower price for meat, owing to free importation of meats, they would at least have the advantage of lower raw material. While the men in Kansas and Nebraska would suffer by the lower price of meat at the seacoast, they might gain something through cheaper cattle coming into the range country from Mexico to be there grown and then shipped to the corn States to be fed.

But you could not carry out a logical proposition. The geography of your party is such that you can not do it.

Mr. SLAYDEN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MONDELL. I have only five minutes. You could not carry out a logical proposition like that, which would lower the price of meat in the United States somewhat with the least possible injury to the American stockman; but you have a combination here which no one can defend, which has no logic in it, under which you propose to keep out the cheap young stock grown in Mexico and at the same time put the American farmer in competition with the frozen meat from abroad.

But if you gentlemen want to be consistent, and you honestly want to do what you claim you want to do, you will put cattle on the free list along with meat. If you want to give the American farmer and ranchman the opportunity he is entitled to, to grow and fatten the best meats in the world for the American people, you will place neither meats nor live stock on the free list.

Mr. BROUSSARD. Mr. Chairman, I started out a while ago with the statement that the duty on cattle does not affect the price of meat in this country so long as the prevailing quarantine laws continue in force, and owing to the shortness of my time I was unable to finish my argument.

I had this proposition presented to this Government by the Government of Spanish Honduras: Can we ship cattle into the United States and break down the price of meat? I took the trouble to go from Puerto Cortez, a ride of 360 miles, to Tegucigalpa, the capital, where I talked with the then President of the Republic, and he secured the signatures to an assent to deliver to me 300,000 four-year-old steers, fat and ready for market, at $20 Honduran money, which, being at the rate of 40 cents on a dollar, meant $8 apiece. At that time steers of that character were selling in Chicago at over $40 apiece. I came back here not with a view of getting the contracts, but I wanted the slaughterhouses in the city of New Orleans, of Mobile, of the coast cities, to get these 300,000 head of steers and bring them from Honduras, the cost of transportation by water being $3.75 apiece, making $11.75 for steers that were selling in St. Louis and Kansas City for nearly $40 apiece. They appealed to me to present the matter to the Secretary of Agriculture. I went to him and he said that there might be some disease among them. The Government of Spanish Honduras put up the money and had two experts sent by the Secretary of Agriculture. They went down there and found nothing the matter with the cattle except that they had ticks. Now, the ticks abound from the 36th degree of north latitude, which includes North and South Carolina and California, and the 36th degree of south latitude, which includes a part of Argentina, where the British get their meat.

There are ticks everywhere between these lines. We ship cattle from Louisiana, North Carolina, Texas, and Tennessee into the markets of Kansas City, Chicago, and East St. Louis; we ship them for immediate slaughter, and no objections are urged to them under the quarantine laws. And yet these 300,000 steers could not be brought into New Orleans, Galveston, Beaumont, or anywhere along the Gulf coast or on the Atlantic seaboard to be slaughtered immediately as they do in Chicago with southern cattle, because the Secretary of Agriculture said they had ticks.

You could kill the cattle and bring them into the country, bring the hides with the ticks on them in, bring the meat into the country, because ticks do not affect the meat, and yet the influence of the Meat Trust was such that these 300,000 steers are still in Honduras dying of old age or being slaughtered for their hides, and the American people are still demanding cheap beef. The gentlemen in charge of this bill have never investigated the subject and are not willing to permit these cattle to be brought into the country and compete with the Meat Trust. These are the facts. The Government of Honduras paid the entire expenses, and the report was in the hands of the Secretary of Agriculture, a copy of which is in my office, and yet these cattle can not be brought into this country so as to permit competition with the Meat Trust.

You talk about the meats from Argentina and your meat being made cheaper by having this bill passed. I will tell you that you will not cheapen meat at all until cattle from Chihuahua and Sonora and Guatemala and Costa Rica and Honduras, millions of them, can be brought into this country in the tick territory for immediate slaughter. We have a large tick territory in this country, as they have in Mexico and South and Central America, and yet gentlemen say taking the duty off will cheapen meat; but I tell you that it never will until you have regulated that proposition. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Louisiana has expired; all time has expired; and the question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. GOOD].

The question was taken, and the amendment was lost.

Mr. SLOAN. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend by inserting, after section 188, a section to be numbered 188½ and to read as follows:
"All meats, including fresh beef, pork, lamb, veal, and all prepared or preserved meat, including ham and bacon, 15 per cent ad valorem."

Mr. SLOAN. Mr. Chairman, it has been suggested that a tariff will not in any way affect the price of beef or cattle. If that be true, I see no occasion for this session of Congress or for the modification of this particular schedule. I do not believe that it affects this to the extent that a great many people claim. I want to call the attention of the committee to this one fact: The purpose of this bill is largely shown in Schedule G, where the greatest reductions are made. The reductions amount to twice as much in Schedule G as they do in any other schédule—directed against that 60 per cent of the area of the United States lying in the West. I want to call the attention of the committee to this fact: On page 3 of this report, at the head of the many alleged evils that are to be corrected by this bill, stands this most elevated target: Farm products, increase from 1897, 93.2 per cent. I take it that it is the admitted purpose and claim of this bill to do away with those profits. They did not say anything about that out West. We hear a good deal about it here. I want to tell the chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means that if he had gone throughout the West and had had Members upon that side declare that they would have free meats and cereals and other farm products there would not have been a Member elected from the great Northwest to sit upon that side. They did not talk about that; and while I am talking about the membership from the Northwest, I want to state this particular fact: We are protectionists in that great Northwest.

I have looked over the returns of the elections in every district of the United States, and I find those who were opposed to protection have carried a majority vote in only 211 congressional districts of the United States, while in 224 districts of the United States the protection votes were in a majority. [Applause on the Republican side.]

There is a great deal of misinformation leading to this sort of action, and some of it comes from exceedingly high authority. I have in my hand a copy of a speech that was delivered on September 12, 1912, in Albany, by a man who has been elevated to high authority in this country. This is what he said:

Take the price of meat, for instance, and the price of meat is at the heart of the business, for it is meat that makes the red blood and makes work easier. The price of meat has gone up 30 and 40 per cent in 10 years in this country, and the price of American meat has not gone up a fraction of a cent per pound in the London markets.

If he means by that that wholesale meat has not gone up in the English markets, I will call the attention of the Congress, and of the gentleman himself, to the actual facts of the price of American meat imported into the United Kingdom for the last 14 years, and I will give an authoritative statement:

Average annual price per hundredweight of all American beef shipped into the United Kingdom.

1899	$10.06
1900	10.25
1901	10.30
1902	10.98
1903	10.35
1904	10.40
1905	10.45
1906	10.45
1907	10.35
1908	11.08
1910	10.88
1911	11.08
1912	12.00

Increase of price of United States beef imported into the United Kingdom for 1912 over 1902, more than 9 per cent.

Average price for last 5 years over average for first 5 years above quoted, nearly 8 per cent.

The increase in the price of United States beef imported into the United Kingdom in 1912 from 1902, which fixes the period he had in mind, was 9 per cent. The average price of 1910, 1911, and 1912, as compared with 1900, 1901, and 1902, was an increase of 7 per cent.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Nebraska has expired.

Mr. SAMUEL W. SMITH. Mr. Chairman, I read this letter to show some of the inconsistencies of this bill:

EAST BUFFALO LIVE STOCK ASSOCIATION,
East Buffalo, N. Y., April 17, 1913.

To Members of the Senate and House of Representatives:

It appears to be the determination of the present Congress and of the President to enact a tariff law admitting meats duty free. This we believe to be a grievous mistake, against which we most earnestly protest; but assuming that meats will be so admitted we respectfully urge that provision be made for the admission of live stock on an equal basis. Otherwise, the producers of meats in this country, which means not alone the so-called "Beef Trust" or "big packer," but the raisers of grass and grain, the farmers, feeders, and stock raisers, as well as the independent butchers and slaughterers, big and little, to the number of several thousands throughout the country, will suffer from such unjust discrimination.

The "big fellow" can take care of himself, either here or abroad, but, while striking at him what is only an imaginary blow in this country, the free admission of meats with a 10 per cent duty on cattle, is but a play into his hands, assisting him in the extension of his operations abroad by opening to him our markets for his foreign productions, with increased profits to himself, to the detriment of actual home producers, the probable throwing out of employment of thousands of workmen, and with no benefit to the consuming public through cheaper meats. The fact is, that the large packers, four in number, constituting the so-called "Beef Trust," already have numerous large plants in Canada and in South America, of which they would immediately avail themselves, and ultimately there would be created and built up a genuine and real world-wide beef trust; and if we really want a beef trust better plans could scarcely be devised for the permanent establishment of such.

With the free admission of meat animals, however, still assuming that meats are to be free, conditions would be more nearly equalized. The farmer, grazier, and feeder could obtain thin stock for raising and fattening, and the home butcher would be on an equal footing in the purchase of supplies. Competition would be on an equitable basis, the law of supply and demand would have a fair opportunity of asserting itself and if benefits are possible they might be realized.

The following, quoted from an interview with Mr. A. J. Shamberg, vice president of the National Live Stock Exchange, appearing in a recent issue of the New York Journal of Commerce, is indorsed and commended to your earnest consideration:

"When the hearings are held in Washington a delegation will be present to present the argument that the raising of the duty on dressed beef while leaving a duty on live cattle will not tend to the reduction of the price of meat. The placing of a duty of 10 per cent on live cattle and allowing dressed beef to come in duty free will further assist the so-called Beef Trust to kill off smaller packers throughout the United States and also to throttle the foreign raisers of live stock, some of the reasons for which are as follows:

"(1) Only very large corporations can maintain killing plants throughout the world and successfully meet keen rivalry.

"(2) Nobody can import live cattle for slaughter in the United States and sell beef thereof in competition with imported dressed beef if the rate of duty is to favor the dead article 10 per cent.

"In consequence, the foreign live-stock raisers will be forced to sell to those interests which have the slaughtering facilities in foreign lands, as they neither can slaughter at home nor ship here alive in competition, owing to such duty discrimination.

"Also our smaller slaughterers throughout this country will not be able either to import the live cattle, owing to duty discrimination against live cattle, nor establish slaughtering plants in foreign countries, owing to the large capital necessary for such.

"As a matter of equity, and to eliminate monopoly, sure to establish itself, the rate of duty should be in favor of the importation of live cattle for the following reasons:

"(1) Because the expense of feeding and shrinkage of carcass is eliminated in transporting beef in competition with transporting live cattle.

"(2) Because the business of importing live cattle would be open to hundreds of persons, the competition among whom in selling would produce cheaper meat (despite extra handling expense) than would the importation of dressed beef handled by comparatively few firms.

"(3) Imported dressed beef will not create the demand for labor, being the finished article, that would be created with importations of live cattle which are to be slaughtered and manufactured into beef, thus creating industry at home.

"Briefly, to tax live cattle and let in dressed beef will place the meat industry in a few hands, encourage foreign industry of slaughter, permit monopolists to dictate prices they will pay for cattle abroad, and the prices meat must sell for here. Legislation of this sort will, I believe, meet strenuous opposition and have to be altered.

"Again, our farmers will be confronted with the importation of meats and not be able to bring in thin stock for feding purposes, and, in time, this would mean the reduction in corn raising, 85 per cent of which great crop is being now used in feeding live stock.

"My hope is that live cattle will be allowed in free, thus creating industry for the farmer, a market for his grains, and stimulus to animal husbandry which supplements the fertility of his soil. Meat should pay a duty of at least 1 cent per pound as a protection to home producers and in the indirect interests of consumers as well."

Respectfully,

EAST BUFFALO LIVE STOCK ASSOCIATION.

Mr. RAINEY. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman who has just taken his seat made the statement, as I understood him, that if the Democratic Party prior to the last election had declared in the West and in the Northwest that they proposed in this bill to give to the people of this country free meat and free bread we would not have elected a single Representative in the entire West or Northwest. I want to call the attention of the gentleman from Nebraska to the bill on which we made our campaign. On the 8th day of May, 1911, we passed through the House a bill which provided for free beef, free veal, free mutton, free lamb, free pork, and meats of all kinds, fresh, salted, pickled, dried, smoked, dressed or undressed, prepared or preserved in any manner, bacon, ham, shoulders, lard, lard compound, and lard substitutes, sausage and sausage meats coming from any foreign country with which the United States has a reciprocal trade agreement and which shall admit from the United States free of duty cotton, wheat, oats, corn, cattle, and hogs, buckwheat flour, cornmeal, wheat flour, semilina, rye flour, bran, middlings, and other offals of grain, oatmeal, rolled oats, and all prepared breakfast foods.

That is the proposition upon which we made our campaign, and this bill passed the Senate and was vetoed by the President of the United States on the 18th day of August, 1911. We gave to the country fair notice that if the Democrats controlled this body and controlled the Senate and controlled the Chief Executive of the Nation we proposed to do these very things. The President vetoed this bill. Is not the fact that we have elected so many Representatives in the Northwest on this sort of a platform due to the fact that we declared in favor of these free foods, and especially due to the fact that the President vetoed this bill, thereby placing the Republican Party in a position of opposition to it all?

Now, they say that the small tariff we have retained on live cattle will prevent the importation into this country of live cattle from the Republic of Mexico, and yet last year when the tariff upon live cattle was nearly three times as much as we have placed it in this bill, when the tariff amounted to 27 per cent ad valorem, and we have placed it now at 10 per cent, we brought into the United States 330,000 head of cattle. Now, when we have lowered the tariff to 10 per cent, when we have made it about one-third of what it was, does it follow and is it logical that fewer cattle will come across the boundary from the Republic of Mexico? Why, instead of 27 per cent——

Mr. MONDELL. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RAINEY. Yes.

Mr. MONDELL. The gentleman has stated the number of cattle that came in at the higher rate. I presume the gentleman wants more to come in. Does not the gentleman think that more cattle would come in if they were free than at the 10 per cent rate?

Mr. RAINEY. I do not think the nominal rate of 10 per cent ad valorem will make any material difference in the amount of importations from Mexico from what the importations would be if cattle were free, but it will result in additional importations. We have not kept this 10 per cent ad valorem on cattle for the purpose of protecting the farmers of this country. The gentlemen who are talking upon the other side can not make the farmers of this country believe in a high duty on cattle. They want cattle in their industry. Why, it is to the interest of the farmers of this country——

Mr. GOOD. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RAINEY. I can not at present. It is to the interest of the farmers of this country to get their free raw material from Mexico just as cheaply as they can get it.

Mr. GOOD. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman who has just taken his seat is an expert on the subject of this agricultural schedule, and especially with regard to meat. Now, I hold in my hand the Democratic campaign document that I referred to a moment ago, which was circulated either by the Democratic national committee or the Democratic congressional committee, entitled "The High Cost of Living," quoting the prices on meats for 1896 and pointing to those prices as the ideal price, and I want to ask the gentleman this question: If this bill shall become a law, as it now appears, with free meats and a duty of 10 per cent upon cattle, with free hogs and free pork products, how much will that reduce, in the gentleman's estimation, the price of meat to the consumer?

Mr. RAINEY. I will say to the gentleman, we put swine upon the free list now. The gentleman seems to be objecting. Last year we brought in 994 hogs. What difference does that make?

Mr. GOOD. I would like to have the gentleman answer my question. How much will this bill, if it is enacted into law, reduce the price of meat to the ultimate consumer?

Mr. RAINEY. I do not know how much we will be able to reduce the cost of living in this country.

Mr. GOOD. I am not asking that.

Mr. RAINEY. But if under Democratic administration we will be able to check the increased price of living that has been growing under Republican administration, then we will have accomplished much.

Mr. GOOD. Will the gentleman answer what is in the campaign circular, or state that it is absolutely false——

Mr. RAINEY. I do not know anything about the campaign circular.

Mr. GOOD. I will be glad to show the gentleman a copy of it, because I went to the expense of having some of these campaign circulars printed and circulated among the farmers in my district. I want to know how much will the enactment of this bill into law reduce the price of meat to the consumers. I want the gentleman to be honest with Members of the House at least.

Mr. RAINEY. The gentleman can not expect the gentleman from Illinois to be a prophet. In this case we are trying to reduce the cost of living in this country; in this case, the cost of meat. We promised to do it, and we are going to do it.

Mr. GOOD. How much will be the reduction?

Mr. RAINEY. How much does the gentleman think it will take?

Mr. GOOD. How much do I say? I say you will give all the reduction to the Beef Trust, every bit, by putting a duty upon cattle.

Mr. BUTLER. That is wrong.

Mr. GOOD. Now, I ask the gentleman, as he is an expert and I am not——

Mr. RAINEY. The gentleman will not get many men to agree with him on that proposition.

Mr. GOOD. Will it reduce the price 5 cents a pound on beefsteak?

Mr. RAINEY. I hope it will reduce it as much as the present tariff raised it, if the present tariff has raised it.

Mr. GOOD. Has the present tariff raised it?

Mr. RAINEY. I do not know whether it has or not.

Mr. GOOD. Will the enactment of this law reduce the price? By putting swine and pork on the free list, will that reduce the price of salt pork and of fresh pork?

Mr. RAINEY. It will only affect the importation of 500 hogs. We took that off of the dutiable list because it is one of the Republican absurdities.

Mr. GOOD. But you put on the campaign circular by means of which Democrats obtained places in this House a list of 13 articles, among them salt pork, pork chops, pork ribs, and lard. You put all of those in your campaign circular, and said that the enactment of the Payne law increased the cost of them 50 per cent to the consumer, and now you say the repeal of the Payne law will not amount to a single penny to the ultimate consumer. Did you tell the truth when you issued that campaign circular, or do you tell the truth when you admit that the enactment of this law will not reduce the price to the ultimate consumer? [Applause on the Republican side.]

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Unless some other gentlemen wish to speak on this amendment, I move that the debate close in five minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] moves that debate on this amendment close in five minutes. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Iowa [Mr. TOWNER] is recognized.

Mr. TOWNER. Mr. Chairman, I presume it would be well for us to consider the object of these proposed reductions. It has been stated over and over again that their object is to give to the consumer cheaper prices on food products. There has never been on the floor of this House one single fact stated upon which an argument could be based that would show that these reductions that you propose on these farm products will bring to the consumer cheaper food prices. A few years ago the Secretary of Agriculture made an investigation regarding the prices that were paid by the ultimate consumer of farm products, and he found that the ultimate consumer was paying about 100 per cent higher prices than the farmer was receiving for his products. If you really desire to consider the interests of all the people, as you say you do, would it not be more practical statesmanship for you to suggest some measure by which 100 per cent of the cost to the ultimate consumer is consumed by transportation and middlemen's profits and the combinations that are affected, both in the cities and out, in the disposition of these farm products? It has been stated here by gentlemen over and over again that these reductions in tariff rates will not make one particle of difference in the cost to the ultimate consumer of food products.

Mr. DIES. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TOWNER. I can not yield, I am sorry to say.

If that be true, I will say to the advocates of this bill you are wasting your time; if that be true you are only trying to delude the ultimate consumer with these promises. In fact, that is what you are attempting to do. It was what you did during the last campaign. You went to those men in the East, to the workingmen, and you said, "It is true you are receiving high wages. We do not propose to reduce them, but we do propose to reduce the cost of living one-half." And you went to the farmers of the West and said, "Do not be frightened about taking off the duties on your products. It will not make a particle of difference. You never received any protection. You will get as much for your products after we have gone into power and passed our bill as you ever did, but the benefit will be to you in that you will get a large reduction on everything from the East that you are compelled to purchase."

So you made the East believe that they could sell everything they had to sell high, and you made the West believe they could sell everything they had to sell high, and you made both of them believe they could buy everything they had to use low. The proposition is, as these gentlemen put it, and are now making it, that the same people can sell everything they have to sell high and purchase everything they have to use low.

And that is the foundation on which this argument is now based in this House. I consider that this proposition made here, if it shall be judged on the declarations of these men who favor these reductions in farm products—a declaration made this afternoon—is absolutely unreasonable and inconsistent. [Applause on the Republican side.]

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. SLOAN].

The question was taken, and the amendment was rejected.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

190. Sheep, 10 per cent ad valorem.

Mr. WILLIS. Mr. Chairman, I desire to offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Ohio [Mr. WILLIS] offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 50, line 21, after the word "sheep," strike out the words "10 per cent ad valorem" and insert in lieu thereof "$1 per head."

Mr. WILLIS. Mr. Chairman, I have offered this amendment in the confident hope and fond expectation that it will be adopted. [Laughter on the Democratic side.]

But I have offered it particularly for the purpose of calling attention to one of the absurdities in this bill. As has been pointed out already here, the purpose of this bill seems to be particularly to strike a blow at the farmer. Substantially everything that the farmer produces is either placed upon the free list or has the rate of duty upon it greatly reduced.

The item under consideration is no exception to that rule. As in the case of one of the other items that has just been discussed, however, to speak frankly, unless amendments shall be made to other sections of the bill it would not amount to anything at all to change this rate from 10 per cent ad valorem to $1 per head, or to any other figure, as is the case with the proposed duty upon cattle.

This item here, to speak frankly, is nothing more nor less than "bunc," in order that Democratic Members from agricultural districts may have something to talk about to their farmer constituents. For example, take the duty upon cattle, that we have been discussing. What difference does it make to the farmer, Mr. Chairman, if beef cattle and sheep are taken from the free list and placed on the dutiable list, as they are under the terms of this bill, when beef, mutton, veal, lamb, wool, and hides are placed on the free list? What difference will it make with respect to the price of the farmer's sheep while that item remains in? None at all. It gives him no protection whatever, yet compels him to buy protected clothing.

Every possible product that the foreign sheep raiser can bring into the country is put on the free list. Wool is put on the free list and mutton is put on the free list and sheepskins are put on the free list and mutton tallow is put on the free list. But as it is inconvenient and disagreeable and undesirable for Democratic Members who happen to come from agricultural districts to have to go to the farmers and say, "Everything you raise is on the free list," therefore, in order to let Members from Missouri or Texas, we will say, save their faces with their farmer constituents, a fake duty is placed on sheep of 10 per cent ad valorem, and a similar duty is placed on cattle.

Of course, as they have already discovered in the examination of this bill, it is a great thing if there can be somebody on the committee to look after these "special industries" that were discussed yesterday. On the subject of sheep and on the subject of wool we find that a wise discrimination was made by certain able gentlemen in order that the goat industry might be fully protected, while wool and mutton were put on the free list; and then, in order to pull the wool, or the goat hair [laughter], as the case might be, over the eyes of the farmer, an item is put in here, so that the Democratic Members running for reelection in agricultural districts can go to their constituents and say, "We stood up for your rights. We have a duty here on sheep of 10 per cent ad valorem." [Laughter on the Republican side.] So that it does not really make very much difference whether there is any tariff at all on sheep, if you put everything that can be produced by the sheep raiser on the free list.

I have introduced this amendment largely to call attention to that ridiculous and unfair provision in this proposed law. It is simply "bunc" and nothing else. [Applause on the Republican side.]

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I move to close debate on this paragraph and all amendments.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Alabama moves to close debate and all amendments thereto.

The motion was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. WILLIS].

The amendment was rejected.

The Clerk read as follows:

191. All other live animals not specially provided for in this section, 10 per cent ad valorem.

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Chairman, I shall not offer an amendment to this paragraph further than the formal one to strike out the last word. I have not offered an amendment to any rate in the bill. I do not intend to offer any amendment to any rate in the bill. I have voted for most of the amendments offered on this side. I have not offered any amendments because I realize how utterly futile it is to do so with the gentlemen on the other side pledged to resist all amendments.

In order that some future historian may not misunderstand what has been going on here and assume that there are many or a considerable number of items in these schedules that are not opposed because amendments are not offered to them, let it be written now that there is no hope of any amendment offered on this side being adopted; and, therefore, while there is scarcely a rate in the bill that we on this side approve, many of them are passed over because it is entirely useless to offer amendments.

As I said a moment ago, there is neither rhyme nor reason in the proposition to place meats on the free list and retain a duty on the live stock, and the only purpose there can possibly be, in my opinion, for doing that is, as the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. WILLIS] has just stated—and I desire to emphasize that statement—that the gentlemen from the cities may be able to say to their constituents, "We have reduced the price of meats; we have made meat free," and to enable the gentlemen from the country districts to say to their constituents, "We have retained a duty on your products."

If, perchance, any of your constituents in the country precincts should suggest that that is not logical, you appeal to their prejudices by saying that it is the product of the Meat Trust that you are placing on the free list, while the product of the farmer remains protected.

With meats on the free list there is not any sense on earth in retaining in this bill any of these items of protection of meat-producing live animals. On the contrary, if you are honest in your efforts to reduce the price of meats, and if you are willing in so doing to reduce the returns of the flockmaster, the herdsman, and the farmer, you must place live animals on the free list as you have placed meats on the free list, in order that the live animals may be imported, to be grown, fed, and fattened here. You will at least be logical if you do that. Though, to be fair to the farmer and stock raiser, neither meat nor live stock should go to the free list.

The gentleman from New Jersey has indicated what will probably happen at the other end of the Capitol—live animals will also go to the free list. That will save the faces of the gentlemen from the bucolic districts on that side of this House, for they can go home and say that they voted here for a bill that retained a duty on the farmers' live stock, but the wicked Senate struck it out; and when they voted for the conference report, of course they had to vote for it in toto up or down, and therefore they could not defend the industries of their farmer constituents, much as they desired so to do. "Bunc," says the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. WILLIS]. Not only bunc, but buncombe, and heaps of it. But the American people will not be permanently fooled, all or a majority of them. [Applause on the Republican side.]

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I move to close debate.

Mr. FORDNEY. Mr. Chairman, I desire to offer an amendment.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Then I move to close debate on the paragraph and amendments in five minutes.

Mr. FORDNEY. I do not care to debate my amendment.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. All right. Then I move to close debate now.

The CHAIRMAN. If there be no objection, debate on the paragraph and all amendments will be closed.

There was no objection.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Michigan offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

In line 23, page 50, strike out "10" and insert "25."

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. STEENERSON. Mr. Chairman, I desire to offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Minnesota offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

Mr. STEENERSON. It is to come in as a new paragraph.

The Clerk read as follows:

At the end of line 23, page 50, insert a new paragraph, as follows:
"191½. Potatoes, 25 cents per bushel of 60 pounds."

Mr. STEENERSON. Mr. Chairman, the alleged reason for placing potatoes on the free list is to cheapen the cost of living. Now, I want to call your attention to the history of this industry, to show you how unreasonable that proposition is. The production of potatoes has been advanced and improved, by reason of the invention of modern machinery, to such an extent that the production of potatoes in the United States has increased very rapidly, so that last year we produced 376,000,000 bushels. It is one of the things that goes into the daily food consumption, and this food supply has constantly increased. At the same time that this great increase of production has been going on the price has been reduced. Now, it was alluded to a while ago that the Democratic campaign circular said that they wanted to go back to the prices of 1896 so far as pork was concerned. Go back to the prices of 1896 for potatoes and you will find that they were 80 cents a bushel, according to the table printed in the report of the Committee on Ways and Means, whereas in 1912 the average price in the United States of potatoes was only 52 cents a bushel.

What can you accomplish when 99 bushels out of 100 are sold through the dealers and middlemen, and when they reach the consumer sell for 50 cents a bushel? How much cheaper do you want them? That means that the farmer, after paying the freight, gets about 25 or 30 cents a bushel on an average. What will it effect if you put potatoes on the free list? These men who are engaged in the modern industry of raising potatoes have invested in expensive machinery, in potato diggers, potato planters, manure spreaders, and machines for spraying, and so forth. They have built up extensive warehouses so that they can handle the potatoes very cheaply, and that is the reason that the price has been gradually going down.

Now, if you put them on the free list, the chances are that the foreign countries will flood the market, reduce the price still further, and after you get our people out of the business and devote the land to other purposes the price will go up. You never had in the history of the country as cheap potatoes as you have to-day. If you want potatoes for nothing, that is another thing. I do not believe there is a man anywhere, laborer or capitalist, who wants the farmer to produce potatoes more cheaply than he does now.

You can buy them in my town for 25 cents a bushel, and in 1912, according to your own table, they were only worth 52 cents a bushel. What are you doing? Here is an item where the duty was not excessive by your own test. It was shown here by this table that the revenue derived from potatoes has been gradually increasing every year from $175,000 in 1896 to $7,175,375.85 in 1912. You are throwing away a revenue of over $7,000,000 annually to let in foreign potatoes in order to cheapen potatoes below 50 cents per bushel, the average price last year. Will you do it? No; you will discourage production at home and in the end raise the price to the consumer here. I do not believe a single laboring man begrudges the farmer the price he now gets for his potatoes. The consumption of potatoes per capita is less than 3 bushels. One day's work at $3 per day will now buy from 6 to 12 bushels. Two days' work will buy a year's supply for a whole family. [Applause.]

Mr. RAINEY. Mr. Chairman, I move that all debate on these amendments be closed in five minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman moves that all debate close in five minutes.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. Chairman, I would like to have a telegram read which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN., April 30, 1913.

Congressman SYDNEY ANDERSON,
Washington, D. C.:

The Minnesota Potato Growers and Shippers' Association, representing every potato grower in the State, is very much opposed to the removal of the tariff on potatoes. Can you do anything for us; and what can we do to assist? We believe placing potatoes on the free list will curtail their raising to the degree that eventually the consumer will suffer more than under the present law. There are numerous other perfectly good reasons for the maintenance of the tariff with which you are familiar.

MINNESOTA POTATO GROWERS & SHIPPERS' ASSOCIATION,
GEO. B. HIGGINS, Secretary.

Mr. KELLY of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, I have listened with great attention and interest to the remarks of various Representatives from the agricultural districts. I have read the schedule on agricultural products, and I could not help thinking as I sat here that after all the items appeal to others than those from the agricultural districts, as the schedules contain articles that are the necessaries of life for the great wage-earning population of this Nation. Last summer I happened to be in a community which I believe is within the district of the gentleman from Ohio. I found that the farmers are further advanced than their Representatives in some degree. I went into 37 counties of Pennsylvania last summer, one of the largest agricultural States in the Union, having one of the greatest agricultural counties, old Lancaster, and I found the farmers were making no such arguments as have been made here on the floor of the House by Representatives. They were denouncing the Payne law in unmeasured terms and demanding relief. I want to say to you that the farmers of Pennsylvania and Ohio are in some degree advanced enough to know that they can not hope to get advantage by special privileges which drain the pockets of others. They are not trying to get their hands in the pockets of others half as much as they are trying to keep other hands out of their pockets. I find, as I said in my speech in general debate, that special privilege in whatever form always fights for the advantage of the few at the expense of the many. That statement is responsible, I suppose, for this editorial which was handed to me a moment ago.

After a half column devoted to the superlative merits of my distinguished predecessor, the editorial closes as follows:

Mr. Dalzell's seat is occupied in the Sixty-third Congress, but it is not filled. His district has a Representative, but it is not represented.

This is an editorial from a paper published in Pittsburgh and owned by Mr. GEORGE T. OLIVER. It is a statement that I desire to have placed in the RECORD, for perhaps it explains why the privileged few are always linked together to betray and pray upon the common people of this Nation. I have said on the floor of this House only that which I am willing to stand for and maintain at any place or time. Perhaps, too, there may be something in my opposition some years ago, as a member of the Pennsylvania Legislature, to the gentleman, the junior Senator from Pennsylvania, to account for this editorial. I said then and I say now that his golden windfall of millions is the only thing by which he can claim advancement to place or station, and to my mind such qualifications are not all sufficient.

Mr. STEENERSON. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order that the gentleman is not discussing potatoes. [Laughter.]

Mr. KELLY of Pennsylvania. I want to say one thing further, that I have no desire to fill the sphere of my distinguished predecessor, nor shall I attempt it. I have no desire to be known as the high priest of protection. If I might choose a title I would far rather be known as the high priest of the unprotected.

Mr. MONDELL rose.

The CHAIRMAN. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

Mr. MONDELL. To discuss the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman is recognized for one minute. There is one minute remaining of the time.

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Chairman, I prefer to speak later.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Minnesota.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. STEENERSON) there were—ayes 52, noes 76.

So the amendment was rejected.

The Clerk read as follows:

192. Barley, 15 cents per bushel of 48 pounds.

Mr. HELGESEN. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment which I send to the desk and ask to have read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 50, in line 24, after the word "barley," strike out "15 cents" and insert "25 cents."

Mr. HELGESEN. Mr. Chairman, having consumed an hour the first day of general debate, in which time I confined myself wholly to the agricultural schedule, I had not intended to consume any more time on this schedule, because I realize that it is simply a waste of time to talk against a proposition such as we have here to-day, where a party has already legislated on this matter, and it is impossible to change any of these schedules. But this particular paragraph is so absolutely absurd and indefensible from the position taken by the majority themselves that I thought it might perhaps appeal to them to change it. They have started out with the idea of lowering the cost of living to the people of this country, and I sympathize with any party that attempts to do an act of that kind, even though it may be in the wrong, if they are sincere. This is a proposition that does not come under that head. Anyone who knows anything about barley knows that the ultimate consumer of barley is not the man who eats, but the man who drinks. That man is not going to be benefited by the lowering of the duty on barley. Last year the farmers in our State sold barley for 90 cents a bushel. This year they got 35 cents a bushel, and still you will find that the beer that has been made out of the barley during those two years was sold for the same price exactly. The only people who benefited from this at all would be the brewers and possibly the saloon keepers, who might buy at wholesale a little bit cheaper.

Mr. PAYNE. But does not the gentleman know that they all vote? The gentleman does not understand the principle of this bill. [Laughter.]

Mr. HELGESEN. They do. There is a very good reason why I want to appeal to you on this schedule. You have said the reason you want to reduce the duty on grains that go into food products was because we are not raising enough of them in this country. One reason why we are not raising as much wheat as we ought to raise and as we could raise is because of the fact that when you raise wheat a certain length of time the ground will get foul with weeds, and the best way we know of out there to eradicate the weeds is to sow it to barley. Now, it is a very important thing for the farmers of the Northwest to have a crop of barley that is profitable to raise and not one that is a losing proposition, and it seems to me that if you want to benefit this country, if you want to reduce the cost of bread even, the proper thing is to leave a sufficient duty on barley so it will make it a profitable crop for the farmer to raise. By doing so you are going to enable him to clean his land and eradicate the weeds so as to increase the yield of wheat; and if you increase the yield of wheat per acre, you are making a larger volume of wheat and thereby benefiting the consumer. But to cut the barley duty in two is absolutely not going to benefit anyone. Of course, I realize that the Democrats are not in sympathy with the farmer. It is very evident they are not from the speeches made in this House. These speeches indicate exactly where they stand on this proposition. But it seems as if they have inadvertently done something that is not going to benefit anyone except the brewers and saloon men, and being in that condition, they might, even though they have no particular love for the farmer, correct that mistake. Now, if you want to know how the Democrats stand as against the farmers, during the time of the discussion of the Canadian reciprocity proposition several speeches made in this House indicate plainly where the Democratic Party stands as against the farmer. The gentleman from New York [Mr. HARRISON], in discussing the Canadian reciprocity bill, had this to say on February 13, 1911:

The recent election, bringing about the first overthrow the Republicans have sustained in many years, was freighted with one great demand—the demand of the people of our congested cities to take the taxes off from food and clothing. In response to that mandate we are now taking the first step. From the east side of New York City a million voices are raised in appeal to you that you should make this bill a law. From every city in the East they cry out to you.

Speaking on the woolen bill, on July 30, 1912, he said:

This Democratic Congress was sent here by the consumers of the country, and not by the producers. Your Tariff Board report to which you make reference is a producer's report. It deals exclusively with the difference in the cost of production, if any, here and abroad.

Hon. William Sulzer, of New York, on August 5, 1912, speaking on the tariff question, said:

The Democrats must keep the tariff to the front. It will never be settled until it is settled right—and it will never be settled right until it is settled by the friends of the consumers.

Hon. Oscar W. Underwood, of Alabama, on June 10, 1912, said:

I believe in relieving the men who work in the factories and in the foundries and have to purchase their daily bread. * * *

What further evidence is needed to convince anyone that the farmer has nothing to hope for from the Democratic Party?

Mr. SCOTT. Mr. Chairman, it had not been my purpose to occupy the time of the committee by participation in the debate upon the bill now before the House, my advent into this body being a matter of such recent occurrence and my experience so limited that I might well leave the expression of the views of my party to those of my colleagues whose knowledge and experience so much better fit them to the task. But after listening for more than a week, with much interest, to the frank and, I believe, sincere pronouncements by our Democratic friends of the policy which this bill is not only calculated, but intended to put into effect, and after reflecting upon the degree of departure of the policy declared from the policy by which the American people have seen fit to be guided in the past, I have been unable to forbear the temptation to take advantage of the rule under which the House is now proceeding to make a few observations upon the subject and the situation.

I am controlled in this respect not only from a consideration of the importance of the question itself but from a consideration of the causes which have made this radical change possible. The history of the American people bears striking evidence of their high degree of efficiency in the art of self-government. Throughout most of their political career we find practical acknowledgment not only of their willingness to submit to the will of the majority in matters of public concern, but of their keen perception of the necessity of so doing.

But the American people are not always infallible; indeed, they are not always wise. We stand to-day confronted by a spectacle the like of which has been rarely witnessed in our political career. A great commercial policy, inaugurated nearly a century ago, crystallized and developed through more than half a century of highly successful application, relinquished by a clear and controlling majority of the people while believing in its efficacy and its wisdom, and the privilege and power yielded to a minority to substitute another policy which is in every fundamental respect its antithesis. Controlled by considerations in a degree laudable in themselves, some of the majority have permitted themselves to lose sight of the common tie which bound the whole into efficiency of purpose and action. United they have refused to stand; divided their fall was inevitable. It remains for the future to determine whether reflection following in the wake of experience will bring wisdom; whether those whose common political faith is grounded on the time-vindicated principles and policies of the Republican Party will realize that in unity and tolerance lies the hope of reestablishing the things for which they stand and rebuilding the house of their country's prosperity.

The motto upheld by the Republican Party throughout all of its magnificent career has been that the American people must produce all that they consume; that, being blessed with a wealth of resources almost ample to feed and clothe the world, there is no rational excuse to be found in the economy of trade why we should buy the commodities which we can produce here from those who produce like commodities abroad.

The Republican Party has been constant in its advocacy of the protective policy because its membership believed that if the great opportunities of this country were to be conserved for the benefit of the American citizen and the welfare of their common country the oppressive competition of the labor of the Old World must be restricted. The Republican Party has been constantly for the protective policy because it believed that we could not constantly buy a large portion of the things we consume abroad without robbing our own citizens of their national and natural right to produce and sell those things at home.

The Democratic Party has been constant in its advocacy of the doctrine that the markets of the United States ought to be open to the world with the least possible restriction; that the products of the world's labor ought to be free to enter our markets at all times regardless of the effect upon our own production. The Democratic Party has affected to believe that we could maintain our present standard of living and compensation for labor, and at the same time buy a large portion of the things which we consume abroad, and thereby expose American labor to the full force of competition with the labor of European and Asiatic countries, notwithstanding that the labor of these countries receives on an average of less than half the American wage. In the report upon the present bill the Committee on Ways and Means has said that they believe that the pledge of the Democratic platform of 1912 contains two essential ideas: First, the establishment of duties designed primarily to produce revenue for the Government, and without thought of protection; and second, the attainment of this end by legislation which will not injure or destroy legitimate industry.

It is the pretense of the majority that it has conformed its action to these essential ideas in framing the present bill. We must concede that the bill has been formulated with little thought of protection, except upon a few apparently favored industries. But as to its injurious effect upon legitimate industries, Republicans entertain some very positive notions. It would be a waste of time, however, to attempt to modify or change the conviction of the real apostle of free trade. The present generation of that school must learn as did the generations which preceded them—by the experimental process. It may not be a waste of energy, however, for those who have been believers in the protective policy in the past to carefully note the effect of the law which is to be enacted not only upon the various industries of the country when considered individually but upon the country and its prosperity as a whole.

The great agricultural section of the country from which I come has enjoyed a fair degree of prosperity under the protective policy in this country during the last 16 years. Its inhabitants have deserved all that they have received. It will be well and wise for them to understand now at the outset that they are to pursue their various avocations and conduct their business for a number of years to come under a commercial policy widely different from that under which they have operated in the past. This condition is brought about not by their choice nor as the direct result of their votes. Every State of the great Middle West north of the Mason and Dixon line cast its vote for protection. The people of those States believe in protection, and always have so believed. They are now, however, to experience the full force of an adverse policy. Practically every article produced by the western farmer is placed in open competition with like products from all other countries in their own markets. The great transportation and market facilities which the western farmer has built up and developed during the last half century are now to be utilized to bring the products of foreign lands to his markets for the purpose of competing with him.

The weak pretense is put forth that the farmer need have no fears; that, notwithstanding the fact that the protective duties are taken off his products, no material increase of importation will follow. To illustrate: The importations of barley in the year 1912 amounted to 2,768,474 bushels, under an import duty of 30 cents per bushel. The present bill reduces that duty to 15 cents per bushel, and yet the Committee on Ways and Means in its report upon this bill estimates future importations to be 2,000,000 bushels per year only. They offer no explanation for the assumption that cutting the present duty in half will decrease the importation of the commodity. I am at a loss to understand just why the reduction of the duty on barley from 30 to 15 cents per bushel will tend to restrict the flow of that commodity into the markets of the United States. I also notice that in this report prepared by the Committee on Ways and Means it is estimated that the duties will be decreased from $830,542 to $300,000 under the pending bill. I had assumed that this revision of the tariff was to be accomplished in a way that would bring a revenue into the Treasury of the United States, but I am unable to understand why gentlemen on the other side of the aisle so adjust the duties on this commodity as to reduce the revenue from $830,000 to $300,000. But, in my opinion, the duties will not be reduced. Importations of barley will not be reduced; on the contrary, there will be a great increase in importation. This is especially likely when we consider that the railroad rates from Canadian territory are so adjusted that the Canadian barley can reach Minneapolis markets at a rate actually less than the barley produced in a large portion of Iowa and Nebraska.

What is true of barley is likewise true of the wheat and oats items. Referring again to the report of the committee on this bill and to the quotation for the years 1910 and 1912, and comparing those figures with the figures of previous years, we discover that the importation of wheat into the markets of the United States has been increasing very rapidly during the past few years. In 1912, 2,684,381 bushels of wheat were imported under a duty of 25 cents per bushel. It is now predicted that with the reduction of the duty from 25 to 10 cents per bushel importations will be decreased to 2,000,000 annually, and that the revenue will be decreased from $352,245 to $200,000. Mr. Chairman, this is mere pretense. Neither the majority of the Committee on Ways and Means nor the majority of the membership of this House can deceive the western farmer nor lead him to believe that a reduction of the duty on wheat, barley, and oats will decrease the importation of these commodities into our markets. The Canadian grain-producing territory is very largely populated by men who have gone from the western portion of our country. These farmers in Iowa, Nebraska, Dakota, Minnesota, and other Western States have sons, relatives, and neighbors who have gone to Canada and who are now engaged in raising these commodities. Intercommunication is constantly carried on between them; they are well acquainted with the conditions across the line, and they know that the Canadian grain of all varieties will seek the markets of the United States in preference to any other market of the world. They understand that the farmer of the West has an acre-unit value ranging from $75 to $200 per acre and must, under the free-trade policy, meet in even competition the products of Canadian lands, the market value of which is less than one-fourth the value of their lands.

There is another weak pretense put out in this bill to mollify the indignation of the western farmer. A duty of 10 cents per bushel is laid upon wheat imported into this country, and it is claimed that that duty will be sufficient to restrict any unreasonable importation or competition. It is clear, however, that this duty of 10 cents per bushel amounts to nothing when we consider that flour, the product of wheat and its competing commodity, is permitted to enter our markets free. But this is not all. The 10 cents per bushel is to be remitted upon all of the imported wheat which is ground by the American miller and exported in the form of flour. In other words, the American miller, unable to meet the influx of free flour from the North, will turn his attention to grinding wheat for the people of Great Britain and continental Europe instead of for the people of the United States. The law will be so framed as to permit him to engage in this industry without hindrance. These men can buy without limit the wheat and other grain products of the Canadian farmer, manufacture that product, and ship it abroad on a basis of absolute free trade. Assuming, then, that the United States is to produce a surplus, her farmers are not only deprived of the benefits of their own markets, but they are deprived of every advantageous facility which they now have to meet the Canadian farmer in the markets of the world.

The Democratic Party is being no more generous to the western farmer with respect to his meat products than with respect to his grain. The meat produced by the western farmer is on the free list; the meat products of Canada, Mexico, and Argentina are given access to your markets without even the restriction of proper and wholesome inspection laws which are applied in this country to our own citizens.

An examination of the bill makes it very clear that the Democratic Party has determined to direct against every product of the farmer the highest degree of competition possible. No duty is laid upon any article produced by the western farmer where the laying of such duty would in any considerable degree restrict importation. The low duty on cattle will not restrict importation of live cattle from Mexico—only that portion of such cattle as are killed and brought in as meat. I say that it will not otherwise restrict the importation of cattle because Mexico has no other place to send her cattle. Mexico has cheap pasture and can afford to send her live cattle across the line under a 10 per cent duty in preference to sending them to any other country.

I have explained why a 10-cent-per-bushel duty on grain will not keep that commodity out of the market. Grain that has been coming in in yearly increasing quantity under a 25-cent duty will not be restricted when that duty is reduced to 10 cents, and besides this, the railways will be very glad to absorb a portion of that duty in order to get the traffic. Now, what is the purpose of all this? Ostensibly to reduce the cost of living to the great consuming public, and especially the laboring class. But the majority of the Ways and Means Committee have not been able to show by facts or figures or course of reasoning how, by reducing the value of the farmer's bushel of wheat or oats or corn the cost of the loaf to the laboring man is going to be reduced. The great mass of the laboring people in the cities buy their bread by the loaf. The price of that loaf does not vary with the rise and fall of the price of wheat. What is true of wheat is true of all other commodities.

The price of meat over the butcher's counter in the city does not rise or fall with the variations of the live-stock market unless the variation be in wide degree. Considering the whole line of necessaries, food products as well as fabrics, I predict that the ultimate consumer will gain very little in lowering the cost of living. Facts brought to the attention of the Committee on Ways and Means and to this House clearly indicate that the increased cost that has come about during the past few years very largely lies, so far as manufactured goods are concerned, between the manufacturer and the ultimate consumer; and so far as agricultural products are concerned, between the farmer and the ultimate consumer. It is the increased cost brought about by high profits to the middlemen, and in many instances retailers, that has in large degree increased the cost of living in this country. Our Democratic friends will realize their expectations, so far as the lowering the price of the food products, wool, and cotton at the farm is concerned, but in my opinion they will fall far short of their expectations in lowering the cost of living to the ultimate consumer. On the other hand, opening the American markets to the world, throwing the products of our entire country in open competition with the world and its low-priced labor, will reduce our production, will reduce opportunity for employment, will reduce the standard of compensation for labor; and, relatively measured, the cost of living will go up and not down. The real price of an article is not always measured in dollars and cents. The most serious question to be considered by the American laboring man is, How much can I buy with my day's wage? and, Do I have a fair prospect of getting a day's wage? The question which most concerns the American farmer is whether he shall have the first chance at the American market which he has developed during the last half century, or whether he must sacrifice its advantages, without any compensatory equivalent, to the farmers of other countries; whether the standard of values of his land and other property built up by generations of toil and development shall be equalized with the standard of inferior countries. In the meantime, and as we observe during the next few years the operation of this new policy, or rather this old and discarded one, it may be well for those who believe in the protective policy applied fairly and in a reasonable degree to reflect upon the question of getting together. [Applause.]

Mr. MORGAN of Oklahoma. Mr. Chairman——

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Does the gentleman desire to offer an amendment to this paragraph?

Mr. MORGAN of Oklahoma. A new paragraph.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate on this paragraph be now closed.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Alabama asks unanimous consent that all debate on this paragraph be now closed. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none. The question is on the adoption of the amendment proposed by the gentleman from North Dakota [Mr. HELGESEN].

The question was taken, and the amendment was rejected.

Mr. MORGAN of Oklahoma. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Oklahoma offers an amendment, which the Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend, page 50, after line 24, by adding a new paragraph, No. 192½, to read as follows:

"192½. Broom corn, $25 per ton."

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to close all debate on the amendment offered by the gentleman in five minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Alabama asks unanimous consent to close all debate on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Oklahoma in five minutes. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

[Mr. MORGAN of Oklahoma addressed the committee. See Appendix.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Oklahoma has expired. All time has expired.

The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. MORGAN].

The question was taken, and the Chair announced that the noes seemed to have it.

Mr. MURDOCK. Division, Mr. Chairman.

The committee divided; and there were—ayes 48, noes 52.

Mr. MURDOCK. Tellers, Mr. Chairman.

Tellers were refused.

So the amendment was rejected.

Mr. MORGAN of Oklahoma. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. MORGAN of Oklahoma. I would like to know if under the general consent that was given on the request of the chairman of the Ways and Means Committee to extend remarks in the RECORD, it applies to all speeches that are made under the five-minute rule?

The CHAIRMAN. It applies to all speeches made on the bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

193. Barley malt, 25 cents per bushel of 34 pounds.

Mr. FORDNEY. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Michigan [Mr. FORDNEY] offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment to paragraph 193: In line 1, page 51, strike out "25" and insert "45."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. FORDNEY].

The question was taken, and the amendment was rejected.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

194. Barley, pearled, patent, or hulled, 1 cent per pound.

Mr. MILLER. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment by way of a new paragraph, numbered 194½.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. MILLER] offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

At the end of line 4, page 51, insert a new paragraph, to be known as 194½: "Potatoes, 25 cents per bushel of 60 pounds."

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order that that paragraph has been passed and voted on. A gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. STEENERSON] offered an amendment on potatoes some time ago.

Mr. MILLER. I was out of the Chamber for a few moments and was not aware that that had been offered. I move to amend the amendment by striking out "25" where it occurs and inserting in lieu thereof "20."

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I hope the gentleman will not attempt to delay the consideration of the bill by offering amendments over again. It has been practically passed upon, and the House voted on it.

Mr. MILLER. Has it been discussed pretty thoroughly?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. It is on the free list, and the gentleman will have an opportunity to discuss it when we reach that part of the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

195. Macaroni, vermicelli, and all similar preparations, 1 cent per pound.

Mr. BROWNING. Mr. Chairman, I move to amend that section by striking out "1 cent" and inserting "1½ cents."

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. BROWNING] offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend, paragraph 195, line 5, page 51, by striking out the words "one cent" and inserting "one and one-half cents" in lieu thereof.

Mr. BROWNING. Mr. Chairman, I have in my home city a manufacturing establishment engaged in making macaroni. When House bill No. 10 was introduced into the House, as fast as I could get copies of the bill I forwarded them to the manufacturing establishments in my district, and requested them to advise me how the bill would affect the industry in which they were interested. I hold in my hand a letter received from the American Macaroni Co., which is rather a large concern, at 1023 Market Street, Camden, N. J., which I will read:

AMERICAN MACARONI CO.,
Camden, N. J., April 11, 1913.

Hon. WILLIAM J. BROWNING,
House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: Replying to your favor of the 9th instant, would say that we received copy of the new tariff bill as framed by the Democratic Party, and note that the tariff on macaroni products has been reduced one-half cent per pound.

As we said formerly, this will practically mean that many American macaroni factories will have to go out of business, as it is impossible to compete with foreign manufacturers, because macaroni is a product that is used principally by foreigners, and they prefer to buy imported goods, especially if they can buy it cheaper than the American product.

We appreciate your efforts in our behalf, and trust that the party in power will not be able to carry out their bill as outlined, not only in our line, but in many others.

Yours, truly, AMERICAN MACARONI CO.

Mr. Chairman, I hope my amendment will be adopted.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that debate on this paragraph and amendments thereto close in five minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman asks unanimous consent that debate on this paragraph and amendments thereto close in five minutes. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. MOORE. Mr. Chairman, I am very glad the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. BROWNING] offered this amendment. Had he not done so, I would have had pleasure in offering it myself.

The story is a very simple one. A large number of people, many of them citizens of the United States of foreign birth, are engaged in the manufacture of macaroni and vermicelli in this country. To a certain extent their occupation answers criticisms that have been made upon this floor with regard to people of foreign birth who have engaged in enterprises in the United States. These people are Italians very largely. They learned their occupation in Italy, many of them. They came to the United States to better their condition. They established these factories, and they have undertaken to do business in the American markets, and have done it, so that American wages are now paid to men who formerly received Italian wages, which are only about one-third of those paid in the United States.

Mr. LOBECK. They have bettered their condition, then, have they not?

Mr. MOORE. Unquestionably they have bettered their condition. They came here for that purpose, and that is the whole story. The alien who comes to the United States, and who has been very much inveighed against here during the last few days, comes here to improve his condition, and here is a case in point. Men of lowly foreign birth come in from Italy, desiring to improve their condition. They enter into the same occupation here in which they were engaged there. Here they get three times the wages they got there.

Mr. LOBECK. I will say for the Italians in my town who are in this business that they have made no complaint against this bill.

Mr. MOORE. The Italians in the gentleman's town may have understood full well that the Democratic caucus meant to put this bill through, and knowing the uselessness of protesting, they made no sign to a gentleman who was hopelessly bound by the action of his caucus, and who could not help them if he would do so. But the Italians in my district, who are doubtless the equals of the Italians in the gentleman's district, and all good citizens of the United States——

Mr. LOBECK. Sure.

Mr. MOORE. Have come to me, as they came to the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. BROWNING] in his district, believing that the Members of the House of Representatives who are free from that thraldom to which the gentleman has subjected himself, would urge the Democracy to pass a bill that would really be in their interest.

Mr. LOBECK. I believe they need no coaching, having been to school.

Mr. MOORE. The real question is, Shall we maintain in this country these industries which have been induced to come here or shall we urge them to go back, taking their business with them and such capital as they have accumulated here?

Mr. LOBECK. They will not go back, Brother MOORE.

Mr. MOORE. I do not think they will. They may go back during the time that the Underwood bill is in force, but they will return the minute Republican prosperity returns to the country. [Applause on the Republican side.]

A letter from some of my constituents on this question is as follows:

PHILADELPHIA, April 9, 1913.

Hon. J. HAMPTON MOORE,
House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: Inclosed herewith find briefs pertaining to macaroni tariffs, of which, no doubt, you are very familiar and which are self-explanatory.

We again beg you to urge the necessity of at least maintaining the present duty of 1½ cents per pound on macaroni, as a reduction in duty of same would, as we see it, in no way benefit the American people, owing to the fact that the majority of the users of the imported article are prejudiced against the American-made product.

We trust, therefore, that you will exert your efforts in upholding this growing American industry.

Thankingly, we remain,
Respectfully, yours,

GUANO & RAGGIOS.
R. DE ANGELIS CO.
LUIGI VERNA.
ANTONIO BICCHIEGGA.
D. CONI.
ANTONIO DI NAPOLI.

The CHAIRMAN (Mr. MURRAY of Oklahoma). All debate on this paragraph is closed. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. BROWNING].

The question being taken, the Chairman announced that the noes appeared to have it.

Mr. BROWNING. Division, Mr. Chairman.

The committee divided; and there were—ayes 42, noes 60.

Accordingly the amendment was rejected.

The Clerk read as follows:

196. Oats, 10 cents per bushel of 32 pounds.

Mr. FORDNEY. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Michigan offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 51, line 7, strike out "10" and insert "15."

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I ask unanimous consent that all debate on this paragraph and amendments thereto be now closed.

Mr. HAYES. Mr. Chairman, I should like 5 minutes.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Very well; I will make it 5 minutes.

Mr. CRAMTON. I should like 2 minutes.

Mr. SLOAN. I want 3 minutes.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Very well; I will make the request 10 minutes, and that it be divided up in accordance with the requests of the three gentlemen.

Mr. MONDELL. Can not the gentleman make it 15 minutes?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Let us get along with the consideration of the bill. Mr. Chairman, I will modify my request and make it 12 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Alabama asks unanimous consent that all debate on this paragraph and amendments thereto close in 12 minutes, is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. HAYES. Mr. Chairman, I desire to call the attention of the committee to this example of the extremely scientific manner in which this bill has been prepared. Oats are taxed in this bill at 10 cents a bushel. Rolled oats and oatmeal are on the free list. The fact of the matter is that oats in British Columbia are to-day worth $23 a ton and in San Francisco they are worth $30 a ton. It would seem that that is handicap enough for the manufacturing interests in this country which are quite largely engaged in the manufacture of oatmeal and rolled oats, but it is not sufficient apparently to satisfy our friends on the other side of the Chamber, and so they tax the raw material at 10 cents a bushel and put the product on the free list, which means that the process of preparing oats for human food will be transferred to the Canadian side of the line.

Mr. CRAMTON. Mr. Chairman, the reduction of this duty from 15 cents to 10 cents can not be alleged as a matter of revenue, and therefore it must be one of the cases where you propose to reduce the cost to the consumer. The question is, Can the farmer afford the reduction? I want to offer a statement from a farmer in my district as to the cost of producing 10 acres of oats, which shows that, not allowing for the years when there is a poor crop, the profit would be $9 on 10 acres of oats. The proposed reduction in tariff would be $17.50; therefore the poor farmer would be the loser to the amount of $8.50 from his crop. [Applause on the Republican side.] I will insert it in the RECORD:

Cost of producing 10 acres of oats.

(By Benj. Wade, Harbor Beach, Mich.)

Rental of ground, at $2.50 per acre	$25.00
Plowing, 6 days, at $2.50 per day (the price of man and team would be more if they were hired)	15.00
Harrowing, 3 days, at $2.50 per day	7.50
Sowing, 1 day for man and team, $2.50; for drill, $1	3.50
For cutting and shocking, 3 men, team, and binder	9.00
Hauling to barn, 3 men and team	7.00
For binder twine, 20 pounds, at 7½ cents per pound	1.50
Thrash bill, 2½ cents per bushel on 350 bushels	8.75
Driving to market	12.50
Total	89.75
10 acres of oats, at 35 bushels per acre, 350 bushels; the farmer receives a usual price of 30 cents per bushel, which is	105.00
Cost of production	89.75
Leaving a balance of	15.25
Less for seed	6.25
Showing a net profit of	9.00

Mr. SLOAN. Mr. Chairman, further supplementing what was said about the loss of revenue on the oat reduction of tariff rate, I want to call attention to the statement as follows: There is forecasted under this change a reduction of duties 33⅓ per cent and the imports fall 21,037.64 bushels and the values $108,008.96. Duties fall off $138,155.75, making the United States pay by foregoing that which would have come in $1.27 for every dollar's worth of oats stimulated to stay at home and not be imported. Sometimes this inspired charter of the new era pays to bring it in, sometimes it pays to keep it from coming in. If we just knew when it was going to leap forward, balk, or back, it would help some. In regard to what the gentleman in charge of the bill said this afternoon—that he announced to the public last fall that you were in favor of free meats and cereals. The gentleman honored me by delivering about a score of speeches in my district. I took occasion on several of those occasions to have the speech taken down by my shorthand friend, and from the shorthand notes he does not mention free meats, free cereals, or free cattle, or anything of that kind, in any of the speeches he made around in my district.

Mr. RAINEY. I am sorry I forgot it; it was my bad memory.

Mr. HAMMOND. Mr. Chairman, just a word in reference to the rates upon oats and oatmeal. The rate has been reduced, of course, upon oats. The equivalent ad valorem now is about 39 per cent and the equivalent ad valorem upon oatmeal and rolled oats about 17 per cent. There is, if you so term it, a differentiation, a difference at least of 22 per cent. That is, the oats carry a higher ad valorem by 22 per cent than the rolled oats. Now, in the reduction which we have made we have placed rolled oats and oatmeal upon the free list and our specific rate upon oats is equivalent to about 28 per cent, so that the difference between the two products under our bill is about 28 per cent, while under the present law it is 22 per cent.

Mr. SCOTT. Will the gentleman yield? Is not that because of the prediction you would lower the people's oats under the coming bill?

Mr. HAMMOND. No; I think not.

Mr. SCOTT. How do you account for it?

Mr. DONOVAN. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. DONOVAN. Was there not a vote here that all debate should close at a certain time, and has not that time expired?

The CHAIRMAN. Certainly; 12 minutes; but the time has not expired.

Mr. MANN. How much time remains?

The CHAIRMAN. A mintue and a half.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, under the existing law oats are dutiable at 15 cents a bushel. This bill proposes to reduce the rate to 10 cents a bushel, not a very severe reduction. Rolled oats or oatmeal are now upon the dutiable list—I forget the rate, 1 cent a pound—and has a very large consumption in the United States, as it is one of the main articles of consumption in many families. This is a proposition to put that upon the free list and leave the raw material upon the dutiable list, again exemplifying the wonderful genius of the gentleman who made up the bill, to put the raw product on the dutiable list and the finished material, made from the raw product, on the free list in order to encourage the grinding of oats in Canada instead of in the United States. If you bring a bushel of oats across the Canadian line you pay 10 cents a bushel, but if you do the work over there and employ Canadian labor to do the work of grinding the oats into oatmeal or rolled oats it comes in free of duty.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment proposed by the gentleman from Michigan.

The question was taken, and the amendment was rejected.

Mr. SLOAN. Mr. Chairman——

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I move that the committee do now rise.

Mr. SLOAN. Mr. Chairman, I desire to offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend by inserting, after paragraph 196, a paragraph to be numbered 196½ and to read as follows:

"Maize, 10 cents per bushel."

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate on the paragraph close after five minutes' debate on the amendment.

Mr. SLOAN. I do not care to delay the committee.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Then I will ask for a vote.

The question was taken, and the amendment was rejected.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I move that the committee do now rise.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly the committee rose, and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee, Chairman of the Committee on the Whole House on the state of the Union, reported that that committee had had under consideration the bill H. R. 3321—the tariff bill—and had had come to no resolution thereon.

RECESS.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House take a recess until 7.45 o'clock p. m.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly (at 6 o'clock and 26 minutes p. m.) the House stood in recess until 7.45 p. m.

EVENING SESSION.

The recess having expired, at 7 o'clock and 45 minutes p. m. the House was called to order by the Speaker.

THE TARIFF.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the bill H. R. 3321—the tariff bill.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the bill H. R. 3321—the tariff bill—with Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee in the chair.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

197. Rice, cleaned, 1 cent per pound; uncleaned rice, or rice free of the outer hull and still having the inner cuticle on, ½ of 1 cent per pound; rice flour, and rice meal, and rice broken which will pass through a No. 12 sieve of a kind prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury, ¼ cent per pound; paddy, or rice having the outer hull on, ½ of 1 cent per pound.

Mr. SAMUEL W. SMITH. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. There is no rice grown in my district or in the State of Michigan. When, however, so eminent a Democrat as Col. Robert Ewing, Democratic national committeeman from the State of Louisiana, expresses his views upon the subject of rice, I think the same are entitled to respectful consideration. He says:

Rice in Louisiana must have a protective tariff or the industry will be absolutely ruined. We produce more rice in Louisiana than in any other State. The crop will approximate thirty thousand millions a year. Remove the duty and Japan, Honduras, and other countries would send enough rice to the United States to put the rice growers of Louisiana, Texas, and Arkansas out of business. Unfortunately, rice is not consumed as much in the North as in the South. It is one of the most nourishing products grown in this country. The entire Nation could subsist on rice if it became necessary. We raise in Louisiana enough rice to supply the entire population, yet we import a considerable quantity for special purposes, which gives us a good revenue.

Mr. Chairman, the gentlemen on the other side of the Chamber are engaged, as they were last fall, in the laudable but brain-racking proposition of trying to convince the farmer that they are going to so legislate that he will continue to receive the same good prices for his products, and the laborer the splendid wages he has been receiving, and at the same time he and the consumer are to receive the products of the farm much cheaper. When the gentlemen have consummated their mastery, we will all be able to lift ourselves by our boot straps.

When this bill was being considered in general debate a few days since, I asked the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. PALMER] to explain why rice was on the dutiable list. He replied by saying that he was then discussing the metal and the steel schedule, and that he did not care then to answer the question. I would now respectfully ask the gentleman from Alabama if he will explain why rice is on the dutiable list?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman has already explained it in his own statement. He has just read a statement in which it is said that on account of large importations of rice it was a good revenue producer, and if the gentleman will carefully read this schedule he will see that rice is cut to about the same extent as the other agricultural products in the schedule, and it is a very much better revenue producer than most of the cereals or any of the cereals that are named in the schedule.

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Chairman, I want to suggest to the gentleman from Alabama before he takes his seat that rice that is cleaned is on the dutiable list at a cent a pound. Rice that is in the hull, not cleaned, is half a cent a pound. Wheat is on the dutiable list at 10 cents a bushel. Flour is virtually on the free list. Why not put cleaned rice on the free list also in the interest of cheaper food for the American people, this being such a grand article of food?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I will state to the gentleman that cleaned rice is cut from 54 to 33, and now produces $635,000 of revenue. It is estimated that under this cut it will produce $750,000—a very good cut and a very good revenue producer.

Mr. PAYNE. I understand the principle is not to reduce the food to the American people when there is enough of it imported to make any appreciable difference, and the revenue is $635,000.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from New York desires to be captious.

Mr. PAYNE. Captious?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. But he will see that there is a tax on barley and wheat and oats and other cereals in this schedule, and there was no particular reason why rice should be placed on the free list.

Mr. PAYNE. Oh, but the finished product.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I am not disposed to quarrel with the gentleman from New York about putting food products on the free list. I hope the gentleman will move up in that way himself. I do not mean to say that we ought to put them on in a moment, but I think the last thing that we ought to tax is the food that goes into the mouths of the people in order that they may exist. Although this bill does not give to the ultimate consumer free food, it is a very considerable reduction going in the direction of giving American people free food, and I am glad to welcome the gentleman from New York with that column.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Michigan has expired.

Mr. LAZARO. Mr. Chairman——

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I see two gentlemen on their feet, and I suppose they desire to discuss the paragraph. I ask that debate on the paragraph close in 10 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] asks unanimous consent that debate on the paragraph and all amendments thereto close in 10 minutes. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none. The gentleman from Wyoming [Mr. MONDELL] is recognized.

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Alabama has been particularly interesting and peculiarly edifying in the last few minutes in the formula he has been using. Heretofore if a rate was reduced we did not need the revenue, and if it was raised we did need the revenue. Now all food products must be cheap unless you can raise revenue by making them dear, and then you are justified in making them dear. Rice, the product of Louisiana and Texas, is given a rate of 1 cent a pound, 75 cents a bushel. Potatoes grown in Colorado and elsewhere in the North are placed on the free list. Beans grown somewhere along the merry line of Dixie are assessed at 25 cents a bushel. This is the consistency of this Democratic tariff bill.

Now, the fact is, Mr. Chairman, that if there is an agricultural product that perhaps needs little protection in the United States it is rice. Down in Louisiana and Texas they sow rice as in the North we sow grain—broadcast or with a seeder. They cut it with a reaper; they thrash it with a steam thrasher. There is hardly another place on earth where rice ground is not plowed in the mud, waist deep, by a water buffalo drawing a crooked stick behind him or where the plants are not sown in seedbeds and transplanted by hand. There is not a place on earth competing with these United States in the growth of rice where the actual labor on every bushel of rice grown is not three or four times what it is here. And no matter how illy paid that labor may be, I doubt if there is rice grown anywhere cheaper than it is grown down yonder in the Southland.

Wheat is grown under practically the same conditions the world over—sown broadcast or with a seeder, cut with a reaper, thrashed with a thrashing machine—except in the Far East, where they thrash it on a thrashing floor. And yet wheat is given a rate of 10 cents a bushel and rice a rate of 75 cents a bushel.

Is it because they grow rice down in Louisiana while they grow wheat in Minnesota? Is that why there is the difference that we find in this particular schedule? If not, what is the reason? In my State we grow wheat under irrigation. We are compelled to turn on the water, after having prepared the land at great cost, to irrigate the wheat at great cost, so that we raise wheat under the same conditions of irrigation under which rice is grown in the South. And yet wheat, our great staple, has a duty of 10 cents a bushel, and rice, the southern staple, or the staple of a few southern districts, 1 cent a pound.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Will the gentleman allow me to ask him a question?

Mr. MONDELL. Yes.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. The gentleman voted for the Payne bill. Why did you put a tax on rice at 54 per cent? You did it by your vote.

Mr. MONDELL. We believe in protection. Under our duty we built up that splendid rice industry in Louisiana and Texas. We made possible the digging of the ditches, the draining of the land——

Mr. UNDERWOOD. But the gentleman has not answered my question.

Mr. MONDELL. And the time has now come when, under a Republican policy, if we were revising the tariff, we would probably reduce the duty on rice.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Wait a minute and let me ask you a question.

Mr. MONDELL. And doing it, we will do it consistently, and give the rice grower the same protection that we give the grower of other cereals.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. But you gave wheat a duty equivalent to 14 per cent, and you put 54 per cent on rice. Now you ask us why we put a higher rate on rice than on wheat? Why did you do it?

Mr. MONDELL. We put a high duty on rice to build up the industry, because we believe in protection. You do not believe in protection, and yet you leave a high protective tariff rate on a product of a section of the sunny South and you reduce the wheat of the North to a low-revenue basis, placing flour, the product of wheat, on the free list.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. You put a 50 or 60 per cent rate on barley, a product of your own section.

Mr. KITCHIN. Ten per cent more than they put on rice.

Mr. LAZARO. Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] this question: The gentleman said a moment ago that the duty on rice was reduced for the benefit of the consumer. Is it not a fact that you have reduced the duty on broken rice from a quarter to an eighth, when there is no broken rice used by the consumers of this country, when the broken rice is used by the brewers only, for the purpose of making beer? And is it not a fact that this difference goes to the brewers and not to the consumers?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. We have reduced the rice schedule all along the line.

Mr. LAZARO. I know; but I am speaking of the broken rice known as the brewer's rice, which has a duty under the present law of a quarter of a cent. Now, you have reduced it in this bill to one-eighth of a cent.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. We made about the same reduction all along.

Mr. LAZARO. I know; but there is not any of this rice used by the consumer.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. So far as the gentleman and myself are concerned we are not consumers of that product, but other people are.

Mr. LAZARO. But is it not a fact that you are giving this difference to the brewers and not to the consumers?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I am not intimately enough acquainted with the question to know whether that is a fact or not; but we reduced the rates equitably, both to one class of consumers and to another class of consumers.

Mr. LAZARO. Yet, when you reduced the duty on broken rice from a quarter to an eighth of a cent you gave the advantage to the brewers.

Mr. LANGLEY. Mr. Chairman, is it a private conversation that is going on over there? [Laughter.]

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair can not tell, but if the committee will come to order he can ascertain. [Laughter.]

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. As I understand, there is a part of the time remaining unused.

I do not like the criticisms of the gentleman from Wyoming [Mr. MONDELL] on this subject of the duty on rice. I have believed with him and voted with him on this side, but I think his remarks with reference to this particular item are unjust. This bill was written by 14 Democrats—7 of them being from the South. They have put the southern sugar-cane industry on the free list at the end of three years; they have put corn and corn meal and raw cotton on the free list, which is a southern staple; they have put iron ore on the free list; they have put bauxite on the free list; they have put lumber and coal on the free list; and they have greatly reduced the duty on cotton goods, kaolin, pig iron, and zinc. We have practically given up everything in the South except the Angora goat in Texas and peanuts in North Carolina [laughter on the Republican side], and I appeal to my friend from Wyoming to let this item pass.

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Chairman, I did not offer an amendment at a reduced rate.

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Chairman, is there any time left?

The CHAIRMAN. There is one minute remaining.

Mr. PAYNE. I will say, Mr. Chairman, that four years ago the rice industry had not been developed as it is to-day. There was some difficulty about getting some way to plug the water, and there was some trouble in Louisiana and Texas about pumping. But since that time they have discovered large rice-producing tracts of land in Arkansas, where the water is very near the surface of the ground and the pumping is very easy and inexpensive.

I want to say to the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] that if his bill should stay on the statute books for four years, long before that time we shall not be getting a penny of duty on rice, because we will raise every pound of it in the United States, and under better conditions than there are anywhere else in the world, and for less money, because we can use machinery from beginning to end, and they can not use it anywhere else in the world. [Applause on the Republican side.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

198. Wheat, 10 cents per bushel.

Several Members rose.

Mr. LANGLEY. Mr. Chairman——

The CHAIRMAN. Under the practice, the Chair will recognize the gentleman from Alabama.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I want to see if we can agree on time on this wheat proposition.

Mr. MANN. Let us see how many gentlemen want three minutes each.

Mr. LANGLEY. Mr. Chairman, I took the floor for the purpose of offering an amendment.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I think there were five gentlemen rose on that side.

Mr. HAMMOND. I should like four or five minutes.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I ask unanimous consent that debate on this paragraph close in half an hour.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Alabama asks unanimous consent that debate on this paragraph and all amendments thereto close in 30 minutes.

Mr. MANN. Will not the gentleman include the request that the recognitions be for 3 minutes instead of 5?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I have two gentlemen on this side who would like to speak. The gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. HAMMOND] said he would like three or four minutes.

Mr. HAMMOND. I would like four or five.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I ask that the recognitions be for four minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Alabama asks unanimous consent that debate on this paragraph and all amendments thereto close in 30 minutes, and that the recognitions shall be for 4 minutes instead of 5.

Mr. MURDOCK. Reserving the right to object——

Mr. LANGLEY. Reserving the right to object——

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Reserving the right to object——

Mr. MURDOCK. I should like to point out that there are now over 10 Members on their feet.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. We must get along with this bill. They can not all speak at one time.

Mr. MURDOCK. There will be more controversy over this than there will if you let us have the time.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I will tell the gentleman that if he will not take it he will not get it. I want to move along with this bill, and every man can not speak on every item.

Mr. LANGLEY. The Chair having recognized me for the purpose of offering an amendment, I desire to inquire if I am entitled to the floor for four minutes after this agreement is reached?

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will state that if it is left in the power of the Chair he will recognize the gentleman.

Mr. MANN. The gentleman has the floor.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Alabama?

There was no objection.

Mr. LANGLEY. Mr. Chairman, I desire to offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Kentucky offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

In line 15, page 51, strike out "10" and insert "25."

Mr. LANGLEY. Mr. Chairman, it seems to me that this provision and other similar ones in this bill violate the traditional policy of the Democracy as I have always understood it. At to-day's session I read some resolutions that were adopted by the citizens of Buffalo, in which they asserted that the provision to which these resolutions referred, including this one, would seriously cripple, if not destroy, a home industry in that city, and either drive out of employment or greatly reduce the wages of thousands of laboring people employed therein.

I desire now to read a telegram from the secretary of the Chamber of Commerce of Cincinnati along the same line. It is as follows:

CINCINNATI, OHIO, April 30, 1913.

Hon. J. W. LANGLEY,
House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.:

By unanimous vote the board of directors of the Cincinnati Chamber of Commerce, at a meeting held April 29, adopted the following resolution, which is respectfully submitted for your attention:

Whereas the Underwood tariff bill imposes a duty of 10 cents per bushel upon foreign wheat and admits duty free the foreign-milled products of such foreign wheat;

Whereas this discrimination in favor of the foreign manufacturer is in contradiction alike of all accepted economic doctrine of the established tariff policy of all political parties and of all nations and in effect pays a bounty to the foreign miller on all products of wheat sold by him in the markets of the United States; and

Whereas if American flour millers have to pay a tax upon foreign-grown wheat, then a simple justice requires that the foreign-milled products of such wheat shall pay an equivalent tax, and if foreign-milled wheat products are admitted duty free foreign wheat should be admitted duty free: Therefore be it

Resolved, That, believing the proposed legislation would inevitably destroy one of the most important manufacturing industries in the United States and that it would further result in most serious injury to the American farmer, the Cincinnati Chamber of Commerce, through its board of directors, records itself as unalterably opposed and earnestly urges upon the President and Congress of the United States the necessity of placing both wheat and its products upon terms of absolute equality.

Resolved, That copies of this preamble and resolution be forwarded immediately to the President of the United States, Senators and Congressmen from Ohio, Indiana, and Kentucky, the members of the Senate Finance Committee and the Ways and Means Committee of the House of Representatives.

CINCINNATI CHAMBER OF COMMERCE,
W. C. CULKINS, Executive Secretary.

Mr. Chairman, our daily mail is filled with protests like this, from commercial bodies, corporations, firms, and individuals, appealing to us to protect them against the results of what they assisted in bringing about when they put the Republican Party out of power and placed our friends on the other side in power. If I desired to be ugly and revengeful about it, I might say that they deserved a few heroic doses of free trade for having brought about that result. I sympathize heartily with the people of Cincinnati in the sentiments which they express through this telegram, although I can not refrain from reminding them that this is what they get for turning out of Congress men like the able, patriotic, and distinguished Nicholas Longworth [applause] and men of that kind, who were their friends and champions, and putting in their places men who are here making assaults upon the industries of the great State of Ohio. I hope the good Lord will give them more light and that they will have the foresight next time to correct the grievous error they made last fall. [Applause on the Republican side.]

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. Chairman, as I understand it, the gentleman from the tenth district of Kentucky [Mr. LANGLEY] has introduced an amendment to raise the tariff on wheat from 10 cents to 25 cents. As a matter of fact, the gentleman knows nothing about wheat, because they do not raise any in his district, and but little corn, the most of which is made into moonshine liquor. [Laughter.]

Mr. LANGLEY. Does not the gentleman like the finished product? [Laughter.]

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. Chairman, I admire the products, but not more than the gentleman admires his own products, and I do not use them one-half as much. [Laughter.]

Mr. LANGLEY. I will leave that to our associates.

Mr. THOMAS. If there is anybody upon the face of this earth that ought to be for free corn and free wheat it is the gentleman from the tenth district of Kentucky, for the greatest use that they make of corn and wheat in that district is to make liquor out of it, and they need corn and wheat shipped into that district for bread, and they ought to get it just as cheaply as possible.

Mr. LANGLEY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. THOMAS. Certainly.

Mr. LANGLEY. Was the gentleman ever in the tenth district in his life?

Mr. THOMAS. Many a time.

Mr. LANGLEY. Then the gentleman did not observe very much.

Mr. THOMAS. And the next time the gentleman runs for Congress I will be up there. [Laughter.]

Mr. LANGLEY. That is why I got a large majority, and the next time it will be unanimous. [Laughter.]

Mr. THOMAS. No; I have never been up there in the campaign when the gentleman was running for Congress, and when I do I will run him out of the district. [Laughter.]

Mr. LANGLEY. Well, the gentleman will certainly not do it while the moonshine lasts.

Mr. SWITZER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. THOMAS. One at a time.

Mr. SWITZER. I would like to inquire whether the business of making moonshine whisky is a growing business in Kentucky?

Mr. THOMAS. In the tenth district it is. [Laughter.]

Mr. LANGLEY. We make it to some extent in my district, but it is consumed largely in the gentleman's district, I understand.

Mr. THOMAS. Now, if there is any other Republican over there who desires to interrogate me, let him rise. [Laughter.] Mr. Chairman, in the first place, I am unalterably opposed to putting any food products of the people upon the tax list. I believe that everything that the American people eat and wear and consume should be on the free list, and I so intend to vote while I am in this Congress.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Kentucky has expired.

Mr. MURDOCK. Mr. Chairman, the dangers of a haphazard tariff are very clearly illustrated in the item upon which the committee is now working. The item is wheat, which bears here a 10-cent specific duty. Its product, flour, is given a 10 per cent ad valorem duty. It is my observation, from my part of the country, that nearly all industries, save the flour-milling industry, have concentrated. I have seen many different lines absorbed into the greater units of organization, taken over by the trusts or combinations and put under false capitalization. But it is true of the flour-milling business that it has remained segregated, that it has not moved away, but remains next to the wheat fields, that it is not overcapitalized, and as a rule the millers are not rich, as riches are now counted. Most of them are well-to-do, that and nothing more.

This bill, either by accident or design, or by the exigency of politics, wherein the members of the committee were trying to satisfy the people in the city on the score of the lower cost of living and at the same time pretending to do something for the farmer by giving him a duty, though a lower one than in the present law, on his products, have kept a specific duty on wheat and an ad valorem duty on flour of 10 per cent, which are absolutely unequal, and in this way: If wheat is worth $1 a bushel in Canada, then the duty on the flour made from it would be under this bill 50 cents a barrel, but if wheat should be in Canada 60 cents a bushel, and it has been 60 cents in Canada, then the duty on the flour from that wheat would be 30 cents. This is putting the American miller to a disadvantage of 20 cents. This is not fiction, it is not speculation, it is an actual condition which our millers will have to meet and it will injure miller and farmer. Canada in wheat production is growing. The western part of Canada produced in wheat in 1900, 17,000,000 bushels. In 1912 that 17,000,000 bushels had leaped to 198,000,000 bushels. Canada, in conformity with the idea that the mill stays close to the wheat field, is also developing wonderfully in the milling industry and as an exporter. In that way in 1900 Canada produced 455,000 barrels of flour, and in 1912, that 455,000 barrels of flour had jumped to a total of 2,388,000 barrels of flour. Now, in addition to this fact, it seems certain that on the admission of the flour through this discrimination of duties, the flour imported will enter into the fixation of the price of wheat in the United States.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Kansas has expired.

Mr. McGUIRE of Oklahoma. Mr. Chairman, in the course of this debate I have been impressed with the ominous silence of the gentlemen on the other side of the House who represent districts where farming is the chief occupation of their constituents. The RECORD is little encumbered with their speeches in defense of this bill. The party lash has been vigorously applied during weeks of secret Democratic caucus, and I regret to say that those gentlemen most vigorous in the defense of this measure come from sections and cities where the products of the farm are consumed and not where they are produced. It is my confident belief that the gentlemen on that side have presumed too much on the tolerance of the men who till the soil. You know the farmer is not an agitator. You know that, comparatively, he is the least turbulent of all the elements of American citizenship. He is community loving, flag respecting, and patriotic; and yet you must not assume that he will submit without protest to any punishment you may inflict upon him in your discriminations in favor of the great consuming cities and centers of population. We make requisition upon him more than upon any other class for the moralizing and vitalizing influences of the Republic. He is the foundation rock. He is the greatest guaranty of perpetuity. He is the greatest influence for good and the most powerful restraint against evil. He is opposed to mob violence. He is an enemy of the Black Hand. He very properly has less respect for the criminal rich than he has for the criminal poor. He has little sympathy with the political demagogue, and much less with the demoralizing influence of Tammany methods, whether practiced one place or another. He believes in honest but not in dishonest capital, and will support it when it is employed honestly, but he will fight it to the death when it is employed dishonestly. The supporter and friend of the honest employer, as well as of the honest employee, but the employer who uses his means and capital to oppress the employed looks no better to him than the employed who carries the firebrand in the march of the mob. He is the enemy of both, because both are criminal alike. He is neither a snob nor a toady, but believes in equal opportunity and fair play. He has no sympathy with bigotry or caste, but believes instinctively that men or things are only entitled to consideration in proportion to their intrinsic value. The Decalogue is his guide. He believes in the sentiments expressed in the Declaration of Independence, and cherishes but does not abuse the liberties guaranteed by the Federal Constitution.

You must not overlook that a people of such splendid qualities must be taken into account, else the day of reckoning will come.

They are nearly forty million strong, or more than one-third of all the people of the United States. They are entitled to greater consideration than has been shown them in this bill and to a better defense from that side of this Chamber than you have made for them. [Applause on the Republican side.]

Of the hundreds of amendments introduced by Republicans on this side of the House in the interest of the farmer you have not permitted one of them to pass, and this is conclusive evidence that you gentlemen from the farming districts have been bound hand and foot by your secret party caucus. You are afraid to speak against the amendments offered by Republicans, intended to sustain the price of farm products, because such a course would defeat you at the next election, and you can not speak for them because you have pledged in secret, behind closed doors, where the country can not see or hear you, to vote for this bill at any cost. You will not permit a yea-and-nay vote to be taken on the amendments offered by the Republicans, because such a course would put each of you on record and the people whom you represent would demand that you gentlemen from the farming sections repudiate this bill, and if you refused this demand they would force you out of public life. Your failure to speak for the measure as it affects the products of the farm is conclusive evidence that you know you are wrong. Your caucus rule will not let you speak against the bill and your constituents will not permit you to speak for it. You are having your way now, but the people will have their way later. You are repudiating the farmers now, but they will repudiate you at the ballot box and at the first opportunity. [Applause on the Republican side.]

I am not opposed to party caucus on matters pertaining only to party interests, but you have no right as public officials and as representatives of the people and as the majority party of this House to debate and vote on this bill in secret caucus. The country is entitled to know what you are doing and saying when you are considering matters of public interest. Your constituents are entitled to know how much of this bill you are for and how much of it you are against. They will call upon you to explain why it is that you have kept this measure, so vital to the well-being and prosperity of every American citizen, for weeks in secret debate before it was permitted to see the light of day.

The country will not tolerate this piece of secret legislation, and the only reason you sought darkness rather than light was because your deeds were evil. [Applause on the Republican side.]

In the light of the history of this bill it may be of interest to the House to read briefly from the hearings before the Ways and Means Committee, that you may understand something of the confidence that the southern Members have that the southern farmer will vote the Democratic ticket at any cost.

In volume 3 of those hearings there is the testimony before that committee of a gentleman by the name of Cowan, a distinguished citizen of the State of Texas, who was being interrogated. Mr. JAMES, speaking to Mr. Cowan, said:

Do you think free meat would ruin the cattle industry?
Mr. COWAN. It would.
Mr. JAMES. Did not all the Members of Congress from Texas vote for free meat?
Mr. COWAN. I think they all did.
Mr. JAMES. And were they not all overwhelmingly elected?
Mr. COWAN. They were. We vote the Democratic ticket there in spite of politics; in spite of platforms; in spite of anything that is said in the platforms. If the Democratic platform says prohibition, then we vote it. If it says anti, we vote that.
Mr. JAMES. I know that is true.
Mr. COWAN. You know that, Mr. JAMES, just like I do.

Since I have adverted to the cattle industry, I shall indulge a little further in the discussion of prices. The following figures taken from the census report of 1910 and also from reports made by the Agricultural Department will disclose to the farmers of my State and the country some startling facts, these figures being a comparison of the value of some of the principal products of the farm in Oklahoma under a Republican and Democratic administration, respectively.

CATTLE.

The Wilson bill, which ruined the country under the Cleveland Democratic administration, provided for a duty of 20 per cent ad valorem on cattle. The present, or so-called Payne law, provides a duty of 27½ per cent ad valorem, and the present Underwood bill, which will become a law, only provides for 10 per cent ad valorem on cattle, or only one-half as much as the Wilson bill, which wrought such destruction to the farmers by the ruinous prices of cattle under it.

In May, 1896 and 1897, the price of cattle on the Chicago market was $2 to $4.45 per hundred. On May 1, or the last of April, 1913, the same grade of cattle which brought only $3 in 1896 and 1897 sold for $7.60 per hundred on the same market.

ROUND NUMBERS USED IN TOTALS.

For the sake of convenience we will use round numbers in giving totals rather than the detailed figures as we get them from the census report.

In the State of Oklahoma there are approximately 190,000 farms, according to the census report of 1910. The same report shows that there are a little less than 1,250,000 head of cattle in the State, an average of about 6 head to every farm. We will take these figures as a basis, and they are as nearly correct as is possible to procure. The Federal census report shows that beef cattle were worth about $30 per head more in 1911 and 1912 under a Republican administration and a Republican tariff than they were in 1896 and 1897 under a Democratic administration and a Democratic tariff, and the agricultural reports show that stock cattle were worth about $15 per head more in 1911 and 1912 than they were in 1896 and 1897, and that the average worth of all cattle under a Republican administration has been and is $20 more than under a Democratic administration and a Democratic tariff.

ONE HUNDRED AND TWENTY DOLLARS' LOSS TO EVERY FARMER.

Taking these figures as a basis, it will be observed that the cattle of my State were worth about $25,000,000 more under a Republican administration and a Republican tariff than they were under a Democratic administration and a Democratic tariff, or $120 to every farmer in favor of the Republican administration.

HORSES.

The Federal census also shows that there were 800,000 head of horses in Oklahoma in 1910, or about 5 to every farm. Agricultural reports show that in 1896 and 1897, under a Democratic administration and Democratic tariff, horses averaged $30 per head. This would make Oklahoma's 800,000 head of horses worth $24,000,000. In 1912, under a Republican tariff, the same reports show that horses averaged $110 per head. Thus under a Republican tariff the 800,000 horses owned by the farmers of my State are worth $88,000,000, or $64,000,000 more than the same horses were worth under a Democratic tariff.

MEANS $400 TO EVERY FARMER.

This amounts to $400 to every farmer in the State. In other words, taking the facts and figures which can not be disputed, every horse owned by an Oklahoma farmer was worth under a Democratic administration just $80 less than the same animal was worth under a Republican administration.

MULES.

We will now take up some figures regarding mules, which are as startling as on other products.

In 1910 there were more than 270,000 mules in the State of Oklahoma, or about 2 to every farm. In 1896 and 1897 mules averaged $40 per head, all in the State being worth a total of about $10,000,000. In 1911 and 1912 mules averaged $120 per head, making the total of Oklahoma's 270,000 mules worth $30,000,000, a gain under the Republican administration of $20,000,000 over what they were worth during the Democratic administration and a Democratic tariff. This amounts to $160 to every farmer in the State; that is, his mules were worth $80 a head more under a Republican tariff than under a Democratic tariff.

Though this indispensable hybrid "can not boast of pride of ancestry or hope of posterity," these figures are quite sufficient to make it hang its head in shame at such treatment from its nearest kin, the Democratic Party, and with such lamentable lack of appreciation of party emblem one can not readily conceive how, in the light of such a record, an honest Democrat can look a mule in the face. [Applause and laughter.]

WHEAT.

Oklahoma produces about 30,000,000 bushels of wheat annually. That 30,000,000 bushels of wheat in 1896 and 1897 was worth 57 cents per bushel on the Chicago market, or a total of $17,000,000, under a Democratic administration. In 1910 and 1911 and 1912 the average was about $1 per bushel. Oklahoma's 30,000,000 bushels of wheat, then, would be worth $30,000,000 under a Republican tariff as against $17,000,000 under a Democratic tariff, or a difference of about $75 per year to every farmer in the State.

TOTAL LOSS TO EVERY FARMER IS $750.

The loss to the farmers of Oklahoma alone under a Democratic administration on only four commodities, viz, horses, mules, cattle, and wheat, is $122,000,000, or $750 to every individual farmer in the State.

This is not taking into account corn, cotton, oats, potatoes, chickens, butter, eggs, and almost innumerable other things produced by the farmer, the difference in price being quite as much as it was on cattle, horses, mules, and wheat.

STILL LOWER IN UNDERWOOD BILL.

There are very few people in my State and, in fact, throughout the country who do not remember the appalling conditions as they were under the only Democratic tariff law that we have had in three-quarters of a century, and it should be borne in mind that the present Underwood bill reduces the tariff still lower than under the Cleveland administration, and it may be well for the farmers of Oklahoma and the whole country to remember that you can not name one single article which you produce on your farm on which the tariff is not reduced. There are some few advances in the Underwood bill, but in not one case are they in the interest of the farmer, and we are told by the gentlemen who are inflicting this bill upon the American people that we are paying too much for the things that we eat, which is but another way of telling the American people that we are paying too much for what the farmer produces. [Applause on the Republican side.]

Within the last half century the country tried you once before and you failed, and the fact that you are in power again does not mean that you have the confidence of the people. On the 1st day of this month President Wilson, your chosen leader, spoke at Newark, N. J., and in the course of his remarks, while flaying his own party in that State, said, in part:

But I want to say a few words about the Democratic Party. I want everybody to realize that I have not been taken in by the results of the last national election. The country did not go Democratic in November. It was impossible to go Republican because it could not tell which kind of Republican to go.

In this connection it may be of interest to quote from another distinguished Democrat, and one who did more to elect Mr. Wilson than any other man in America, not excepting Mr. Bryan. I refer to William R. Hearst, who has the most powerful string of metropolitan dailies in the world. In an article condemning and repudiating this bill and criticizing President Wilson's free-trade policies, his papers, on the 13th day of April, said, in part:

Mr. Wilson's opposition to the protective tariff is not inherently or essentially Democratic.

WILSON AN ENGLISH FREE TRADER.

Jefferson, the founder of the Democratic Party, recognized the principle of protection, and advocated discriminating duties in favor of American shipping and reciprocity treaties in favor of American trade.

Mr. Wilson is fundamentally opposed to the principle of protection, and his idea of radical, ruthless tariff reduction is but an expression of the English free-trade theories of Cobden and Mill.

Mr. Wilson is an English free trader.

He may obscure his utterances, but he can not conceal his acts.

Mr. Wilson's political economy is the political economy of another nation and of another age.

It is the political economy of a nation that is passing and of an age that is past.

Mr. Wilson's theories are the theories of books, and of British books, but of British books that are no longer believed by the patriotic and practical and progressive Englishmen of to-day.

The United States of America have given an example to the world in progress and prosperity, in advancement and enlightenment, in happiness and contentment.

The nations of the world have turned toward this country in admiration and amazement.

The methods and systems and institutions of our country have been studied and imitated in every foreign nation except, perhaps, in England.

FEDERALISTS ALONE IN THE DARK.

England is slow to learn and reluctant to learn, but, nevertheless, she is beginning to learn, and the most advanced and intelligent thought in England to-day is in favor of an imperial federation, with free trade among its component States and colonies, but with a policy of protection toward the rest of the world.

Germany and France have long prospered under protection and through intelligent appreciation and imitation of other American ideas and institutions.

The realization that this country is the greatest country in the world and the appreciation of the causes which have made it the greatest country in the world are almost universal throughout the world except among the few remaining Federalists of the United States of America.

If there is to be tariff modification, the modern American policy should be the original democratic policy of reciprocity and discriminating duties in favor of American products, American manufactures, American commerce, and American trade.

In our tariff we have a weapon with which we can withstand the tariff weapons of other nations, but we must not abandon our weapons until other nations are ready to abandon theirs.

WHAT BECOMES OF RECIPROCITY?

In the reduction of our tariff through reciprocity we have a method by which we can compel the reduction of the tariff of other nations, but of what value will be a policy of reciprocity which does not go into effect until after our tariff reductions have been made?

If we are to make tariff concessions which will be encouraging to the products and valuable to the producers in other nations, we should compel reciprocal concessions which will be equally stimulating to the products, equally beneficial to the producers, to the farmers, to the manufacturers, and the laborers in our own country.

Through reciprocity tariff reduction can be made coincident and coextensive with trade expansion.

Through reciprocity the injury to our manufacturers, to our farmers, to our laborers, through the invasion of our markets by foreign products, would be compensated for by the advantages obtained by our manufacturers, our farmers, and our laborers in the opening of foreign markets to our trade and to our produce.

MOTIVE AN UNSELFISH ONE.

In the advocacy of intelligent reciprocity, rather than reckless and ruthless tariff reduction and commercial destruction, I have no selfish motives.

I have cattle ranches in Mexico, and it is proposed under Mr. Wilson's policy to bring beef free into the United States.

It would advantage me considerably, from a merely sordid point of view, to have Mexican beef allowed free into the United States market.

But, as a patriotic American citizen and a Jeffersonian Democrat, I do not believe that Mexican beef, or any other Mexican product, should be allowed free into the markets of the United States until American goods are allowed free into the markets of Mexico.

Under Mr. Wilson's program it is proposed to allow white paper free into the markets of the United States from Canada.

I use over $6,000,000 worth of white paper every year, and from a merely selfish financial point of view it would benefit me enormously to have white paper admitted free into the markets of the United States.

NATION'S INTERESTS ABOVE PARTY.

But, again, as a patriotic American citizen and a Jeffersonian Democrat, I do not believe that white paper, or any other Canadian product, should be admitted free into the United States until the products of the United States, or at least corresponding products of the United States, are admitted free into the markets of Canada.

The Canadians scornfully rejected our proposals of reciprocity.

Are we in return to give them the full advantages of reciprocity without securing any reciprocal advantages for ourselves?

I am loath to criticize the policy of the Democratic Party, or of any man whom I labored to elect, but I am an American first and a Democrat afterwards, and I can not consider the interests of my party above the interests of my country.

I shall hope to see the Democratic Party fulfill its duty and rise to its opportunity.

I shall support it gracefully when it is right, but criticize it regretfully when it is wrong; and I shall continue to implore it not to be led by a Federalistic fetich away from the fundamental principles of Thomas Jefferson, who was always not only a great Democrat, but a great American.

WILLIAM R. HEARST.

The foregoing remarks coming from any other than a leading and distinguished Democrat would be regarded as most excellent Republican doctrine. But it means that Mr. Hearst has abandoned the free-trade-tariff-for-revenue-only policy of the Democratic Party and confesses that the Republican Party is and always has been right. [Applause.]

Mr. Chairman, we should not overlook the fact that this splendid word picture of Mr. Hearst, portraying the acknowledged supremacy of the American people among the other nations of the earth, is the direct and legitimate result of the policies and supremacy of the Republican Party in this country. Protection and reciprocity have always been the watchwords of the Republican Party, and as long as we adhere to them the Nation will succeed; and when we abandon them, we will fail. [Loud applause.]

Mr. POWERS. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment, which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 51, line 15, strike out the entire paragraph which reads "Wheat, 10 cents per bushel," and substitute therefor the following: "Wheat, wheat flour, and wheat millstuffs, 10 cents per hundred pounds."

Mr. POWERS. Mr. Chairman, on behalf of the people living in the tenth congressional district of Kentucky, and for the mountain people generally, I want here and now to deny the charge that it is the hotbed of the moonshiners. If the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. LANGLEY] had seen fit to retaliate on Mr. THOMAS, the other Kentuckian making the charge, in all probability he could have said, with much truth in the assertion, that night-riderism runs mad in certain boasted sections of our Commonwealth, but I suppose he believed it to be his duty, and the duty of every Kentuckian, to defend the whole State of Kentucky and leave unsaid those things calculated to hurt or harm any part of it. [Applause.]

Now, a word in regard to this pending amendment. There is not a flour mill in the district I have the honor to represent. The charge, too often bandied back and forth on the floor of this House, that the Representative is speaking for certain interests in his district can not in this instance, at least with truth, be laid at my door.

The people of my district believe in equal opportunity in workshop, mill, factory, and farm, and equal and exact justice before the law. This present Underwood bill carries a duty of 10 cents a bushel on wheat and makes wheat flour and other products of the mill free of duty. Does the Democratic majority suppose that they are going to fool the American farmer by lulling him into the belief that he is being protected by a 10-cent duty on wheat while flour is put on the free list?

The distinguished Member from Illinois [Mr. RAINEY], a gentleman for whom I have every respect, said in his speech this afternoon that the country had already indorsed the provisions of this bill, in substance, by indorsing the farmers' free-list bill and by returning to this House an overwhelming Democratic majority. I want to remind the gentleman from Illinois that there is all the difference in the world between making a campaign on promises and performances. The Democratic Party two years from now will be compelled to make their campaign on actual performances. The old law under which the farmers of this country have had unbounded prosperity and under which they felt secure in the good prices they were receiving is to be supplanted, and this new measure is to be put in its place. What protection is there to the American farmer in the wheat he produces when you put flour on the free list? What protection is it to the American farmer to permit Canada to ship her flour to this country free of duty and then charge her 10 cents a bushel on the wheat she ships? Canada would no longer ship any wheat to this country. She would manufacture it at home and send the flour over, and the flour, when sent here, would have the same depressing effect on the price of the farmer's wheat as if Canada had sent her wheat here in the first instance. You are not protecting the farmers by this process. You can not fool them by this means.

Canada in 1910 produced 95,000,000 bushels of wheat available for export. Her total yield that year was 166,747,000 bushels. She therefore produced twice as much as she needed for her own consumption and actually exported that year 57,000,000 bushels of wheat, much of it coming to the United States.

In that same year the United States exported only 114,000,000 bushels of wheat. This gives some idea of what Canada will do when her 8,000,000 people reach the 100,000,000 point we boast of in this country to-day.

The Canadian wheat lands, of which there are 30,000,000 acres in the Provinces of Manitoba, Alberta, and Saskatchewan alone, average, when in cultivation, 22 bushels of wheat to the acre, while the average yield of the United States is only 15 bushels per acre. Do you suppose that you are going to protect the American farmer in his price of wheat when you let Canadian flour into this country free of duty?

And what has the American miller done to you that you should discriminate against him in favor of the Canadian miller? What have the wage earners in the American flour mills done to you that you should discriminate against them in favor of the wage earners in the Canadian flour mills? When great flood disasters, such as the recent ones in the States of Ohio and Indiana and through the Mississippi Valley, visit our country, destroying life and property and laying waste the land, who is it, through generous contributions, comes to their assistance and relieves their suffering? It is the American mill owners along with other patriotic and whole-souled Americans. Who do we look to to build up and maintain our free institutions, improve our highways, erect our churches, and build up our schools and colleges. It is Americans. Americans ought not to be discriminated against by other Americans and in favor of foreigners.

No doubt Canadian and other foreign newspapers and peoples are giving you much credit in your splendid work in favor of the foreigner, but our own American people will have a reckoning with you one of these days. I want to insert as a part of my remarks a telegram I received from the Cincinnati Chamber of Commerce; also a letter from the Washburn-Crosby Milling Co., of Louisville, Ky.; also an editorial from the Washington (D. C.) Post, in its issue of April 14, 1913. The matters referred to are as follows:

CINCINNATI, OHIO, April 30, 1913.

Hon. CALEB POWERS,
House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.:

By unanimous vote the board of directors of the Cincinnati Chamber of Commerce, at a meeting held April 29, adopted the following resolution, which is respectfully submitted for your attention:

Whereas the Underwood tariff bill imposes a duty of 10 cents per bushel upon foreign wheat and admits duty free the foreign milled products of such foreign wheat; and

Whereas this discrimination in favor of the foreign manufacturer is in contradiction alike of all accepted economic doctrine of the established tariff policy of all political parties and of all nations, and in effect pays a bounty to the foreign miller on all products of wheat sold by him in the markets of the United States; and

Whereas if American flour millers have to pay a tax upon foreign-grown wheat, then a simple justice requires that the foreign-milled products of such wheat shall pay an equivalent tax, and if foreign-milled wheat products are admitted duty free foreign wheat should be admitted duty free: Therefore be it

Resolved, That believing the proposed legislation would inevitably destroy one of the most important manufacturing industries in the United States and that it would further result in most serious injury to the American farmer, the Cincinnati Chamber of Commerce, through its board of directors, records itself as unalterably opposed, and earnestly urges upon the President and Congress of the United States the necessity of placing both wheat and its products upon terms of absolute equality.

Resolved, That copies of this preamble and resolution be forwarded immediately to the President of the United States, Senators and Congressmen from Ohio, Indiana, and Kentucky, the members of the Senate Finance Committee, and the Ways and Means Committee of the House of Representatives.

CINCINNATI CHAMBER OF COMMERCE,
W. C. CULKINS, Executive Secretary.

LOUISVILLE, KY., April 1, 1913.

Hon. CALEB POWERS,
Congressman, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: We have just noted that the Ways and Means Committee has inserted a paragraph in the proposed tariff bill admitting flour and milled products free of duty, at the same time imposing a duty of 7½ to 10 cents per bushel on wheat.

We are addressing this letter to you with a view to soliciting your influence in opposition to legislation of this character for two very potent reasons: First, to admit a manufactured product to this country free of duty while imposing a duty upon the raw material would be legislation without equity or justice; second, such legislation would tend to ruin the milling interests of the United States, an industry that is to-day overdone some three or four times the necessities of the country, and, were the markets available, the United States has milling capacity sufficient to grind all the wheat produced in both the United States and Canada.

It can be readily seen how such legislation would injure the milling industry, because it would open our markets to Canada for the shipment of flour and feed into this country absolutely free of duty, while we as millers would be barred from buying wheat from Canada for the purpose of grinding it into flour.

You will understand that were flour and milled products put on the free list because of the call from certain sections for lower food products, these latter sections would possibly be satisfied, but it would hardly be protection to the farmer, and such action would not benefit the farmer in the end because the shipment of wheat from Canada into the United States in the form of flour would depress the market just as much as if sending in an equal quantity of wheat. The mills of the United States would require less wheat because of the Canadian mills supplying the market with flour. Such legislation would practically ruin the milling industry of the United States, as not only would it open the doors for the shipment of flour from Canada, where a vast surplus of wheat over consumption is raised, but would also open the doors for the possible shipment of flour from Argentina, either direct or through milling in transit in Germany, France, and England, where it could be manufactured into flour and shipped to New York, Philadelphia, Boston, etc.

We will greatly appreciate any efforts you may make with a view to having this paragraph in the proposed tariff bill modified by providing that wheat and its products—flour and mill stuffs—shall be placed upon an equal basis. If it is necessary let us have free wheat, free flour, and free mill stuff, but in order to protect the farmer we think that the duty should be made, say, 10 cents per 100 pounds on wheat, 10 cents per 100 pounds on flour, and 10 cents per 100 pounds on mill stuffs. If 10 cents is too much for some of our friends, make it less, but under all circumstances let the tariff on the raw material and the manufactured products be at least relatively the same.

This is an urgent appeal to you for your assistance in connection with a matter that if put through along the line proposed will certainly do greater harm to one of the leading industries of this country than any other legislation could possibly do.

Can we count upon you for your assistance?

Very truly, yours,

WASHBURN-CROSBY MILLING CO. (INC.),
W. M. ATKINSON, General Manager.

[From the Washington Post, Monday, Apr. 14, 1913.]

A WEEK OF THE TARIFF.

The tariff bill, at the end of its first week "on trial before the country," has not stood scrutiny imperviously by any means, but the volume of disapproval does not measure up to predictions, except in New England and the sugar and wool States. The usual difficulty is experienced in fixing upon the precise effect of the changes.

The publication of the bill, as it happened, found prices on a decline in practically all of the markets, financial and commercial, but the downward tendency was not traceable to the tariff appreciably except in the securities of the new industrials. The depressing effect of new issues of railroad stocks on one hand and the flattering reports of crop conditions carried the lists downward at a rate that quite obscured the effect, if any, of the new element of weakness. A lingering belief that the Senate will modify some of the severities favored by the House sustains the feeling of confidence to no small degree, so that until the attitude of the upper body is fully disclosed the final judgment of the people can not be known.

A number of cotton and woolen mills in New England have closed down until the new basis of manufacturing can be more definitely determined, and will remain closed, it is announced, if the outlook fails to brighten. Protests continue to pour in on Congress from all directions, but the work in caucus does not indicate that they are shaking the resolution of the leaders to put the bill through practically intact.

Foreign opinion of the bill runs strongly in the opposite direction, as was to be expected. English manufacturers are overjoyed at the prospect of vastly enlarged markets in America. The trade papers over there look upon the bill as certain to give a great stimulus to our imports, one of the publications declaring that it is the heaviest blow given to protection since the passage by Parliament of the Peel tariff 60 years ago. The German exporters also are on the tiptoe of expectation, and the same buoyancy of feeling prevails in almost all European and many Latin-American countries. Canada will profit proportionately to a greater extent than any of the beneficiaries, with the open door extended to her agricultural, live stock, dairy, manufacturing, and lumber industries.

Mr. RAINEY. The difference, Mr. Chairman, between the Democratic Party, I will say for the benefit of the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. POWERS], and the Republican Party is this, in brief: The Republican Party makes promises before election and breaks them afterwards, while the Democratic Party makes promises before election and keeps them afterwards. [Applause on the Democratic side.] And that is what we are doing now. Now, 10 cents a bushel does not protect the wheat farmer of this country. They do not need protection against the wheat of Canada. Why, over in Canada they have a population of 7,000,000 while in the United States we have 6,300,000 farms and we have 12,000,000 farmers. We have almost twice as many farmers as they have of men, women, and children in all the Dominion of Canada. Talk about this great Republic crin-ing before Canada and before this tremendous influx of wheat? Why, we raise in the State of Illinois 25 bushels of wheat every year for every one single bushel of wheat that comes into the United States from Canada, and we are not pretending to be the greatest wheat-raising State by any means.

Mr. HAMILTON of Michigan. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RAINEY. In a moment, if I have time. Talk about protecting the wheat farmers of the United States. Why, here are the figures of the present market. On April 29 in Chicago May wheat was selling for 92 cents. In Winnipeg it sold for 94 cents on that day. On the 28th day of this month May wheat sold in Winnipeg at 94 to 94½ cents and it sold in Chicago for 92 cents.

Mr. MILLER. Will the gentleman please yield?

Mr. RAINEY. Not now.

Mr. MILLER. I can suggest something.

Mr. RAINEY. I can not yield now. On the 26th day of April wheat sold in Chicago for 92 cents (this is May wheat) and it sold in Winnipeg for 93 cents. On the 29th day of April July wheat sold in Winnipeg for 95 cents and in Chicago at 92 cents. On April 28 July wheat sold in Winnipeg at 95 cents, and it sold in Chicago at 92 cents. On April 26 July wheat sold in Winnipeg at 94⅞ cents, and it sold in Chicago at 91⅞ cents. And the same thing holds good with reference to September wheat. Why, the farmers of this country, if they want to sell their wheat on the highest market, and that has been the way all through this month, and it is usually that way—if they want to sell their wheat on the highest market they ought to break down the barrier between this country and Canada—induce Canada to repeal its tariff of 10 cents to 12 cents per bushel on wheat—their general tariff enforced against us is 12 cents—so as to let our wheat go there and sell on the highest market. The farmers of this country are not afraid of Canada. Three days ago contracts were made in St. Louis to sell flour ground here in the United States for delivery in Glasgow, where they have port mills, the port mills of England which, they say, threaten the mills of this country.

They were contracting in St. Louis three days ago to grind American wheat in this country and sell it in the port mills of Great Britain. That is the situation. Now I will yield.

Mr. MILLER. I would like to inquire of the gentleman—I suggest to him that if he had been as industrious in this as I know he would have been if he had had time he would find every year for the last 20 years——

Mr. RAINEY. I am not yielding for a speech, but just for a question.

Mr. MILLER. I want to make just a brief statement.

Mr. RAINEY. I can not yield except for a question.

Mr. CAMPBELL. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RAINEY. For a question.

Mr. CAMPBELL. The sales that were made for July were speculative sales; they were not cash sales?

Mr. RAINEY. That is the trouble. That is the reason why we ought to reduce the tariff on wheat. That is the reason why flour ought always to be free, to prevent the speculation in Chicago and up in Winnipeg. If it is possible to take it across the border either way, they can not tell how or when to corner markets—gamble in wheat. If this gambling could be prevented, it would mean cheaper bread there and cheaper bread here. We impose this tariff for the purpose of revenue, and that is all, and that is the only excuse for any of these rates. We get $200,000 out of it a year.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair begs the indulgence of the committee to state that because 30 can not be equally divided by 4 it makes it difficult for the Chair to divide the time evenly. The Chair will recognize the next gentleman for two minutes.

Mr. LANGLEY. Will the Chair allow me a suggestion? In order to be fair to each gentleman, I ask unanimous consent that the time may be extended to 32 minutes.

Mr. FOSTER. I object.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from North Dakota [Mr. NORTON] is recognized for two minutes.

Mr. NORTON. Mr. Chairman, I wish to take the very short time granted me to say that I am pleased to support the resolution offered by the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. LANGLEY]. I have the honor to represent the greatest wheat-producing State in this Union. Nothing that I may say here this evening, I know full well, will change one single jot or tittle of this Democratic tariff bill. I have, however, during the past week been interested in the discussions that have been had on the different schedules. I have been particularly amused at the statement just made by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. RAINEY] that the Democratic Party always has kept its promises. Their concealed promises are about the only promises they have kept in the past, and I sincerely hope that during the next few years in this country they will not keep and carry into effect the kind of promises that our people in North Dakota know they carried into effect when they were given an opportunity to manage the affairs of this Government. We did not have the prosperity in Democratic days that we are now enjoying, and I want to say to my friends on the other side that the farmers of North Dakota did not at all understand the promises that you made in the last campaign, if they are such as are being carried out in this crazy-quilt patchwork of a tariff bill. They did not understand that you intended to throw the farmers' markets of this country open to the world. I am just as confident as that night follows day that these United States in the future are not going to continue as a free-tariff country or a Democratic tariff-for-revenue-only Nation; but that, on the other hand, it is going to continue as a nation of Americans, for American manufacturers, American laborers, and American farmers. [Applause on the Republican side.]

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. HAMMOND] is recognized.

Mr. HAMMOND. Mr. Chairman, how much time have I?

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman has four minutes.

Mr. HAMMOND. I desire to say a word particularly to certain of my colleagues from Minnesota to whom I made a statement the other day. I said that Mr. Crosby, of the Washburn-Crosby Milling Co., had stated to me that he preferred the present rates and provisions in this bill in reference to wheat and flour to free wheat and free flour. I so understood Mr. Crosby to state in a conversation I had with him. I desire to say that I have received a telegram from him in which he states that that is not his position, and that I must have misunderstood him. As he is a gentleman who makes no misstatements, I desire in this public way to correct, in so far as I may, any misapprehension that may have been caused by my misunderstanding of his remarks. [Applause.]

The gentleman from Kansas [Mr. MURDOCK] has given us figures as to the number of barrels of flour made in Canada—in Canada, the great country to the north of us, from which we fear so much. Assuming that his figures are right—I do not know—Canada made, in 1912, a little less than 2,400,000 barrels of flour.

I desire to say that one flouring concern in the city of Minneapolis in six months will turn out that amount of flour and 50 per cent more; so that the amount stated, great as it may appear, is not so great an amount as would disturb conditions. Why, if that one milling concern should shut down for six months, 50 per cent more flour would be deducted from the flour product of the world than the amount given by the gentleman as Canada's yearly production.

Another thing: About 5½ bushels of wheat go into a barrel of flour.

Mr. ANDERSON. Four and one-half. Does the gentleman yield right there?

Mr. HAMMOND. Yes.

Mr. ANDERSON. The very least amount that goes into a barrel of flour is 4½ bushels and the highest is 5⅝.

Mr. HAMMOND. Well, 5 or 5½ would be a fair estimate, would it not?

Mr. ANDERSON. That is plenty.

Mr. HAMMOND. Yes. Well, assuming that it takes as much wheat up in Canada to make a barrel of flour as it does in other places, and making the liberal estimate of 5 or 5½ bushels to the barrel, there must be something less than 15,000,000 bushels of wheat ground into flour in Canada if the gentleman's figures are correct. Why, the wheat farmers of the United States furnish to the millers of this country all the flour they want to grind, and then send abroad twice as much wheat as that.

Mr. STEVENS of Minnesota. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman allow me just one question there?

Mr. HAMMOND. Certainly.

Mr. STEVENS of Minnesota. Is not the gentleman aware of the fact that the average daily capacity of grinding in Canada is 111,000 barrels a day, instead of the figures of the gentleman from Kansas? That is a fact, as I am telling you.

Mr. HAMMOND. I will say to my colleague that I do not know the grinding capacity of the mills in Canada, and I do not know the number of barrels of flour ground there last year.

Mr. STEVENS of Minnesota. One hundred and two million bushels were ground last year.

Mr. HAMMOND. Then the statement of the gentleman from Kansas is incorrect, and it was upon that statement that I based my remarks.

Mr. STEVENS of Minnesota. Twenty-two million barrels, and that would require 102,000,000 bushels of wheat.

Mr. HAMMOND. I was surprised at the statement. So I went to my friend from Kansas and asked him to show me his figures, and I took them as he gave them to me. But it serves to illustrate, at any rate, the comparatively slight importance of the wheat and flour of Canada as compared with the wheat raised in this country and with the flour made here.

Now, while we may think that it would be better if there were a straight rate upon flour in this bill in place of the contingent rate that is given, nevertheless I am satisfied that there is some advantage to the American miller in the plan proposed, and I believe it will be of benefit both to the raiser of wheat and the maker of flour. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

Mr. HELGESEN rose.

The CHAIRMAN. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

Mr. HELGESEN. I would like to have two minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The debate has been limited by order of the committee. The question is on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the gentleman from Kentucky.

The question was taken, and the Chairman announced that the "noes" seemed to have it.

Mr. NORTON. Mr. Chairman, I demand a division.

The CHAIRMAN. A division is demanded.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. MANN. Is this vote on the Powers amendment or the Langley amendment?

The CHAIRMAN. It is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. POWERS].

Mr. MANN. I thought it was the other way. That is all right.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair said "the amendment of the gentleman from Kentucky." He did not call the name.

The committee divided; and there were—ayes 59, noes 107.

So the amendment was rejected.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment proposed by the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. LANGLEY].

Mr. NORTON. Mr. Chairman, this is the amendment for the increase to 25 cents a bushel.

The CHAIRMAN. It is an amendment proposed by the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. LANGLEY].

Mr. NORTON. I demand a division.

The committee divided, and there were—ayes 60, noes 115.

Accordingly the amendment was rejected.

Mr. MILLER. Mr. Chairman, I should like to offer an amendment in the way of a new paragraph.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Minnesota offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 51, line 15, after the word "bushel," insert as a new paragraph:

"198½. Wheat flour and semolina, 45 cents per barrel of 196 pounds."

Mr. MILLER. Mr. Chairman, that is the exact rate necessary to equalize the duty of 10 cents per bushel proposed in the pending bill. I desire the attention of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. RAINEY] for just a moment, if I may have it, that I may call his attention to a fact related to the prices on wheat that has hitherto escaped his attention; and I am afraid that lack of information is illustrative of many of the reasons why certain schedules in the bill are as they are. He read to us the present prices of wheat in Winnipeg and Chicago, and it was no doubt to his surprise and that of the House that the price in Winnipeg was higher, and upon that he based the statement that we should let down the bars so that our American farmers might sell their wheat in Canada. But, Mr. Chairman, the gentleman should learn now that every year for a period of four months, during which time not a bushel of wheat is sold, the quotations at Winnipeg are higher than at Minneapolis, Duluth, or Chicago, and that during the other eight months of the year, when every bushel of wheat grown in Canada or America is sold, the price at Minneapolis and Duluth is from 10 to 14 cents higher than it is at Winnipeg. [Applause on the Republican side.]

Mr. Chairman, I am one who believes that the duty on flour is a protection to the farmer in the matter of his wheat. In round numbers, we raise in this country about 600,000,000 bushels of wheat each year. The mills consume for flour purposes about 500,000,000 bushels. If we strike a blow at the milling business, we certainly do an injury to the best market the farmer has for his flour. Wheat is grown for practically no other purpose but to make flour, and if we injure the milling industry we certainly injure the wheat industry.

Gentlemen have indulged themselves in the statement that wheat is not imported from Canada into the United States to-day in any considerable quantities. I would invite their attention to the fact that during the last season there were imported and shipped to the Duluth market, stored in boats and elevators at Duluth in bond, 22,000,000 bushels of wheat, although it is the first year the great influx has come. Mr. Chairman, if you knock down the duty on wheat still further, so that that imported wheat can pay the duty, instead of being exported out in bond, it will be milled in the States.

I am frank to say that what I am now saying is not for the welfare, perhaps, of the milling industry in my own city, but I believe it is for the welfare of the milling industry in the United States and the farmers of the United States. The miller then would like free wheat and free flour, but I believe in a protective duty on both. It may be easy for some to imagine that by reason of their great capitalization, great organization, and scattered condition over the land, the milling industry of the United States can compete with the world.

That is true when that industry can compete with the world on even terms, but handicap them by duty wheat and free flour and they can not possibly do so. Not in all sections can they compete now.

Mr. Chairman, at the head of Lake Superior there are to-day several mammoth flour mills that have not turned a wheel in 10 years. I do not ask that a duty be placed upon flour to enable those mills to start again. You can not do it. We stand at that point and listen to the whir of the flour mills at Kenora, Canada, across the line, where new mills have been constructed during the past year and many more are projected; but we do ask not to put this handicap upon the milling industry of the United States, that the flour mills in Minneapolis, in Kentucky, in Kansas, in Missouri, in Georgia, may not be like those of Duluth, with cobwebs in the machinery and panes out of the windows.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I should like to ask unanimous consent that debate on this paragraph and amendments close in 10 minutes.

Mr. PAYNE. I should like a couple of minutes.

Mr. SMITH of Minnesota. I should like two minutes.

Mr. MANAHAN. I should like five minutes.

Mr. MORGAN of Oklahoma. I should like some time.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Of course, everybody can not talk on every paragraph. I should like to accommodate some gentlemen on this side. I will ask unanimous consent that debate on this paragraph close in 20 minutes and that the time be limited to 4 minutes each.

Mr. MANN. That will take care of the gentleman from Minnesota, the gentleman from Oklahoma, the gentleman from North Dakota.

Mr. ANDERSON. I will yield to the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. MANAHAN].

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I will modify my request. I ask that debate be closed in 24 minutes and the speakers be limited to 3 minutes each.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Alabama asks unanimous consent that debate close in 24 minutes, recognition to be for 3 minutes. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. MANAHAN. Mr. Chairman, I regret the poverty of time accorded us on this great question. It does not strike me as fair, but it is as fair as the tariff is to the people of Minnesota. The tax on wheat at 10 cents a bushel with flour free is a fraud. It is dishonest. [Applause on the Republican side.] It is a "con" case, designed to obtain votes by false pretenses. The gentlemen who drew this schedule know that wheat must be ground into flour before it is used. Possibly the prehistoric Democrat used wheat before it was ground, but it only served to develop his teeth and grazing ability, and possibly developed his ears at the expense of his intellect. [Laughter.]

I never realized until this discussion came up the appropriateness of the great symbol of Democracy, represented by the stubborness of the mule. You can not convince these gentlemen on any proposition, and the reason given by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. RAINEY] is that they promised the American people before election they would give them free flour and wheat and they have got to keep their promise, regardless of the merits of the proposition.

It may be good politics, but it is poor patriotism—in fact, it is wicked—to destroy the great industries of a great State for the sake of keeping a promise made for political effect.

Mr. Chairman, I regret exceedingly that I have not the time to show the iniquity of this proposition. I regret it exceedingly, because it is not only dishonest to the farmers of my State, but to the American people. To break down agriculture is the cruelest blow that can be struck against labor, and I am amazed that the Representative from Illinois [Mr. BUCHANAN], the representative of labor, does not appreciate the great truth that if you make farming so miserable for the farmers and unprofitable, and so unsatisfactory to the farmer's boys and girls, they will keep on congregating in the city and making the laborer's lot harder and more fiercely competitive and the farms poorer and less productive and profitable, thus bringing wholesale depression and poverty to the Nation. You have got to have the farmer prosperous in order to have labor succeed, because if the farmers are prosperous the whole Nation is and the demand for labor is heavy. This is a dishonorable tariff as far as the agriculturists of the country are concerned, and an unfortunate tariff for men and women who work. [Applause on the Republican side.]

Mr. MORGAN of Oklahoma. Mr. Chairman, I want to express my opposition to this paragraph and the preceding one.

It matters not what is said on this floor, it matters not what may be said in the future, the farmers of this country understand thoroughly this proposition, and they believe that a reduction of duty on wheat or the placing of flour on the free list will seriously injure their business, and I agree with the farmer.

PETITION FROM OKLAHOMA FARMERS.

I want to present to the House a petition from the farmers of my district. It is as follows:

MOORELAND, OKLA., April 26, 1913.

Hon. DICK T. MORGAN, M. C.,
Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR:

Whereas the Ways and Means Committee of the House of Representatives has prepared a tariff bill for the revision of the tariff; and
Whereas by the terms of the said proposed bill all tariffs would be removed from flour; and
Whereas by the terms of the said bill it is provided that a tariff of 10 cents per bushel shall be maintained upon wheat; and
Whereas it is evident by removing the tariff from flour the price of flour will necessarily be lowered, and in that manner and to that extent will necessarily lower the price of wheat correspondingly; and
Whereas the effect of the removing of the tariff from flour will necessarily be to reduce the price of wheat, thereby reducing the price of the land upon which wheat is grown in the United States; and
Whereas the removal of the tariff from flour will necessarily reduce the price of wheat to an export value and maintain same throughout every month in the year, thus depriving us of our domestic value, which usually is from 10 to 15 cents per bushel higher than export values, and thus putting our wheat in competition throughout every month in the year with the vast wheat-growing countries of the Canadian Northwest, Argentina, and Russia, which countries can not produce anything but wheat, and which countries can produce wheat at a lesser cost of production than we can in our country; and
Whereas the removal of the tariff from flour will necessarily transfer the milling business from the mill centers in the United States to the Canadian mills and other countries producing a surplus of wheat, and in that manner depreciating the value of all milling property, and transferring the labor employed in the milling concerns in the United States to the milling concerns located in foreign countries; and
Whereas we, the undersigned farmers and pioneers of northwest Oklahoma, have helped develop northwest Oklahoma into a wheat-growing country, and the reduction of the price of wheat would naturally affect our accumulation of a lifetime:

Therefore we, the undersigned farmers, do hereby earnestly protest against the removal of the tariff from either wheat or flour, and do hereby urge you as our Representative in Congress to use your best efforts and influence in maintaining the tariff on both wheat and flour, to the end that we may not suffer disastrously from the passage of this bill.

Respectfully,

John J. Bouquot, Geo. Knittel, G. W. Tyford, F. J. Knittel, J. F. Butcher, W. M. Blevins, J. C. Triplett, A. B. Catlett, Albert Geerdet, H. M. Wyckoff, Joe Lowell, W. J. Shaw, Wm. H. Lintner, O. A. White, B. J. Durant, J. E. Taylor, J. G. Carter, Geo. F. Ruttman, O. P. Clifton, R. C. Robinson, A. S. Jenisch, L. E. Bouquot, E. L. Leighton, S. Luellen, D. I. Harper, A. P. Atkinson, M. L. Cobb, A. D. Bailey, M. Matthews.

I next present a letter from Mr. H. K. Schafer, manager of the Canadian Mill & Elevator Co.:

EL RENO, OKLA., April 28, 1913.

Hon. DICK T. MORGAN, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: We sincerely hope that the grain producers' interests, together with the milling-industry interests, will be considered when the tariff bill is taken up in the Senate. We understand this bill is designed to protect the consumer of flour by having flour on the free list and to protect the producer of wheat by having a tariff on wheat. In this connection wish to say, however, that the producer gets no protection whatever, from the fact that immediately when flour is imported into this country the producer's wheat must necessarily recede in price to a level that will enable the miller in this country to cope with his foreign competitor, who imports the cheaper flour; and, speaking from the miller's viewpoint, there is no question but what it would be a direct discrimination to have flour on the free list and wheat protected by duty. If the interest of the millers and milling industry would be protected like the interests of other manufacturing industries, the miller should be entitled to free wheat and a duty on flour; however, if this can not be granted, we request that you urge by all means to at least keep flour and wheat and the products from wheat on a parity; that is to say, if wheat bears a duty, let flour and other products of wheat bear a proportionate duty.

We sincerely request that you give this matter serious consideration, and see to it that the producer of wheat as well as the miller gets protection he is justly entitled to.

Yours, truly,

CANADIAN MILL & ELEVATOR CO.,
H. K. SCHAFER, Manager.

OKLAHOMA CITY, OKLA., April 15, 1913.

Hon. DICK T. MORGAN, M. C.,
Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: We notice that the new tariff bill places rolled oats, oatmeal, and oat hulls on the free list. In fairness and justice to the American manufacturer of rolled oats, we believe that Congress should place a tariff on the manufactured products in strict keeping with that of raw material which, according to schedule, will remain practically unchanged.

We believe a duty of 55 cents per hundred pounds on rolled oats and oatmeal and 15 cents on oat feed or oat hulls would be in the right proportions with the proposed duty on raw material, and constitute the measure of protection due the American manufacturer.

Under the proposed act the rolled-oats and oatmeal business of the United States would be wholly at the mercy of foreign competition, more especially with Canada, since the home manufacturer would not have the opportunity of importing his raw material on the same basis as his foreign competitor could ship into the United States his manufactured products.

It seems to us that from such an unjust discrimination between the raw and manufactured products, nothing short of a disastrous end can come to our home manufacturers.

In thus exterminating the home manufacturer, we can see in our imagination such destruction to the home market for raw material as to render the profit to the producer almost, if not quite, extinct.

Anything which you can conscientiously do in defeat of the proposed act, placing this item on the free list, we assure you will be duly appreciated, not only by ourselves and the home manufacturers, but the farmers as well.

Yours, very truly,

CARROLL, BROUGH & ROBINSON,
By J. T. ROBINSON,
Secretary and Treasurer.

EL RENO, OKLA., April 5, 1913.

Hon. D. T. MORGAN,
House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: We received word that the new tariff bill about to be considered in Congress provides a duty of 7½ cents a bushel on wheat, while flour and feed are placed on the free list. We immediately wired you that this would be a deathblow to the milling industry of this country, urging that flour, feed, and wheat all be put on a parity.

We do not know the exact figures, but think on a 10 years' average the farmer receives 2 to 3 cents per bushel above the export price for his wheat. This is due to domestic requirements being so close to production. Domestic consumption, of course, is entirely by millers, and should they be eliminated the farmer would be forced to sell his entire crop for export at a considerably lower price than he has heretofore been getting.

The millers do not ask for any protection or favors of any kind, but they are surely entitled to the same advantage from our Government as the Canadian and English millers. This bill in effect, however, discriminates against us in favor of the foreigner.

Trust that you will see the injustice of this act and will succeed in securing this parity of duty on grain and flour and feed.

Yours, truly,

EL RENO MILL & ELEVATOR CO.,
K. E. HUMPHREY,
Secretary and Treasurer.

Mr. Chairman, upon this matter of a tariff upon agricultural products I like to look at it from a broad national viewpoint. There are 3,000,000 square miles of area in continental United States, 1,908,000,000 acres of land. Eight hundred and eighty-five million acres are included within our farms. Four hundred and eighty-five million acres of that land in farms are improved. In other words, only one-half of our farm lands to-day are improved. Three-fourths of the area of our country is not improved. The men who have given the greatest study to this agricultural question believe in intensifying our farming, in scientific farming, in aiding and developing the great farming interests of this country so as to enable them to produce what is necessary for all our people.

Give our farmers a fair chance, give them prices that will make their labor remunerative, and they will furnish products in abundance for all.

The farmers are entitled to the same protection we give the manufacturers. Competition is no more injurious to the manufacturer than to the farmer. The farmer is entitled to the home market as much as the owners of our manufacturing plants. To open our markets to the cheap farm products of Canada, Mexico, South America, and other countries where the price of labor is often not one-fifth what it costs the farmer in this country is unjust, unfair, and not for the welfare of any class of our citizenship. Farming is not only the chief industry of Oklahoma, but it is the greatest industry of the Nation. If our legislation makes the farmers prosperous, all other classes will share in that prosperity.

The provisions of this bill are also unjust to the millers of this country.

Why should we enact laws that will embarrass or endanger any industry? Why should we legislate in a way that will depreciate the value of the mills in this country? I protest against the provisions of this bill relating to wheat and flour as detrimental to both the farmers and millers.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Oklahoma has expired.

Mr. SMITH of Minnesota. Mr. Chairman, I will ask the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. RAINEY] to answer a question. He has just stated that May wheat was selling in Chicago for 92 cents and on the same day in Winnipeg for 94 cents. Does the gentleman have reference to the present market and the 1912 crop?

Mr. RAINEY. That refers to the present prices in Chicago.

Mr. SMITH of Minnesota. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen on the other side of the Chamber, you have been deceived, unless you have made an independent investigation. I trust that this House wants to be fair. I trust that the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. RAINEY] wants to be fair, and I want to say to you that the prices of wheat that Mr. RAINEY gave are on a par with a great many other things that evidently have crept in here.

Mr. RAINEY. Mr. Chairman, I read those quotations from the Chicago Inter Ocean, a Republican newspaper.

Mr. SMITH of Minnesota. Very good. I am going to relieve the gentleman of the position in which he has placed himself. I want to say it is unfair, and I want to say that no man can take up one of these schedules and digest it within a year, while we are forced to pass upon the entire bill within a week. If we had a proper tariff commission, we would have authentic and unbiased information. I am going to quote to you the actual range of prices covering a sufficient length of time to warrant their use as actually showing the facts. I have here a table contained on page 425 of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, prepared by the Tariff Board, which shows the price of wheat in Minneapolis and in Winnipeg for 6 years, and out of the 72 months only six times was the average price higher in Winnipeg than in Minneapolis. Eighteen times it was more than 10 cents higher in Minneapolis than in Winnipeg, and 45 times it was at least 5 cents higher in Minneapolis than in Winnipeg. When you confine yourself to one single year in getting statistics it is not fair. It is misleading, and it shows you have not investigated the subject, and anyone who relies on that statement is depending on information that is not reliable. Let me tell you why the price of wheat in Chicago and Minneapolis to-day is less than it is in Winnipeg. If you will just go out to the great States of North and South Dakota and Minnesota and see what we produced in 1912, you will understand. Out of 621,000,000 bushels of wheat produced in the United States we produced in those three States 263,000,000 bushels. Do you not think that that will affect those markets. We never had such a crop and probably will never have such a crop again. When you are estimating prices do not confine yourself to 1 year. Cover a period of 10 years if you can—the further back the better. When you take an isolated case and base your argument on that to show that the prices in Chicago and Minneapolis are lower than in Winnipeg, I say it is manifestly unfair; and the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. RAINEY] should have known it, and especially since he is the member of the Ways and Means Committee having charge of this schedule and upon whom the membership of the House must rely for its information.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Minnesota has expired.

Mr. HELGESEN. Mr. Chairman, I wish to call attention to some of the remarks of gentlemen on the other side, particularly the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. HAMMOND] and a few others who said that we have nothing to fear from Canada. Evidently they are proceeding upon the theory that when this bill is passed all progress is going to stop, not only in this country but in Canada. Canada is a new country, and I presume there is not a man on that side of the House who realizes that you can draw a line through the city of Winnipeg north and south, and that the Canadian territory west of that line will support the entire population of the United States. They do not realize that Canada is in the near future going to raise more wheat annually than the United States has ever raised in all its history, and that, Mr. Chairman, means that we will have something to fear, providing they can raise the wheat more cheaply than we can. On the subject of the price of wheat, let me illustrate: A neighbor of mine last fall took two samples of wheat from my home town to Saskatchewan, where some of his relatives live. One sample was graded as No. 1 northern in my town and the other was graded as No. 2. When he got to Saskatchewan, for the No. 1 northern he was offered No. 4, and the other, our No. 2, they would not grade at all.

Now, the way they grade their wheat in Canada, No. 1 hard is quoted at a high price, but no wheat is ever sold or scarcely any at the No. 1 price. The price they do sell their wheat at there is such that were they to cross this line they would get from one to four grades higher on this side than on the other. If you take that into consideration, my friends, there will be a vast difference in our favor between the Canadian price and the American price, and when you talk about their milling capacity they have more water power than we have, so that they can extend their milling capacity without limit. If you think for one minute they are not going to remove the duty on flour that goes into Canada in order to get the benefit of free flour there you are assuming they are a lot of idiots, and they have demonstrated in the last few years that there is no more capable, intelligent business men on earth than the Canadian, and they are going to remove the duty on our flour in order that they may enjoy the greatest market the world has got. We consume 20 per cent of all the manufactured products of the world, and you can rest assured it is not long before Canada is going to take advantage of what you are offering them in this bill.

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Chairman, if I understand the position of the committee now, they promised free food in the original bill, and for that reason they put flour on the free list and they heard from the millers of the country. I heard some echoes of that in my own office, and for reason of these loud protests they concluded to break 10 per cent of their promises on flour and report a duty of 10 cents on wheat and 10 per cent on flour. As long as you have broken your promises, why not give a duty that would be proportionate, so there will not be any undue importation of free articles and you will raise the revenue that you are so anxious about. I heard some echoes about buckwheat, and a gentleman came into my office, who lives in my district, who said he had the largest buckwheat mill in the country, if not in the world, perhaps, which ground exclusively buckwheat flour, and they had a meeting of a large number of millers making buckwheat flour, from Pennsylvania, and they sent him down as the buckwheat spokesman. He said he wanted one of two things—either free buckwheat or a duty on buckwheat flour. They have got the buckwheat on the free list. He wanted to know what he should do. I told him I did not have anything more to do with this bill, thank God, than he did, and of all things that have been charged against me I was not responsible for a line of it. But I did tell him where I thought he should go to interview some men, and he seems to have gotten in his work.

I told him that it was an uphill job, because the Member from our State was more interested in some things down about Manhattan Island than in raising buckwheat and making buckwheat flour up in my district, and the gentleman from Pennsylvania had his hands more than full, but he went notwithstanding, and what was the result? Why, to even up things they put buckwheat on the free list as well as buckwheat flour, so you have another thing added to the inharmonious aspect of this bill running through every other line of it. Buckwheat free, buckwheat flour free, wheat on the dutiable list and 10 per cent on flour, but to be free in the end. They make promises and break them, because they know and everybody knows Canada will take off the little duty on flour in order to set to work the mills of Canada, which have the capacity to make 50 per cent more flour than they are making now. Oh, it is a beautiful bill. [Applause on the Republican side.]

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, the committee has already determined by a vote to keep the duty of 10 cents per bushel on wheat. By all principles of fairness if there be a duty of 10 cents per bushel on wheat the amendment to place a duty on flour ought to prevail in the interest of having wheat milled into flour in our own country instead of in Canada. I was pleased, however, and somewhat surprised to hear my distinguished friend from Kansas [Mr. MURDOCK] apparently advocate either a reduction on wheat or a duty on flour. The pending measure carries 10 cents a bushel on wheat and no duty on flour except under certain conditions.

When the duty on wheat was 25 cents a bushel instead of 10 cents a bushel, the distinguished gentleman from Kansas [Mr. MURDOCK] a year ago voted to place flour on the free list, while 25 cents a bushel still remained on wheat—much more onerous for the miller than the proposition of 10 cents a bushel on wheat and no duty on flour. He not only voted for the bill when it passed the House, but he voted to override the veto of the President after the President had vetoed the bill on the distinct ground that to leave a duty on wheat at 25 cents a bushel and then place flour on the free list would be destructive of American milling interests. And I am delighted and pleased beyond measure that we have gathered to this side of the House the gentleman from Kansas, now in favor of the proposition which he then voted against. [Applause on the Republican side.]

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment proposed——

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. Chairman, has the time expired?

The CHAIRMAN. The time has not expired. There are six minutes remaining. The gentleman from Minnesota is recognized for three minutes.

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. Chairman, I want to congratulate my colleague from Minnesota [Mr. HAMMOND] on the frankness and squareness which characterized the statement which prefaced his remarks a few moments ago. The squareness was like him and worthy of him, and I want to express for myself and my colleagues our appreciation of his action. I only regret that his Democratic colleagues on the committee do not appear as willing to protect the interests of the State of Minnesota as he.

I realize that gentlemen on that side of the aisle will not pay much attention to what we Republicans may say, and so I want to read for your edification a letter which I received from a lifelong Democrat in my district. It is as follows:

PRESTON STOCK FARM,
Preston, Fillmore County, Minn., April 9, 1913.

Hon. SYDNEY ANDERSON.

DEAR SIR: As a lifelong Democrat, but never an office seeker, I want to protest against the financial idiocy that takes the tariff from flour and leaves it on wheat. I am devoted to Democratic principles, and have proven the fact by answering the call of Douglas and Logan to stand by the Union, wearing a blue uniform as a Democrat and remaining one since, while knocking out a living by hard work. This entitles me, in my opinion, to the privilege of protesting against being financially murdered by a bunch of Democratic theorists who never did an honest day's work in their lives. What are the dairy farmers of your district going to do for mill stuff with the mills shut down? We raise no wheat to speak of. Leaving the tariff on wheat and taking it off flour transfers the milling industry to Canada. Any fool can see that. Leave the tariff on both or take it of from both. Can not you make my bonehead brother Democrats see this? Or will the owners of the Democratic donkey have to pull its ears? We who own it are competent to do the job.

What satisfaction will it be to a city consumer to buy Canadian flour after our mills are shut down? Will he get it any cheaper? By no means; he will pay more. After the 10-cent tariff on wheat has closed our mills, consumers will have to pay the penalty that monopoly exacts. When we can not get bran and shorts for our cows, except from Canada, dairy farming will suffer a more severe blow than my fellow partisan, Burleson, has sought to inflict upon us in his oleo propaganda.

Slaughtered in the house of our friends is the legend I suggest for the tombstones of Democrats crushed by a tariff provision that benefits no American, and I wonder what there is in Democracy that goes to some men's heads and makes them foolish. Don't hesitate to read this to my fellow Democrats. I am not an office seeker, only a voting Democrat with calloused hands, who swallowed Greely and offered to carry arms again for Tilden.

I hate a rascal, but a fool is worse, and the men who can not see that a tariff on wheat and none on flour is foolish are simply fools; and you are mighty welcome to tell them so for a Democrat who was a fighting Democrat 50 years ago.

Yours, truly, M. T. GRATTAN.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment——

Mr. POWERS. Mr. Chairman, has all time expired?

The CHAIRMAN. There are three minutes remaining. The gentleman from Kentucky is recognized.

Mr. POWERS. Mr. Chairman, we have been reminded by some gentleman on the other side of the aisle that the United States has nothing to fear from wheat production in the Dominion of Canada. I want to remind them that in the year of 1910 Canada produced 166,745,000 bushels of wheat. Canada had available for export in that year 95,000,000 bushels of wheat. The United States in that year——

Mr. RAINEY. Will the gentleman permit me to state how much the United States produced in that year?

Mr. POWERS. What is that?

Mr. RAINEY. Will the gentleman permit me to state how much the United States produced in that year?

Mr. POWERS. I have no objection.

Mr. RAINEY. It produced 621,338,000 bushels.

Mr. POWERS. While that is true, the United States exported in that year only 114,000,000 bushels of wheat, and Canada exported in that year 57,000,000 bushels of wheat, a good deal of it coming to the United States. And I would remind them further——

Mr. RAINEY. There could not be more than 1,000,000 bushels come to the United States.

Mr. POWERS. I said 57,000,000 bushels of wheat.

Mr. RAINEY. You just said that 1,000,000 came to the United States in that year.

Mr. POWERS. Canada exported in the year 1910, 57,000,000 bushels of wheat, a good deal of it coming to the United States.

Mr. RAINEY. Does the gentleman object to my stating how much came to the United States in that year?

Mr. POWERS. I have only three minutes.

Mr. RAINEY. One million one hundred thousand bushels came to the United States in that year.

Mr. POWERS. Canada has 3,000,000 acres of wheat land. She produces on an average of 22 bushels per acre, while in the United States we are only able to produce on an average of 15 bushels per acre.

Mr. RAINEY. Will the gentleman permit me to state what the wheat acreage was in that year? According to the Canadian Year Book it was 9,299,000 acres.

Mr. POWERS. Canada, nowithstanding the fact that she is producing this enormous quantity of wheat, and notwithstanding the further fact that she has 30,000,000 acres of wheat lands available for the production of wheat, has a population of only 8,000,000 people, while the United States has a population of about 100,000,000 people.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Kentucky has expired. All time has expired. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. MILLER].

The question was taken, and the Chairman announced that the noes appeared to have it.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I ask for a division on that.

The committee divided; and there were—ayes 73, noes 113.

So the amendment was rejected.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

199. Biscuits, bread, wafers, cakes, and other baked articles, by whatever name known, when combined with chocolate, nuts, fruit, or confectionery of any kind, and without regard to the component material of chief value, 25 per cent ad valorem.

Mr. RAINEY. Mr. Chairman, I offer a committee amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. RAINEY] offers a committee amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

On page 51, line 17, after the word "articles," insert the words "and puddings."

Mr. MANN. You will be a pudding for us!

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. RAINEY].

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. RAINEY. Mr. Chairman, I offer another committee amendment.

The CHAIRMAN (Mr. SHERLEY). The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. RAINEY] presents a committee amendment which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

On page 51, line 17, strike out the words "when combined with" and insert the word "containing."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

200. Butter and butter substitutes, 3 cents per pound.

Mr. GOOD. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment, which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Iowa [Mr. GOOD] offers an amendment which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend, line 21, page 51, by striking out "3" and inserting "3½."

Mr. GOOD. Mr. Chairman, the item refers to the duty on butter.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, has that paragraph been read?

Mr. MANN. Yes; it has been read.

Mr. GOOD. The bill places the duty at 3 cents per pound. The amendment which I have offered places the duty at the rate carried in the Payne law of 3½ cents.

Mr. MANN. It is given here as 6 cents in the Payne law.

Mr. PAYNE. According to this print it is 6 cents.

Mr. GOOD. Mr. Chairman, I hold in my hand a circular, circulated in the cities of the United States in the campaign of 1910, a part of which reads as follows:

Voters and householders, read the within carefully. How to save your money. Take it into the booth with you when you vote. Vote for your families. High-cost-of-living facts. Read carefully and ponder well. Vote right. Eighteen hundred and ninety-six prices—1910. The Republican Party has been in complete control of every department of the Government since 1896—President, Senate, and Congress. They have given you a government of trusts—Beef Trust, Sugar Trust, Flour Trust, Clothing Trust—and the daddy of them all, the Tariff Trust.

[Applause on the Democratic side.]

See the result below.

The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. RAINEY], the expert on this committee, made a statement a few moments ago to the effect that the difference between the Republican Party and the Democratic Party lay in the fact that the platform pledges of the Democratic Party were redeemed when that party got in power. Let us examine the facts with regard to this schedule.

The Payne law did not alter the duty on butter at all. The duty on butter under the Dingley bill was 6 cents a pound and, if the gentleman is correct, it was 6 cents a pound in the Payne bill. The statement which your committee sent out in 1910 is that butter in 1896 was 10 cents a pound, and you say that the price in 1910 was 30 cents a pound, an increase of 300 per cent, resulting from what? From not doing a single thing with regard to the tariff on butter, but by leaving it just as it was.

Mr. RAINEY. The Elgin Butter Trust.

Mr. GOOD. Now, I want to ask the gentleman if the action of that Congress in not changing the duty on butter, in not lowering or increasing it at all, increased the price to the ultimate consumer 300 per cent, how much will the reduction of 40 per cent proposed in the bill increase the price to the ultimate consumer?

Mr. RAINEY. The price of butter has been increased by the Elgin Butter Trust.

Mr. GOOD. How about the millions of farmers who are making butter and selling it in the markets?

Mr. RAINEY. They do not make that kind of butter.

A MEMBER. They make better butter.

Mr. RAINEY. Before the gentleman qualifies as a farmer——

Mr. GOOD. Perhaps they make a better kind of butter.

Mr. MADDEN. What is the price of butter now?

Mr. GOOD. I am not an expert on that. The gentleman who prepared that campaign document perhaps can tell what it is.

SEVERAL MEMBERS. Forty cents.

Mr. RAINEY. It keeps getting higher and higher. It will commence to get lower now.

Mr. GOOD. How much lower will it commence to get after this bill passes?

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I move that debate on this paragraph and amendments thereto close in five minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Alabama moves that all debate on this paragraph and amendments thereto close in five minutes

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. MOORE. Mr. Chairman, I should like to call the attention of the committee and of the gentleman from Alabama to the report on this bill, page 162, butter and substitutes therefor. The duty is reduced from 6 cents a pound in the Payne bill to 3 cents a pound in the Underwood bill, presumably for the purpose of raising revenue, which is reduced from $60,000 under the Payne bill to $39,000, estimated, under the Underwood bill. But as to the cost of living, the unit value of butter under the Payne bill is given at 23 cents a pound, and under the Underwood bill, the duty being reduced, at 25 cents a pound. I should like to ask whether that is a typographical error? The price of the commodity to the consumer seems to be raised under this system. Before the gentleman answers that question I will call his attention to cheese and substitutes therefor, reported on the same page. There is a reduction of duty there from 32 per cent ad valorem under the Payne bill to 20 per cent under the Underwood bill.

The duty, of course, is reduced for the purpose of revenue only, but the price of cheese to the consumer, this being an article very much needed by the poor consumer, is apparently raised from 18 cents in the Payne bill to 19 cents in the Underwood bill. This may also be a mistake. It may be purely typographical; but it would appear on looking at eggs, page 165, that the duty on eggs in the Payne tariff bill was 5 cents a dozen, and the duty is to be reduced to 2 cents a dozen in the Underwood bill. The unit value of the eggs in the Payne bill is given at 13.7, and in the Underwood bill, the duty being lowered, the price of the eggs is increased to the consumer to 14 cents a dozen. Now, it may be that these are all clerical errors and that the committee has made a mistake. It would seem so, because the purpose of the committee, as I understand it, is to take the duties off in order that the price of living to the consumer may be reduced.

Mr. GOOD. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MOORE. If the gentleman will allow me to refer to rose plants and things of that kind, I think I can show that throughout this series of tables as the duty is taken off and the opportunity to the producer to obtain a fair profit for his commodity is reduced the price to the consumer, whoever he is, is increased, as proven at least by the figures in these three tables I have quoted. It is an interesting study in statistics, and might possibly be explained by the philosophers on the other side who are teaching us how to keep wages up and prices down.

Mr. GOOD. Perhaps this campaign circular disclosed what is meant on that subject.

Mr. MOORE. I have heard the gentleman refer to that several times, and I am inclined to think that campaign circular was one of those 1,100,001 lies that were circulated so successfully through the newspapers and handbills that they completely deceived the people in the last campaign as to the real intent of the Democratic Party to reduce the cost of living.

Mr. GOOD. With regard to eggs, they propose by the same reduction——

Mr. MOORE. To raise the price to the consumer.

Mr. GOOD. Reduce the price 15 cents a dozen to the consumer.

Mr. MOORE. When the poor consumer gets his end of it, as he will in the course of time, he will understand the circular which the gentleman has read.

Mr. GOOD. First they propose to reduce the duty 3 cents a pound on butter and they propose to reduce the price to the consumer 10 cents a pound.

Mr. MOORE. The gentleman represents the producer in butter, and I represent the consumer. The gentleman says his producers are going to be hurt, and I say the price to the consumer is going to be increased. That is true Democratic philosophy. [Applause on the Republican side.]

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. GOOD].

The question was taken, and the amendment was lost.

The Clerk read as follows:

201. Cheese and substitutes therefor, 20 per cent ad valorem.

Mr. MARTIN of South Dakota. Mr. Chairman, we produce in this country under this paragraph and the preceding one dairy products amounting to $250,000,000 worth a year. It so happens that the amount of consumption is practically the same equivalent, around the figures of one-quarter of a billion dollars every year. Of course, the purpose of our Democratic tariff blacksmiths is to increase importations of these articles and all others that they have made these great reductions of the tariff upon.

Mr. SLOAN. Mr. Chairman, I have a number of blacksmiths in my district, and on behalf of those blacksmiths I object. [Laughter.]

Mr. MARTIN of South Dakota. They stated that as a governing principle forming the basis of their reductions, they have no regard for protection. In the second place, they make such reductions as will lead to a material increase of importations. They have not favored the country with a statement of what the total amount of increased importations is to be. They have in some respects. As to articles left on the dutiable list, they have estimated that the imports will be $39,000,000 more than in 1912, but they have taken off the dutiable list and put on the free list articles of value imported in 1912 to the amount of $102,000,000. It goes without saying that if you take articles off the dutiable list and put them on the free list the quantity of importations will very much increase.

Take the sugar question. Sixty million dollars in round figures of beet sugar is grown in this country, and it will in time under free trade come near disappearing entirely. The nearest we have had to an estimate from these responsible gentlemen who are rearranging the tariff, was when the distinguished gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. PALMER] was addressing the House, and I asked him what was their estimate of the probable increased importations, and after consulting at his elbow the gentleman from Alabama, my understanding of the estimate was that in round figures it amounted to $286,000,000. That is a very great disturbance in the amount of consumption of American products. What is to become of the equivalent of the goods of American products to be displaced by that amount of foreign goods? They say that this tariff is made for the consumer. The Republican tariff was always made for the producer. Our idea is that if you can keep everybody a producer the country is growing wealthy, and every man worth his salt is a producer as well as a consumer. It is only the idle rich and the weary Willies, who count the ties on the railways, that are not producers. We do not make tariffs for those people. What are you going to do with the labor and the products that are to be displaced by the $300,000,000 worth of foreign goods to take the place of the American manufactures? One of two things must happen, either that much production must cease or else that much of production must find a market abroad.

The schoolmaster from New Jersey occupying the White House assured us that by sharpening up our wits and by allowing these people to come in and compete with us and take a portion of our market we will be able to drive them out of some other market, and in conformity with the same theory the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] says, in his report, that, in his judgment, the future of American commerce will be found across the seas. Evidently it will not be found at home, and if the gentlemen who have suggested this marvelous proposition about sharpening our wits by allowing foreigners to come in and drive us out of our own markets will suggest a way whereby we may drive them out of their markets there would be some hope in the proposition. [Applause.]

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I move that all debate on the paragraph and all amendments thereto now close.

The motion was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN (Mr. SHERLEY). Without objection the pro forma amendment will be withdrawn and the Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

202. Beans, not specially provided for, 25 cents per bushel of 60 pounds.

Mr. RAINEY. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following committee amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 51, line 24, after the word "beans" insert the words "and lentils."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. FORDNEY. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment, which I send to the desk and ask to have read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 51, line 24, after the word "for," strike out the figure "25" and insert "45."

Mr. FORDNEY. Mr. Chairman, I offer this amendment for this reason: The amendment, if adopted, would restore in this bill the rates in the Payne law. The State of Michigan is one of the great States of the Union in the production of beans, covered by this paragraph. A normal crop of beans in the State of Michigan is about 15,000,000 bushels a year. The importations of beans last year, as given in the handbook, were valued at $1.76 per bushel. That is the foreign value. The estimated value of beans under the new proposed tariff law would be $1.60 per bushel. A reduction of 20 cents a bushel to the farmers of Michigan means $3,000,000 a year. I submit that on that single crop alone it is a rather high price for the people of the State of Michigan to pay for Democratic rule. This is one of the important crops of the State. Michigan lies along the border of Canada. Canada is the greatest bean-producing country in the world.

The Michigan farmers, therefore, would be more affected than the farmers of any other State in the Union except the States in the Northwest. Therefore I submit it is unfair to reduce the duty on this product. If it does not lower the price 20 cents a bushel, then the farmer is not in any way injured, and neither is the consumer benefited, but the Treasury of the United States would be deprived of just that much money in duties to which it is justly entitled under such circumstances. If by reducing the duty 20 cents a bushel the price is brought down from $2.21 duty to $1.85, under the figures given in the handbook, I submit it is rather a high price for the people of Michigan to pay for their own folly.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I move that all debate on this paragraph and all amendments now close.

The motion was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Michigan.

The question was taken, and the amendment was rejected.

The Clerk read as follows:

203. Beets, 10 per cent ad valorem; sugar beets, 5 per cent ad valorem.

Mr. CURRY. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. Some time ago the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] read an excerpt from an article in a California newspaper in reference to the labor conditions on the beet farms in Sutter County. The truth of the matter is that some time ago the Alameda Beet Sugar Co. contemplated erecting a beet-sugar factory in the town of Meridian, in Sutter County. They contemplated spending $2,000,000 on the factory and in the acreage. They have $45,000 worth of steel on the ground now, but knowing that this bill will be enacted into law, the construction of that factory has been abandoned.

There are in California 25,000 people engaged in the beet-sugar industry. Of that number less than 500 are orientals, and most of them are employed on the beet farms. We do not want the orientals. California has recently shown to the world that she is willing to go to the limit of her constitutional authority to stop the immigration of orientals into this country. We want the help of the people of the United States, for this country always has been and is now, and, I pray God, always will be a white man's country, enjoying a white man's civilization, which is the result of the best thoughts and best efforts of the best minds that have inhabited and benefited the earth by right living and exalted thinking.

While the desire for liberty is as old as the aspirations of the human heart for higher and better conditions, the liberty we enjoy is a new thing in government, and dates practically from the Revolutionary War. It cost unnumbered precious lives and untold treasure. It is our obligation to transmit it to posterity as pure as we received it from the founders and preservers of the Republic, who suffered so much and mutually pledged their lives, their fortunes, and sacred honor in order that they and we might be free. The people of a republic can only maintain their liberty as long as the people are homogeneous, speak the same language, and occupy contiguous territory, worship the same God, and are intelligent, law-abiding citizens who love liberty and are willing to defend it. [Applause.]

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman——

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Does the gentleman desire to speak on this paragraph?

Mr. MANN. About three minutes.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I move that all debate on this paragraph and all amendments thereto close in three minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Alabama moves that all debate on the paragraph and all amendments thereto close in three minutes.

The question was taken, and the motion was agreed to.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, the paragraph provides for a rate of duty on sugar beets of 5 per cent. The committee this afternoon voted to place sugar on the free list at the end of three years, although this duty of 5 per cent on the beets from which the sugar is made would still remain. I would like to know upon what theory it is proposed to put beet sugar on the free list and retain the duty on sugar beets from which it is made. If anybody can explain that theory I take off my hat to the gentleman if the explanation is satisfactory. [Applause on the Republican side.] You are proposing—I am not appealing to the intelligence of some of the gentlemen on the other side, because I know how vain an appeal would be to their intelligence. [Applause on the Republican side.] You propose to take off the duty on sugar, thereby rendering probable the closing of the sugar-beet factories, and at the same time say that the raw material from which they make the sugar shall remain upon the dutiable list. Upon what theory? Is it protection or revenue? What revenue do you expect to derive from 5 per cent duty on sugar beets? If it is not for revenue, is it protection, and when did you become protectionists? Now, I defy gentlemen to give a sensible or reasonable explanation of the self-apparent contradiction. [Applause on the Republican side.]

The Clerk read as follows:

204. Beans, peas, prepared or preserved, or contained in tins, jars, bottles, or similar packages, including the weight of immediate coverings, 1 cent per pound; mushrooms and truffles, 2½ cents per pound.

Mr. SAMUEL W. SMITH. Mr. Chairman, in line 202, page 51, I move to strike out the figures "25" and insert "45," and upon this question I would like to be heard for a brief time.

The bean crop is one of the most important in the State of Michigan, as well as in the sixth congressional district of that State. This bill reduces the tariff on beans from 45 cents per bushel to 25 cents per bushel. If the bill is permitted to become a law in its present form, I fear that Canada, whose border line is just across the river from Michigan, and produces beans in great abundance, will take possession of the Detroit and other markets, as she did under the Wilson-Gorman bill, and greatly injure, if not practically ruin, the industry in Michigan.

Michigan raises 70 per cent or more of the bean crop of the United States, or more than 6,000,000 bushels out of the ten million or more bushels raised in the United States. The farmers of Michigan receive a handsome return annually, aggregating between ten and fifteen million dollars each year for their bean crop.

Scattered along the railways at many stations throughout my district one can find bean houses, where many women are employed at splendid wages. I fear that if this bill becomes a law that not only the farmers and local buyers will be greatly injured, but that the splendid wages which have been paid to women for work in the bean houses will be greatly reduced.

In the consideration of this bill it is worthy of note that the Japanese beans are making greater and greater inroads upon our shores every year, and that when the Panama Canal is opened, as is expected in the near future, this will allow the Japanese to raise and carry their beans direct to the best markets in this country in their own vessels.

This question is of unusual importance in my district, and especially to the farmers in the counties of Livingston and Genesee, and in portions of Oakland, Wayne, and Ingham Counties.

Some of our farmers have been engaged in raising sugar beets, and if it is your determined intention to destroy this industry in the next three years, then the farmers of Michigan will have lost two great and profitable industries—beans and sugar beets—and as a result will not have as wide a field in which to diversify their crops, but will be limited to corn, oats, potatoes, and wheat, which on the whole is no longer very profitable to the farmers of Michigan; so I hope that this bill will not be enacted into law in its present form, but that the duty will remain at its present rate.

Mr. Chairman, I want to avail myself of this opportunity to point out conditions as they existed in this country in the closing years of the tariff act of 1846.

It has been asserted more than once in this debate that legislation similar to this which we are about to enact has heretofore been successful in this country. I want to assert, without fear of successful contradiction, that such is not the case, and that every tariff for revenue or free-trade act that has been passed in this country since its birth has been a failure, and if time and opportunity permitted I could cite many instances. At this time I want to call your attention to an article which appeared in the New York Tribune in December, 1854.

THE PROPHECIES FULFILLED.

On December 18, 1854, the New York Tribune published a collection of facts which showed the dreary and prospectively desperate condition of industry and commerce. It showed that the chief industries necessary to the life of the Nation were partially or wholly collapsed through the influences and effects of the British free-trade doctrines put into operation here by the tariff of 1846; that our people had been brought to a condition which in Europe is attendant upon revolution; and that in every occupation and branch of business the depression was so terrible that one-half or more of all employees had been thrown out of employment. The Tribune added:

"What a picture is here presented! We have supported European manufacturers and artisans and middlemen to the neglect, loss, and destruction of our own men of industry and talent, of whatever kind, and that is the sole reason of our difficulty."

One year later, January 15, 1855, the New York Tribune printed the following pathetic article, which explains itself:

"Who is hungry? Go and see. You that are full fed and know not what it is to be hungry—perhaps never saw a hungry man—go and see. Go and see thousands, men and women, boys and girls, old and young, black and white, of all nations, crowding and jostling each other, almost fighting for a first chance, acting more like hungry wolves than human beings, in a land of plenty, waiting till the food is ready for distribution. Such a scene may be seen every day between 11 and 2 o'clock around the corner of Orange and Chatham Streets, where charity gives a dinner to the poor and soup and bread to others to carry to their miserable families.

"On Saturday we spent an hour there at the hour of high tide. We have never seen anything like it before. Upward of a thousand people were fed with a plate of soup, a piece of bread, and a piece of meat on the premises, and in all more than 1,600. On the same day 1,130 portions of soup were dealt out from Stewart's 'soup kitchen,' corner of Reade Street and Broadway. At the rooms on Duane Street for the relief of the poor, on the same day, they gave food to 2,256. In the sixth ward alone over 6,000 persons were fed by charity on Saturday, January 13. And this is only one day in one ward. Meanwhile scenes of a like nature are being enacted all over the city.

"The cry of hard times reaches us from every part of the country. The making of roads is stopped, factories are closed, and houses and ships are no longer being built. Factory hands, road makers, carpenters, bricklayers, and laborers are idle, and paralysis is rapidly embracing every pursuit in the country. The cause of all this stoppage of circulation is to be found in the steady outflow of gold to pay foreign laborers for the cloth, the shoes, the iron, and the other things that could be produced by American labor, but which can not be so produced under our present revenue system. The convulsion would have come upon us sooner but for the extraordinary demand in Europe for breadstuffs, growing out of huge famines and big wars, and but for the dazzling and magnificent discovery of gold mines in California, by which hard money, sufficient to buy an empire, has been called into existence and exported to Europe. If we could stop the import of the foreign articles the gold would cease to flow out to pay for them, and money would then again become more abundant, labor would then again be in demand, shoes, clothing, and other commodities would then again be in demand, and men would then cease to starve in the streets of our towns and cities. If it be not stopped the gold must continue to go abroad, and employment must become from day to day more scarce, until where there are now many thousands we shall see tens of thousands of men everywhere crying: 'Give me work! Only give me work! Make your own terms—my wife and children have nothing to eat!'"

As one reads the above, are they not forcibly reminded, especially if they lived during those days, of another Democratic tariff-for-revenue, free-trade period—the dark days from 1893 to 1897, under the Wilson-Gorman bill? During both of these periods there were similar experiences—the soup houses, factories closed, thousands of honest but idle laboring men who were willing to work, but there was no work for them. Listen to the cry of the laboring man in a land of plenty like this, or, at least, where there ought to be sufficient for all to eat and plenty of work to do: "Give me work; only give me work; make your own terms; my wife and children have nothing to eat."

I wonder that in the debate upon this important legislation that no Democrat has sought to explain these conditions as they have occurred from time to time under legislation similar to that which you are about to enact. Can you not give us some hope or consolation for the future, pointing out specifically where we can expect that the results will be different than they have been heretofore under similar tariff acts?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I ask that all debate on the paragraph and amendments thereto be now closed.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Alabama asks unanimous consent that all debate on the paragraph and all amendments thereto now close.

Mr. HAYES. Mr. Chairman——

Mr. MANN. The gentleman from California was shut out before.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. We must make progress on the bill. I did not start until gentlemen insisted on continuing political speeches. I want to say that if gentlemen want to debate the paragraphs in the bill they must confine themselves to the subject matter of the paragraph. I ask unanimous consent to close debate on the paragraph in five minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Alabama asks unanimous consent that all debate be closed on the paragraph in five minutes. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

Mr. HAYES. Now, Mr. Chairman, I want to call attention to the fact that the State of California has for many years grown a very large quantity of beans and we come in direct competition with the Orient. Until five years ago we had no competition from Asia, but beginning then we began to receive beans from Japan and Manchuria and during the last few years the average importation from the Orient of beans has averaged over 100,000 bushels per year. If with the tariff at 45 cents per bushel this competition has constantly increased, what will happen to the bean producers of the Pacific if the tariff is reduced to 25 cents per bushel? Now, in spite of the conditions that have existed the price of beans has not been excessive and during the past four or five years they have never gone above 3½ cents a pound. One county in my district has half its arable acreage planted in beans each year—the county of Ventura.

Those beans are generally lima beans. And not only are we menaced with the competition from the Orient, but beans have been coming from South Africa in the last few years to compete with our farmers of the Pacific coast. Under these circumstances I can not understand upon what theory the Committee on Ways and Means proceeded when reducing the tariff on beans from 45 to 25 cents per bushel.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

205. Vegetables, if cut, sliced, or otherwise reduced in size, or if parched or roasted, or if pickled, or packed in salt, brine, oil, or prepared in any way; any of the foregoing not specially provided for in this section, and bean stick or bean cake, miso, and similar products, 25 per cent ad valorem.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. In July, 1911, an act was passed by the Congress of the United States known as the reciprocity act——

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order; that is not on the paragraph.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. I wish to be heard on the point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair does not desire to hear the gentleman on the point of order, and he will proceed in order.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. The gentleman is somewhat of a mind reader if he knows what I am going to say.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I knew what the gentleman was saying, and it did not pertain to this paragraph.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. I propose to discuss this paragraph, and I intend to keep nearer in order than the gentleman was for half an hour yesterday in discussing his personal interests in this bill.

Now, Mr. Chairman, this bill we have here before this committee, upon which I wish to make some remarks if the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] will permit and not indulge in political speeches himself, permits practically every product of the fields, the forests, the mines, and the waters of Canada to come in here free of duty or at a greatly reduced rate.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order that the gentleman is not confining himself to the paragraph.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will proceed.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. These provisions have been enacted without asking anything whatever from Canada in return. We have taken off the duty entirely on flour, on potatoes, and they have reduced it in a large number of particulars as to agricultural products. They have taken it off of sawed lumber without, as I have said, asking for anything whatever in return.

Now, I would like to know of the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] what justification he can give for this and the other reductions in the duties which are made by this bill without asking anything from foreign nations?

Some time ago, about two years—and the gentleman from Alamaba can interrupt me, if he desires, and I will stop if he does not like to hear it—this House passed what was known as the Canadian reciprocity act. It was one of the most unpopular provisions among the farmers of this Nation that ever went through this House, and it contributed more than anything else to the defeat of the Republican candidate for President. I have always wondered, Mr. Chairman, why it was when this agreement was so advantageous to the Canadians that they rejected it, but I can understand it perfectly now. They knew the gentleman from Alabama, leading the Democratic hosts here in this House, would give them everything they had by that provision of reciprocity, so called, and a great deal more in addition, and ask nothing whatever in return for it. [Applause on the Republican side.]

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I move that all debate on the pending paragraph now close.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Alabama moves that all debate on the pending paragraph be now closed.

The motion was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

207. Cider, 2 cents per gallon.

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. Now we have something very important. I wonder who is the author of this great reduction. Cider in the present law, which, by the way, is imported at the price of $1.02 a gallon, carries the enormous duty of 5 cents a gallon, very nearly 5 per cent, and the distinguished authors of this provision—and I hope the authorship is scattered around among the whole 14 members of the majority—has seen fit to relieve the cider drinkers in the United States by reducing this 5-cent duty on a gallon down to 2 cents a gallon. I wonder if any of them figure out and are able to say just how much that would relieve the man who drinks a glass of cider out of this gallon when it comes into the United States. Why, we have reached to-day, Mr. Chairman, a condition of microscopic things in the revision of the tariff duty. What a wonderful reduction this is! How welcome it will be to the consumers of the United States to reduce the duty on cider from 5 cents a gallon to 2 cents a gallon!

Oh, it is another illustration of the wonderful mechanism displayed in regard to this bill, which was said a few moments ago to have been made by blacksmiths. [Laughter on the Republican side.] But that is a mistake, for blacksmiths do not use jackscrews in their work to a very alarming extent. [Laughter on the Republican side.] It was a microscopist that did this thing [renewed laughter on the Republican side], and it was the smallest, finest kind of a microscope. Oh, the man that conceived that—what a statesman he would make! [Laughter.] He ought to be President of the United States.

Mr. BLACKMON. He may be. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

Mr. PAYNE. He will be a president if the country ever discovers [applause on the Democratic side] the mind that is responsible for the authorship of this bill. They will make him president [renewed applause on the Democratic side] of some village debating society in one of the rural counties of some backward State. [Laughter and applause on the Republican side.]

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

208. Eggs not specially provided for in this section, 2 cents per dozen; eggs frozen or otherwise prepared or preserved in tins or other packages, not specially provided for in this section, including the weight of the immediate coverings or containers, 2½ cents per pound.

Mr. CAMPBELL. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the numeral "2," in line 17, and insert in lieu thereof the numeral "3," so that it will read "3 cents."

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment offered by the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. CAMPBELL].

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 52, line 17, strike out the figure "2" at the end of the line and insert in lieu thereof the figure "3."

Mr. CAMPBELL. Mr. Chairman, I assume that the reason a reduction was made from 5 cents a dozen to 2 cents a dozen was to reduce the cost of living. The price of eggs has been reasonably high for the last 15 years, and during that time the farmers of the country have reaped a very large benefit from their poultry yards. The average income to the farmers for the last two or three years has been in the neighborhood of $322,000,000 for eggs.

Now we are about to enter upon an era of low prices, low cost of living, and cheap things, and I take it that you want to make eggs just as cheap as possible. There never was a time within my recollection when eggs were as cheap as they were the last time the Democrats made a tariff law.

Mr. MANN. They sold then at 5 cents a dozen.

Mr. CAMPBELL. And there was a duty of 3 cents a dozen on eggs under the last Wilson bill. If the importations that are invited by this bill to come into the country displace the products of American labor, and therefore displace American labor itself, to the amount of over $300,000,000, there will be a lot of men out of work in this country who will need things just as cheap as they can get them.

They will need the flour just as cheap as you can make it, and if they can make flour cheaper in Canada than in the United States under the provisions of this bill the people who are out of work will need it. So that, after all, I am not so sure but that many of the provisions of the agricultural schedule are in perfect harmony with the rest of the bill as it has been prepared, because you are getting ready to feed the idle men that you are going to deprive of work by the provisions of this bill and by cheapening the things that the farmer raises to sell to the people of the country who are employed. [Applause on the Republican side.]

Two things are essential to a country's prosperity, namely, steady employment at the highest possible wage to the American laborer and good prices for the products of the American farmer, and you are making both of these conditions absolutely impossible during the time that the provisions of this law shall remain in effect. [Applause on the Republican side.]

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I move that all debate on this paragraph and pending amendments close in five minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] moves that all debate on this paragraph and all pending amendments thereto close in five minutes. The question is on agreeing to that motion.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. RAINEY. Mr. Chairman, the argument of the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. CAMPBELL] is a typical Republican argument. He outlines the theory upon which the Republican Party revises the tariff. A Republican revision is always in the interest of the trusts. [Laughter on the Republican side.] The gentleman attacks this very paragraph, and makes an amendment that would not help the farmers any if it went through, but which would be of immense value to these fellows who run cold-storage warehouses in the great cities. The farmer always sells his eggs on the lowest possible market, when eggs are the cheapest, and these cold-storage warehouses store them up, and the gentleman does not want eggs to come in from any other country to interfere with the cold-storage trust in this country.

Mr. MANN. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. RAINEY. Yes; I will.

Mr. MANN. Does that argument apply also to the 2-cent duty that is carried in this bill?

Mr. RAINEY. No.

Mr. GOOD. It takes 3 cents to make that argument apply.

Mr. RAINEY. Let us see what the gentleman from Kansas is going to do. He raises the duty on eggs and makes it 3 cents, and he leaves in this paragraph frozen eggs at 2½ cents per pound. Now, the effect of the gentleman's amendment, if it should prevail, would be this—and it is a typical Republican way of revising the tariff, and that is the reason the people rebelled against the Republican Party, and that is the reason so few of them are found on that side of the House now. [Applause in the galleries.]

The CHAIRMAN. The galleries will refrain from any manifestations of approval or disapproval.

Mr. RAINEY. The frozen-egg industry is just commencing. They bring in frozen eggs from Manchuria. They break the eggs and put them in containers, and freeze them and bring them over here. Frozen eggs in this country are a by-product. When eggs are broken in transit in this country they freeze them and sell them in that way.

Now, the gentleman proposes to raise the tariff on shell eggs until it is higher than the tariff on frozen eggs, and by doing that he excludes from this country the only kind of eggs that can compete with the cold-storage warehouses, and he invites into this country these broken eggs from which the shells are removed, which come into the country from Manchuria. That is what he is trying to do, and that is a typical way of revising the tariff, and that is the theory upon which the Payne-Aldrich tariff was built all the way through.

Mr. CAMPBELL. Was that in the Wilson bill tariff of some 16 years ago?

Mr. RAINEY. In those days they did not have the frozen-egg industry.

Mr. CAMPBELL. Oh, they did not!

Mr. RAINEY. And if the gentleman knew anything about the industry he would know that.

Mr. PAYNE. Does the gentleman think they freeze eggs in cold storage?

Mr. RAINEY. Oh, the gentleman did not catch my argument at all; but that is not my fault.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired. The question is on the amendment of the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. CAMPBELL].

The amendment was rejected.

The Clerk read as follows:

209. Eggs, dried, 10 cents per pound; eggs, yolk of, 10 per cent ad valorem; dried blood, when soluble, 1½ cents per pound.

Mr. GOOD. Mr. Chairman, I should like to obtain some information with regard to this agricultural schedule. I should like to get some information as to the theory on which it is constructed, without being accused of playing politics. In all earnestness I want to ask the gentleman how much he proposes to reduce the cost of eggs to the consumer by the reduction that is proposed in this bill, both dried eggs and fresh eggs? If the gentleman can not answer the question, here is the handbook of the Democratic party in 1910 on that subject, if he wants to refer to it.

Mr. PAYNE. Read it to him.

Mr. GOOD. The gentleman in his handbook in 1910 said that the price of eggs was 10 cents a dozen.

Mr. RAINEY. I will state, if the gentleman wants me to answer his question——

Mr. GOOD. And that the tariff had increased the price to 30 cents a dozen.

Mr. RAINEY. If the gentleman will permit me to answer his question—the gentleman knows about as much about the tariff as the average Republican tariff maker. Dried eggs are not used in food at all. They are used in the industries.

Mr. GOOD. Will the gentleman answer my question as to fresh eggs? How much does he propose to reduce the cost to the consumer?

Mr. PAYNE. Let us see what he knows about it.

Mr. GOOD. I want to know what the gentleman knows about it.

Mr. RAINEY. How much do you think it will reduce it?

Mr. GOOD. The gentleman said I did not know anything about it. I am coming now to the source of all information.

Mr. RAINEY. The gentleman can wait and see. We will all find out.

Mr. GOOD. Well, does the gentleman know how much it will reduce the cost of eggs?

Mr. RAINEY. If I did not know more about the tariff than the gentleman who is interrogating me does I would not disclose my ignorance.

Mr. MANN. Keep still then.

Mr. GOOD. It is because I do not know that I appeal to the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. RAINEY. It is not my fault that the gentleman does not know. The gentleman must not expect me to furnish him too much information.

Mr. MANN. We do not.

Mr. LANGLEY. There is no danger of that.

Mr. GOOD. But can the gentleman furnish me any information at all on the egg schedule?

Mr. RAINEY. We are not running a kindergarten school for the benefit of the gentleman.

Mr. GOOD. I want to know something about this question of the high cost of living and its relation to the tariff as far as eggs are concerned, and if the gentleman knows anything about it I hope he will enlighten me.

Mr. RAINEY. I will say that I do not want to burden the gentleman's apparently limited intellect with too much information to-night. [Laughter.]

Mr. MANN. No danger of that.

Mr. GOOD. I have appealed to the gentleman time and time again for information in regard to the tariff schedule as far as agricultural products are concerned, and have failed to elicit from him a spark of information or even of intelligence as to the price to the ultimate consumer. I will say that the statements contained in the circular I have referred to are absolutely false. It was circulated by the Democratic committee, and the gentleman knows that it is false. I have appealed to the gentleman, and he refuses to tell the Members of the House what effect this proposed bill will have on the price of eggs or on the prices of any other articles mentioned in the agricultural schedule. Does he know?

Mr. FORDNEY. Silence is consent.

Mr. GOOD. The silence would indicate that the gentleman knows absolutely nothing in regard to this subject.

Mr. BRYAN. Mr. Chairman, so far as I am concerned, I stand for an immediate substantial downward revision of the tariff. I think it only fair to be reasonable and moderate in making the cuts till conditions can adjust themselves. I am printing with these remarks a table prepared and handed to me by Mr. F. R. Hathaway, of Detroit, Mich. It shows the products and the industries of the State of Washington that are affected by the tariff. I am willing for the rates to be reduced in every case where excessive, but I hope the committee will be fair and will make cuts by such degrees as will do the greatest good to the greatest number.

I have listened to the stock arguments of the Republican Party on the various phases of this tariff question till I have come to realize that there is a lack of genuineness of purpose in the things that are said. My friend over there has read from the campaign argument of the Democratic Party about the high cost of living, and his colleagues on the Republican side seem to think they score most convincing points when they show that the cost of living can not be greatly affected by certain reductions in tariff rates under consideration at this time.

To begin with, campaign pamphlets are not reliable and should not be deemed convincing in a discussion of this kind. We all heard of "the full dinner pail" of the Republican Party, and yet under the Republican Party program the poor have grown poorer and the rich richer. The burdens of life have continued to bear harder upon the backs of those who toil.

We know, everybody knows, that relief can not come alone from a revision of the tariff. The laborer and the farmer knows that it will take more than that. The work now being done in this poor and unsatisfactory manner is merely the beginning.

The high cost of living will come down, you can depend on it. The people will take hold of the Government in such way that present methods of revising the tariff will be improved, and finally the people will have their way about that. For my part I am glad of an income tax against the incomes principally of the rich. I know that will help reduce the high cost of living. But there are other things to be considered. Take the great fuel problem. The vast coal deposits of Alaska lie there, the property of the people, untouched, out of reach, while all classes, whether poor or rich, are compelled to pay exorbitant prices for fuel to men who have grown rich and flourished under the Republican rule. We propose to build railroads in Alaska and operate them by Government money. We will open the mines and bring the coal to market over Government rails and let the Government sell it at cost to the ultimate consumer.

Hon. Walter L. Fisher, former Secretary of the Interior, spoke recently concerning the Alaska situation as follows:

> Responsibility for the condition of Alaska rests squarely on the shoulders of Congress and no place else. The necessity for legislation to open up the Territory has been pointed out time after time, but nothing whatever has been done. It seems to me that no candid student of the situation of Alaska who is at all free from personal and pecuniary interest can have the slightest doubt of the propriety of the Federal Government conducting one or more railroads in Alaska to open up that Territory. The Government operation of the Panama Canal Railroad has proven satisfactory and much of the machinery used at Panama can be used to great saving in the construction of the Alaska Railway. There can be no development in Alaska unless the Government constructs a railroad from tidewater to the interior. Private interests might build as far as the coal fields or the copper mines, but no farther.

It is appalling to think how the people of this country have been betrayed by the giving away of the fuel—the coal deposits. We are going to develop and mine and use in our own homes the vast coal and fuel supplies of Alaska.

I hear my Republican friend over there, yes, and my Democratic friend over here, say "Why, that would interfere with private business. It would put the Government into competition with property investments of citizens." Well, what if it would?

I say the cost of living must come down. The people will not accept your answer to their demand for relief that they eat too much, recreate too much, live too high. They have a mind to the fact that your party has permitted the coal deposits of this country to get into the hands of the railroads and into other private hands. They know that the vast timber resources of this country have been worse than squandered, so far as the people's title thereto is concerned. The present commercial value of the standing timber of this country is $6,000,000,000, exclusive of the value of the land on which it stands. The standing timber is estimated at 2,826,000,000,000 feet, of which 2,197,000,000,000 feet is privately owned. The value of this timber has enhanced in the last 10 years almost beyond the dreams of its owners. Why should all these billions of increased value, an unearned increment, go to these few men and be in their hands forever, an added means of extortion from those who must pass through the struggle for existence in ages yet to come? I publish in connection with these remarks some figures which may well startle the reader of them.

Yes; the cost of living must come down. In Alaska, thanks to Gifford Pinchot and his fellow conservationists, the people still own the coal; but the hand of greed stands guard, and all the little dandies here and there who are on the pay rolls of the special interests proclaim that the conservationists have locked up Alaska. It is the greediest band of cutthroats in the world that now has a strangle hold on the throat of fair Alaska. They tell us they will build the railroad if we will give them the coal. No; a thousand times no. Uncle Sam is strong enough to bring down the high cost of living. Let us have a Government road, bearing Government coal to our fellow citizens at the cost of mining and transportation, instead of a Guggenheim road bearing Guggenheim coal to the people at exorbitant and unjust prices.

Will not the lowering of the cost of fuel help reduce the high cost of living? I hear you laugh and say, "Not much." All right. When we have reduced the tariff and lowered the price of coal, does anyone suppose we will stop there? The high cost of living must come down. The people want the telegraph and telephone lines and the express monopoly done away with right now. I mean what I say. The Government is ready to handle all this business. By a slight development of the parcel post the express business will belong to the people. That will help some more; and the telegraph and telephone lines. There was a time when the people generally were not concerned with these utilities, but to-day it is the consumer alone who is ultimately charged up with the millions of dividends that are enriching the monopolistic owners of the telephone and telegraph. How easy it would be for telegrams to be sent from and received at our post offices. Think of the millions upon millions of the people's money invested in public buildings. Why not use them for the telephone and telegraph business, and thus further lower the cost of living?

That is not all. The people demand the ownership of their local utilities—the traction companies, the light companies, the water and gas companies. Why not? The high cost of living must come down.

Oh, you need not laugh or question; we will not stop there. Already we have started to squeeze the water out of the railroad capitalization, and, if those who own the railroads do not help reduce the high cost of living by lowering the universal tax on everybody for transportation, both freight and passenger, the people will take the railroads of this country and we will have a railroad passenger and freight office in every post office in the land. Yes; and we will supervise the trusts and demand lower prices. We will know what it costs to make a garment or a hat or a pair of shoes, and the Government will tell the great operators and manufacturers how much they can charge the people, and again we will stop unusual profits. Will not this help? Will the Republican Party stand in the way? Then its funeral procession will be told to trot along. Will the Democrats try to fool the people? That party will be brushed away. The Progressive Party can have an enduring future and render service to the people just in proportion as it gets down to the people, studies their wants, and relieves them.

Washington industries and tariff rates.

	Quantity.		Value.	Dingley law rates.	Payne-Aldrich law rates.	Underwood bill rates.
Cereals, etc.:	Acres.	Bushels.
Oats	269,742	13,228,003	$5,870,857	15 cents per bushel	15 cents per bushel	10 cents per bushel.
Wheat	2,118,015	40,920,390	35,102,370	25 cents per bushel	25 cents per bushel	Do.
Flour			17,852,944	25 per cent	25 per cent	Free.
Barley	171,888	5,834,615	3,331,930	30 cents per bushel	30 cents per bushel	15 cents per bushel.
Potatoes	57,897	7,667,171	2,993,737	25 cents per bushel	25 cents per bushel	Free.
		Tons.
Hay and forage	742,137	1,391,664	17,147,648	$4 per ton	$4 per ton	$2 per ton.
Fruits:	Bearing trees.	Bushels.
Apples	3,009,337	2,672,100	2,925,761	25 cents per bushel	25 cents per bushel	10 cents per bushel.
Plums	823,082	1,032,077	600,503	....do	....do	Do.
Cherries	241,038	131,392	278,547	....do	....do	Do.
Pears	290,676	310,804	328,895	....do	....do	Do.
	Sheep of shearing age.	Pounds wool.
Wool	295,264	3,135,348	536,708	11 to 36 cents per pound	11 to 36 cents per pound	Free.
Live stock and dairy products:	Number.
Cattle on farms	402,120		12,193,465	$2 to 25 per cent per head	$2 to 25 per cent per head	10 per cent.
Horses and mules on farms	292,930		31,539,551	$30 to 25 per cent per head	$30 to 25 per cent per head	$15 to 10 per cent per head.
Swine on farms	206,135		1,674,927	$1.50 per head	$1.50 per head	Free.
Sheep on farms	475,555		1,931,170	75 cents to $1.50 per head	75 cents to $1.50 per head	10 per cent.
Domestic animals on farms			47,370,775	All on dutiable list	All on dutiable list	Mostly free.
Domestic animals not on farms			7,558,077	....do	....do	Do.
Poultry on farms	2,272,775		1,367,440	3 cents per pound, live 5 cents per pound, dead	3 cents per pound, live 5 cents per pound, dead	1 cent per pound, live. 2 cents per pound, dead.
		Dozen.
Eggs		16,472,575	4,311,291	5 cents per dozen	5 cents per dozen	2 cents per dozen.
Dairy products			8,745,041	All on dutiable list	All on dutiable list	Milk, free.
		Pounds.
Butter		6,761,575	1,992,249	6 cents per pound	6 cents per pound	3 cents per pound.
Cheese		52,970	6,787	....do	....do	20 per cent.
	Number.	Number of wage earners.
Manufacturing establishments	3,674	69,120	220,746,000
Mines, quarries, and wells	170	7,343	10,537,556
	Number of operators.
Soft coal	32	6,155	9,226,793	67 cents per ton	45 cents per ton	Free.

EXTRACTS FROM "THE LUMBER INDUSTRY"—PART 1—STANDING TIMBER. ISSUED JANUARY 20, 1913, BY THE DEPARTMENT OF COMMERCE AND LABOR, BUREAU OF CORPORATIONS, WASHINGTON, D. C.

Southern pine sold by the Government for $1.25 an acre; much is now worth $60 an acre. Large amount of Douglas fir in western Washington and Oregon which the Government gave away or sold at $2.50 per acre now range from $100 to $200 per acre (p. 18).

The Southern Pacific Railroad, the Weyerhauser Timber Co., and the Northern Pacific Railroad own 238,000,000,000 feet of timber, or nearly 11 per cent of all the privately owned timber in the United States (p. 20).

Present commercial value of the privately owned standing timber in the United States is estimated at $6,000,000,000. This does not include the land (p. 2).

Output of lumber by 46,584 sawmills in 1909 amounted to 44,509,000,000 feet (p. 3).

Total standing timber in the United States is estimated at 2,826,000,000,000 feet, of which 2,197,000,000,000 feet is privately owned. Owned by the Government in forest reserves, 539,000,000,000 feet; by States, Indian reservations, etc., 90,000,000,000 feet (p. 6).

Total timber standing on Pacific coast is 1,512,900,000,000 feet, as follows:

	Feet.
California	381,400,000,000
Oregon	545,800,000,000
Washington	391,100,000,000
Idaho	129,000,000,000
Montana	65,600,000,000

Of this amount 1,013,000,000,000 feet are privately owned (p. 10). Eleven Southern States contain 634,000,000,000 feet, and in Lake States of Michigan, Wisconsin, and Minnesota there are 100,000,000,000 feet (p. 11).

Southern Pacific Railroad owns 105,600,000,000 feet, the Weyerhauser Timber Co own 95,700,000 000 feet, and the Northern Pacific 36,200,000,000 feet, all on the Pacific coast (p. 16).

The Southern Pacific, Northern Pacific, and the Weyerhauser Timber Co. own 23.5 per cent of the privately owned timber on the Pacific coast (p. 19).

One-half of the privately owned timber on the Pacific coast is owned by 37 holders (p. 20).

Sixty-seven holders own 39 per cent of the long-leaf pine of the South, 20 per cent of the cypress, and 11 per cent of the hardwood (p. 21).

Six holders have 54 per cent of the standing white pine and Norway pine in Minnesota, together with 16 per cent of the other conifers. In Wisconsin 96 holders have three-fourths of the timber and in Michigan 110 holders have two-thirds (p. 22)

Increase in value of standing timber has been large, as will be seen by the following examples:

	Bought.	Price.	Sold.	Price.
Wisconsin	1891	$5.00	1904	$22.00
Louisiana	1882	1.25	1909	59.50
Washington	1900	11.84	1907	115.00
Idaho	1901	240.00	1909	2,500.00
Washington per acre	1882	20.00	1909	150.00
Oregon do	1886	5.00	1908	108.75
California do	1900	18.00	1909	100.00

In Minnesota the price received for timber on State lands was $1.47 per 1,000 in 1880 and $7.63 per 1,000 in 1909 (pp. 26–27).

Fifty-four per cent of the total timber of the United States is found in the five Pacific Coast States of Washington, Oregon, Idaho, Montana, and California (p. 66).

The 1,013,000,000,000 feet privately owned timber on the Pacific coast are made up of the following species:

	Feet.
Douglas fir	521,900,000,000
White pine	19,600,000,000
Western pine	153,400,000,000
Sugar pine	34,700,000,000
Redwood	101,900,000,000
Red cedar	56,700,000,000
Hemlock	57,400,000,000
Spruce	21,900,000,000
All other species	45,500,000,000

The 634,000,000,000 feet of privately owned timber in the 11 Southern States are made up of the following species:

	Feet.
Long-leaf yellow pine	384,400,000,000
Short-leaf yellow pine	152,100,000,000
Cypress	40,400,000,000
Hardwoods	209,200,000,000

The 100,000,000,000 feet of privately owned timber in Minnesota, Wisconsin, and Michigan are made up of the following species:

	Feet.
White and Norway pine	17,700,000,000
Hemlock	26,600,000,000
Other conifers	13,800,000,000
Hardwoods	41,900,000,000

Referring to page 77, there are 17,700,000,000 feet of white and Norway pine in Minnesota, Wisconsin, and Michigan. According to the output of these species in the same States in 1909 (p. 88), the supply should be exhausted in 1918. At the same ratio the short-leaf and long-leaf pine (p. 76) should be exhausted in about 25 years (p. 88).

Fifteen holders own 62 per cent of the California redwood; 14 holders three-fifths of the cypress in Louisiana (p. 155).

In Louisiana 37 holders own 48.7 per cent of the total timber (p. 154).

The average stand per acre on the Pacific is 42,000 feet; in the South, 6,100 feet; and in the Lake States, 5,600 feet (p. 168).

No States in the South or the Lake States average 10,000 feet per acre. The average for the country is 11,300, largely made up from the heavy stand on the Pacific coast (p. 169).

Stumpage values per 1,000 feet.

	1899	1904	1907
White pine	3.66	4.62	8.09
Cedar	1.32	1.49	4.63
Cypress	1.58	3.42	4.37
Yellow pine	1.12	1.68	3.16
Redwood	1.06	1.55	2.35
Western yellow pine	.....	.....	1.66
Douglas fir	.77	1.05	1.44

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I move that all debate on the paragraph and amendments thereto be now closed.

The motion was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

210. Hay, $2 per ton.

Mr. GOODWIN of Maine. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

On page 52, line 25, strike out, after the word "hay," the figure "2" and insert the figure "4."

Mr. GOODWIN of Maine. Mr. Chairman, this simply restores the duty now carried by existing law, which is $4 a ton. It changes it from $2 in the proposed bill to $4 a ton, as carried in the Payne bill.

I do not want to take the time of the committee to-night at this late hour, but it is the one agricultural product in which the people of my State are the most interested. If it were not for the fact that the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. RAINEY], who has charge of the agricultural schedule, is evidently so tired and so much displeased with what has been said to-night, I would like to speak upon this subject, but under the circumstances, and at the request of my constituents, I simply ask that a vote be taken on the amendment.

Mr. LANGLEY. Mr. Chairman, I hope that the few remarks I am going to make will be in order. I tried a moment ago to get recognition to say a word in defense of the American hen, but the gentleman from Alabama cut me off with his motion to close debate. Eggs are a very important product, and valuable product, in my district. The hens down there frequently lay them in the hay; and I think, therefore, that a discussion of the question will be in order upon this hay paragraph. [Laughter.] The hen is a very generous, good-natured fowl, and we ought to be kind to her and protect her. I am reminded of a limerick that went the rounds in the days of Henry Ward Beecher which illustrates the noble generosity of the hen, which ran something like this:

Said a Congregational preacher
To a hen, You are a beautiful creature.
And the hen, just for that,
Laid an egg in his hat,
And thus did the hen reward Beecher.

[Laughter.]

If we want to encourage the egg industry in this country we ought not to be too hard on the hen and her product. [Applause.]

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I move that all debate on the paragraph and all amendments thereto now close.

Mr. MANAHAN. Mr. Chairman, I desire to address the committee for three minutes upon this subject.

Mr. FORDNEY. And I would like to have two minutes.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Then, Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate close in five minutes, three minutes to be given to the gentleman from Minnesota and two minutes to the gentleman from Michigan.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. MANAHAN. Mr. Chairman, I was somewhat confused on first scrutinizing this paragraph to know why hay was reduced in duty to $2 per ton. It did not occur to me then how anxious Democracy is to furnish cheap food for the countless bull moose it needs to pull it through in the next campaign. Two dollars per ton is a "consumers' rate" sure enough, and likely under it "competition," which the Democratic leader urges so incessantly, will result. There will be such political competition, if he has his way, between the elephant and the bull moose as to leave the haystack, in fact the whole pasture, in possession of the mule.

Seriously speaking, however, I protest against the lack of reasons for reducing the rate of duty on hay. The production of hay should be encouraged for broad reasons, comprehending the conservation of the soil of the American people. No farmer properly cultivates his soil unless he rotates his crops and periodically uses his fields for the production of hay. I wish to urge this point earnestly—I do not expect to urge it successfully—to this committee. I repeat that hay ought to be protected and its growth encouraged; prices should be such as to compel farmers, by self-interest, to extend their acreage of hay not alone for the profit to them presently, but rather for the broader and bigger purpose of conserving the American soil for the future Nation.

I shall not dwell upon the importance of this industry as such. The hay crop of the United States and home value thereof, from the year 1895 to 1911, as estimated by the Department of Agriculture, ranged as follows:

	Crops in tons.	Home value per ton.
1895	47,078,541	$8.35
1896	59,282,158	6.54
1897	60,664,876	6.61
1898	66,376,920	6.00
1899	56,655,756	7.27
1900	50,110,906	8.89
1901	50,590,877	10.00
1902	59,858,000	9.06
1903	61,305,940	9.08
1904	60,696,028	8.72
1905	60,531,611	8.52
1906	57,145,959	10.37
1907	63,677,000	11.68
1908	70,798,000	8.98
1909	64,938,000	10.62
1910	60,978,000	12.26
1911	47,444,000	14.64

This production of approximately 60,000,000 tons per annum shows the importance of this item. Hay in considerable quantities has been imported into the United States in spite of the present tariff of $4 per ton. The imports from 1900 to date were, annually, in tons, as follows:

	Tons.
1900	143,890
1901	142,627
1902	48,415
1903	293,112
1904	114,388
1905	46,214
1906	668,540
1907	61,116
1908	10,063
1909	6,712
1910	96,829
1911	336,757

With a rate of $2 per ton enormous quantities of cheap Canadian hay would be imported into this country, and our farmers would have to sell their hay at a loss or let it rot in the stack or stop raising it. With any substantial reduction in prices the farmer could not pay the expense of cutting, baling, and the heavy t ansportation charges to the terminal markets. It is extremely difficult for him to make any money in the business as it is. If the farmer finds himself losing money on his hay crops under this bill, as he certainly will, he will naturally stop raising hay to the serious permanent injury of the land.

The cultivation of hay, potatoes, onions, and similar crops should be encouraged rather than discouraged by law. Too large a production of grain and corn by the farms of the Nation oftentimes depresses prices by overproduction, and also occasions great peril to business generally in the event of a general grain or corn crop failure. Heavy yields of secondary farm produce, like hay, potatoes, onions, and so forth, tend to balance and sustain prices generally, and obviate danger of panic that always waits upon the failure of any of the great staple articles of production. This bill not only strikes a severe blow at hay, an important product of Minnesota, but is even more severe on the potato growers of the country. It is cruelly unfair to our farmers to put potatoes on the free list. The growing of potatoes is precarious, so much depending upon the weather, but there is a very large acreage of land in Minnesota where the soil is poorly adapted to raising any other crop. Minnesota produces an average annual yield of about 17,000,000 bushels. On account of the perishable character of this commodity no part of one season's crop can be held over until the next year. This makes it necessary for the potato growers to dispose of their crop during the season, regardless of prevailing prices, and this tends further to make the business precarious. An examination of the prices at which potatoes have been sold for the past 15 years will show that on an average one year out of every three resulted in an actual loss to the farmer.

Mr. Chairman, there is another element to be considered regarding the rate on potatoes. It has reference to labor. Potato growing gives employment to many men. The average cost per acre of labor in producing and delivering potatoes to the shipping station is approximately $35, some six times as much as in the case of grain. Free trade in potatoes will drive many of our farmers out of that business and consequently throw out of employment a large number of men who will have to compete with toilers in other occupations and thus depress the price of labor generally. This is a great potato-consuming Nation, and it is wiser to have the money we pay for potatoes go to our farmers and laborers on the farms rather than to the farmers and workingmen of other countries.

As I stated, the potato crop is uncertain, and therefore if our potato farmers are put out of business, as to a large extent they will be if this bill in its present form is enacted into law, and there occurs a general potato failure in other potato-producing countries, unreasonable prices will be exacted from the consumers, defeating the very purpose claimed for this bill.

Examination of the prices that have prevailed for years under the present tariff on potatoes shows that the average price to the farmer has been reasonably low. Any exaction of fancy prices from consumers has been by the retailer, and they would have a better opportunity to charge unreasonable prices to consumers if local producers were put out of business and the bulk of our potatoes were imported.

I regret, Mr. Chairman, that my time is limited in this discussion. I would like to state fully and in detail the importance to the people of my State of both the hay and potato crops. All I can do now is to protest, and I do protest earnestly and emphatically against this bill as it stands. It favors cotton and the South; it hits hay and potatoes as well as grain and beef, mutton and wool production in the North. It is a sectional bill, selfishly made by the solid South of the Democratic majority, and I believe like any selfish sectional law it will in time work its own destruction. In the meantime I suppose the farmers of Minnesota and the great Northwest will have to do the best they can to raise their crops and compete with the Old World.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Minnesota has expired.

Mr. FORDNEY. Mr. Chairman, I support the amendment principally for this reason: The State of Michigan, which I have the honor in part to represent, is a great hay-producing State. The value of that crop in the State ranges annually from forty to fifty million dollars. A reduction of $2 per ton in the rate of duty on between three and four million tons of hay means a reduction on the income of the farmer of from six to eight million dollars a year. I again submit that that is a rather high price for the farmers of the State of Michigan to pay for Democratic rule.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Maine.

The question was taken, and the amendment was rejected.

The Clerk read as follows:

213. Garlic, 1 cent per pound; onions, 20 cents per bushel.

Mr. WILLIS. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment, which I send to the desk and ask to have read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 53, line 4, after the word "onions," strike out "20 cents per bushel" and insert "35 cents per bushel."

Mr. WILLIS. Mr. Chairman, we have heard various learned and interesting disquisitions on various subjects, running from cider to hay and from honey to hops.

I want to submit some observations upon the much abused, yet festive and always fragrant, onion which is produced in such liberal quantities in the district which I represent. In the first place, Mr. Chairman, speaking seriously for a moment [laughter], the rate that is provided in the existing law, together with the existing rates of prices upon onions, disproves absolutely the contention that has been made upon this floor many times since this debate began, namely, that the amount of tariff was added to the price of the product. The existing law provides a tariff of 40 cents per bushel upon onions, and yet if any gentleman wants to supply himself with that odoriferous vegetable, if he will come to the county in which I live he can buy him any quantity, a bushel or 20 carloads, at 30 cents per bushel.

As a matter of fact, onions have been sold in large quantities in the great onion-producing district in Ohio in the past year at less than 20 cents per bushel. That has been less than one-half the amount of the tariff. The effect, Mr. Chairman, if this duty is carried into effect as proposed in this bill, is to ruin the onion farmers. They are men who carry on business upon a small scale. This product is not raised upon great farms, but it is raised upon the small farms by small farmers, and if this bill should be enacted into law it simply means that the farmers of the onion-producing districts of Ohio and the other 17 States in the Union that produce this vegetable will be brought into direct competition with the products of the farms of Spain, the farms of Egypt, and the farms of Bermuda.

The onion farmers of Bermuda appeared before the Ways and Means Committee (Hearings, pp. 2778, 2784) and strongly urged the reduction of our duty on onions. Why are they so interested? Evidently they know who pays the tariff. Apparently the committee was more disposed to favor them than the onion farmers of our own country, for the duties were reduced in accordance with the recommendations of the Bermuda onion growers.

I had always supposed that it was best to legislate in the interest of our own people, not the foreigner; but the majority in control of this Congress takes the contrary view and discriminates against our own laborers and our own farmers. This bill builds up no American industry, gives no increase of wages to any American laborer, makes no market for any American producer. This bill if enacted into law will be good for the foreigner and he knows it, but bad for our own people and they will soon find it out.

What shall we say about the rate of wages? The rate of wages paid in the American onion fields is about five times as much as the rate of wages paid in the fields I have mentioned, at least five times; but to be more exact, in the Spanish onion fields the average rate of wages is about 20 cents per day. The rate in the onion fields of Ohio is nearly ten times that amount, between $1.50 and $2.50 a day. Then another fact that I wish to present, Mr. Chairman, is the freight rate. The freight rate upon onions from the Bermuda fields to New York is only about half what it is from the onion fields of Ohio and Indiana to that same market, so it must be apparent that with that immense advantage in lower wages, with the immense advantage of the freight rate, that if this shall be enacted into law it simply means that this industry will be transferred from this country to another, and that instead of American labor and American ingenuity and American capital being employed the business will be transferred to the foreign farmer.

Then there is another proposition to which I wish to call the attention of the committee, and that is the fact that the tariff upon this particular vegetable has very little to do with the price of it. Men say that they want to reduce the cost of living. I can invite their attention to the fact, as I did a day or so ago when I made some remarks upon the bill, that in the case of this vegetable it has been shown by a careful investigation made by the Department of Agriculture that of the amount paid by the consumer the producer gets less than 28 per cent.

A Democratic farmer friend in Hardin County, Ohio, writes me as follows:

> We are selling onions at from 20 to 30 cents per bushel, are delivering onions in the cities, freight prepaid, at from 30 to 40 cents per bushel, and yet these same onions go to the city trade at $1 per bushel and 20 cents per half peck, or at the rate of $1.60 per bushel. Yet it seems that the farmers are the ones whom Congress proposes to regulate. We are blamed for the high cost of living; yet the fact remains that nearly all our vegetables are delivered by us to the large cities at about 25 per cent of the prices actually paid by the ultimate consumer.

Who gets the profit? The commission man, not the farmer.

The onion growers of Ohio submit the following considerations, which clearly demonstrate the fact that the existing tariff of 40 cents per bushel on onions should not be disturbed.

First. This year's crop of onions demonstrates beyond a doubt the fact that this country can henceforth easily produce all the onions that this country can possibly consume. There is no occasion whatever to open the door for foreign onions. In fact, onions are now being sold in this country at prices below the cost of growing them.

Second. The onion growing in this country is in the hands of farmers in quantities from 1 acre up, from Massachusetts to Iowa, and also in Colorado, on the Pacific slope, and Texas, and to a small extent in Missouri, Kentucky, and Louisiana. Large growers market their crops direct to car-lot buyers and small growers sell to local buyers, who in turn compete with each other and with the large growers in each section, each section competing with other sections, so that there is sharp competition all along the line, and no combination to fix or control prices is possible. Prices will absolutely be fixed by supply and demand.

Third. The present tariff of 40 cents per bushel is necessary to suitably protect the American onion grower from the cheaper grown onions from foreign countries.

A gentleman connected with a very prominent European produce house recently stated that he had personally visited the onion fields of Spain and Egypt. He stated that labor could be obtained for the onion fields in Spain at about 20 cents per day and in Egypt for even a lower price. Here in Ohio and in Indiana from $1.50 to $2 per day of 10 hours is paid for men in the field and women and children in proportion.

The freight rate from Spain to New York City direct is about 36 cents per 100 pounds, and from Egypt about 40 cents. Freight from Ohio and Indiana points to New York is from 22 to 25 cents per 100 pounds. It can readily be seen from these figures that with the tariff removed Spain and Egypt can lay onions down in New York City for a lower price than we can, even if we move them at actual cost of growing. Freight on onions from Bermuda is 14 cents per 100 pounds. We do not know the cost of labor in Bermuda, but it is certainly below the prices paid in this country.

Mexico has recently begun the development of onion industry and promises to be a very important factor in the future, especially if the onion tariff be either removed or reduced.

Fourth. The removal of the onion tariff entirely would strike a deadly blow at the American onion industry, that has grown from small beginnings to its present large proportions, an industry that will continue to grow as fast as the needs of the country demand it. Vast tracts of land now of but little value will be developed into onion farms if prices secured for onions will warrant such development. Any material reduction in the tariff must cripple this industry seriously.

The intensive farming required in growing onions makes necessary large investment of capital in developing the land, erection of suitable buildings and storages and necessary equipment, and the employment of many thousands of men, women, and children, who depend upon this industry for their livelihood, and women and children so employed in the country could not procure employment elsewhere.

The serious crippling of this industry would mean the practical loss of a very large capital invested, as above described, throughout the country, as in such cases the property would be greatly reduced in value and suitable returns for labor and investment could not be secured.

Fifth. We do not contend that with the tariff removed the foreign onion grower could at once fully supply the American market, but the removal of the tariff would cause the foreign production to be rapidly and enormously increased, and enough would in the near future be thrown upon the New York market to drive prices down to a point that would be seriously damaging if not ruinous to the American grower.

New York City practically fixes the prices for the entire East, and with the low prices at the seaboard, onions in western New York, Pennsylvania, and Ohio that usually go east would be thrown upon the western and southern markets usually supplied by the onion States west of us, and thus prices in the South and West would also be forced down to nearly or quite the low prices in New York City.

Sixth. If it be urged that the low prices herein suggested will be for the benefit of the consumer, the obvious reply is that the recent amazing increase in onion acreage in this country and the large tracts of land that will be developed and devoted to onion growing in the future, if prices will warrant it, makes it certain that as low prices will rule in the future as the American grower can stand, and that it is poor policy to force prices so low that the grower can not secure cost for his produce.

Seventh. The importations of onions for the two fiscal years 1910–11 and 1911–12 were about 1,500,000 bushels each year. With the tariff removed, the importations will soon be doubled, and therefore, if the tariff be removed, eventually and soon the foreign importations will force American prices to a point below the American cost of growing.

Eighth. If with a reduction of existing onion tariff the cost of foreign onions plus the tariff would be equal to the absolute cost to the American grower, the American grower would be compelled to retire from the business or scale his style of living down to the level of the Spaniard, Egyptian, and Mexican, and surely that can neither be expected or desired.

Why take the risk of strangling or seriously crippling the American industry by removing or reducing the onion tariff, when the only person in the world who would be benefited by it would be the foreign grower?

Mr. MANN. I desire to ask the gentleman from Alabama a question. Was the quantity of the bushel of onions intentionally or accidentally left out? The existing law carries a bushel as consisting of 57 pounds. I notice, and very properly, in most places of the bill it defines the quantity of a bushel, and as the bushel is different in different States I think it would be desirable——

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I think the regulation at the Treasury Department has established so fully that 57 pounds is a bushel of onions that it was not necessary to place it in the bill.

Mr. MANN. Of course the regulation of the Treasury Department would have no effect. It has been the law heretofore that established 57 pounds as the bushel, not a regulation of the Treasury Department.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. The established rate is so uniform——

Mr. MANN. They had no occasion to establish it because the law has provided it, and practically in every other place in the bill the gentleman has defined the quantity of a bushel. We had up in the House a proposition to define the quantity of these measures, and it is one I think that should be passed, and we discovered that in many of the States there was a variation in regard to a bushel of onions or a bushel of other vegetables.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I think we have done that as a rule in the bill.

Mr. PAYNE. I want to say that the gentleman's disinclination to accept any suggestions from this side of the House may lead to confusion in the Treasury Department in the future.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I will look into it.

Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that debate on the paragraph and amendments be now closed.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] asks unanimous consent that debate on the paragraph and amendments be now closed. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. WILLIS].

The question was taken, and the amendment was rejected.

The Clerk read as follows:

215. Orchids, palms, azaleas, and all other decorative or greenhouse plants and cut flowers, preserved or fresh, 25 per cent ad valorem; lily of the valley pips, tulips, narcissus, begonia, and gloxinia bulbs, $1 per thousand; hyacinth, astilbe, dielytra, and lily of the valley clumps, $2.50 per thousand; lily bulbs and calla bulbs, $5 per thousand; peony, Iris Kaempferi or Germanica, canna, dahlia, and amaryllis bulbs, $10 per thousand; all other bulbs, bulbous roots or corms which are cultivated for their flowers or foliage, 50 cents per thousand.

Mr. HUMPHREY of Washington. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. RAINEY. Mr. Chairman, I desire to offer a committee amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois offers a committee amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 53, line 11, strike out the letter "s" in "azaleas," and insert the word "indica."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. RAINEY].

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. RAINEY. Mr. Chairman, I also offer the following amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois offers a further amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 53, line 14, after the word "hyacinth," strike out the comma and insert the word "bulbs."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Illinois.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. RAINEY. Mr. Chairman, I also offer the following amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 53, line 16, after the second word "bulbs," strike out the comma and insert the words "or corms."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. RAINEY].

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. RAINEY. Mr. Chairman, I also offer the following amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois offers a further amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 53, line 16, before the word "peony," insert the word "herbaceous."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. RAINEY].

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I wanted to ask the gentleman a question about the last amendment, where he inserted the word "herbaceous." What becomes of the duty on the other peonies?

Mr. PALMER. They go into the next paragraph under nursery stock. The herbaceous peonies are the fine——

Mr. MANN. I know what they are.

Mr. PALMER. And the other peonies are heavier plants, which come in under nursery stock in the next paragraph.

Mr. RAINEY. Mr. Chairman, I also offer the following amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 53, line 18, strike out the word "bulbs."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. RAINEY].

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. RAINEY. Mr. Chairman, I also offer the following amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois offers another amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 53, line 18, insert, after the word "roots," the words "root stalks."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, may I ask the gentleman what the occasion is for all these amendments?

Mr. RAINEY. These are suggested by the Treasury Department, most of them—in fact, all of them—in order to dispose of a lot of conflicting questions there. They have decisions both ways.

Mr. MANN. Of course, if the Treasury Department recommended them, I have no question in regard to it, although, having some practical knowledge of these matters, I think possibly that instead of settling disputes they will be apt to cause them.

Mr. PALMER. Oh, no.

Mr. MANN. The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. PALMER] who says "No" does not know the difference between "dielytra" and "peonies."

Mr. PALMER. Oh, I am an expert on peonies. [Laughter.]

Mr. MANN. What is "dielytra"?

Mr. PALMER. It would take too long to educate the gentleman. [Laughter.]

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. RAINEY].

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. RAINEY. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. RAINEY] offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 53, line 11, at the end of the line, strike out the word "or."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. RAINEY. Mr. Chairman, I offer another committee amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 53, line 19, after the word "corms" insert the words "and tubers."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HUMPHREY of Washington. Mr. Chairman, I have prepared an amendment, which I will present later. I would like to have the attention of the members of the committee for just a moment. Near Bellingham, in the State of Washington, is the only place in the United States that I know of where they raise bulbs. The Government has a bulb farm there, and the authorities in charge of it expect within the next few years to furnish all the bulbs necessary for distribution by Members of Congress.

I have received a good many communications from people in that neighborhood, saying that if they could get bulbs from Holland free, for propagating purposes, it could be made a profitable industry, because that is in the line, as I understand, of the policy of both parties—to bring in bulbs or other seeds for purposes of propagation.

I will suggest to the gentlemen that they consider it, and I will submit to them the question, when we reach the free list, whether they will not see fit to insert an amendment of that character. I do not think it is covered by this language.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I will say to the gentleman from Washington that I do not see any serious reason why it should not be adopted, but the committee has not had the opportunity to consider it and see the effect of the adoption of the amendment.

Mr. HUMPHREY of Washington. That is the reason why I make the suggestion now and ask the committee to consider it.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. Mr. Chairman, I desire to have this telegram read into the RECORD.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, it will be inserted.

There was no objection.

Following is the telegram referred to:

BELLINGHAM, WASH., April 29, 1913.

Congressman ALBERT JOHNSON,
House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.:

Desire tariff removed bulbs imported propagating purposes only. Commercial bulbs to florists and greenhouses remain as now. Impossible start bulb growing in Washington State unless mother bulbs are admitted free. Bulbs grown nowhere in United States save Whatcom County. Expansion commercial bulb industry here demands removal tariff because present tariff precludes possibility. Should not object to tariff being replaced five years. We believe contrary to policy Government to impose tariff which will hinder new enterprise. Acceding to our request would in no manner disturb present bulb business.

BELLINGHAM CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

216. Stocks, cuttings, or seedlings of Myrobolan plum, Mahaleb or Mazzard cherry, Manetti multiflora and briar rose, three years old or less, $1 per thousand plants; stocks, cuttings, or seedlings of pear, apple, quince, and the St. Julien plum, three years old or less, $1 per thousand plants; rose plants, budded, grafted, or grown on their own roots, 4 cents each; stocks, cuttings, and seedlings, of all fruit and ornamental trees, deciduous and evergreen shrubs and vines, and all trees, shrubs plants, and vines commonly known as nursery or greenhouse stock, not specially provided for in this section, 15 per cent ad valorem.

Mr. RAINEY. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. RAINEY] offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend, page 53, line 23, by inserting after the word "rose" the words "Rosa Rugosa."

[Laughter.]

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. RAINEY. Mr. Chairman, I have another committee amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois presents another committee amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 54, line 5, strike out the words "or greenhouse."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, what is the effect of that, may I ask the gentleman? What would greenhouse stock come under if that were stricken out?

Mr. PALMER. The gentleman from Illinois will notice that in the bill now, under paragraph 215, occurs the language, "Orchids, palms, azaleas, and all other decorative greenhouse plants and cut flowers," while paragraph 216 provides for "plants and vines commonly known as nursery or greenhouse stock." Inasmuch as these two paragraphs carry a different rate, there would be a conflict between greenhouse plants and greenhouse stock, it being impossible to distinguish between the two. The object of the two paragraphs is to have greenhouse plants in paragraph 215 and nursery stock in paragraph 216.

Mr. MANN. Well, but a great deal of this greenhouse stock is just as easily distinguished as nursery stock.

The same conflict would exist in reference to that as to nursery stock. Now you propose to increase the rate on greenhouse stock from 15 per cent to 25 per cent, which I believe is the existing rate. A very large amount of this greenhouse stock is necessarily imported.

Mr. PALMER. If the gentleman will observe, nursery stock is not provided for in paragraph 215. That only covers bulbs, tubers, corms, and greenhouse plants and cut flowers. The words "or greenhouse" are taken out of paragraph 216 in order to avoid the conflict. The conflict is in the present law and has resulted in a great deal of difficulty at the customhouses.

Mr. MANN. I will say to the gentleman that the difficulty will still exist, as far as that is concerned.

Mr. PALMER. I should like to know how.

Mr. MANN. Because there will be a constant conflict whether a plant is a greenhouse plant or nursery stock.

Mr. PALMER. No; there will not be any such conflict. Nurserymen say that nursery stock and greenhouse plants are easily distinguished; that they are trade names which are perfectly plain in the trade, however vague the distinction may seem to my distinguished friend from Illinois.

Mr. MANN. I am somewhat familiar with the trade, and I question whether the gentleman from Pennsylvania is as familiar with it, and that is no reflection on him.

Mr. PALMER. I am not expert in the trade, though I am fond of these things and have paid some attention to them; but I am advised by experts in the trade that nursery stock and greenhouse plants are very easily distinguishable.

Mr. MANN. I am unfortunate enough to raise for my own amusement several hundred thousand of these plants a year, and I know something about them.

Mr. PALMER. I congratulate the gentleman on having constantly at his side a source of great happiness.

Mr. MANN. That is the only fun I have, except what I get out of you gentlemen over on that side.

Mr. PALMER. I trust the gentleman gets more fun out of his plants than he does out of this side.

Mr. MANN. Well, I get a good deal out of both.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired. The question is on the amendment proposed by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. PALMER].

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

217. Seeds: Castor beans or seeds, 15 cents per bushel of 50 pounds; flaxseed or linseed and other oil seeds not specially provided for in this section, 20 cents per bushel of 56 pounds; poppy seed, 15 cents per bushel of 47 pounds; mushroom spawn, and spinach seed, 1 cent per pound; canary seed, ½ cent per pound; caraway seed, 1 cent per pound; anise seed, 2 cents per pound; beet (except sugar beet), carrot, corn salad, parsley, parsnip, radish, turnip, and rutabaga seed, 3 cents per pound; cabbage, collard, kale, and kohl-rabi seed, 6 cents per pound; eggplant and pepper seed, 10 cents per pound; seeds of all kinds not specially provided for in this section, 10 per cent ad valorem: Provided, That no allowance shall be made for dirt or other impurities in seeds provided for in this paragraph.

[Mr. FOWLER addressed the committee. See Appendix.]

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate on the paragraph be closed in five minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Alabama asks unanimous consent that the debate on the paragraph close in five minutes. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, the seeds named in this paragraph are collected in the same manner that the seeds are in the existing law—by description and name. I believe in the existing law the description and differential of rates were made largely at the request of the seedsmen. I have no criticism of the gentlemen for following that description, because their attention has probably not been called to the fact that there is no known method of distinguishing between seeds named in the paragraph carrying different rates of duty except by planting them.

Two or three years ago I obtained from the Agricultural Department some 20 different samples of seeds which had been purchased by that department. They came in bottles, and I took out half of each bottle and put them in a number of other bottles, so that when I had finished I had 40 bottles of seed taken from half of those sent me, all carrying distinguishing numbers.

I sent the 40 bottles of seed to the Agricultural Department with a request that they furnish me with a statement as to what kinds of seed they were. In reply they admitted that as to a number they could not tell, except that they were of a character of, say, cabbage seed or belonging to that family. In about one-third of the cases, or nearly one-half, the analytical seedsman of the department differed from the men who had sold the seed to the department.

I then asked the department to take the remaining packages of seed which I had all numbered and plant them as a final test and find out what those seeds were, the one who had bought them not agreeing with the one who had analyzed them. I again found a great variation. An easy illustration is beet seed carried in this paragraph at 3 cents a pound, except sugar-beet seed. The man does not live who can tell sugar-beet seed from market-beet seed, except by planting them and watching the result.

Since the law went into effect there has been very little ordinary beet seed imported, but great quantities of sugar-beet seed imported, which comes in free. The same is true of various other kinds of seed carrying different rates of duty which can not be distinguished.

The Clerk read as follows:

221. Fish, except shellfish, by whatever name known, packed in oil or in oil and other substances, in bottles, jars, kegs, tin boxes, or cans, 20 per cent ad valorem; all other fish in tin packages, not specially provided for in this section, 15 per cent ad valorem; caviar and other preserved roe of fish, 30 per cent ad valorem; fish, skinned or boned, three-fourths of 1 cent per pound.

Mr. RAINEY. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following committee amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend by inserting, after the word "fish," in line 4, page 55, the words "except shellfish."

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. GARDNER. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. I should offer an amendment which I think ought to be adopted, even on the principle the Ways and Means Committee approve, of admitting all green fish, as we call them, into this country free of duty. Even on that principle they ought to allow a duty on partially manufactured fish. They have, as a matter of fact, allowed a duty of three-quarters of a cent on fish skinned and boned, but they have allowed no duty whatever on smoked and cured fish. If it were not for the fact that I should be afraid of prejudicing the case before the conferees by having an amendment voted down in the House, I should offer an amendment providing for a duty on fish, smoked and cured, of one-half a cent a pound. I wish to call the attention of the Committee on Ways and Means to the effect of this discrepancy, that they recognize one kind of manufactured fish and not the other.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the pro forma amendment will be withdrawn, and the Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

222. Apples, peaches, quinces, cherries, plums, and pears, green or ripe, 10 cents per bushel of 50 pounds; berries, edible, in their natural condition, one-half cent per quart; cranberries, 10 per cent ad valorem; all edible fruits, including berries, when dried, desiccated, evaporated, or prepared in any manner, not specially provided for in this section, 1 cent per pound; comfits, sweetmeats, and fruits of all kinds preserved or packed in sugar, or having sugar added thereto or preserved or packed in molasses, spirits, or their own juices, if containing no alcohol, or containing not over 10 per cent of alcohol, 20 per cent ad valorem; if containing over 10 per cent of alcohol and not specially provided for in this section, 20 per cent ad valorem, and in addition $2.50 per proof gallon on the alcohol contained therein in excess of 10 per cent; jellies of all kinds, 20 per cent ad valorem; pineapples preserved in their own juice, 20 per cent ad valorem.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask the gentleman from Alabama a question in reference to pineapples preserved in their own juice, as to whether this permits any addition of sugar at all?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. No; the paragraph was drawn so that it would not do that. That was the purpose.

Mr. MANN. I do not just this minute recall, and does the gentleman, what the duty would be where any sweetening material was added?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. That is provided for in another portion of the bill. I can not tell just where it is now.

Mr. MANN. I remember. I tried to find out yesterday by examining the bill whether it was intended to be covered by—comfits, sweetmeats, and fruits of all kinds preserved or packed in sugar.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. That is the place where it is supposed to be covered.

Mr. MANN. I am not sure whether that would cover it, or whether it would come in under the basket clause.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. That is the point where the committee intends it to be covered.

Mr. MANN. I do not see how that could be. That provision carries 20 per cent ad valorem.

Fruits of all kinds preserved or packed in sugar, or having sugar added thereto or preserved or packed in molasses, spirits, or their own juices, if containing no alcohol, or containing not over 10 per cent of alcohol, 20 per cent ad valorem; if containing over 10 per cent of alcohol and not specially provided for in this section, 20 per cent ad valorem, and in addition $2.50 per proof gallon on the alcohol contained therein in excess of 10 per cent.

I call it to the attention of the gentleman, and I wish that the gentleman would have it looked into.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I will say to the gentleman that I recall that the committee did differentiate between pineapples that were not sweetened and those that were sweetened. It is in the bill somewhere.

Mr. MANN. I am not disposed to say to the gentleman that it is not in the bill, because I accept his statement. However, I have examined the bill carefully for the purpose of endeavoring to ascertain what the rate would be under the bill for pineapples preserved in their own juice with a slight addition of sugar. I do not find any paragraph that seemed to cover it.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, unless there is to be some debate on some of the remaining paragraphs in this section, I would like to finish it to-night. If there is to be debate, I will move that the committee do now rise.

Mr. MANN. My impression is there would be some debate on paragraph 225.

Mr. WILLIS. I desire to offer an amendment to paragraph 223.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I move that the committee do now rise.

The motion was agreed to; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, reported that that committee had had under consideration the bill H. R. 3321—the tariff bill—and had come to no resolution thereon.

ENROLLED BILL PRESENTED TO THE PRESIDENT FOR HIS APPROVAL.

Mr. ASHBROOK, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that this day they had presented to the President of the United States, for his approval, the following bill:

H. R. 2973. An act making appropriations for certain expenses incident to the first session of the Sixty-third Congress, and for other purposes.

QUESTION OF PERSONAL PRIVILEGE.

Mr. LAFFERTY. Mr. Speaker, I rise to a question of personal privilege. In the Evening Star newspaper this afternoon appears an article entitled "Lafferty ends speech with loud applause—the Representative from Oregon takes advantage of leave to print"——

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order there is no quorum present.

The SPEAKER. Evidently there is no quorum present.

ADJOURNMENT.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; and accordingly (at 11 o'clock and 6 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned until to-morrow, Friday, May 2, 1913, at 11 o'clock a. m.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXIV, executive communications were taken from the Speaker's table and referred as follows:

1. A letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting, with a letter from the Chief of Engineers, reports on examination and survey of Newport Harbor, Cal. (H. Doc. No. 42); to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors and ordered to be printed with illustration.

2. A letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting, with a letter from the Chief of Engineers, report on examination of Matawan Creek, N. J., with plan and estimate of cost of improvement (H. Doc. No. 43); to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors and ordered to be printed with illustration.

PUBLIC BILLS, RESOLUTIONS, AND MEMORIALS.

Under clause 3 of Rule XXII, bills, resolutions, and memorials were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. HARRISON of Mississippi: A bill (H. R. 4536) to reopen the rolls of the Choctaw-Chickasaw Tribe and to provide for the awarding of the rights secured to certain persons by the fourteenth article of the treaty of Dancing Rabbit Creek, of date September 27, 1830; to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

By Mr. SMITH of Maryland: A bill (H. R. 4537) prescribing offenses committed in the United States Army and fixing the punishment thereof; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4538) prescribing offenses committed in the United States Navy and fixing the punishment thereof; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4539) providing for a survey for a military and post road from the city of Washington, D. C., to the Naval Academy at the city of Annapolis, Md.; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. SIMS: A bill (H. R. 4540) making appropriation for payment of certain claims in accordance with findings of the Court of Claims, reported under the provisions of the acts approved March 3, 1883, and March 3, 1887, and commonly known as the Bowman and the Tucker Acts, and under the provisions of section No. 151 of the act approved March 3, 1911, commonly known as the Judicial Code; to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. HAY: A bill (H. R. 4541) to consolidate the veterinary service, United States Army, and to increase its efficiency; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. MOSS of West Virginia: A bill (H. R. 4542) authorizing the Secretary of War, in his discretion, to deliver to the town of Ripley, State of West Virginia, for the use of the Carl Shatto Post, No. 28, Department of West Virginia, Grand Army of the Republic, two condemned bronze or brass cannon or field pieces; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. MOON: A bill (H. R. 4543) to amend sections 4924 and 4927 of the Revised Statutes, relating to patents; to the Committee on Patents.

By Mr. SMITH of Idaho: A bill (H. R. 4544) to reserve certain lands and to incorporate the same and make them a part of the Caribou National Forest Reserve; to the Committee on the Public Lands.

By Mr. CLAYTON: A bill (H. R. 4545) to amend an act entitled "An act to codify, revise, and amend the laws relating to the judiciary," approved March 3, 1911; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. SIMS: A bill (H. R. 4546) to abolish the Commerce Court, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. LOGUE: A bill (H. R. 4547) for the preparation of a plan and the erection on ground belonging to the United States Government, in the city of Washington, of a memorial or statue, to be furnished by the State of Pennsylvania, of Maj. Gen. George Gordon Meade; to the Committee on the Library.

By Mr. DIFENDERFER: A bill (H. R. 4548) to prevent a combination of firms or individuals from conspiring to raise, or raising, prices of supplies furnished the United States Government, or combining to put up prices for structural work, and providing penalties therefor; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. LA FOLLETTE: A bill (H. R. 4569) to amend section 4 of the interstate-commerce act; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. SUTHERLAND: A bill (H. R. 4573) authorizing the President to appoint an additional circuit judge for the fourth circuit; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. ALEXANDER: Resolution (H. Res. 84) to authorize the expenditure of balance of fund authorized under H. Res. 587 adopted June 18, 1912; to the Committee on Accounts.

By Mr. WICKERSHAM: Memorial of the Legislature of Alaska Territory, petitioning Congress to provide for the building of a bridge across the Chena River at the town of Fairbanks, Alaska; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, memorial of the Legislature of Alaska Territory, praying Congress to provide for the immediate development of the coal and railroad resources of Alaska; to the Committee on the Territories.

Also, memorial of the Legislature of the Territory of Alaska, praying Congress to authorize the city of Juneau, Alaska, to issue $50,000 school bonds; to the Committee on the Territories.

Also, memorial of the Legislature of Alaska, praying Congress to provide a salary for commissioners, justices of the peace, probate judges, coroners, and recorders in Alaska Territory; to the Committee on the Territories.

Also, memorial of the Legislature of Alaska Territory, praying for the repeal of the law of Congress taxing railroads in Alaska; to the Committee on the Territories.

Also, memorial of the Legislature of Alaska Territory, praying Congress for a survey and to build a breakwater at the harbor of Snake River, Nome, Alaska; to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

Also, memorial of the Legislature of Alaska Territory, praying for a reduction of the excessive telegraph and cable charges of the United States military telegraph and cable lines in Alaska; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, memorial of the Legislature of Alaska Territory, praying for the repeal of the statute entitled "An act extending the time in which to file adverse claims and institute adverse suits against mineral entries in the Territory of Alaska," approved June 7, 1910; to the Committee on the Public Lands.

Also, memorial of the Legislature of Alaska Territory, praying for better mail service in that Territory; to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.

Also, memorial of the Legislature of Alaska Territory, praying Congress to provide an appropriation to pay the deficiency in the mileage allowed members of the Alaska Legislature; to the Committee on Appropriations.

By Mr. HAYES: Memorial of the Senate of the State of California, favoring the Lever agricultural education extension bill; to the Committee on Agriculture.

PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, private bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. ANSBERRY: A bill (H. R. 4549) granting a pension to Edwin V. Butler; to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4550) granting an increase of pension to Augustus Fortney; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. BRYAN: A bill (H. R. 4551) to authorize the President to appoint Archy Wright Barnes an assistant paymaster in the United States Navy; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. DAVIS of West Virginia: A bill (H. R. 4552) granting a pension to Annie Neate; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. HAYES: A bill (H. R. 4553) granting an increase of pension to James Frank Sanderson; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. HULINGS: A bill (H. R. 4554) granting an increase of pension to William V. Thompson; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. KETTNER: A bill (H. R. 4555) granting a pension to John L. Churchill; to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4556) for the relief of May Stanley; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. KEY of Ohio: A bill (H. R. 4557) granting an increase of pension to John Graham; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4558) granting an increase of pension to Elijah J. Brown; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4559) granting an increase of pension to John Carley; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4560) granting an increase of pension to James W. Tuckerman; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4561) granting an increase of pension to John Herr; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4562) granting an increase of pension to William W. Lewis; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4563) granting an increase of pension to Harry L. Vance; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4564) granting an increase of pension to John C. Ernst; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4565) granting an increase of pension to Baker Woodruff; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4566) granting an increase of pension to James Hackett; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. McLAUGHLIN: A bill (H. R. 4567) granting a pension to William Feavel; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. STEPHENS of California: A bill (H. R. 4568) granting an increase of pension to Elizabeth Comstock; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. FESS: A bill (H. R. 4570) granting a pension to Margaret Bretney; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4571) granting an increase of pension to Stephen G. Lindsey; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4572) granting an increase of pension to Ludlow Walker; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. BLACKMON: A bill (H. R. 4574) granting an increase of pension to Linda S. Anderson; to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4575) for the relief of the heirs of Lewis E. Parsons, deceased; to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. CARLIN (by request): A bill (H. R. 4576) for the relief of George A. Nowland; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. LANGLEY: A bill (H. R. 4577) granting a pension to Noah Smith; to the Committee on Pensions.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

By the SPEAKER (by request): Petition of sundry citizens of Missouri, against the income tax on mutual life insurance companies; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also (by request), petition of the Pennsylvania Congress of Mothers and Parent-Teacher Association, Philadelphia, Pa., protesting against any change in the present national system of forest control; to the Committee on Agriculture.

Also (by request), petition of J. H. Atkinson, Fulton, Mo., and Webb Strange, protesting against including mutual life insurance companies in the income-tax bill; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. ANSBERRY: Petition of sundry citizens of Ohio, against the income tax on mutual life insurance companies; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. ASHBROOK: Petition of A. W. Barnett and 4 other merchants of Doylestown, Ohio, favoring the passage of legislation to compel concerns selling goods direct to the consumer by mail to contribute their portion of the funds for the development of the local community, county, and State; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

Also, petition of Alvin Rich, Wooster, Ohio, and J. W. Lytle, Uhrichsville, Ohio, protesting against including mutual life insurance companies in the income-tax bill; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. BALTZ: Petition of Thomas L. Fekete, jr., and Milo R. Clanahan, St. Louis, Mo., protesting against including mutual life insurance companies in the income-tax bill; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. BUCHANAN of Illinois: Petition of sundry trade-unionists of Chicago, Ill., protesting against the removal of the duty on Philippine tobacco and cigars; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. BULKLEY: Petition of the city council of Cleveland, Ohio, favoring Government ownership of the telegraph and telephone; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. BURNETT: Petitions of sundry citizens of Alabama, against the income tax on mutual life insurance companies; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. BUTLER: Petition of sundry citizens of Pennsylvania, favoring the retention of the present tariff rates on laces and lace curtains; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee: Papers to accompany bill (H. R. 4528) for the relief of the estate of Perry P. Benson; to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. CURRY: Petition of the Trades and Labor Council, Vallejo, Cal., favoring the passage of legislation to extend the eight-hour law to include labor used by those who receive Government grants and franchises; to the Committee on Labor.

By Mr. DALE: Petition of sundry citizens of Brooklyn, N. Y., against the income tax on mutual life insurance companies; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petitions of Henry Lotz and Schmidt & Co., of New York, N. Y., against the reduction of the duty applying to the lithographic trade; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the Linnæan Society, of New York, N. Y., favoring the feather provision in Schedule N of the tariff bill; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the Progressive Knitting Works, of Brooklyn, N. Y., against the reduction of the duty on the sweater, coat, and knit-goods industry; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the Sherer-Gilbert Co., of Chicago, Ill., against the duty on saffron; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the Montague Castle-London Co., of New York, N. Y., against placing stained glass on the free list; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. GOLDFOGLE: Petition of Irvy Card, protesting against including mutual life insurance companies in the income-tax bill; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of Mary Schwaner and E. Scott, of New York, N. Y., protesting against the placing of Bibles on the free list; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of Baer Bros., New York, N. Y., protesting against the proposed change in the tariff on bronze powder; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. GOULDEN: Petitions of sundry citizens of the twenty-third congressional district of New York, against taxing mutual life insurance companies; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. GRIFFIN: Petition of sundry citizens of Brooklyn, N. Y., against the income tax on mutual life insurance companies; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. HAYES: Petition of the Railroad Commission of the State of California, favoring the passage of legislation making an appropriation of $4,500 for blanks for the use of the Interstate Commerce Commission; to the Committee on Appropriations.

Also, petition of the Chicago Pneumatic Tool Co. and 5 other companies of San Francisco, Cal.; the Stewart Dawes Shoe Co.; the Pacific Wire Rope Co., of Los Angeles Cal.; and the Holt Manufacturing Co., Stockton, Cal., protesting against the proposed reduction of the tariff on sugar; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. KAHN: Petition of W. J. Mulligan, of the National Fuse Co., San Francisco, Cal., favoring a reduction in the tariff on safety or blasting fuses; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. KALANIANAOLE: Petition of the Navi Chamber of Commerce, Hawaii, against the reduction of the duty on sugar; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. KETTNER: Petition of the Railroad Commission of the State of California, favoring an item of $4,500 in the appropriation bill for blanks for the Interstate Commerce Commission; to the Committee on Appropriations.

Also, petition of the C. E. Floating Society, San Diego, Cal., favoring an increase in the number of chaplains in the United States Navy and to protest against a change in naval code regarding church pennant; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. KIESS of Pennsylvania: Petition of sundry citizens of the fifteenth congressional district of the State of Pennsylvania, protesting against including mutual life insurance companies in the income-tax bill; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. LEVY: Petitions of sundry citizens of New York, against the income tax on mutual life insurance companies; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the Woman's Republican Club of New York City, favoring the passage of House joint resolution No. 1, to enfranchise the women of the United States; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Also, petition of Sherer-Gilbert & Co., of Chicago, Ill., against the duty on saffron; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the National Business Congress, favoring reform in banking and currency laws, etc.; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

Also, petition of the National Business League of America, favoring the retention in the Consular Service of efficient officials, etc.; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, petitions of Miss Sarah Thomas, Hilda Nielson, and H. K. Jedidian, of New York, N. Y., against placing of Bibles on the free list; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the American Duralumin Co., of New York, N. Y., against an increase of the duty on duralumin; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the Montague Craft-London Co., New York City, against placing stained glass on the free list; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the Butler Ward Co., of New York, N. Y., against the reduction of duty on bound books; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petitions of Austin Nichols & Co. and the Standard Importing Co., of New York, against assessment of fee for filing protests against assessment of duties by collector of customs; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petitions of manufacturers of pianos of New York, against the proposed 20 per cent duty on ivory tusks; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petitions of sundry workers in the fancy feather trade, against the clause prohibiting importation of aigrettes, etc.; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petitions of 2 members of National Audubon Society, favoring the clause prohibiting importation of aigrettes, etc.; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. O'BRIEN: Petition of William Dennith & Co., New York, N. Y., favoring the placing of brier root or brierwood and amber or amberoid on the free list; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of Frank Wacker, Brooklyn, N. Y., protesting against the reduction of the tariff on lithographic goods; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of Madison K. Finley, Brooklyn, N. Y., protesting against the placing of Bibles on the free list; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of Miss Mabel Clark, Brooklyn, N. Y.; Abartemie Eberle, Ludlow Griscom, and other citizens of New York, N. Y., favoring the passage of the legislation prohibiting the importation of the feathers and plumes of wild birds for millinery purposes; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of Thomas F. McCook, Lowell M. Palmer, Joseph Kemmere, F. L. Higgins, F. L. Thomas, William M. Reid, Daniel A. Dolan, John J. King, Harry E. A. Gibbs, Morris Altchuler, and Joseph H. Scannell, of New York, protesting against including mutual life insurance in the income-tax bill; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of Andrew Werth, Brooklyn, N. Y., protesting against the placing of a duty of 15 per cent on books; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. WALLIN: Petition of sundry citizens of the thirtieth district of New York, against the income tax on life insurance companies; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. WALTERS: Petitions of C. F. Hager and others of Pennsylvania, against the income tax for mutual life insurance companies; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. WILSON of New York: Petitions of sundry citizens of New York, against the income tax for mutual life insurance companies; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

FRIDAY, May 2, 1913.

The House met at 11 o'clock a. m.

The Chaplain, Rev. Henry N. Couden, D. D., offered the following prayer.

Once more, Almighty God our heavenly Father, source of every blessing, we come to Thee for inspiration, wisdom, strength, guidance, that we may go forward without fear doing whatsoever Thou has given us to do. And let us not be weary in well-doing, for in due season we shall reap, if we faint not, the fruits of righteousness, peace, and joy in the Holy Ghost. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

JOINT SELECT COMMITTEE ON USELESS EXECUTIVE PAPERS.

The SPEAKER. The Chair announces the following appointment in the House end of the Joint Select Committee on the Disposition of Useless Executive Papers.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. Talbott of Maryland and Mr. Kelley of Michigan.

PANAMA CANAL TOLLS LEGISLATION.

Mr. DOREMUS. Mr. Speaker——

The SPEAKER. For what purpose does the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. DOREMUS] rise?

Mr. DOREMUS. To ask unanimous consent, Mr. Speaker, to insert in the RECORD a paper prepared by Hon. Richard Olney, Secretary of State under Grover Cleveland, on the question of Panama Canal tolls and the Hay-Pauncefote treaty, recently read in this city at the annual meeting of the American Society of International Law.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Michigan [Mr. DOREMUS] asks unanimous consent to print in the RECORD a paper prepared by ex-Secretary of State Hon. Richard Olney on the question of Panama tolls. Is there objection?

Mr. MURDOCK. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I would like to ask the gentleman from Michigan why he does not have that printed as a document?

Mr. DOREMUS. Well——

Mr. HARDWICK. How much will it cost? Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object to its being printed as a document, I do not object to its going in the RECORD——

The SPEAKER. Nobody asked to print it as a document.

Mr. HARDWICK. The gentleman was stating his request.

The SPEAKER. The Chair did not hear the gentleman change it.

Mr. DOREMUS. I have not changed the request.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Michigan asks unanimous consent to print in the RECORD a paper prepared by Hon. Richard Olney, ex-Secretary of State, on Panama Canal tolls. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

The paper above referred to is as follows:

PANAMA CANAL TOLLS LEGISLATION AND THE HAY-PAUNCEFOTE TREATY.

"In construing the Hay-Pauncefote treaty it is necessary to remember that there have been several different phases of American opinion and American policy touching the ownership, construction, maintenance, and use of the canal. The canal has always been conceived of as a work of world-wide interest and importance, which all nations without exception or discrimination should be able to use, subject, of course, to all rights of the owner of the canal, including that of charging reasonable tolls. Among the earliest declarations of policy by the United States Government, perhaps the earliest, was an intimation that the work should be accomplished, not 'by the support and unassisted efforts of any one power,' but 'by common means and united exertions'—whether of all civilized powers or of American powers exclusively is not perhaps clear. Secretary Clay's idea that the canal be built by a combination of the powers interested seems never to have taken any real root.

"This first phase was succeeded by the view that the canal should be built by the State owning the route of the canal or by a company or association having from the State the necessary concessions for that purpose. The United States was to assist by appropriate guaranties, and by the treaty with New Granada of 1846, in consideration of New Granada's granting citizens of the United States equal treatment with citizens of New Granada as respects any mode of transit across the Isthmus, the United States guarantied the perfect neutrality of the Isthmus and also New Granada's rights as sovereign and owner of the Isthmus.

"A third phase of American opinion and policy appears four years later in a treaty then made with Great Britain. The United States was moved to enter into it by various considerations—by the improbability of the canal being built by the territorial sovereign, by Great Britain's claim of a protectorate over the eastern terminus of the Nicaraguan route then universally accepted as the most eligible route, and by the natural and reasonable belief that financiers would more readily engage in the canal enterprise if Great Britain joined the United States in becoming sponsor for the safety and neutrality of the canal and for its equal use by all nations. The outcome was the famous Clayton-Bulwer treaty, the essential features of which are these:

"First. A canal built by the State owning the canal route or by its concessionaires.

"Second. A compact by the parties that neither will build nor take part in building the canal, directly or indirectly, nor obtain nor maintain exclusive control over it.

"Third. A specific agreement as to the modes in which both parties may aid in the construction of the canal—as by each using its influence for such construction with local governments and for the establishment of a free port at each end of the canal, and by each undertaking to protect the canal while in process and after completion to guarantee its neutrality, and to thus safeguard the capital invested.

"Fourth. An undertaking by each to enter into contracts with Central American States with the view to carry out the great purpose of the treaty, to wit, the construction of a ship canal between the two oceans 'for the benefit of mankind and on equal terms to all,' and for the purpose of protecting the same.

"Fifth. Enjoyment by the citizens or subjects of each party of the same 'rights or advantages in regard to commerce or navigation through the canal,' charges and conditions of traffic to be approved as just or equitable by the Governments of the contracting parties.

"Sixth. An invitation to all friendly States to join in contributing to the construction of the canal, coupled with the declaration that the equal terms and conditions secured to the citizens or subjects of the contracting parties shall be enjoyed by the citizens and subjects of every other State 'which is willing to grant thereto (to the canal) such protection as the United States and Great Britain engage to afford.'

"The two notable features of this phase of American canal policy are, first, the self-denying ordinance preventing the United States or Great Britain from building or controlling the canal, and, second, the clear recognition of the right of a State constructing on its own territory an artificial waterway like the canal to dictate the conditions of its use, as by permitting the use to some parties on conditions of their undertaking to protect the canal and denying its use to other parties not willing to undertake such protection.

"The next phase of American canal opinion and policy was foreshadowed as early as 1869, when Secretary Seward officially 'expressed the very deliberate conviction' (1) that 'henceforth neither any foreign Government nor the capitalists of any foreign nation, except the Government and capitalists of the United States, will ever undertake in good faith to build the canal across the Isthmus of Darien'; (2) that 'the neutrality most desirable for Colombia is to be found in a combination of the power, authority, and influence of the United States of America and the power, authority, and influence of the United States of Colombia to protect the canal and make it productive of the largest commercial benefit to all nations'; and (3) that 'not only would the United States be unwilling to enter into an entangling alliance with other foreign nations for the construction and maintenance of a passage through the Isthmus, but also that the idea that other commercial powers could and would consent to enter into a combination with the United States of America for that purpose is impracticable and visionary.' About the same time a convention was actually negotiated at Bogota by which the United States was to build the canal. On various grounds not necessary to state the convention failed of ratification at Washington.

"Meanwhile, and before Secretary Seward's prophetic words were generally accepted as verity, there ensued the de Lesseps attempt to construct the canal over the Panama route. The final abandonment of that attempt in 1889 forced upon the country the conviction that Secretary Seward was right, and that if the canal was to be built it must be built by the United States, both because the United States was the only American power with the necessary resources and because the construction and control of the canal by any European power would conflict with our settled policy respecting European interference in American affairs. President Hayes, in a special message to Congress in March, 1880, justly interpreted American sentiment by declaring: 'The policy of this country is a canal under American control; the United States can not consent to the surrender of this control to any European power or to any combination of European powers.' He condensed the whole argument for the policy into the fewest words by adding that the canal would be 'virtually a part of the coast line of the United States.' President Cleveland, in his message of December, 1885, was equally explicit as to the inadmissibility of any control of the canal by a European power.

"The final phase of American opinion and policy being that the United States must build and control the canal, and that any share in its construction or control by any European power was to be excluded, the first step to be taken obviously was the removal of the obstacle presented by the Clayton-Bulwer treaty. That object was meant and thought to be attained by the Hay-Pauncefote treaty of 1901. It clearly permits the United States to build the canal. Does it also debar Great Britain from any control of the canal except such as results from the express provision that the canal shall be open for use to Great Britain and all other nations on terms of entire equality? The answer is to be found in the terms of the treaty itself interpreted according to their true intent. They can be so interpreted only by reverting to the previous relations of the parties to the canal enterprise, to the new relations to the enterprise the parties meant to assume, and to the objects each had in view in making the treaty.

"1. The Hay-Pauncefote treaty of November 18, 1901, it is to be noted, does not merely authorize the United States to build the canal through the territory of some other power, though such would have been a possible construction of the rejected Hay-Pauncefote treaty of February 5, 1901, but the treaty of November 18, 1901, adds a clause not found in the February treaty to the effect that no change of territorial sovereignty of the country or countries traversed by the canal shall affect the obligations of the parties to the treaty, thus assenting in advance to the acquisition by the United States of the territory needed for the canal. Hence, since the United States did afterwards acquire the Canal Zone, the terms of the November Hay-Pauncefote treaty apply to the case of an artificial waterway constructed by a State on its own territory.

"2. It is to be further noted that by way of asserting the exclusive control of the canal by the United States and eliminating any semblance of control by other powers the November Hay-Pauncefote treaty omits article 3 of the February treaty, by which other powers were to have notice of the treaty and be invited to adhere to it.

"3. The facts being, then, that the United States has rightfully built the canal through territory of its own; that besides having become the owner of the canal route, the treaty expressly accords to the United States all the rights incident to construction; and that in undertaking the canal as a United States enterprise the United States did so with the manifest purpose of excluding all foreign control beyond that resulting from the stipulation for equality of terms to all users of the canal—what is there in the language of the treaty to justify the claim that the United States has made a further submission to foreign control by a stipulation which prevents it from allowing the use of the canal by its own vessels or those of its nationals on any terms it chooses to fix?

"4. The one provision possible to be relied upon for that purpose is rule 1 of article 3, declaring that 'the canal shall be free and open to the vessels of commerce and of war of all nations observing these rules on terms of entire equality * * *.' And the single point is, Are the words 'all nations' inclusive or exclusive of the United States?

"It seems difficult to successfully contend that the United States is included.

"(a) The treaty is a contract by which the proprietor of a canal fixes the terms upon which it grants the use of the canal to its customers.

"(b) It was needed for that purpose only—it was not needed to fix the terms upon which the United States and its nationals—its cestui que trust—should use the canal, because its use without tolls or otherwise, as the United States might choose, is a necessary incident of its ownership of the canal.

"It can not reasonably be argued that, in fixing the terms for the use of its canal customers, the United States looked upon itself as one of the customers.

"(c) The words under construction are in substance the first of a set of six rules adopted by the United States as the basis of the neutralization of the canal.

"But the other five certainly apply only to parties other than the United States, so that there is the strongest reason for holding that the first of them is to be given a like application.

"(d) And if the British construction be correct, instead of liberating the United States from all foreign control of the canal and from all duties to foreign powers in respect to its use—except not to discriminate between them—the Hay-Pauncefote fote treaty compels the United States to reverse its established policy and to devise a plan for subsidizing its own vessels in order that they may have such free or other use of the canal as the United States may decide to be demanded by United States interests.

"(e) The claim sometimes made that by building and owning the canal the United States engages in a public calling and thereby undertakes to serve all comers without discrimination and at a reasonable rate would seem to have no application to the present case. The principle affects only the users of the public work and only prescribes entire equality as between them—it in no way prevents the owner of the work, or those for whom it holds the work in trust, from using it in any way and to any extent that the legal or beneficial owner or owners may determine.

"Besides, so far as international law on the subject can be regarded as settled, the rule is that 'while a natural thoroughfare, although wholly within the dominion of a government, may be passed by commercial ships of right, yet the nation which constructs an artificial channel may annex such conditions to its use as it pleases.' (3 Moore, 268; The Avon, 18 Int. Rev. Record, 165.)

"(f) Great stress is laid upon the preamble of the treaty and its reference to the neutralization of the canal as defined in article 8 of the Clayton-Bulwer treaty, which, it is claimed, compels the United States to forget that it is the owner of the canal, and, as regards its own vessels, forces it to look upon itself as a canal customer bound to pay for its use the regular tolls. It is elaborately argued that neutralization of this sort is a policy to which the United States has been committed from the earliest times.

"But the argument ignores necessary distinctions and fails to note that 'neutralization' of a canal describes a policy applicable as between the canal owner and customers of the canal, but in no way touches or restricts the canal owner's rights or the canal owner's policy as to the use of the canal by itself. The several phases of American opinion, official and otherwise, respecting the construction and control of the Isthmian Canal have already been pointed out. While merely in the position of a probable user of the canal, the United States always and consistently claimed that the terms and conditions of use should be the same for all comers, but in no way denied or disputed the inherent rights of the canal owner. Those rights, as already shown, are expressly recognized by the Clayton-Bulwer treaty, which allows the owner to fix terms at will for the use of the canal by States, withholding the protection to the canal given by the United States and Great Britain, and even permits the owner to deny to such States the use of the canal altogether. Since accepting its inevitable rôle of the canal builder and owner, the United States has always and consistently stood on its rights as such, and, beyond agreeing to the neutralization of the canal as between customers, has repudiated the idea of any control of the canal except its own.

"How clearly such is the case is shown by the briefest examination of the neutralization provided for in article 8 of the Clayton-Bulwer treaty, the principle of which is not to be impaired by the Hay-Pauncefote treaty. What sort of neutralization is it? First, the United States and Great Britain are to determine what are just and equitable charges for the use of the canal by their citizens or subjects; second, the canal shall be open on those same terms to citizens and subjects of other states; but, third, the citizens and subjects of other states shall have the benefit of those terms only if such other states grant the same protection to the canal as the United States and Great Britain engage to afford. Now, there is no element of this species of neutralization which the Hay-Pauncefote treaty leaves unimpaired, since the United States alone fixes reasonable and equitable rules for the canal traffic; since the canal may be used by all nations on no other condition than that they observe those rules; and since—as shown by the elimination from this treaty of article 3 of the unratified Hay-Pauncefote treaty of February, 1901—adherence to the treaty by the other powers is not to be invited. If by construing article 8 in connection with other articles of the Clayton-Bulwer treaty any controlling principle of neutralization is to be deduced, it is the simple requirement that the same terms shall be made to all customers of the canal, a requirement restricting the rights of the canal owner to just that extent and no more and not disabling it from treating its own shipping in any way it sees fit. The like result follows from the Constantinople convention of 1888, which is declared to be the basis of the neutralization of the canal and of the rules laid down in article 3 for its navigation. By that convention identical rules are to apply to all vessels using the Suez Canal in time of war or time of peace without distinction of flags, but 'the rights of Turkey as the territorial power are reserved,' together with the sovereign rights of the Sultan and the rights and immunities of the Khedive.

"It has been contended that the Senate of the United States understood the Hay-Pauncefote treaty to mean what Great Britain now claims it to mean, because of the Senate's failure to pass the Bard resolution in favor of American coastwise shipping. But the claim seems to be thoroughly disposed of by proof that the reason of the failure was the opinion of Senators that the resolution was superfluous, that nothing in the treaty prohibited the United States, as the builder and owner of the canal, from exempting its coastwise shipping from tolls. Senator Bard himself has since so stated in a letter which was publicly read in the House of Representatives. He is emphatically corroborated on that point by other Senators.

"It is also contended that American vessels must pay tolls, because otherwise the reasonable and equitable tolls provided for by the treaty can not be ascertained. The contention assumes, of course, the very thing at issue, namely, that in the contemplation of the treaty and by its true construction American vessels are bound to pay tolls. But no other answer seems to be required than that, for the purpose of computing reasonable tolls for the use of the canal, it is not necessary that American vessels should pay tolls, but only that the amount they would pay if they were not exempt should be calculated and used in the computation as if paid.

"To sum up the conclusions resulting from the foregoing considerations it is submitted that—

"1. The United States, as builder and owner of an artificial waterway within its own territory, is entitled to dictate the conditions of its use unless and only so far as it has contracted the right of way.

"2. It has made no such contract, except with Great Britain and by the Hay-Pauncefote treaty and by the clauses of that treaty which stipulate for the use of the canal by 'all nations' on equal terms and for reasonable and equitable tolls.

"3. As the term 'all nations' comprehends not only states, but their nationals, the crucial question is, Are the words 'all nations' inclusive or exclusive of the United States and its nationals?

"4. The principle is well settled that a state conveys away its rights of sovereignty or property only by terms which are clear and express and are not susceptible of any other reasonable construction. If the terms are vague and of doubtful import, the presumption is against the state's intention to part with or abridge its jurisdictional or property rights.

"5. Hence, as the term 'all nations' as used in the treaty may be taken to mean either all without exception or all except the United States, the latter meaning is to be accepted as the true one, because the least restrictive of the normal rights and powers of the United States.

"6. But it is unnecessary to rely upon presumption. The treaty assumes the United States to be the owner of a canal to be built by it on its own territory and must be taken to have had as its natural and legitimate aim the fixing of the terms upon which other nations might use it. Except as necessarily abridged by such terms, nothing in the treaty indicates any purpose to further abridge the rights of the United States as canal builder and owner.

"7. In short, the treaty is an instrument by which the proprietor of a canal fixes and states the terms of use to its customers.

"There is an utter absence of evidence that the United States regarded itself as one of its customers.

"8. The neutralization proposed by the Clayton-Bulwer treaty resembles that proposed by the Hay-Pauncefote treaty only in the idea that the operating charges and rules for use of the canal shall be the same for all nations. It differs, of course, in the vital feature of conditioning such equality of terms upon protection being afforded to the canal.

"9. When five out of six of the treaty rules for the use of the canal do not apply to the United States it is a reasonable conclusion that the sixth also was not meant so to apply.

"10. The different phases of American public and official sentiment respecting the canal are noteworthy and not to be overlooked in construing the Hay-Pauncefote treaty.

"While the United States was expecting to be merely one of the users of the canal, it strenuously insisted upon equality of rules and charges for the use of the canal and did not concern itself about the rights of the canal owner.

"When the rôle of builder and owner of the canal was forced upon it, it as strenuously insisted upon complete ownership and complete control, and complete elimination of all foreign participation or control.

"Its purposes and views are completely defeated if the Hay-Pauncefote treaty is to be construed according to the British contention, and the United States has lost the ordinary and normal right of the canal owner to be exempt from the tolls and charges it makes to customers.

"On the grounds and in view of the considerations above stated, the United States may contend—and it is believed can rightfully contend—that the Hay-Pauncefote treaty of November, 1901, does not, as justly interpreted, prevent the United States from exempting its coastwise shipping from the payment of tolls for the use of the Panama Canal. But to the English contention that the controversy should be referred to arbitration there seems to be no sufficient answer. Both countries are firmly committed to arbitration as the best method for the settlement of international disputes. It may be safely assumed without argument that if the matter in difference is not otherwise disposed of it will be left to an arbitral tribunal. It does not follow that resort must be or should be had to The Hague or The Hague Permanent Court of Arbitration. Our existing arbitration treaty with Great Britain, article 1, expressly excepts from reference to that court differences which 'concern the interests of third parties'—and in the case of the present difference over the meaning of the Hay-Pauncefote treaty the 'third parties' with interests concerned, but without legal standing in respect of them, include almost all the countries of Europe. That the present difference should not go to The Hague Permanent Court is as clear as that the parties are not bound to send it there. International arbitration derives its chief value from confidence in the arbitral tribunal and in its ability and purpose to do justice—an award lacking that confidence is not only likely to work unfortunately as regards the particular case, but also to discredit the cause of arbitration generally—and the fact must be reckoned with that in this country there is a widespread conviction which has been publicly voiced in high official circles that all Europe is interested in the success of the British contention, and that submission of the controversy to arbitration under The Hague convention would be in the nature of a farce. American sentiment on this point is no doubt in part due to the nature of the subject matter in controversy. The claim of Great Britain is, in effect, a territorial claim. The United States possesses no more costly and perhaps no more valuable piece of territory than the Panama Canal, and Great Britain's claim is that the Hay-Pauncefote treaty not only encumbers that territory with equal rights of use by all other nations, but impresses upon it a servitude by which the United States loses the free use of its own canal for its own vessels. It is rights of that nature as to which both countries are especially sensitive and which both countries have been peculiarly careful to safeguard. Thus, for territorial claims the general arbitration treaty of 1897 (perfected as such on the part of Great Britain, but killed in the United States Senate) provided a tribunal of six arbitrators, three of whom should be chosen by each party, and whose award should be final only when made by not less than five arbitrators. The same general idea governed in the case of the Alaska boundary, though the final award might be by four out of the six. A more important difference, however, is that in the case of the Alaska boundary the arbitrators were to consist of 'impartial jurists of repute,' whereas by the 1897 treaty they were to be taken from the judges of the highest courts of the respective countries. That such a tribunal should be made the interpreter of the Hay-Pauncefote treaty if arbitration of its terms becomes necessary and would be greatly preferable to a tribunal constituted as in the Alaska boundary controversy is unquestionable. It would be superior in dignity, in impartiality, and in general competency. It would be infinitely more likely to be regarded as beyond the reach of any but the most correct motives and influences, and the results would be infinitely more likely to command the cheerful acquiescence of both countries."

GEORGIA REFORMATORY.

Mr. CRISP. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to print in the RECORD a letter from Miss Lathrop, Chief Children's Bureau, relative to the imprisonment of Ollie Taylor in the Georgia Reformatory for stealing a bottle of coca cola. There has been so much publicity in the papers about the matter that in justice to the Georgia prison reformatory I ask to have this letter printed in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Georgia asks unanimous consent to print in the RECORD a letter from Miss Lathrop touching the case of Ollie Taylor for stealing a bottle of coca cola. [Laughter.] Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

The letter is as follows:

MAY 1, 1913.

MY DEAR SIR: I have just returned from Atlanta, Ga., where I went to attend the Southern Sociological Congress. While there I made personal inquiry into the case of Ollie Taylor, of whom you wrote me. The bureau has also had considerable correspondence with the Georgia authorities. I believe the following to be a fair statement of the facts:

Georgia has a juvenile court law, applicable, however, only in counties so electing. Fulton County, in which Atlanta is situated, has adopted this law and deals with children under it. Unfortunately the procedure and phraseology of the juvenile court follow closely those of the criminal court, and the use of this phraseology is apparently the cause of the wide misunderstanding of the case, although the actual provisions of the law are in line with most juvenile court laws, and section 885 especially states—

"This article (law) shall be liberally construed, to the end that the care, custody, and discipline of the children before the court shall approximate as nearly as possible that which they should receive from their parents and that, as far as practicable, they shall be treated not as criminals but as children in need of aid, encouragement, and guidance. Proceedings against children under this article shall not be deemed to be criminal proceedings, except where the child is committed to trial according to law."

The State of Georgia has a reformatory to which children from other counties are sent, but Fulton County maintains an institution of its own for boys, popularly known as the Fulton County Industrial Farm. It is not a penal institution, the superintendent reports to the State board of education. This farm is about 8 miles from Atlanta and consists of about 150 acres. There are now in the institution about 100 boys, who are in school half the day and at work in various farm occupations the other half of the day. The average length of stay at the farm is stated as about two years.

An agent visits the boys who are sent from the school and keeps the superintendent acquainted with their progress. If they are not doing well, they are brought back. The chief probation officer of the juvenile court, Mr. W. W. Tindall, states the history of Ollie Taylor as follows:

"Ollie was running the streets, idling and loitering, and stealing small edibles from groceries and wagons and hopping on and off moving trains. On his first appearance in court he was put on probation, and for a time he satisfied the probation officer, but on reappearance in court later, under new charges of running the streets and purloining articles indiscriminately, among which was a bottle of coca cola, he was committed to the industrial farm, since he had already been tried on probation, which had failed to reform him, and especially since his father complained that he could not do anything with his son."

While, according to the words of the statute, the child was sentenced, the actual fact seems to be that he was committed to the guardianship of the school during minority, as children are committed in the juvenile courts of other States to quasi-public industrial schools or to State schools for a period not longer than minority, to be placed out or discharged, at the discretion of the superintendent or trustees of the schools.

While in Atlanta, I visited this school and met the superintendent, who has been a professional teacher all his life. He seems to have the boys' interests sincerely at heart, and inquiry showed that he has the general confidence of the community. I saw the boys as they were marching out of the dining room on Sunday, dressed in their gray Sunday uniforms. The atmosphere of the place was that of a school. Some of the boys I spoke with, among them the child in question. He was a bright, cheerful-looking lad of about 13. All the information I gained personally in Atlanta, from my own observation, and from people with whom I spoke about the matter, convinced me that the boy is receiving proper care.

Very respectfully,

JULIA C. LATHROP,
Chief Children's Bureau.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION.

Mr. LAFFERTY. Mr. Speaker——

The SPEAKER. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

Mr. LAFFERTY. To ask unanimous consent to proceed for five minutes to answer an article appearing in the Evening Star of yesterday.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Oregon [Mr. LAFFERTY] asks unanimous consent to address the House for five minutes in regard to an article in some paper. Is there objection?

Mr. FOSTER. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, is this with reference to the matter that he has inserted in the RECORD, including the gentleman's biography——

Mr. LAFFERTY. It is.

Mr. FOSTER. And other matters, stating what wonderful things the gentleman has done in Congress?

Mr. LAFFERTY. They are somewhat remarkable, I will admit.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the gentleman having five minutes? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. LAFFERTY said:

Mr. SPEAKER: There appeared in the Evening Star of yesterday an article which would probably be a proper basis for a question of personal privilege, but I do not care to dignify it by asking to reply to it upon that ground. It is headed, "Lafferty ends speech with loud applause" and "loud applause" is quoted. "Representative from Oregon takes advantage of 'leave to print' section." Further along the article states:

The "loud applause" said to have followed this dictum is anonymous. The RECORD discloses naught of its origin.

Now, there has been a great deal said in the newspapers about Members of the House of Representatives inserting printed speeches in the RECORD that were never delivered, and sprinkling applause through those speeches and sending them out to an unsuspecting public. I say that any Member of Congress who would indulge in a deception and fraud of that kind ought to be retired by his constituents at the first opportunity. The speech in question was delivered by me on the floor of this House on last Saturday evening in the presence of nearly all of you whom I am now facing. I spoke for 25 minutes, and the full speech would have required about 30 minutes. At the conclusion of my remarks, the official stenographer inserted in the speech "Loud applause," in accordance with the facts, and instead of inserting it at the point where my time shut me off, which was a few paragraphs before the conclusion of the speech, he, and not I, inserted that "Loud applause" at the end of the manuscript speech which he had in his possession.

Now, then, I have had considerable experience with the Associated Press, of which Mr. Frank B. Noyes, one of the owners of the Evening Star, is president. I have defied that organization from the time I first announced myself as a candidate for a seat in this honorable body. I defy it now, and I shall continue to defy it so long as I am in public life. The Associated Press boasts that it has nearly 1,000 newspapers in the United States. I have no kind of respect for any Member of Congress who comes here to serve the people and is afraid to speak upon any subject that will not bring forth laudation from the Associated Press, and there are such in this House of Representatives. If you are going to represent your constituents, sooner or later you are bound to defy the Associated Press, the same as you are bound to defy special privilege in all of its forms, for the Associated Press is controlled by special privilege.

I have introduced a bill, which was mentioned in this article, and to which my unsophisticated friend from Illinois [Mr. FOSTER] has referred in a deprecatory manner. That bill, to control the Associated Press, appeared in this speech as an appendix, and there is certain correspondence had with Mr. Frank B. Noyes in regard to that bill which I beg leave to insert as a part of my remarks.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Oregon [Mr. LAFFERTY] asks unanimous consent to insert as a part of his remarks the correspondence to which he refers.

Mr. FOSTER. I object. I think we have had enough of this.

THE TARIFF.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the bill H. R. 3321—the tariff bill.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the bill (H. R. 3321) to reduce tariff duties and to provide revenue for the Government, and for other purposes, with Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee in the chair.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

223. Figs, 2 cents per pound; plums, prunes, and prunelles, 1 cent per pound; raisins and other dried grapes, 2 cents per pound; dates, 1 cent per pound; currants, Zante or other, 2 cents per pound; olives, 15 cents per gallon.

Mr. J. R. KNOWLAND. Mr. Chairman, I desire to offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from California [Mr. KNOWLAND] offers an amendment which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend, page 56, line 1, by striking out the figure "2" and inserting the figures "2½."

Mr. J. R. KNOWLAND. Mr. Chairman, the amendment which I have offered restores the present rate on figs. Until very recent years the Smyrna fig has had a monopoly not only in the United States, but throughout the world, and it has only been through the persistence and the nerve of Californians that there is to-day a real competitor of the Smyrna fig. California has for many years raised figs, but these figs did not compete with the imported Smyrna fig. Since 1882 private parties in California have been expending large sums of money for the purpose of introducing a fig in California that would be a real competitor of the foreign fig. Not until the year 1900, when a certain insect called the Blastophaga grossorum, without which the Smyrna fig can not be successfully produced, was introduced into California, have we produced a fig that is a real competitor of the imported article. Since the House increased the duty one-half cent in the last tariff bill the industry has received an impetus and the acreage set out to fig trees in California has practically doubled. An increased production of this fig will cause the price of the imported product to be reduced throughout the entire country.

In framing this "scientific" tariff revision bill there appears to have been a studied effort to overlook no section or industry of California, and throughout the 58 counties of California there will not be a man, woman, or child who will fail to have brought to his or her attention the full significance of a Democratic attempt to tinker with the tariff.

I realize that probably these remarks will have no effect whatever upon the Members upon the other side of the House, but I want to say that so far as those citizens of my State are concerned who have expended thousands of dollars in placing this industry upon a paying basis, those who have in the last two or three years doubled their fig acreage—and I want to call attention to the fact that it takes six years for a fig tree to become a producer—to these people this item of half a cent is a matter of great importance.

In the northern part of the State of California you have struck at the lumber industry and the wool industry. You have reduced the duty upon citrus fruits. You have also reduced the duty on beans, and you have reduced the duty on olives, and upon olive oil, and you have reduced the duty upon sugar, to the injury of the 13 beet-sugar factories, employing over 25,000 men. In three years sugar will be free, and when you have destroyed the only competitors of the Sugar Trust by closing these beet-sugar factories, the price of sugar will be no lower and an American industry will have been destroyed.

This bill is calamitous, so far as the State of California is concerned, and I am glad at this time to go on record by offering this amendment, although I know it will have no effect upon the other side of the House. [Applause on the Republican side.]

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the gentleman from California [Mr. J. R. KNOWLAND].

The question was taken, and the amendment was rejected.

Mr. J. R. KNOWLAND. Mr. Chairman, I offer another amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from California offers an amendment which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend, page 56, line 3, by striking out the figure "2" and inserting the figures "2½."

Mr. J. R. KNOWLAND. Mr. Chairman, this amendment restores the present duty of 2½ cents per pound upon raisins. Heretofore there has always been a slight differential in favor of raisins as against the Zante currant. The Zante currant is really a seedless raisin, and the one-half cent a pound which this bill removes has been of great benefit to the raisin growers of California. If you vote down this amendment, you make the duty upon Zante currants the same as it is upon raisins, to the disadvantage of the California grower, for Zante currants compete with seedless raisins. The Zante currant is a foreign product.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the gentleman from California [Mr. J. R. KNOWLAND].

The question was taken, and the amendment was rejected.

Mr. J. R. KNOWLAND. Mr. Chairman, I offer another amendment.

Mr. HAYES rose.

Mr. J. R. KNOWLAND. Oh, my colleague will excuse me. I did not know he was present. I yield to my colleague, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. HAYES. Mr. Chairman, I move to amend by striking out the figures "15," in line 4, and inserting in lieu thereof "25."

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from California [Mr. HAYES] offers an amendment which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend, line 4, page 56, by striking out the figures "15" and inserting "25."

Mr. HAYES. Mr. Chairman, the purpose of this amendment is simply to restore the present duty on olives.

We raise in California about 4,000 tons of olives fit for pickling. As I said in regard to the olive-oil industry, if the present duty could be continued, in time to come, not very far distant, we can produce practically all the olives that are consumed in this country, whether pickled green or ripe.

Mr. PAYNE. Does the gentleman intend to restore the present duty?

Mr. HAYES. Yes.

Mr. PAYNE. Then you do not quite do it. In the present law olives, in bottles, jars, kegs, tins, and other packages containing less than 5 gallons each, have a duty of 25 cents a gallon; otherwise, 15 cents a gallon. I think the gentleman ought to put that in; otherwise I could not vote for it.

Mr. HAYES. Very well. I will ask that that be included to restore the present law. I have the language right here.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from California [Mr. HAYES] asks unanimous consent to modify his amendment. The Clerk will report the modified amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend, page 56, line 4, by striking out the words "olives, 15 cents per gallon," and inserting in lieu thereof "olives, in bottles, jars, kegs, tins, or other packages containing less than 5 gallons each, 25 cents per gallon; otherwise, 15 cents per gallon."

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the modification?

There was no objection.

Mr. HAYES. Mr. Chairman, I do not desire to make any extended speech. I only desire to say that in this industry to-day, under the present law, there are no excessive profits; but it is a business that can be carried on by people who live in the foothills, where they have cheap lands, and it is very desirable, from our standpoint in California, that it should be encouraged and allowed to develop, as it will under the present tariff conditions. Much lowering of the duty will destroy it.

Mr. RAINEY. May I ask the gentleman how many tons of olives are produced to an acre?

Mr. HAYES. About one and a quarter tons of olives per acre.

Mr. RAINEY. The brief filed here by Mr. L. J. Hough, of Los Angeles, Cal., shows that the average profits per ton of pickling olives is $39.20; and if they produce a ton and a quarter to the acre——

Mr. HAYES. They are not all pickling olives. Only 25 to 30 per cent of the crop are pickling olives. The rest have to go to the oil press. The pickling olives are only the larger and finer grades, and the poorer ones, those that have any blemishes or that are smaller, have to go to the oil press, so that the figures stated by the gentleman do not represent the profit per acre, nor anything like it.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment proposed by the gentleman from California [Mr. HAYES].

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. WILLIS. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Ohio offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend, page 56, lines 3 and 4, by striking out "Currants, Zante or other, 2 cents per pound" and insert in lieu thereof the following:
"Currants, Zante or other, shall be admitted free of duty."

Mr. WILLIS. Mr. Chairman, I introduced various amendments in the discussion of the bill yesterday, but unfortunately a number of them did not meet with the approval of gentlemen on that side of the House. I have now introduced an amendment which I feel confident (?) will receive the support of every gentleman on that side of the House, and I believe when I have explained it it will also receive the support of every Member on this side of the House. As I am informed, this is a product that is not raised in this country at all. The Zante currant can be raised and is raised only in Greece, particularly in the Peloponnesus. This is shown by the statement made by United States Consul A. B. Cooke:

[From the Daily Consular and Trade Reports.]

GREEK CURRANT CULTURE AND CROP.

Greece has practically a world monopoly in the cultivation of currants. Efforts have been made to grow the currant in other countries, but thus far without appreciable success. The Greek currant belongs to the grape family, being a sort of small, seedless, and very sweet grape, growing upon a vine like the ordinary grape. Its cultivation is confined to the Peloponnesus and the lower Ionian Isles and constitutes the chief agricultural industry of those sections.

This duty does not to any degree protect any American industry. It is a tariff that is levied, as I suppose, solely for revenue. I note from the tables that are furnished by the committee that last year some 33,000,000 pounds of Zante currants were imported into this country at a value of $1,500,000, the average price per pound being about 4.7 cents. The duty under this proposed law is 2 cents per pound. It is estimated by those who have prepared this table that the price of these currants will continue to rise; that the price next year will be 5 cents per pound; and the proposed duty is therefore about 40 per cent.

Now, Mr. Chairman, here is the bald proposition: These Zante currants are not luxuries. They are necessities for the food of the common people. I am speaking for the great host of pie eaters and plum-pudding eaters and for 400,000 workingmen throughout the United States, to whom these currants are a valuable, nutritious, and wholesome article of food. You can not make a good mince pie or a good plum pudding without Zante currants, and in the face of the declaration of gentlemen on that side that they are going to cheapen the poor man's food this bill proposes, ruthlessly and without the slightest excuse, to levy a tax upon the buns and mince pies and plum puddings of this country of $661,000 per year.

Mr. MANN. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. WILLIS. I yield.

Mr. MANN. If the gentleman's amendment should give a little better opportunity for that side of the House to get close to the pie counter, does he think there would be any trouble in having it adopted? [Laughter.]

Mr. WILLIS. I think there would be no difficulty at all. If gentlemen on that side could be assured that they and their constituents could get up close to the pie counter at once, they would all vote for this amendment; but I think they are going to vote for it anyhow. They will have to vote for it, because it is in line with the declaration that has been made here 50 times during this debate, that the purpose of this legislation is to cheapen the poor man's food. And I invite attention to the fact that the Zante currants are used not simply in plum puddings and mince pies. They are used in the poor man's bread and the poor man's cake. There are thousands of laborers in this country whose only approach to luxury is a few currants in their bread; and yet this Democratic majority, made up of this host of the friends (?) of the common people, pledged to see to it that the common people shall have free bread and free meat, are proposing here to say that they will levy on the food of the poor man a tax of $661,000 per year. I want my friends on this side of the House to understand that this duty of 2 cents per pound can not possibly be of any advantage to any American industry, since we have tried to raise Zante currants in this country and failed ignominiously. An attempt was made to raise these currants in California, but it was found that the nature of the vine changed in that climate so that the seedless Zante currants could not be produced.

Mr. CAMPBELL. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WILLIS. Yes.

Mr. CAMPBELL. If I thought these currants were the same they used to make pies of for the harvest hands in Kansas, I would be against the amendment. [Laughter.]

Mr. HAYES. The same kind.

Mr. CAMPBELL. Then I am against them.

Mr. WILLIS. I think these are not the same thing. These are the kind they undertook to raise in California and they were not the real thing. This is an amendment in the interest of the people. It reduces the price of food according to the Democratic doctrine; it takes the tax from the poor man's bread and the housewives' mince pies and plum puddings; it does not deprive any American laborer of employment or injure any American industry; and it ought to be adopted.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I move that all debate on the pending amendment and paragraph close in five minutes.

Mr. PAYNE. I want a minute.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I will yield the gentleman a minute.

Mr. PAYNE. I will wait until the gentleman from Alabama gets through.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I am rather surprised that my good friend from Ohio [Mr. WILLIS] should attempt to make a joke of the food of the poor people. He is always interesting and always says some good things, but I did not expect that he would treat the question of giving the poor people of this country free bread and free meat as a joke.

Of course, the committee has endeavored to reduce the taxes on the food products of the American people. As to how far that will be effective in reducing the price no man can prophesy at this time. In regard to some food products, such as sugar, I do not question for a moment that, if this bill becomes a law, there will be a very great reduction in the price. As to the other food products, the probabilities are that it may be infinitesimal.

But here is the difference between currants that are raised only abroad and sugar that is a competitive product. These currants of course are highly competitive. They all, or practically all, come from abroad, and every cent of tax that falls on them goes into the Treasury of the United States to support the Government of the people. But when you come to the tax on sugar—if I recollect right, I saw the gentleman from Ohio the other day walk between the tellers voting against making this reduction on the people's sugar; he is trying to take a revenue tax off of currants, every dollar of which goes into the Treasury of the United States to support the Government of the people, for, as I stated, he walked between the tellers and voted for a tax on sugar that levies $115,000,000 burden on the consuming masses of the American people when only $50,000,000 of it goes into the Treasury of the United States to support the Government, and the other $65,000,000 goes into the pockets of the special interests. [Applause on the Democratic side.] That is the position the gentleman from Ohio takes in levying these taxes.

Now, you would imagine from what the gentleman from Ohio said, that we had resurrected this tax from nowhere and put it as a burden on these people. There has been a tax on these Zante currants almost from the beginning. Under the Wilson bill there was a tax of 1¼ cents a pound, and the ad valorem equivalent at that time equaled 89 per cent. Under the Dingley bill there was a tax of 2 cents per pound, and the ad valorem equivalent equaled 79 per cent. When the Payne bill became a law 2 cents was retained on the Zante currants, with an ad valorem equivalent of 56 per cent. In 1912 the ad valorem equivalent dropped to 42 per cent, and this bill still retains the same 2 cents tax on Zante currants. It will produce a revenue of over $600,000 for the Government and, as I say to the gentleman from Ohio, every dollar of that tax goes to the Government and the special interests get none.

Mr. WILLIS. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Certainly.

Mr. WILLIS. Under the gentleman's theory, would he be in favor of a tax on tea and coffee? I am opposed to such a tax.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I will say to the gentleman that there is a broad prejudice against taxing tea and coffee.

Mr. WILLIS. And currants.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. But there is more justice in taxing tea and coffee, every dollar of which tax would go into the Federal Treasury, than there is in taxing sugar in the interest of special interests whose hands have never been too clean in the the city of Washington. [Applause on the Democratic side.] I now yield the balance of my time to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Chairman, how much time have I?

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman has one minute.

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Chairman, I can not say all I want to say in that time. I am surprised at the gentleman from Ohio. He has not delved into the question as he usually does. These Zante currants are nothing more than raisins, and not very good raisins at that. They take the place of raisins.

The 2 cents a pound is a protective duty on them. Of course, the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] has copied our duty in this bill on Zante currants, as he has copied a good many other things in the present tariff law, and he would have done a good deal better if he had copied more. It is a protection on raisins. He need not have put any duty on raisins. If he had not it would not be proper to put it on Zante currants, but if it is proper to put it on raisins, it is proper to put it on Zante currants, purely as a matter of protection, although this is a food product. Currants are a food substitute for raisins in pies and cakes and things of that kind. I have eaten them both. I commend the gentleman from Alabama for keeping this duty on in order that we may produce raisins here, and with the competition make them cheaper in the markets, as they already are and have been for a number of years. The duty is all right and I shall vote against the amendment. [Laughter.]

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Ohio.

The question was taken, and the amendment was rejected.

The Clerk read as follows:

225. Lemons, limes, oranges, grapefruit, shaddocks, and pomelos in packages of a capacity of 1¼ cubic feet or less, 18 cents per package; in packages of capacity exceeding 1¼ cubic feet and not exceeding 2½ cubic feet, 35 cents per package; in packages exceeding 2½ and not exceeding 5 cubic feet, 70 cents per package; in packages exceeding 5 cubic feet or in bulk, one-half of 1 cent per pound.

Mr. BELL of California. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment which I send to the desk and ask to have read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 56, in line 7, strike out all of paragraph 225 and substitute the following:

"Lemons, 1¼ cents per pound; oranges, limes, grapefruit, shaddocks, and pomelos, 1 cent per pound."

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that debate on this paragraph close in 10 minutes.

Mr. HAYES. Mr. Chairman, I would like two or three minutes.

Mr. STEPHENS of California. I desire to be heard, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I will ask that debate on this paragraph and all amendments thereto close in 15 minutes, each gentleman to be recognized for 3 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Alabama asks unanimous consent that debate on this paragraph and all amendments thereto shall close in 15 minutes and that the recognition be for 3 minutes to each gentleman. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. BELL of California. Mr. Chairman, I offer this amendment in good faith, to replace the duties where they now are and to remedy an injustice that is being done an industry that has already suffered through the ravages of the frost. I also offer it to call the attention of the Committee on Ways and Means to several items in this proposed paragraph. You have changed from the pound basis to the box basis, and I suppose the reason for this, Mr. Chairman, is to simplify the method of handling the imports by the customhouse by eliminating the necessity of refunds for decay. But the present plan will increase the cost to the Government, because the decay will have to be determined by counting each rotten fruit, rather than eliminating and weighing the decayed fruit as a whole. It has been held by the Board of Appraisers that there should be no allowance for decay where the duty has been levied on the capacity of the packages rather than the contents. This was Treasury decision 32108, but this decision was recently reversed by the United States Court of Customs Appeals, Treasury decision 32570, which holds that decayed fruit is subject to rebates whether the duty is levied on contents or capacity basis. So that this present plan will increase the cost to the Government.

Mr. Chairman, I take it that it was the intention of this committee to fix the duty on citrus fruits at one-half cent per pound, and the committee has done this in connection with the fruit in bulk and in packages exceeding 5 cubic feet. On all other packages it has fixed a duty considerably below one-half of 1 cent per pound by an apparent error in fixing the maximum size of the packages. It provides that in packages of capacity exceeding 1¼ cubic feet and not exceeding 2½ cubic feet there shall be a duty of 35 cents per package. A cubic foot of lemons weighs, on the average, 36¼ pounds, and the rate of 35 cents established is 10 cents below what the committee should have fixed on this package. The importer at present uses a package of 2 cubic feet, but with this maximum of 2½ cubic feet he will immediately enlarge the package and thus take advantage of the provision in this paragraph and save for himself the duty of 10 cents on each such package, thereby escaping the payment of duty on 18 pounds of fruit on each package.

There has been much talk on this floor about the eastern consumer paying the cost of transportation on lemons from California. I want to say to you, Mr. Chairman, that the present duty was never intended to equalize the freight rate. It equalizes the difference in the labor and materials entering into a box of American and foreign lemons and nothing more. The foreigners add to the producing cost a complicated series of brokers' and speculators' profits and the growers' profits as well, and compare that with our cost of production; but no tariff duty should ever attempt to protect a group of foreign profits, because the foreign industry can simplify its method whenever business necessities require.

What the Democratic Party denies to American industry it should as scrupulously deny to a foreign industry.

This Congress is asked to reduce the revenues of the Government a million and a quarter dollars annually and to turn that sum over to the small coterie of importers who control the supplies that enter the American ports. It is a stake worth playing for, and is done under the subtle guise of reducing the cost of living. I would not have the assurance to make these remarks if the history of the retail lemon business in Toronto, Montreal, Halifax, and St. John, where foreign lemons, duty free, are used exclusively, did not prove that the retailer there charges the consumer the identical price, or even more, than the consumer pays in the United States.

The low duty on citrus fruits established in this bill violates every principle of tariff making. It makes a rate lower than a competitive rate, it takes no account of the difference in the cost of production, and it reduces the revenue that the Government has collected more than a million and a quarter dollars annually. It will turn the lemon supplies of the eastern consumer into the hands of a few importers, and in the absence of a healthy domestic competition the eastern consumer, like the consumer in Canada, will pay the price of a monopolistic control of the lemon supply.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. STEPHENS of California. Mr. Chairman, I desire to offer another amendment after this amendment has been disposed of.

Mr. HAYES. That is what I desire to do.

The CHAIRMAN. Then the question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from California [Mr. BELL].

Mr. MURDOCK. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry. This does not exhaust debate?

The CHAIRMAN. Not at all.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. This merely disposes of the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. There are 12 minutes of debate remaining. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from California [Mr. BELL].

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. STEPHENS of California. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Strike out paragraph 225, page 56, and insert in lieu thereof: "Lemons, 1 cent per pound; oranges, limes, grapefruit, shaddocks, and pomelos, three-fourths of 1 cent per pound."

Mr. STEPHENS of California. Mr. Chairman, the lemon growers of California believe that they are entitled to a duty of 1½ cents per pound on lemons, and that it will be for the best interests of the American people to have a duty of 1½ cents per pound on lemons. However, this Congress has determined on a reduction.

I came to this Congress and to the previous one believing that many schedules should be reduced, but I can not stand here now, and I have not been willing at any time to stand here, and vote for a reduction in other schedules and not be willing to make a similar reduction in schedules affecting my own district and State. Therefore I offer this amendment in good faith.

Mr. Chairman, nobody to-day really knows what reductions should be made, unless it is upon the wool schedule and the cotton schedule, which have had the benefit of a tariff-board report. I would be perfectly willing, and I think the various industries in California would be quite willing, to take any reduction recommended after deliberation upon a report from an expert, nonpartisan tariff commission. I would vote for whatever the result of that investigation proved would be best for the American people. [Applause.] I believe that 1 cent per pound will help the lemon industry far more than the one-half cent per pound allowed in this bill.

Our lemon growers believe that a reduction to one-half cent per pound will practically ruin the lemon industry. Lemon groves have increased in California near 150 per cent in the last 15 years. In 1903 California furnished about 25 per cent of the lemons consumed in the United States. To-day it supplies something like 60 per cent of the lemons used in the United States.

Los Angeles County alone, which I have the honor in part to represent, has enough land not now planted to fruit trees which is adapted to and available for the raising of lemons to supply the 40 per cent now imported. In the balance of the State 80,000 acres are also fitted and available therefor.

California would like to supply the whole of the United States with lemons. It believes it can do so at prices that will average less than if supplied from abroad.

All I ask is a fair protection for this or any other California industry. It is all that I have ever asked at any time. I am ready to reduce any schedule that should be reduced, even our own. I do not ask for California industries a ratio of protection beyond that which I am willing to vote to industries elsewhere. [Applause.]

Mr. RAINEY. Mr. Chairman——

Mr. HAYES. Mr. Chairman——

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. HAYES. I ask for information, will that cut me out?

The CHAIRMAN. It will not.

Mr. RAINEY. Mr. Chairman, I am glad to hear the frank admission from my friend from California that the lemon industry in California has been receiving more protection than it really needed. I know of no industry in the country that has so completely demonstrated at the present time its ability to get along absolutely without tariff protection as the lemon industry of California. Out there 6,500 lemon growers have formed a combination, but in some mysterious way they escape the operation of the antitrust laws. There are a few lemon growers who are not in the association, but not many. These 6,500 lemon growers have organized themselves into 115 primary associations, and those 115 primary or original associations have organized themselves into 17 associations, and these 17 associations have perfected the Lemon Trust of the country, which is known as the California Fruit Growers' Association, and there is nothing like it anywhere in the world. Why, they have a box rate on lemons from San Francisco to New York of 84 cents per box, and they can not land lemons in New York from Sicily for less than that amount; and after the Sicilian lemons get here they pay the tariff before they get on the market. The California Fruit Growers' Association have the right to divert a car of lemons whenever they want to do it, and on account of the perfect organization they have formed, if lemon growers in different sections of California start two carloads of lemons for the same point somewhere in the Middle West or in the East, before those lemons reached that point this splendidly organized association always finds it out and they divert one of those cars of lemons, so there never is and never can be in any territory reached by California lemons the slightest competition between lemons grown in California, and, at present, on account of the perfect organization they have, California lemons are being sold cheaper in New York City than they are being sold in Denver.

They ship lemons from California to Canada and pay the tariff charged by Canada, and then compete there—and compete successfully—with lemons from Sicily. The lemons grown in Sicily and in California are really two different propositions. The California lemons are larger. They are a better looking fruit. The Sicilian lemons are much smaller, but they contain more acidity. There is only one place on this continent where there is any competition in lemons at the present time, and that is in New York City and adjacent sections, and perhaps other large eastern cities. It is only along the Atlantic seaboard that competition is possible between the California lemon and the Sicilian lemon. We have given them the rate they ought to have in this bill.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from California [Mr. STEPHENS].

The question was taken, and the amendment was rejected.

Mr. HAYES. Mr. Chairman, I desire to offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from California [Mr. HAYES] offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend, in line 7, page 56, by inserting after the word "lemon" the words "1½ cents per pound."

Mr. HAYES. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. RAINEY] is something like Josh Billings's goose. He would be better off if he did not know so many things that are not true. [Laughter.] Most of what the gentleman has stated in regard to marketing the California lemons is not true.

Mr. RAINEY. It is all based upon the testimony we took in the Ways and Means Committee.

Mr. HAYES. The gentleman has misinterpreted it entirely.

Mr. RAINEY. No; I have not.

Mr. HAYES. This lemon growers' association of which he speaks has no authority to fix the price of lemons. They handle only 75 per cent of the lemons grown in California, and a large proportion of this 75 per cent is sold at public auction in this country in open competition with the world. That is the truth. And if they bring less in New York than they do in Denver it is because in New York they have to encounter more competition from the Italian or the Sicilian lemon than they do in Denver. That is all. That is what makes the price. There is no trust. It is an association of lemon growers, formed for the sole purpose of marketing their product to the best possible advantage. They often do divert, if there is liable to be a great dumping of a surplus in one market, a car of lemons that may be consigned to that place, to a place where there will be no surplus. And I commend that sort of thing to all the agriculturists of the country. We would be in a very different situation agriculturally to-day if the growers of agricultural products would follow the example of the lemon growers of California.

Now, Mr. Chairman, this is an infant industry in this country in the true sense of those words. Fifteen years ago lemon growing was not known in this country as a large commercial proposition, and to-day we do not grow more than one-half of the product that is consumed in this country. But we have land that is adapted to growing sufficient lemons to supply all of this country and the whole of the Western Hemisphere.

Mr. AUSTIN. May I ask the gentleman a question?

Mr. HAYES. Certainly.

Mr. AUSTIN. Do you not understand that the purpose is for the Democratic Party to give the American voters a free lemon?

Mr. HAYES. As I understand it, the purpose of this provision is to get the Italian vote on the Atlantic seaboard. That is the purpose, and that is all the purpose, there is no doubt. It will not bring a cheaper lemon to the consumer, and nobody knows it better than the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. RAINEY] and the gentleman from New York [Mr. HARRISON].

Mr. AUSTIN. The Italian board of trade in New York City requested this?

Mr. HAYES. They sent agents here to appear before the committee and demanded it.

Mr. RAINEY. Mr. Chairman——

The CHAIRMAN. Will the gentleman from California [Mr. HAYES] yield to the gentleman from Illinois?

Mr. HAYES. I can not yield.

Now, Mr. Chairman, this is along the same lines as nearly all of the provisions that affect the agricultural schedule. They are intended to catch the voters. That is what they are for, and there is no scientific or business reason why most of them should be incorporated into our tariff laws.

Mr. FORDNEY. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. RAINEY] has made an appeal to the Members of this House for lower priced lemons for the people of this country.

The gentleman has stated how many men were engaged in the raising of lemons in California. If he had been a member of the Committee on Ways and Means in 1908 he would have heard an abundance of evidence to the effect that 1 cent per pound was not sufficient protection to protect the lemon orchards of California. He would have heard that lemon orchards were fast being grafted to oranges, it not being profitable to raise lemons. Thousands of trees have been grafted, thus discontinuing to that extent the raising of lemons in California. The gentleman ought to have stated to the Members of this House that Italy and Sicily now supply the whole world, outside of the United States, with lemons, and that from one-half to two-thirds of all the lemons consumed in the United States come from Sicily and Italy.

The gentlemen who appeared before the committee in January favoring a lower rate of duty on lemons denounced the lemon growers of California for the employment of alien labor, foreign labor—Japanese, Chinese, Mexicans, Hindus, and all that sort of people—and assailed those engaged in the sugar industry of California for employing foreigners, stating that they had no other farm labor.

I want to read a statement from a paper published at Yonkers, N. Y.—the Yonkers Statesman—on April 16, 1913. There is a strike on in the establishment of the Federal Sugar Refining Co., where the very men who testified before our committee and criticized California for employing foreigners figure. Here is what one of them says, going on to tell about the strike in the refinery of the Federal Sugar Refining Co., and about protection to be given nonunion labor. I read:

REFINERY OPERATING TO-DAY.

The Federal Sugar Refinery is operating to-day with a force of about 150 men. They are refining the raw sugar that was on hand in the factory when the strike started. Unless this were done the cane sugar would spoil. It is the plan to close down completely when this work is finished, unless there are enough nonunion men to run the plant.

The men working are all nonunion men. A few of them are new employees, who have come in since the strike started. Others were employed as machinists, oilers, helpers, cleaners, and in various other capacities.

Following yesterday's clash between the police and the strikers at the entrance to the refinery, the company has supplemented the guard of policemen with between 60 and 70 special officers, whom it is employing.

Mr. Spreckels said this morning that protection would be afforded to the men at work, even if the Regular Army has to be called out.

"We rely on the city authorities for protection," he said, "and they seem to have the situation well in hand. If the police and special officers are not sufficient to protect the plant and the men who want to work, we have the sheriff of the county to fall back on, and next the militia and the Regular Army. Being citizens of this country, we have this right to protection. I doubt if 10 of the foreigners in the union at the refinery are citizens of this country, and if they riot or incite to riot I think steps can be taken to have them deported."

You will notice this:

Mr. Spreckels said this morning that protection would be afforded to the men at work, even if the Regular Army has to be called out.

Then he adds:

Being citizens of this country, we have the right to protection. I doubt if 10 of the foreigners in the union at the refinery are citizens of this country, and if they riot or incite a riot I think steps can be taken to have them deported.

He says not 10 of the foreigners of that union employed at the refinery are American citizens—employed by Mr. Spreckels and Mr. Lowry, upon whose testimony largely you have made up the sugar free-list bill and imposed a lower rate of duty on lemons, criticizing the Californians for employing foreigners. Now comes the truth of it right in his own factory, where men are now on a strike, not 10 of whom are citizens of the United States. Oh, that is a grand appeal. That is a grand man's statement to listen to in the fixing of rates of duty. [Applause on the Republican side.]

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the gentleman from California [Mr. HAYES].

The question was taken, and the amendment was rejected.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

226. Orange peel or lemon peel, preserved, candied, or dried, 1 cent per pound; coconut ment or copra, desiccated, shredded, cut, or similarly prepared, and citron or citron peel, preserved, candied, or dried, 2 cents per pound.

Mr. MURDOCK. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Kansas [Mr. MURDOCK] moves to strike out the last word.

Mr. MURDOCK. Mr. Chairman, at this moment the mail of Members on both sides of the Chamber is heavy with letters from men who are making suggestions as to amendments to this bill, and in actual practice every Member when so written makes invariably the same reply at this stage of the measure. The Member writes his constituents and says that the bill is now closed against possible amendment.

This omnibus tariff bill is closed against possible amendment. This bill has been closed to amendment since it left the Ways and Means Committee. It was not changed much in the Democratic caucus. It was closed there, and it has not been materially changed at all here. It is closed here.

The scene we see here is to us quite different from what it must appear to the people out over the country. The people of the United States believe that here is raging a closely fought battle over the tariff. There is a battle here, but it is a sham battle. Every amendment which is offered from any place, save one place here, is promptly voted down. If an amendment comes from the little table in front, where sits the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD], no matter what it is, no matter how trivial or how grave it may threaten to be in its results, it is always voted up. If it comes from any other place, it is voted down. If this debate accomplishes anything at all, it is to outline the policy or demonstrate the lack of policy on the part of the party in power.

Through the whole debate it has become more and more apparent that those in charge of the bill have levied inconsistently a duty with an idea of protection here and with an idea of revenue there. The debate has also revealed, I think, to every one—probably not to the partisan eye, but in reality—that the bill is full of inconsistencies; that in some instances those who have made up the bill have put a duty upon the raw material and left the finished product free, and in other cases they have put a duty on the finished product and left the raw material free. We saw one notable instance in the case of ferromanganese, a product which is absolutely controlled by the Steel Trust, which is part of the raw material entering into a finished product. We saw steel made free and a duty put upon the trust-controlled ferromanganese.

If the debate has served any purpose at all, then, under this five-minute rule, it has been in developing anew the fact that in the framing and presentation of an omnibus tariff bill men can not know what they are doing, and do not know what they are doing.

At the conclusion of this bill there will come an opportunity for the submission of a motion to recommit. In all likelihood I will be precluded from offering that motion to recommit, unless there shall be a special rule allowing two motions to recommit. For that reason and believing as I do that Congress will never successfully revise the tariff justly in the United States unless the revision is schedule by schedule, preceded by data adduced by a scientific nonpartisan tariff commission, I propose, if I am precluded from the motion to recommit, to offer as an amendment to the administrative features of this bill a proposition for the creation of a tariff commission. My proposal is for a real tariff commission, not a sham-efficient or make-believe one, a proposition which will permit a body to exercise power and authority to investigate with thoroughness all factors involved, that it may reach out and get the facts, a power that the late tariff board did not have, a power that I do not think other measures offered give to proposed commissions; and I will now, with the permission of the House, include in my remarks this provision for a tariff commission, which I will offer later as an amendment, so that it may be printed in the RECORD and that all the Members may have a view of it.

It is as follows:

"SECTION V. (a) That there is hereby created a body to be known as the tariff commission, which shall consist of five commissioners, who shall be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate. No person shall be eligible to serve as a member of said commission while holding any other public office of either honor or profit, either by election or appointment, or who is a Senator or Representative elect of the United States. Not more than three of said commissioners shall be members of the same political party. The commissioners first appointed under this act shall continue in office for the terms of 2, 4, 6, 8, and 10 years, respectively, and from the first day of July, A. D. 1913, the term of each to be designated by the President, but their successors shall be appointed for terms of 10 years, except that any person chosen to fill a vacancy shall be appointed only for the unexpired term of the member whom he shall succeed. Any commissioner may, after due hearing, be removed by the President upon proof of ineligibility or of any violation of any provision of this act, or for inefficiency, neglect of duty, or malfeasance in office. No vacancy in the commission shall impair the right of the remaining commissioners to exercise all the powers of the commission. Said commissioners shall not engage in any other business, vocation, or employment. Each commissioner shall receive a salary of $7,500 per year. The President shall designate a member of the commission to be chairman thereof during the term for which he is appointed. The commission shall appoint a secretary, who shall receive a salary of $5,000 per annum, and such other employees as it may find necessary to the proper performance of its duties and shall fix the salary or compensation of each. Three commissioners shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of business as a commission.

"(b) That the principal office of the commission shall be in the city of Washington, and the Secretary of the Treasury shall furnish the commission with suitable offices and equipment thereof and with all necessary supplies. The commission shall, in addition, have full authority as a body by one or more of its members or through its employees, when so authorized by the commission, to conduct investigations at any other place or places, either in the United States or foreign countries, as the commission may determine. Said commission shall promulgate rules and regulations for the safekeeping of all papers, correspondence, tabulations, reports, explanations, and other information gathered by it. All of the expenses of the commission, including all necessary expenses for transportation incurred by the commissioners or by their employees under their orders, in making any investigation in any place other than in the city of Washington, shall be allowed and paid on the presentation of itemized vouchers therefor approved by the chairman of the commission.

"(c) That the commission shall have authority and power, and it is hereby directed to ascertain and tabulate for purposes of comparison the difference in the cost of producing articles of the same or similar quality and kind in this country and in actually or potentially competing foreign countries. The commission shall ascertain and tabulate for purposes of comparison where such tabulation is practicable in connection with the several articles covered by its reports in the United States, and in such foreign countries the wages, hours of service, and efficiency of labor employed and the standards of living of such laborers. The commission shall likewise ascertain the cost and selling prices of raw material, the cost of labor, the fixed charges, the depreciation upon the true value of the capital invested, and all other items entering into and determining the true cost and selling price of the finished product. The commission shall ascertain the market conditions and the prices at which protected products of the United States are sold in foreign countries, as compared with the prices of such products sold in the United States. The commission shall investigate the effect of transportation rates upon the markets and prices of dutiable products, and so far as pertinent to the tariffs fixed upon articles on the dutiable list the control of such markets and absence or presence of free competition in the same, and shall, pursuant to the purposes of this act in so far as practicable, investigate all questions and conditions relating to the agricultural, manufacturing, mining, commercial, and labor interests with reference to the tariff schedules and classifications of the United States and of foreign countries, and shall investigate the capitalization, industrial organization and efficiency, and the general competitive position in this country and abroad of industries seeking protecton from Congress. The commission shall likewise investigate in general and in regard to particular articles the revenue-producing power of the tariff and its relation to the resources of government, and shall investigate the effect of tariffs both of the United States and of foreign countries on prices, on the operations of middle men, on the wages paid for labor, and on the purchasing power of the consumer. The commission shall also make investigation of any particular subject whenever directed by either House of Congress or the President of the United States. The commission shall have the power to call upon any of the existing departments or bureaus of the Government for information on file in such departments or bureaus which it may require in connection with the work which it is authorized to do by this act, and it shall be the duty of every such department or bureau of the Government to furnish such information on request from the commission. It shall be the duty of said commission to hold hearings from time to time at such places as it may designate to determine industrial, commercial, and labor conditions in relation to costs of production and effects and operations of the tariff schedules and classifications in force in the United States and in foreign countries. Such hearings shall be public, except as otherwise herein provided. The commission shall, whenever practicable, give at least 10 days' public notice of any and all such hearings, and at any such hearing any person may appear before said commission, subject to such reasonable limitation upon the amount of and duplication of testimony and arguments as may be provided by the rules of said commission, and be heard or may be represented by attorney and may file any written statement or documentary evidence bearing upon any matter which the commission may have under investigation. The commission may from time to time make or amend such general rules or orders as may be requisite for the orderly regulation of proceedings before it, including form of notices and the service thereof. Every vote and official act of the commission and of each member thereof shall be entered of record. Any of the members of the commission or its secretary shall have the power to administer oaths and affirmations and to sign notices.

"(d) That to assist the President in securing information as to the effect of tariff rates, restrictions, exactions, or any regulations imposed at any time by the United States or any foreign country upon the importation into or sale in the United States or any foreign country of the products affected, and as to any export bounty paid or export duty imposed or prohibition made by any country upon the exportation of any article to the United States which discriminates against the United States or the products thereof, and to assist the President in the application of the maximum and minimum tariffs and other administrative provisions of the customs laws and in obtaining information concerning the economic results of said laws, the commission shall from time to time make report as the President shall direct, and upon direction by the President shall draft a plan for scientific classification of schedules in aid of administration of the provisions of the customs laws.

"(e) That for the purposes of this act in the case of articles on the dutiable list, and such other articles as the commission may decide or may be directed to investigate, the said commission is authorized to require of any person, firm, copartnership, corporation, or association engaged in the production, importation, manufacture, or distribution of any such article or articles the production of all books, papers, contracts, agreements, invoices, inventories, bills, and documents of any such person, firm, copartnership, corporation, or association and make every inquiry necessary to a determination of the value of such property and necessary to accomplish the purposes for which said commission is created. In aid of its powers herein granted to secure information the commission shall have the power, whenever necessary for the purposes of its investigations, to prescribe and enforce uniform systems of accounting for protected industries, for manufacturers, and producers of commodities protected by import duties. The commission is authorized to require by notice the attendance and testimony of witnesses and the production of all books, papers, contracts, agreements, inventories, invoices, bills, and documents relating to any matters pertaining to such investigation. Such attendance of witnesses and the production of such documentary evidence may be required from any place in the United States at any designated place of hearing, and witnesses shall receive the same fees as are paid in the Federal courts.

"(f) That the district courts of the United States, upon the application of the commission alleging a failure to comply with any order of the commission with relation to the attendance and testimony of witnesses and the production of documentary evidence, shall have jurisdiction to issue the necessary process or writs for the enforcement of the orders of the commission, and in case of disobedience to a subpœna the commission or a member thereof may invoke the aid of any one of the district courts of the United States in requiring the attendance and testimony of witnesses and the production of books, papers, and documents within the jurisdiction of such court within which an investigation or inquiry by the commission is being carried on. In case of contumacy or refusal to obey a subpœna issued to any person or corporation subject to the provisions of this act, any of the district courts of the United States having jurisdiction as herein provided may issue an order requiring such person or corporation to appear before the commission and produce books, documents, and other papers if so ordered and give evidence concerning the matter under investigation by the commission, and any failure to obey such order of the court may be punished by such court as a contempt thereof. The commission may also order testimony to be taken by deposition in any investigation and at any stage of such investigation. Such deposition may be taken before any person authorized so to do by the commission and who has power to administer oaths. Any person may be compelled to appear and depose and produce documentary evidence in the same manner as witnesses may be compelled to appear and testify and produce documentary evidence before the commission as hereinbefore provided. Such testimony shall be reduced to writing. No person shall be excused from attending and testifying or from producing books, papers, documents, or other things before the commission or in obedience to the subpœna of the commission whether such subpœna be signed or issued by one or more of the commissioners or the secretary of the commission on the ground or for the reason that the testimony or evidence, documentary or otherwise, required of him may tend to criminate him or to subject him to a penalty or forfeiture. But no natural person shall be prosecuted or subjected to any penalty or forfeiture for or on account of any transaction, matter, or thing concerning which he may testify under oath or produce evidence, documentary or otherwise, before said commission in obedience to a subpœna issued by it: Provided, That no person so testifying shall be exempt from prosecution and punishment for perjury committed in so testifying.

"(g) In any investigation conducted by the commission as herein provided, the testimony of any witness in regard to secret processes or trade secrets not contrary to public policy shall not be reduced to writing, nor shall any documents of like character be copied into the records of investigations or otherwise made a part thereof, and for the purpose of obtaining such testimony or of examining such documents, and for such purposes alone, the commission shall have the power to hold secret sessions and take evidence thereat. All other testimony shall be reduced to writing and, with all other documentary evidence received, incorporated in the records of the commission for the guidance of the commission and for the use of the President and Congress as hereinafter provided: Provided, That no evidence or information secured for the confidential use of the commission shall be made public in such a manner as to be available for the use of any business competitor or rival of the firm, copartnership, corporation, or association from whom or concerning whom such evidence or information was obtained; And provided further, That in case in any investigation authorized by this act the commission shall obtain evidence or information for its confidential use, the commission shall not be required to divulge the names of persons furnishing such evidence or information.

"(h) The commission shall make annual reports to Congress of its investigations and conclusions and such special reports as the President or either House of Congress may direct. The annual reports shall be published and ready for distribution on the first Monday of December of each year. Upon demand of either the President or either House of Congress the commission shall make a report of all testimony and information upon which its reports are based."

Mr. HELVERING. Mr. Chairman, I was a little bit amused to hear the remarks of my colleague from Kansas [Mr. MURDOCK] on this particular point. This morning I picked up the Kansas City Star, which is a progressive paper of 300,000 circulation, circulating over four or five States in the central western country, circulating largely in the State of Kansas and in the district of my friend [Mr. MURDOCK], and a very strong supporter of that gentleman. All of us out in Kansas like VIC personally. He has good red corpuscles in his blood and good red hair on his head, and he is a good fellow; but it does not come with very good grace of him to make the remarks he has just made.

I want to read this editorial from the Kansas City Star, which has supported him on almost every proposition he has made. It reads thus:

THE PROGRESSIVES' CHANCE.

The Wilson administration is offering the country the only effective tariff revision in the interest of the whole people that it has had in 50 years.

[Applause on the Democratic side.]

It would be a tremendous pity if the Progressives in Congress should go on record in opposition to this measure.

Undoubtedly, the bill is not perfect. There are some evident inequities in it. But these are of minor importance in comparison with the big achievements in behalf of the consumer, who hitherto has been ignored in tariff legislation.

The removal of the sugar duties and the heavy reductions in clothing, in building material, in steel, in chemicals—in fact, all along the line—show the extent to which the administration has freed itself from the powerful interests that hitherto have controlled. For the first time since the war the general welfare has been considered.

True, the revising has been done with an ax rather than with finer tools. But the——

Mr. MURDOCK. "The excrescences" is what I make that out to be.

Mr. HELVERING. This paper was folded just at that place.

But the excrescences that have grown up needed the ax. The finer trimming can be done later under the supervision of a tariff commission.

To insist that the relief now offered be withheld pending the investigations of a commission would play directly into the hands of the standpatters, who always are for anything that would cause delay.

A commission ought to be established later to supervise the adjustments that will be required. But just now the work in hand is to establish the tariff on a new basis in the interest of the country as a whole.

The Progressives in Congress are not in a position to do anything by themselves. Their only chance is to help whichever party is acting on behalf of the people. If they become mere carpers and critics, they will seem to the country to be playing politics, with the final purpose of getting the jobs. By supporting Wilson at this time they will prove their unselfish devotion to the common good.

[Applause on the Democratic side.]

Mr. SELDOMRIDGE. Mr. Chairman, I have been greatly interested during the progress of this debate in listening to the universal statement which seems to have come from the other side that the industries of this country are in a state bordering almost upon paralysis. We have had depicted before us lines of men reaching to soup houses and the opening of bread wagons, and so forth, and my interest, Mr. Chairman, has been greatly aroused in the news from the financial centers of the country, when these statements which have been so generally made have reached these centers and have been circulated among the business men of the country. And so this morning I have collected here a few clippings from some of the papers which are of distinctly nonpartisan character; and certainly any opinions which bear on their face the evidence of nonpartisanship, about which we have heard so much during the progress of the debate, should commend itself to the judgment and consideration of this House.

The Review, issued by R. G. Dun Co., April 25, stated:

NEW YORK, April 25.

Dun's Review to-morrow will say:

"Notwithstanding the recent moderate reduction in trade and industrial activity, it is significant that confidence still prevails, and in the West and South a spirit of optimism is manifest as to the future—largely based upon the fine crop outlook for both cotton and wheat—which contrasts with the more conservative feeling that exists in eastern centers.

"The work of recovery from the effects of the midwestern floods is progressing, and this gives increasing relief to business. The tariff readjustment continues to inspire caution in the trade circles more immediately affected, but the end of uncertainty is meanwhile not far to see. Weather conditions are distinctly better, and this gives an impetus to building operations but also retail trade and real estate transfers.

"Money conditions are easier, both at home and abroad, and while there is some show of activity regarding the Balkan situation, international conditions, as a whole, are much less disturbing. Pig iron is somewhat more active but at lower prices. The iron and steel mills report business as fully up to normal. Textile lines show abatement in activity. Lumber is more active. Trade in anthracite coal is larger. Reports from the leading western and northwestern cities are very cheerful in tone, and the advent of more settled weather has resulted in larger retail activity."

An Associated Press dispatch says:

NEW YORK, April 26.

The past week has seen shrinkage in steel specifications. Some good business has been placed, however. Three thousand additional freight cars for the Grand Trunk and 1,000 steel underframe cars for the Seaboard were ordered. Some good bridge business is under consideration. Conditions in the steel trade, as a whole, are more normal. Premiums are disappearing. Steel men claim that when the tariff is settled a fresh impetus will be given to business.

The outlook for pig iron is better. There is more inquiry and prices are firmer.

Now, Mr. Chairman, we are not to judge by these reports that business improvement is altogether confined to the northwest and western districts of this country, but it has even reached the city of Philadelphia, which is probably the last city in the United States that would feel the impetus of business activity. [Laughter and applause on the Democratic side.]

The Franklin National Bank, of Philadelphia, in its monthly circular on business and trade conditions, says in part:

With business generally so active and money so well employed that none is available for the financing of new concerns or for stock exchange operations, there should be little room for complaint in manufacturing and mercantile lines. Prospective tariff reduction is holding back some lines, but the total volume of business is far above the average for this season. Some declines in imports and in manufactures will be apparent until the tariff bill has been disposed of. If the matter is properly handled by Congress, there need be no upsetting of business, and the effects of such tariff reductions as may be made will soon be dissipated in the increasing business which will naturally result.

Mr. Chairman, not only is this condition of business prosperity not confined to the eastern and the western part of the country, but we find it is general throughout the entire country. The Secretary of Commerce and Labor has just issued a statement in which he says:

The United States has been exporting merchandise at the rate of almost $7,000,000 a day so far this year, as shown by figures announced by the Department of Commerce yesterday. The imports have exceeded $5,000,000 a day. The statistics are for the first nine months of the fiscal year.

Great Britain has bought on an average $1,750,000 worth of goods every day, and Canada and Germany each have bought about $1,000,000 worth a day. The fourth best customer was France, whose purchases in the nine months were $120,786,314.

The total outgoing and incoming trade of the country this year, it is estimated, will reach $4,100,000,000. This would be an increase of 13.5 per cent over 1912.

"The figures," said Secretary Redfield, "for the entire nine months are such as to give just pride to every American. Out of total transactions of $3,300,000,000, there is a balance in our favor of a little over $500,000,000."

Now, Mr. Chairman, I wish these gentlemen on the other side would come out of the cave of Adullam in which they have been lingering for the past week, and see that the clouds of prosperity are all touched with a golden lining, and that the business people of the country have nothing to fear; that they are only impatient that you gentleman will limit the material that you are getting out for home consumption, which appears in the RECORD, and give the business interests of the country a chance to recuperate.

I read from the Philadelphia Inquirer of May 2, an organ entirely devoted to the interests of protection, that our distinguished friend on the other side, the gentleman from Philadelphia [Mr. MOORE] has had himself interviewed in this paper. It says:

OPPOSITION TO END.

To-night there were indications that Republican leaders would not undertake to delay the passage of the bill much longer. Representative MOORE, of Pennsylvania, who has been active in offering minority amendments, voiced this view. He said the Republicans would not attempt to filibuster, and that they had been "hammering away at the Underwood bill for four days without making a single dent in it."

The fact that many who claim their business is affected are asking the Republicans to hasten matters in order that they may "readjust their affairs" is said to be partly responsible for the minority attitude.

[Applause on the Democratic side.]

So it seems to me my friends on the other side are between the devil and the deep sea. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, it comes pretty near being between the devil and the deep sea to be between prosperity and the Democratic legislation. [Laughter on the Republican side.]

Mr. Chairman, a moment ago the distinguished gentleman from Kansas [Mr. MURDOCK] announced that he proposed, if opportunity presented itself, to offer an amendment providing for a tariff commission. I take it that the amendment that he has prepared is in substance the bill introduced by various gentlemen on this side of the House, the gentleman from New York [Mr. PAYNE], the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. LENROOT], and myself, and recommended by the Republican caucus. We welcome eleventh-hour converts to a tariff commission. [Applause on the Republican side.]

When in the last session of Congress the Republicans offered a motion to recommit the wool bill, directing the Committee on Ways and Means to bring in a reported bill in accordance with the Tariff Board report when made, the gentleman from Kansas voted against a bill to be founded on the Tariff Board report. When in the last Congress the Republicans offered a motion to recommit the metal-schedule bill to await the report of the Tariff Board, the gentleman from Kansas voted against the motion to recommit to await the Tariff Board report. At the same Congress the gentleman at the first session voted to pass the wool bill notwithstanding there had been no Tariff Board report. He voted to pass the sugar-schedule bill, although there had been no Tariff Board report. He voted to pass the so-called free-list bill without waiting for a Tariff Board report. At the second session of the Congress he voted to pass the wool bill without waiting for a Tariff Board report, and he voted to pass the metal bill without waiting for a Tariff Board report. He did not vote on the motion to recommit on the cotton schedule, or on the passage of the bill, probably because he was not here. He voted to pass these bills over the veto of the President, although the President vetoed the bills upon the ground that before bills were passed the tariff commission or the Tariff Board should ascertain the facts and lay them before the Congress. On no occasion when votes have been taken in the House has the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. MURDOCK] stood for a tariff board report or a tariff commission report until he has been commissioned by Col. Roosevelt to say that we ought to have a tariff commission. [Laughter.]

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the pro forma amendment will be withdrawn.

There was no objection.

The Clerk read as follows:

228, Almonds, not shelled, 3 cents per pound; clear almonds, shelled, 4 cents per pound; apricot and peach kernels, 3 cents per pound.

Mr. RAINEY. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following committee amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 56, line 22, strike out the word "clear."

The CHAIRMAN. The queston is on the amendment.

Mr. LENROOT. Mr. Chairman, I wish to call the attention of the Democratic side of the House to the fact that this is a committee amendment offered from their side. I do it for the reason that occasionally during consideration of this bill under the five-minute rule it has not always been understood upon the Democratic side that an amendment has been offered by their side. When the chemical schedule was under consideration I remember that the gentleman from New York [Mr. HARRISON] offered an amendment. A number of gentlemen upon that side of the aisle voted "no." I stepped across the aisle and suggested they were committing treason by voting against their committee. "Why," they said, "we thought that amendment was being offered from the Republican side." [Laughter.] So I simply rise to say that, of course, this amendment must receive the vote of every one of the gentlemen upon that side of the aisle because it is offered by the Democrats, although the same amendment, indentical in form, might be offered by the Republicans, and every one of them would vote against it. [Laughter.]

Mr. RAINEY. Mr. Chairman, in explanation of this amendment I might further add to what the gentleman has just stated that it ought to receive all the votes of the Republican side, but it probably will not receive any. The word "clear" was in the Payne bill, and we are striking it out because we are attempting to correct all of these absurdities in the Payne bill. No one has ever been able to determine, so far as the Treasury Department is concerned, what the word "clear" was put there for. Sometimes they have interpreted it to mean that the almonds must be free from dirt or something of that kind. If that is not it, they do not know what it is. All the experts on the tariff have been unable to determine why the word "clear" was put there in this particular clause. We are striking it out at the recommendation of the Treasury officials and because we find it ought not to be there. I suppose all the gentlemen on the Republican side will vote against it.

Mr. MANN. Oh, we have some sense. We vote for good amendments.

Mr. MOSS of West Virginia. Mr. Chairman, I do not think it was necessary for the gentleman who has just spoken to explain a very important amendment that was offered by him, because it would go through without that explanation. Mr. Chairman, it is absolutely impossible to frame a tariff bill or to frame any measure of any character unless there is some system connected with it. There is absolutely no system connected with the preparation of the tariff bill that this House has before it. They talk about experts, but surely no experts in all the world can lay before a Ways and Means Committee in three weeks all of the information about all of the products of the world. [Applause on the Republican side.] When it took the Government of Germany five years, with 200 experts, to frame a tariff bill, surely it ought to take our Democratic brethren at least two months to do the same thing. I heartily concur in what has been said by the Progressive leader and by the Republican leader with reference to a tariff commission. I heartily favor that; but we are to have no chance for that, because a secret Democratic caucus has decreed against it. I say that this bill that is offered to the American people is a hodgepodge of inconsistencies, just the same as was the Wilson-Gorman bill, because it was framed in the same way.

And the Wilson-Gorman bill, passed by a Democratic Congress, is the law that the only Democratic President that we have had for 40 years pronounced to be a perfidy and a disgrace.

Mr. HARDY. Will the gentleman yield for a short question?

Mr. MOSS of West Virginia. I have not the time; no, sir. Mr. Chairman, the trouble in the Democratic Party is that they have to make an issue out of something. They say that the people have demanded a reduction of rates, but the people of this country never have demanded and never will demand that American industries be shut down and American laboring men thrown out of employment all for the sake of this so-called free competition and free trade. The American people believe in Americans first and foreigners afterwards, and when they have a chance to express their opinion upon this bill, that is now being pushed through this House by order of a Democratic President and the Democratic floor leader, the gentlemen on the other side will find out that the people believe, as they have always believed, in the protection of American industries. Mr. Chairman, the great trouble, especially in the southern section of this country, is that they are still fighting the issues of 40 or 50 years ago.

SEVERAL MEMBERS (on the Democratic side). Oh, no.

Mr. MOSS of West Virginia. You gentlemen from the South know full well that it is to the best interest of the great Southland, and I speak as a Southerner, that they have protection of American industries in the South. You know that if you would cast aside the feeling you have that you should vote the way your grandfathers voted you would come up here solidly and vote for protection for southern products. [Applause on the Republican side.] Therefore, Mr. Chairman, I believe that after this is over and this bill has been passed and the dire results thereof have followed that when you get a chance to vote next time, gentlemen on the other side, if you ever do again, you will vote for protection to American industries, American labor, and American homes. [Applause on the Republican side.]

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to close debate on this paragraph and all pending amendments in five minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Alabama asks unanimous consent to close debate on this paragraph and all pending amendments in five minutes. Is there objection?

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, reserving the right to object, the gentleman from California is very much interested in almonds.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Has not the gentleman an amendment pending?

Mr. HAYES. No.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I will make it 10 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Alabama asks unanimous consent that all debate on this paragraph and all pending amendments close in 10 minutes. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. Chairman, I have just listened to the talk of the gentleman from West Virginia [Mr. Moss], who, I understand, is evidently a very new and a very fresh Member of this House. [Laughter and applause.] He talks about protection to American labor. He comes from the State of West Virginia, I understand, which is a coal-mining State, and under Republican policies they have protected American workmen to such an extent that West Virginia is now filled with foreigners, competing against the American workmen in the coal mines, and there has been a strike in the West Virginia coal mines for the last 12 months. [Applause on the Democratic side.] The Republican policy now is, and has always been, to compel the American workman to pay the very highest protection prices for everything that he consumes, while the people who compete against him are brought from the slums of Europe into a free-trade market. Mr. Chairman, under Republican rule there were more strikes under the administration of Theodore Roosevelt than there ever had been in the history of this country until President Taft took charge of the administration, and the strikes were so frequent that absolutely the Bureau of Labor could not keep an account of how many there were. [Laughter.] And it is impossible at this time to get from the Department of Labor the number of strikes that took place under the administration of Mr. Taft. Mr. Chairman, the other day I heard the hairless wonder from Michigan [laughter]——

Mr. KELLEY of Michigan. Who is he?

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. FORDNEY [laughter]—tell about the bank accounts that the working people of this country had. You go to the hearings of the people in this town in Massachusetts, Lawrence, who were down here last year, and you saw them, and they testified before that committee that they did not have meat to eat over once a week. You saw a few days ago——

Mr. KELLEY of Michigan. Mr. Chairman——

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman yield?

Mr. THOMAS. I always yield.

Mr. KELLEY of Michigan. Is the Democratic Party opposed to the employment of children in our industries?

Mr. THOMAS. I am opposed to the employment of all children under 16 years of age.

Mr. KELLEY of Michigan. Is it not true that the most flagrant violation of the rights of children in this country has been in those States in which the Democratic Party has been in absolute control for 50 years?

[Cries of "No" on the Democratic side.]

Mr. THOMAS. Will the gentleman name the States?

Mr. KELLEY of Michigan. South Carolina and Georgia——

Mr. BARTLETT. That is not true about Georgia.

Mr. KELLEY of Michigan. Alabama. Call the roll of States in which the Democratic Party has been longest in power and you will include them all.

Mr. BARTLETT. Mr. Chairman——

Mr. THOMAS. Wait a minute. Sit down. [Laughter.] The conditions in Georgia and Alabama may be bad, but the working people down there have meat to eat more than once a week, which they do not have in Lawrence, Mass. And in Michigan——

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. THOMAS] has expired.

Mr. THOMAS. And they do not have to pay for their drinking water. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Kentucky has expired.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last two words. [Laughter.] I ask unanimous consent for five minutes more.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Kentucky asks unanimous consent for five minutes more. Is there objection?

Mr. RAINEY. I will have to object.

Mr. MANN. An agreement was made a few moments ago to close debate in 10 minutes, and the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. THOMAS] has used 5 minutes and the gentleman from California [Mr. HAYES] is to have 5 minutes.

Mr. HAYES. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. Is this an amendment to the amendment?

Mr. HAYES. No.

The CHAIRMAN. The question, then, is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. RAINEY].

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from California [Mr. HAYES] offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend, page 56, line 22, by striking out the figure "3" and inserting in lieu thereof the figure "4"; also by striking out, in line 23, same page, the figure "4" and inserting the figure "5."

Mr. HAYES. Mr. Chairman, this bill reduces the tariff upon almonds, shelled and unshelled, 1 cent a pound. My amendment would maintain the present rate. Now, almonds are a luxury. I think the gentlemen on the other side of the aisle will admit that. They are not a necessity. There were imported last year 17,000,000 pounds of almonds, both shelled and unshelled, or thereabouts. So that it is apparent that the present tariff is a competitive tariff, and I should hope sufficiently competitive to satisfy the gentlemen who are the sponsors for this bill. I might point out further, Mr. Chairman, that the extra cent a pound would come in very handy, perhaps, if my amendment should prevail, in assisting the Government in discharging its obligations. And so, upon a Democratic basis, I do not see how our friends upon the other side can fail to vote for this amendment. The present rates are competitive. The article is a luxury, and the increase of 1 cent per pound will increase the revenue on imported almonds $170,000.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from California [Mr. HAYES].

The question was taken, and the amendment was rejected.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

229. Filberts and walnuts of all kinds, not shelled, 2 cents per pound; shelled, 4 cents per pound.

Mr. HAYES. Mr. Chairman, I offer another amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from California [Mr. HAYES] offers another amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend, page 57, line 1, by striking out the figure "2" and inserting in lieu thereof the figure "3"; and also by striking out the figure "4," line 2, same page, and inserting in lieu thereof the figure "5."

Mr. HAYES. Mr. Chairman, like the former amendment, the purpose of this one is to restore the tariff on walnuts and filberts, shelled and unshelled, to the rates in the present law. The conditions are exactly similar as stated by me in regard to almonds. Last year the importations of walnuts and filberts were something like 34,000,000 pounds. The people of California are producing perhaps half of the walnuts that are consumed in this country. We have facilities for producing all, and in time to come—and in the near future if the present rates can be continued and the present conditions maintained—we shall be able to produce all the walnuts that are consumed in this country. But now the present tariff is competitive. As I say, 34,000,000 pounds were imported last year. Walnuts are not a necessity; they are a luxury, and the increased revenue that would come in on 34,000,000 pounds of walnuts and filberts would be no inconsiderable amount. On last year's importations it would amount to $340,000.

Mr. SHARP. Will the gentleman yield?

The CHAIRMAN. Will the gentleman from California yield to the gentleman from Ohio?

Mr. HAYES. I will.

Mr. SHARP. How many States are there in which you can produce these walnuts?

Mr. HAYES. I know of no State in this country except California.

Mr. SHARP. But do you think it would be just for the large mass of the American people living east of the Mississippi River, and especially living far east of the Mississippi River, to be compelled to pay the freight on the walnuts shipped from California, when they can be got at somewhat of a reduction very much more easily from abroad?

Mr. HAYES. Why, Mr. Chairman, the gentleman's suggestion would destroy all of this schedule and every other schedule where there is any competition.

Mr. SHARP. I will ask the gentleman another question, if I may. Is it not true that immediately after the rate on lemons was raised in the Payne-Aldrich bill the railroads commenced to raise the freight on that product?

Mr. HAYES. It is not true, Mr. Chairman; but it is true that the railroads undertook to get 15 of the 50 cents that was added to the tariff on lemons. It is also true that the lemon growers resisted that attempt, and the matter was brought before the Interstate Commerce Commission, and the Interstate Commerce Commission refused to allow the railroads to increase the rate, holding that the present rates were reasonable and sufficiently remunerative. Those are the facts.

Now, so far as walnuts are concerned, as I said, there is no place except in California that I know of where they can be raised; and just the same argument that the gentleman from Ohio has advanced will apply to everything that a tariff is levied upon. It is no great injustice nor hardship that the people who can afford to spend their money for imported walnuts or filberts should be asked to help, to the extent of 1 cent a pound additional, to defray the running expenses of the Government of the United States. I can not think of any place where it would be better placed than upon a luxury of this kind, and I do not think my friend from Ohio can. [Applause on the Republican side.]

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the gentleman from California [Mr. HAYES].

The question was taken, and the amendment was rejected.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

230. Peanuts or ground beans, unshelled, ⅜ of 1 cent per pound; shelled, ¾ of 1 cent per pound.

Mr. MOORE. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MOORE] offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

Mr. MOORE. Mr. Chairman, I wish to have the Clerk read that so as to have the change made on line 3 as well as line 4, so that both "⅜ of" and "¾ of" would be stricken out, thus fixing the rate at 1 cent per pound.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 57, line 4, after the word "shelled," strike out "¾ of."

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, the amendment was not reported in full. As the amendment was reported, it only proposes to strike out certain figures in the bill.

Mr. MOORE. I want to strike out "⅜ of" in line 3 and "¾ of" in line 4.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will again report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 57, line 3, after the word "unshelled," strike out "⅜ of," and in line 4 strike out "¾ of."

Mr. MOORE. Mr. Chairman, I presume "the wish is father to the thought" in the mind of every true Representative of the Old Dominion who happens to be on this floor. The people of Virginia, who are very largely engaged in peanut culture, are desirous of having a protection upon their industry, and from my point of view it is not only fair but entirely consistent that a protectionist coming from outside of Virginia should stand by the real, true interests of Virginia that are looking to their own progress and welfare.

I am informed that peanuts, of which we are very large consumers in my section of the country, can be brought in from Japan, over the seas, up to the Allegheny Mountains, almost to the very borderland of Virginia, as cheaply as the people of Virginia, the tillers of the soil, the horny-fisted representatives of that fine old State, can send this product of their soil out to the city of Chicago.

If this is true, the peanut raisers of Virginia suffer a very great disadvantage in competition with the cheap peanut-raising industry of Japan.

I listened a little while ago to my friend from California [Mr. STEPHENS] making his delightful preachment in defense of the lemon duty for California, and I heard him say the woolen and cotton duties might be revised—willing to cut the woolen and cotton industries, but holding to the duty on lemons.

Mr. STEPHENS of California. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MOORE. Not now.

Mr. STEPHENS of California. What the gentleman says is not in accordance with what I said at all.

Mr. MOORE. I want to make my statement. If the gentleman does not agree to it, he can take it up in his own time. I am simply calling attention to this inconsistency. It was the kind of philosophy that defeated the Republican Party in the last campaign.

But I want to return to Virginia peanuts and to say I know that I voice the hearts, the minds, the disposition, the inclination, the hope, and the expectation of all true Virginians when I ask for an increase in the duty on peanuts from three-quarters of a cent a pound to 1 cent a pound. The Virginia peanut ought to be protected. [Applause.] It suffers from a competition that is unfair, and if the Virginia peanut is not protected against its cheap Japanese competitor, now menacing it from across the Pacific, the Virginia peanut raiser may have to go out of business. If he will not speak on this floor, I am going to do it for him, even though it offends some of my own peanut consumers in the city of Philadelphia who pay 5 cents a bag, which seems somewhat exorbitant, since they have reduced the quantity that goes into the bag.

Mr. GOULDEN. Will the gentleman allow me to interrupt him?

Mr. MOORE. Will you speak for Virginia?

Mr. GOULDEN. You will find out when I ask my question. Why does the gentleman speak for a higher duty on peanuts, that he says are of such great use and benefit to his own people? Why does he defend an interest of the people of Virginia instead of caring for his own people? I never knew the gentleman to do that before.

Mr. MOORE. Why, I have seen the gentleman on a ferryboat, on his way from New York to Philadelphia, and on the railroad train, eating peanuts all the way, and I know he is a friend of the peanut.

Mr. GOULDEN. Certainly; but that was because they were cheap and good. [Laughter.]

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. Chairman, if I caught aright the remarks of the bewhiskered gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN], he stated that this debate would be closed by the gentleman from California [Mr. HAYES] and by myself, in which I would say nothing. Now, I do not like to give advice to Republicans, but you know about this season of the year the dogwood blossoms are in bloom, and that is when we shear sheep, and I would advise the gentleman from Illinois to get shaved. [Laughter.]

Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] talks about Members of this House taking up time. I presume I have taken up about as little time as almost any Member of this Congress who has been here as long as I have, but the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] has filled volumes of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD with mixed metaphors and insipid nothingness. [Laughter.] I do not know what he has cost this Government, and it would take an expert to make the calculation, but I presume he has cost it $10,000,000 since he has been rattling around over on that side of the House. [Laughter.]

Mr. NORTON. Mr. Chairman, I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. NORTON. Is this a continuation of that moonshine debate of last night? [Laughter.]

Mr. THOMAS. What did he say? He said nothing. He may have attempted to say something, but did not do it.

Mr. LANGLEY. If my colleague, who evidently did not understand the gentleman's question, will permit, I will state that so far as my colleague and I are concerned the moonshine incident is closed. [Laughter.]

Mr. THOMAS. What did the gentleman from Kentucky say? My colleague from Kentucky seems to have moonshine on the brain.

Mr. LANGLEY. Well, if that is so, it is the only place where any of it has been deposited. Of course it is on my mind, because it has been mentioned a good many times lately.

Mr. THOMAS. And he seems to be replenishing the supply.

Mr. LANGLEY. The gentleman does not need any replenishing.

Mr. THOMAS. Now, Mr. Chairman, I have heard a great deal from these Republicans here about the secret caucus of the Democrats, because, as we had a right to do, we acted in the interest of political unity. Why did they object to a secret caucus? Because they think we might do something like they would have done if they had had the opportunity. I have heard here the remarks of the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. MURDOCK], the gentleman who sports the sunset locks. [Laughter.] I have heard a great deal from him about this secret caucus. He had a caucus of 13 members—that was enough to condemn it, 13 members—and two days before that caucus met it was stated in the papers in this city that this alleged so-called Progressive Party, which is nothing but a patent medicine advertising scheme [great laughter], would meet and elect Mr. MURDOCK Speaker. Now, I wonder how they knew that two days beforehand if there had not been some secret meeting or secret caucus between Mr. MURDOCK and these other 12 members of this alleged Progressive Party in secret caucus somewhere? [Laughter and applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Kentucky has expired. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MOORE].

The question was taken, and the amendment was lost.

The Clerk read as follows:

231. Nuts of all kinds, shelled or unshelled, not specially provided for in this section, 1 cent per pound; but no allowance shall be made for dirt or other impurities in nuts of any kind, shelled or unshelled.

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. I would like to ask the gentlemen of the committee if they have any amendments to offer to this paragraph. I am informed not. The gentleman from Illinois, on a preceding paragraph, moved to strike out the word "clear" with reference to almonds, and said it was a blunder. Evidently he did not know that clear almonds was in the law, and had been for a good many years. In 1909 a question arose about dirt in nuts, and we went to work before the bill was prepared and had a Treasury expert to aid us in that way. That expert suggested an addition to this paragraph that was not in the previous law, "but no allowance shall be made for dirt or impurities in nuts of any kind, shelled or unshelled." That was the amendment we put in the law, and these gentlemen do not see fit to change it, and it is well they do not for the customs court held under it the construction that the gentleman claims would be the law if you strike out the word "clear." It was a microscopic mind that went before the general appraisers and before the customs court to try to show that the additional language which we put in for a safeguard had anything to do with the rate of duties on almonds. The customs court held that shelled almonds, if they did have some dirt in them, was subject to the higher rate of duty under the law.

Every paragraph that we find as we proceed in this bill generally shows the wisdom of the committee and of the House that passed the present tariff law. There are some things in it that we have criticized that are open to criticism. They have adopted even the new language that we put in this paragraph, and they have adopted language of ours right through the bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

233. Extract of meat, not specially provided for in this section, 15 cents per pound; fluid extract of meat, 7 cents per pound, but the dutiable weight of the extract of meat and of the fluid extract of meat shall not include the weight of the packages in which the same is imported.

Mr. HUMPHREY of Washington. Mr. Chairman, I have an amendment to a paragraph that has been passed. It is an amendment in regard to fresh fish.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. We passed the fish paragraph some time ago, and I can not consent to go back.

The Clerk read as follows:

234. Poultry, live, 1 cent per pound; dead, 2 cents per pound.

Mr. LANGLEY. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

On page 57, line 16, after the word "live," strike out "one" and insert "three," and after the word "dead" strike out "two" and insert "five."

Mr. LANGLEY. Mr. Chairman, my genial friend and colleague from Kentucky [Mr. THOMAS] seems to have the impression that moonshine is the chief product of the district I have the honor to represent. I do not know whether the wish is father to the thought or not, but I beg to assure my associates here that it is not the chief product by any means of that district or of our State.

Mr. BUTLER. What is moonshine?

Mr. LANGLEY. I refer the gentleman to my colleague. He probably knows. There are many important industries in the tenth Kentucky district, and among them is the chicken industry. We raise, consume, and sell a good many chickens in that district, not only hens, but spring chickens and roosters, and all classes of fowls, and, as I said yesterday, we have a flourishing egg industry also.

I feel that this provision in the Underwood bill reducing the tariff so radically on chickens dead and living would be an injustice to my district because, if you Democrats are going to reduce the price of chickens and eggs, you will seriously cripple that important industry. For that reason I have offered this amendment to restore the rates provided by the existing law.

Mr. GOOD. Mr. Chairman, at a late hour last night I attempted to get the attention of the distinguished gentleman from Illinois [Mr. RAINEY], with regard to the effect which this bill would have upon the consumers of the country, but I was unable to elicit any information from him at all. He appeared very weary, but this morning he seems refreshed, looks intelligent, and several times has shown indication of giving the House some information. I will now ask him how much of a reduction will the ultimate consumer receive in the way of lower prices on poultry, if this provision shall be enacted into law?

Mr. RAINEY. Mr. Chairman, when the gentleman from Iowa gets through I will reply to him in my own time.

Mr. GOOD. Can the gentleman tell me how many cents per pound of reduction this proposed duty will effect? This statement which I have in my hand contains 13 items in which the gentleman says the Payne law increased the price from 100 to 200 per cent on meat products. On eight of those meat products the Payne law reduced the duty 25 per cent. If a reduction in the Payne law of 25 per cent on meat products, according to the gentleman's theory, is followed by an increase from 100 to 200 per cent, how much of a reduction now will we have on poultry with this little reduction in the price?

Mr. MOORE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GOOD. Mr. Chairman, I certainly yield to the gentleman from Philadelphia.

Mr. MOORE. Does the gentleman from Iowa think seriously for a moment that it was the real purpose of the Democratic Party in the last campaign, during which orators penetrated the gentleman's district, to reduce the cost of living? Did they not only want to tell the people about it?

Mr. GOOD. This circular that was circulated in the cities, but very carefully concealed from the farmers, did promise a great reduction, and it promised, as far as farm produce was concerned, that we would return to the prices of 1896. I will ask the gentleman if he believes that we should return to the prices of farm products in 1896? [After a pause.] I am speaking to the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. RAINEY. Mr. Chairman, I just told the gentleman that when he gets through I will answer him in my own time.

Mr. GOOD. But is the gentleman willing to return to the prices that prevailed for farm produce in 1896, in the interest of the American consumer?

Mr. ALEXANDER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman from Iowa yield for a question?

Mr. GOOD. Yes.

Mr. ALEXANDER. I want to get the attitude of the gentleman from Iowa. Does the gentleman indorse——

Mr. GOOD. Mr. Chairman, I yield for an answer to my question.

Mr. ALEXANDER. Does the gentleman indorse the Payne tariff law? [Laughter.]

Mr. GOOD. I yield for an answer to my question.

Mr. ALEXANDER. I would like the people in Iowa to understand the gentleman's attitude toward the Payne law.

Mr. GOOD. I stand for the duties that are levied in the Payne tariff law as against those levied in this bill ten times over.

Mr. ALEXANDER. Does the gentleman indorse the Payne tariff law?

Mr. GOOD. There are things in the Payne tariff law that ought to be changed.

Mr. ALEXANDER. What are they?

Mr. GOOD. A great many schedules ought to be changed, and the gentleman from New York [Mr. PAYNE] has offered amendments greatly reducing the duties of the Payne law in the cotton schedule and in the woolen schedule. Some of the duties in the agricultural schedules should be reduced, but we should not attempt this great slaughter of this industry of agriculture, the greatest industry in all the world. You said in this circular that you would return to the prices of 1896. Is the gentleman in favor now of enacting a law that will bring into effect the prices that prevailed for farm produce in 1896?

Mr. ALEXANDER. No; because those conditions were brought about by a previous Republican administration.

Mr. GOOD. Why did you permit the great Democratic Party to circulate that infamous statement? That statement is not based on a single fact, and yet it is a political document upon which Members in cities on the gentleman's side of the House obtained seats in this Chamber.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Iowa has expired.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I move that all debate on this paragraph and all amendments thereto close in five minutes.

The question was taken, and the motion was agreed to.

Mr. RAINEY. Mr. Chairman, for a day or two I have submitted in silence to the observations of the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. GOOD]. I want to say to the gentleman from Iowa that I do not know how much we will be able to reduce the cost of living in this country, but I do know that during the period of the real supremacy of the Republican Party in this country, extending from 1896 down to the present time, they have done nothing in that direction. I know that during all of that period of time the cost of living in this country has been getting higher and higher until all kinds of meat are practically banished now from the tables of the poor; and I know that the gentleman from Iowa, who sits here in this House representing a great district in that State, does not render to the Democratic side the slightest assistance in bringing down the cost of the market basket. On the other hand, on every occasion in this House when an item came up for consideration looking toward lowering tariff taxes, looking toward fewer hungry children in the cities of this country, he has been found voting against it.

Tell me that the farmers of his district, the courageous descendants of the brave men who in the old days came down the long forest avenues in oxcarts, came down our rivers in flatboats, and came across to the State of Iowa——

Mr. GOOD rose.

Mr. RAINEY. I can not yield now. Tell me that they do not feel strong enough, as strong as their ancestors, to do the things that are right. Tell me they are not courageous enough to be in favor of giving the hungry men, the hungry women, and the hungry children of our great cities a cheaper breakfast table, a cheaper market basket? Do the men who live there in his district propose to keep up the tariff walls around their products in order that they can get higher prices and listen to the cry of hunger that comes from our cities——

Mr. GOOD. Mr. Chairman——

Mr. RAINEY. I can not yield.

Mr. GOOD. Just a question.

Mr. RAINEY. No; I will not yield, I have not the time. Does the gentleman represent constituents that are so cowardly that they brush aside such cries as that; will they approve the position taken by their Representative here? I will undertake to say that throughout this broad land from the east to the west, from the north down through the magnolia section of our country to the southern gulf, you can not find many men who will argue as the gentleman does in favor of keeping up the price of bread at the expense of—what? At the expense of the developing muscles, sinews, brains of the coming generation; at the expense of the hunger and suffering of our people who live in the towns and in our great cities. No; we are doing what we can to relieve these conditions. The gentleman from Iowa is doing what he can to keep from relieving such conditions as these. Why, I can not answer the questions of the gentleman from Iowa, the silly questions, the tiresome questions he propounds to me upon this floor. They belong to the same category as the old inquiry, "How old is Ann?" which everybody has been discussing so long. Why, the gentleman comes into this House this morning with a tired expression upon his face. All night long he dreamed about a circular that was at one time——

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Kentucky.

The question was taken, and the amendment was rejected.

The Clerk read as follows:

235. Chicory root, raw, dried, or undried, but unground, 1 cent per pound; chicory root, burnt or roasted, ground or granulated, or in rolls, or otherwise prepared, and not specially provided for in this section, 2 cents per pound.

Mr. SLOAN. Mr. Chairman, there has been considerable said about just how much the producers would lose by reason of this bill. I want to read something authoritative from a Democratic standpoint. I read from a pamphlet, on page 5—I will announce the document later—as follows:

Estimated value of consumption and estimated saving to consumers which would have resulted from the enactment of the free-list bill——

Mr. DONOVAN. Mr. Chairman, a point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. DONOVAN. The gentleman is not talking to the question of chicory roots, and so forth.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will proceed in order.

Mr. SLOAN. I will endeavor so to do. Chicory roots, and so forth, are food products and come under the same rule as any other food products, and my statements will conform to that rule. The pamphlet says:

Fresh and preserved meats, estimated consumption, $615,000,000; estimated saving, $66,759,000.

Sixty-six million dollars lost to the farmers of the West, who produce more than their sections consume.

Flour and grist, cereals and bread, estimated consumption, $665,000,000; estimated saving, $75,677,000.

Or a total loss, largely to the Northwest, of $142,336,000, as given out here.

Mr. DONOVAN. A point of order.

Mr. SLOAN (reading)—

These figures indicate that the value of the articles included in the free-list bill consumed in this country during a year amount to $2,760,000,000, assuming that the tariff is effective in increasing prices to the extent of one-half of the rate of duty.

Who is the author? I read from this pamphlet. It is headed "UNDERWOOD'S marvelous record as a majority leader" in the National House of Representatives, and gives a review of his work, and then in front is this splendid picture of a splendid man [applause], who appears suave, urbane, and strong, with a form of steel incased in an armor of velvet, the repository of the consciences of every Member on that side of the House, as he stated the other night when saying the individuality of the Members on that side of the House is surrendered and left to the "wisdom and cohesive strength of a great party," of which he is the all-powerful leader. And beneath that picture is this printed inscription:

OSCAR W. UNDERWOOD, of Alabama, Democracy's best asset.

[Loud applause on the Democratic side.]

And I wondered why the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. RAINEY] in charge of this schedule, with thousands of these documents within his reach, did not answer the question and say to the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. GOOD] how much he believed the change would be.

Oh, no; we are discussing the agricultural schedule now, and you do not want to make an estimate now lest the farmers would hear it and demand that their Representatives forsake their caucus and stand up for the interests of the districts which send them here. The chairman of the Ways and Means Committee within the last hour said that it was difficult to make any reasonable estimate of how much a reduction in price it would be—probably quite infinitesimal on many of these things. I say this so that the producers of this country will know precisely what the philosophy of this bill is, namely, to cut from the prices of their products half the stated rate of revenue. This is the doctrine the author of this bill announced in the East and South when he was running for the presidential nomination. In this day of fulfillment he does not want to look the farmers in the face and say "My bill will cut down the prices of your meats and cereals, practically all you raise, about 12 per cent." That would make a loss of several millions to the farmers and stockmen of my district.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I move to close all debate on this paragraph.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. RAINEY. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. RAINEY] offers an amendment which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Strike out the paragraph and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"236. Unsweetened chocolate and cocoa, prepared or manufactured, not specially provided for in this section, 8 per cent ad valorem. Sweetened chocolate and cocoa, prepared or manufactured, not specially provided for in this section, valued at 15 cents per pound or less, 2 cents per pound; valued at more than 15 cents per pound, 25 per cent ad valorem. The weight and the value of the immediate coverings, other than the outer packing case or other covering, shall be included in the dutiable weight and the value of the merchandise."

Mr. MURDOCK. Mr. Chairman, may I ask the gentleman what that change affects?

Mr. RAINEY. Yes; this change affects the sweetened chocolate and cocoa. A large amount of sweet chocolate and cocoa comes in here which is really a confection, and it comes wrapped in tin-foil paper and embossed paper and goes on the market as a confection. The only change we make here by this amendment is to leave the unsweetened variety at the rate we have fixed in this bill and give the sweetened variety the confectionery rate.

Mr. MURDOCK. What is the higher rate that you give them?

Mr. RAINEY. The higher rate is that if it is valued at 15 cents per pound or less, 2 cents per pound; valued at more than 15 cents per pound, 25 per cent ad valorem.

Mr. MURDOCK. That is the prepared chocolate which comes in, namely, Swiss chocolate and other kinds?

Mr. RAINEY. Yes; if it is sweetened. If it is manufactured and sweetened we give it this higher rate.

Mr. MOORE. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RAINEY. Yes.

Mr. MOORE. In the original bill, H. R. 10, coconuts were on the dutiable list?

Mr. RAINEY. They have now been placed on the free list.

Mr. FORDNEY. Will the gentleman permit me to ask him a question? I have a telegram here about sweetened chocolate. You say you increase by this amendment now proposed the duty on sweetened chocolate?

Mr. RAINEY. Yes, sir.

Mr. FORDNEY. To what rate?

Mr. RAINEY. To the confectionery rate in our bill.

Mr. PAYNE. I suppose this increase is made because of the mistake of putting the high rate on copra, from which cocoa is manufactured?

Mr. RAINEY. This change is made in order to make the bill harmonious.

Mr. PAYNE. Yes; that is an answer to my question in the affirmative, to make the bill harmonious.

Mr. RAINEY. Yes; to balance the bill and make it harmonious.

The CHAIRMAN (Mr. SHERLEY). The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. RAINEY].

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. FESS. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Ohio [Mr. FESS] moves to strike out the last word.

Mr. FESS. Mr. Chairman, I have taken a little time to examine the 40 or 50 paragraphs, enumerating something like 60 different articles produced by the farmer, and I notice that the reduction is anywhere from 20 per cent to 100 per cent. In some cases all the duty is taken off and the articles are placed on the free list.

Now, I think that this schedule exe...plifies better than any other schedule that I have noticed the theory upon which this bill was written, the theory that was announced by the distinguished leader of the majority on the opening of the debate, and uttered and reiterated often by other Members on the other side of the House, namely, that the purpose of this bill is not to protect anything, but that it is for the purpose of raising revenue and for the benefit of the consumer and not for the producer.

I take it that there is not any doubt on the part of the majority or the minority that the purpose of this bill is looking theoretically to the consumer instead of to the producer, and I think that that is distinctly a wrong principle of legislation. It is not because I happen to be on this side of the House, but because I think it is necessary for you to look to the interests of the man who produces the article to be consumed before it is possible to have any consumption; in other words, that you can not hope to consume anything until you have produced it.

Now, this schedule applies surely to the producer as no other schedule does, for the farmer in this country is the producer. He tills the soil. He produces the food to feed the race. He produces the clothing to clothe the race. He furnishes the necessaries of life to keep up the race. The American farmer produces in a single year, according to the figures of the Secretary of Agriculture, in his report, food products to the value of nearly $9,000,000,000 worth.

This is the fruit of the producer under our scientific methods of production to-day, and I am going to ask the gentlemen on that side of the House what is the meaning of all the expenditure of money on the increase of production on the farm, where you make 1 acre produce double what it once produced, or quadruple what it once produced? What was the purpose of the expenditure of money for garden and field, for laboratory and experiment station, if it was not for the purpose of discovering better methods of production? And I am asking you what is the purpose of legislation if it is not to increase the ability of production? Whenever you look simply to the consumer, without regard to the producer, you are playing the city against the country. [Applause on the Republican side.]

And what do you do, and why do you do it? Is it possible that there are more votes in the city than in the country? I do not want to charge that, but, notwithstanding, there seems to be some truth in that suspicion.

You say you will reduce the cost of living. Gentlemen, I want to say that you do not reduce the price of living by reducing the protection accorded to the farmer. You reduce the price to the farmer of the article he sells; but are you sure that the consumer who ultimately consumes will get the product any cheaper than before? [Applause on the Republican side.]

You took the tariff off of hides and promised cheap shoes, but shoes have gone up in price. You now take the tariff off of sugar. Sugar will take wings as soon as the price is under the control of an importer. You take the tariff off of wool for the sake of cheap clothing. Watch the process of price reduction. You take the tariff off of flour in order to cheapen the price and give free bread. You thereby feed the flour mills of Canada at the frightful expense of our own mills, to the great advantage of foreign mills, which, when they have accomplished their purpose, can put up the price of flour as in the case of sugar.

There is one almost certain way this bill will reduce the price of foodstuffs. When the effect of this elaborate and skillfully planned assault upon the industries of the country, where existence seems to be an offense, oft expressed by various Members on the other side of this Chamber, when the inevitable crippling of these industries shall displace thousands of laborers or greatly reduce their wages by either an actual cut or reduction of time, thus reducing the greatest factor of consumption in this country, then prices will come down—not because of more production, but because of the destruction of the ability to consume. Here is the viciousness of this proposed legislation. The advocates of this bill openly assail every man who resents the assault upon the business of the country with the charge that he favors the special interests as against the people. This tone has dominated this debate from the very opening day. When we plead for the maintenance of the integrity of business, that our capital may employ labor and thus continue the prosperity now so general, we are met with the open charge that we plead the cause of special interests, while they stand for the consumer—the mass of the people. This is mere claptrap.

Who is the consumer? What does he want? His greatest desire is to be secure in his ability to secure what he needs. This ability is found in a system that concerns itself with the common interests of both the producer and the consumer, not a policy that blindly stifles production in the belief that by so doing it will assist consumption. This Nation will denounce in no uncertain tones any legislation directed against the farmer, the chief producer of the country.

I am bombarded with telegrams and letters of protest against this treatment of the farmer, not only from farmers, but from chambers of commerce, business clubs, and officers of commercial associations. I wish to append a telegram from the Cincinnati Chamber of Commerce.

CINCINNATI, OHIO, April 30, 1913.

Hon. S. D. FESS,
House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.:

By unanimous vote the board of directors of the Cincinnati Chamber of Commerce, at a meeting held April 29, adopted the following resolution which is respectfully submitted for your attention:

Whereas the Underwood tariff bill imposes a duty of 10 cents per bushel upon foreign wheat and admits duty free the foreign milled products of such foreign wheat; and

Whereas this discrimination in favor of the foreign manufacturer is in contradiction alike of all accepted economic doctrine of the established tariff policy of all political parties and of all nations, and in effect pays a bounty to the foreign miller on all products of wheat sold by him in the markets of the United States; and

Whereas if American flour millers have to pay a tax upon foreign-grown wheat, then a simple justice requires that the foreign-milled products of such wheat shall pay an equivalent tax, and if foreign-milled wheat products are admitted duty free foreign wheat should be admitted duty free: Therefore be it

Resolved, That believing the proposed legislation would inevitably destroy one of the most important manufacturing industries in the United States, and that it would further result in most serious injury to the American farmer, the Cincinnati Chamber of Commerce, through its board of directors, records itself as unalterably opposed, and earnestly urges upon the President and Congress of the United States the necessity of placing both wheat and its products upon terms of absolute equality.

Resolved, That copies of this preamble and resolution be forwarded immediately to the President of the United States, Senators, and Congressmen from Ohio, Indiana, and Kentucky, the members of the Senate Finance Committee, and the Ways and Means Committee of the House of Representatives.

CINCINNATI CHAMBER OF COMMERCE,
W. C. CULKINS, Executive Secretary.

Also, a telegram from business men in Springfield, one of the best cities in the country, and in as prosperous an agricultural region as is found in the United States:

SPRINGFIELD, OHIO, May 1, 1913.

Hon. S. D. FESS,
Care House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.:

Congratulations on your tariff speech to Congress. Every word is absolutely true regarding Ohio, also the whole country. The Underwood tariff bill is a great injury to farmers. Unless this bill is amended making the duty on foreign flour and wheat products equal the American farmers will lose millions of dollars, and eventually be forced out of growing wheat.

E. H. KELLY,
E. O. BOWMAN,
JNO W. BURKE.

Here is a letter from one of the leading millers of the State. They all tell the same story:

OSBORNE, OHIO, April 28, 1913.

Hon. S. D. FESS, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: I understand that the Underwood tariff bill will be taken up on the 29th instant, and I hope you will not only vote against the admission of foreign mills' flour duty free, but will use your influence among your fellow Representatives to get them to vote against the bill. I believe when the farmers in the great wheat-growing States of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Kansas, Minnesota, and the Dakotas realize the apparent protection of 10 cents per bushel upon foreign wheat and the admission of foreign mills' flour duty free affects the earnings of his farm there is sure to be an outcry that will make itself unmistakably heard in Washington.

The truth is, under the present provision of the Underwood bill there will be no tax upon foreign-ground wheat. Foreign farmers working themselves or employing labor at a mere pittance will reap the greatest benefit, for it allows foreign-ground wheat to enter the United States duty free, provided the products are made of a foreign product in a foreign mill. It is easily understood what the result will be. It means an enormous increase in the number and grinding capacity of flour mills in Canada, Argentina, Australia, and other wheat-growing countries, and especially Great Britain, whose flour mills are located upon the docks of her ports, drawing wheat from all over the world. These mills, for example, buy wheat in Buenos Aires, freight it by water to Liverpool or other ports, grind it into flour, ship the flour to New York or some other American seaport market, and sell it at less than 40 cents per barrel lower than the American mill located at New York, Philadelphia, or Baltimore could manufacture the same grade of flour from the same wheat or wheat grown in the United States.

The Canadian millers likewise could flood the United States market fully as much as Great Britain by selling below the price the United States miller sells in competition. When it is realized that the average net profit of the flour mills of the United States will hardly exceed 5 cents per barrel on their annual production, the impossibility of competing with the foreign mills under the conditions which this act provides may be clearly realized.

I believe you fully understand the hardship this bill would cause the American farmer and the American miller if it became a law, and I am satisfied that you will do everything in your power, not only by your vote but influence as well, to defeat the bill. Thanking you in advance for anything you may do in the matter, I remain,

Very truly, yours,

TRANCHANT & FINNELL,
Per M. L. FINNELL.

Mr. CALDER. Mr. Chairman——

Mr. UNDERWOOD. If the gentleman will pardon me, does he want to offer an amendment or just debate?

Mr. CALDER. I want to strike out the last word.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I will ask the gentleman to wait until the Clerk has read the paragraph.

Mr. CALDER. Very well.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

237. Cocoa butter or cocoa butterine, refined deodorized coconut oil, and all substitutes for cocoa butter, 3½ cents per pound.

Mr. CALDER. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New York [Mr. CALDER] moves to strike out the last word.

Mr. CALDER. Following the line of the argument of the gentleman [Mr. FESS] who has just taken his seat, I am very much interested in the discussion of this agricultural schedule and its effect upon the consumer.

I spoke a little bit yesterday of the effect upon the consumer of the reduction of duty on lumber, and I hope very much that these reductions on farm products will affect the price to people in the great city of New York, which is the market place for all agricultural products in our part of the country. And if these reductions do really make the breakfast table and the market basket cheaper, this committee and this House in passing this bill will have accomplished something.

My mind goes back to an incident that occurred last summer. The Democratic governor of the State of New York, Gov. Dix, appointed a commission to investigate transportation and market conditions in the State of New York, and particularly the high cost of living, and I have read a copy of the report of that commission. One particular incident in it impressed me very much. It told of a garden truck farmer on Long Island who sent 25 bushels of string beans to the market. This report says that at the end of 10 days he received for the 25 bushels of string beans 76 cents, out of which he had to pay for picking and trucking to the railroad depot. At that same period string beans were selling in the city of New York to the poor people, who could not afford to buy them except by the quart, for 10 cents a quart. For the same string beans that the farmer got 3 cents a bushel the consumer paid $3.20 a bushel. Now, Mr. Chairman, if the reduction of the duty on string beans in this bill from 45 cents a bushel to 25 cents a bushel will in some way give the poor farmer more than the 3 cents a bushel which he received for the string beans he sold last summer, and will in some way reduce the price to the consumer in the city of New York from 10 cents a quart, I am sure our people will be duly grateful. For the life of me, I can not understand how the reduction in duty will affect the matter at all.

Everybody here knows, and I am sure the sensible people throughout the country knows, that all of this talk to-day about the reduction in the price to the consumer is pure buncombe on the part of the Democratic majority on this floor.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate on this paragraph close in five minutes.

The CHAIRMAN (Mr. SHERLEY). The gentleman from Alabama asks unanimous consent that debate on this paragraph close in five minutes. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. COOPER. Mr. Chairman, I do not care to occupy five minutes; but, in view of what has been repeatedly said here about the increase in prices in recent years, I think that certain gentlemen ought to be reminded of the fact that the increase in the cost of living is not confined to the United States of America. This increase is world-wide. It has been very pronounced in England, though not quite so great as in this country. It has been very pronounced also in Germany and in all other countries. Proof of this is found in the consular reports of the State Department issued regularly to Members of the House. In March last I received, as did each Member of the House, one of these consular reports in which appeared a copy of a Japanese report on "Advance in Japanese Prices," sent by Vice Consul Walter Gassett, of Kobe, Japan, from which I will read the following:

ADVANCE IN JAPANESE PRICES.

The table of statistics following, which is similar to one published in Osaka every month, shows the gain or loss in price in January, 1913, of 46 of the principal commodities as compared with January, 1912.

The price of these articles in 1902 is taken as 100, from which the rise or fall is computed. As the average price in January, 1913, was 140, it will be seen that prices generally of the principal commodities in Japan have increased 40 per cent in 11 years.

Compared with December, 1912, 13 commodities showed an advance, 20 a decline, and 20 remained unchanged during the month; but in comparison with a year before the general advance in prices is remarkable.

	January, 1912.	January, 1913.
COMMODITIES ADVANCING.
Rice, uncleaned	173	215
Eggs	108	110
Wheat	154	181
Sugar	190	192
Small red beans	142	203
Firewood	125	140
Sake	121	127
Japanese paper	107	110
Seaweed	173	210
Copper	116	138
Charcoal	130	150
Rice, cleaned	162	189
Petroleum	131	150
Oats	154	250
Porcelain	101	105
Barley	242	262
French nails	117	119
Soy	144	152
Galvanized iron sheets	98	101
Chemicals and drugs	124	148
Raw cotton	119	140
Japanese medicines	55	60
Cotton yarn	141	151
Vegetable wax	134	144
Dyed yarn	144	147
Fish manure	150	155
Sheet glass	72	78
Antimony	110	113
Towels	102	112
COMMODITIES DECLINING OR REMAINING UNCHANGED.
Tea	140	125
Coal	107	107
Rapeseed oil	154	125
Matting (for tatami)	121	119
Timber	169	169
Imported iron	103	100
White cotton cloth	130	125
Gassed yarn	140	139
Raw silk	116	116
Habutai	114	114
Silk crape	117	117
Beans	149	149
Dried mushrooms	128	108
Katsubushi	121	98
European paper	101	101
Mousseline	138	132
Hemp	160	157

Is the tariff law of the United States responsible for this most remarkable increase in the cost of living in Japan? Is it responsible for the increase in the cost of living in free-trade England?

Gentlemen should remember that two things may exist at the same time and yet one not be the cause of the other.

When we Members of the House were at school and studied logic, each one of us often had pointed out to him the very common fallacy, "Post hoc, ergo propter hoc"—after this, therefore on account of this.

That argument is one of the most foolish sorts of attempted reasoning. Two things may exist together, or one after the other, and neither be the cause of the other.

It is not the tariff in the United States which has caused the marked increase in the cost of living in free-trade England and elsewhere all around the world.

Mr. Chairman, this great question of the increased cost of living is of the most pressing importance to our people. Without delay there ought to be appointed the greatest commission possible of appointment in the United States, a commission representative of every political faith and creed and of the highest ability, attainments, and character, to investigate and report the facts relating to this world-wide phenomenon of such tremendous importance to struggling humanity. The Congress of the United States and the other national legislatures need these facts to enable them wisely to solve one of the very greatest of legislative and economic problems.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

238. Dandelion root, and acorns prepared, and articles used as coffee, or as substitutes for coffee not specially provided for in this section, 2 cents per pound.

Mr. McCOY. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. I was interested in the remarks about the high cost of living which the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. COOPER] indulged in. I have no doubt in the world that the consul in Japan who made the report from which he read is a Republican consul.

Mr. COOPER. Will the gentleman permit an interruption?

Mr. McCOY. Certainly.

Mr. COOPER. What he reported was the official report published every month by the Japanese themselves in Osaka.

Mr. McCOY. I would reply to that in the words of the old adage, "Figures do not lie, but liars figure." I do not know how he made up the figures. I will say that if the gentleman from Wisconsin will take the consular reports which we received from our consul in London in 1910 he will ascertain that the consul there reports that the prices of the necessities of life in many instances had gone down in the 10 years prior to 1910, and that only on a few articles which we designate as the necessities of life had prices gone up. If he will conduct his investigation a little further he will find that in these countries that have the highest protective tariffs prices have gone up the most in the last 10 years, and I recommend that he look up the statistics furnished from these countries by our consuls.

The gentleman from Ohio said "Hides were put on the free list," and then he was interrupted. I happen to have some constituents interested in the duty on hides, for they manufacture patent and enamel leather. One of these manufacturers told me the other day that if we had not placed hides on the free list there was a time when, because hides had increased in price for well-known reasons, they would have had to go out of business. It is another one of those post hoc ergo propter hoc arguments to say that because hides were placed on the free list therefore the prices of boots and shoes have advanced. Leather advanced in price because of the scarcity of hides, and the prices of boots and shoes accordingly.

Mr. FESS. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McCOY. Yes.

Mr. FESS. Did you not promise that if hides went on the free list we would have cheaper boots and shoes?

Mr. McCOY. I was not here at the time, and so I made no promises. I am telling you what the manufacturer who is interested in hides said—that they would have been obliged to go out of business if hides had not been put on the free list, for the price of hides would have been higher with the duty and too high to permit them to do business.

Mr. McGUIRE of Oklahoma. Do I understand the gentleman to state that this man said that if hides had not been put on the free list they would have been much higher in the United States than they were after they were put on?

Mr. McCOY. I said that they would have been much higher if not placed on the free list, because with the duty the price would have been increased by the amount of the duty.

Mr. McGUIRE of Oklahoma. That was my question. I asked if the statement of the gentleman was if hides had not been on the free list they would have been much higher in the United States.

Mr. McCOY. Yes; that is what he did say and what I say. Another manufacturer of the city of Newark, N. J., was in my office the other day, and I was glad to hear him make a certain statement. He has enjoyed the benefits of a high protective tariff for years, and has reached the place where he does not have to bother about his income. He said that recently manufacturers of Newark had come to him and tried to get him interested in the Underwood bill and were astonished because he would not get excited over it. They wanted to know why he would not write letters to the Congressmen who represent Newark. He said, "I know that there is something wrong with the present tariff, and I hope that the Democrats have found the remedy in this bill. For my part, I propose to give them a chance to try it." [Applause on the Democratic side.]

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate close on this paragraph in five minutes.

The CHAIRMAN (Mr. SHERLEY). The gentleman from Alabama asks unanimous consent that all debate close upon this paragraph and amendments thereto in five minutes. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. FORDNEY. Mr. Chairman, I wish to say to the gentleman from New Jersey who has just taken his seat that when the Payne tariff bill was being prepared there was a gentleman whose name was Jones, president of the Shoe Manufacturing Association of New England, came before the committee, and in making his plea for free raw hides I asked him if the duty of 15 per cent ad valorem then on hides were removed what difference would it make in the cost of a pair of $3 shoes, such as he was then talking about. Gentlemen will remember that hides which were protected at that time with a 15 per cent ad valorem duty were heavy hides, 60 pounds or over in weight. The gentleman, after figuring for a few moments, replied that it would lessen the cost of such a pair of shoes from 1½ to 2½ cents a pair. I then said to him, "My friend, if raw hides are placed on the free list—the shoes you now sell for $3 per pair—will you sell them for $2.97½ or $2.98 per pair?" He said he would. I doubted the correctness of the man's statement, and told him so. He said I was entitled to my opinion; but what happened? When that class of hides were placed on the free list the shoes then selling for $3 wholesale went up to $3.50 and $4 per pair.

Mr. McCOY. Was it because the duty was taken off?

Mr. FORDNEY. Heaven only knows what caused it; but I know that the price of shoes advanced. He did not state facts when he said that if raw hides were put on the free list he would sell the shoes at 2½ cents per pair less. Neither did the gentlemen in the woolen business tell the truth those days.

They came into the city where I live to a merchant with whom I deal and stated to that merchant they were obliged to put up the price on woolen goods because of the increased duties on wool and woolens placed in the Payne law, for it is true there was not one fraction of a penny increased duty on any item in Schedule K—the woolen schedule—in the Payne law. On the other hand, there were slight reductions made.

Mr. HARDY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FORDNEY. Yes.

Mr. HARDY. These higher prices of shoes—did they not come under a lower duty on shoes in the Payne law?

Mr. FORDNEY. Yes; absolutely right the reverse to what the shoe manufacturer said he would do. He said he would lower his price if we gave him free raw hides, and he did not do so.

Mr. HARDY. Under a lower duty on shoes?

Mr. FORDNEY. Under a lower duty on shoes. The duty was reduced from 25 per cent to 10 and 15 per cent.

Mr. HARDY. Post hoc, ergo propter hoc—if that is on that account then the manufacturers ought to want the lowest duties possible.

Mr. FORDNEY. The manufacturer in that hearing was not honest with the committee. They took the advantage on leather goods that the South American cattle growers took upon their cattle hides. They took it for granted when the Government of the United States had placed raw hides on the free list that there was a shortage of raw hides in the world's supply of hides. They immediately took advantage of that situation, and they advanced the price of hides—not to such an extent that it was necessary to add 50 cents to $1 to a pair of shoes that cost only $3.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Michigan has expired.

The Clerk read as follows:

239. Starch, made from potatoes, 1 cent per pound; all other starch, including all preparations, from whatever substance produced, fit for use as starch, ½ cent per pound.

Mr. STEVENS of Minnesota. Mr. Chairman, I wish to ask a question of the gentleman in charge of the bill. The tariff on starch made from potatoes is placed at 1 cent per pound, and on all other starch, including all preparations, from whatever substance produced, it is ½ cent per pound. Does that include sago, or starch used in the manufactures in competition with potato starch?

Mr. RAINEY. Yes; we understand it does.

Mr. STEVENS of Minnesota. If so, why is not the rate the same—1 cent a pound?

Mr. RAINEY. The starch that is made from potatoes is used altogether, as I understand it, in manufacturing. In the cotton mills it is made out of rotten potatoes and small potatoes.

Mr. STEVENS of Minnesota. Oh, no.

Mr. RAINEY. It is made out of potatoes not fit for food.

Mr. STEVENS of Minnesota. Made out of small and cheap potatoes, that is true; but not from rotten or worthless stock.

Mr. RAINEY. It is used in the cotton mills as sizing.

Mr. STEVENS of Minnesota. Yes.

Mr. RAINEY. We thought it could stand a tax.

Mr. STEVENS of Minnesota. And sago is used the same way.

Mr. RAINEY. But sago is a food, also.

Mr. STEVENS of Minnesota. But sago for food is free. We do not ask any tariff on that. Sago starch in the manufactures is in competition with potato starch, and it should receive the same rate when it is used for exactly the same purpose and enters into competition with it.

Mr. RAINEY. We think it is used also for other purposes.

Mr. STEVENS of Minnesota. When it is used for the same purpose as a competitive article, ought it not to have exactly the same rate?

Mr. RAINEY. Now, we thought we made the proper cut.

Mr. STEVENS of Minnesota. I am not objecting to the reduction, but what I am objecting to is the unfair competition you are placing upon the American producer when you provide for 1 cent on potato starch and only one-half a cent on sago starch used for exactly the same purpose.

Mr. HARRISON of New York. If my colleague will permit me to interrupt this debate, potato starch is a very large revenue producer, and it was on account of the revenue that we were unable to put the rate any lower, whereas——

Mr. STEVENS of Minnesota. If the gentleman wants revenue, why does not he place the 1 cent on sago? There is none produced in this country.

Mr. HARRISON of New York. Because that would be a prohibitive duty on the starch made from sago. At present the present rate is prohibitive, even at our reduction to the equivalent——

Mr. STEVENS of Minnesota. Is not tapioca and sago free for use for food products?

Mr. HARRISON of New York. It is.

Mr. STEVENS of Minnesota. Admitting that used for food product should be free, why not put on the same tariff when used for the same purpose in manufacture and containing the same constituent material?

Mr. HARRISON of New York. For the simple reason that the same tariff in one case produces revenue and in the other is prohibitive.

Mr. STEVENS of Minnesota. I think the gentleman is mistaken, for this reason: Wherever there is a rate of any sort that makes a distinction between the sago that is used in the arts and for food, the rate for manufacturing use is essentially the same as that which is used for the potato starch that is used for manufacturing purposes. If this sago starch contains about the same constituent material for use in the manufacture and if potato starch has a certain value per pound and will bear a cent per pound tariff and yet yield a revenue, sago starch ought to do the same thing, because it has essentially the same value.

Mr. HARRISON of New York. If the gentleman will permit me to interrupt him again. At a cent a pound we now get $200,000 revenue on potato starch, whereas at a half a cent we only expect to get $5,000 out of all other starches.

Mr. STEVENS of Minnesota. You would get more than that if you made it a cent a pound. That is what I am objecting to as being the unfair competition which you are subjecting our potato raisers to and our starch makers.

Mr. HARRISON of New York. It does not represent a cent a pound, only $6,000 revenue; we have not cut it enough, I am afraid.

Mr. STEVENS of Minnesota. You reduce the tariff on potato starch 33 per cent and starch makers do not object to it, so far as I am informed, but they do object to an unfair discrimination in favor of the starch makers of other countries, and especially of the Tropics, as against ours produced in the small factories in the smaller towns scattered throughout the potato-raising regions of the country.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. Chairman, I wish to impart some information on the high cost of living in England to my valued friend from New Jersey, Mr. McCOY, who represents, I believe, the East Orange district, a Member for whom I have the very highest respect and the kindest of feeling. We have served on the same committee for four years, and I always listen with interest to his speeches upon the floor of this House and, with others, I regret he does not often address the House. I am sure I voice the sentiment of all of my colleagues in the hope he will continue in Congress in spite of any post-office appointments that may be made in his district. Now, he has questioned what a Republican American consul in Japan stated in reference to the high cost of living in that country, and has himself quoted some official as saying that living is cheaper in England than in America. I wish to furnish the gentleman from New Jersey and this House and the country extracts from a letter published in the midst of our campaign last year by the Chicago Daily American, written from Paris, France, on October 8, and signed by William Randolph Hearst, who has a string of Democratic papers reaching from ocean to ocean, and who gave loyal and valuable support to President Wilson and rendered a splendid service to Democracy when he championed the cause of our Speaker for the presidential nomination. Now, listen to Mr. Hearst, high Democratic authority, on the cost of living in England in 1912, the tariff, and the condition of the wage earners in that country:

> Obviously, if the American protective tariff is responsible for the high cost of living which at present prevails all over the world, then undoubtedly our voters owe to their own country and to other friendly nations the humanitarian duty of relieving the oppressive burden of the high cost of living in America and elsewhere by promptly reducing the American protective tariff.
>
> * * * * * * *
>
> Scientific reduction of the tariff consists rather in judiciously and discriminatingly modifying the tariff in a way carefully calculated to benefit all the people of the United States, be they employers or laborers, producers or consumers. To secure and insure such scientific modification of the American tariff I beg most respectively to suggest to Gov. Wilson the following course:
>
> 1. The abandonment of all old stock free-trade arguments based upon fallacies and upon exploded theories and upon promises which have been proven to be false by the practical and unprofitable experience of free-trade nations like England.
>
> 2. The recognition of the principle of protection of American industries and the wise and just application of that principle to those industries which require and deserve protection.
>
> 3. The modification of the protective tariff on the one hand by reciprocity, which will open the markets of foreign nations to our products in return for the opening of our markets to their products, and on the other hand, by preferential duties which will reduce the tariff on goods imported into the United States in American ships.
>
> * * * * * * *
>
> It is useless to talk of a protective tariff properly applied being mainly responsible for the increased cost of living. It is worse than useless. It is senseless.
>
> The cost of living in England, a free-trade country, is quite as great as the cost of living in the United States, a protective country. Indeed, to make an even more convincing comparison, the cost of living in England, a free-trade country, is notably greater than the cost of living in Germany, a protective country.
>
> If, therefore, free trade or radical tariff reduction can reduce the cost of living, why is not the cost of living in free-trade England largely lower than the cost of living in protected United States, or, at least, as low as in protected Germany?
>
> As a matter of fact, even the most radical tariff reduction does not materially reduce the universally increasing cost of living, but it does materially reduce the wherewithal to meet the increasing cost of living.
>
> Radical tariff reduction does force manufacturers out of business and men out of employment, and by throwing a superabundance of labor upon the market does reduce the price of labor, which is wages.
>
> In England the wages paid in most lines of labor are so low as absolutely to shock the American sense of justice and of regard for the general welfare. In every industry that I have had occasion to investigate I have found wages to be 40 to 50 per cent lower in England than in America.
>
> At the time of the recent railway strike in Great Britain I investigated the wages of the engineers and trainmen. I found that the highest salaries paid any railway engineers in Great Britain were less than $15 a week, and that these so-called high wages were paid to only a dozen men who were the star engineers on fast trains meeting the Atlantic liners.
>
> The average engineer received less than $9.50 a week; firemen averaged less than $6 a week; and the average guard, who corresponds to our conductor, received $6.30 a week.
>
> There would be a revolution in America, and a justifiable one, if such wages as these were paid to our competent railway employees. Yet with such wages workingmen in free-trade England are expected to meet a cost of living as high as or higher than ours.
>
> No wonder there are industrial disturbances in England and strikes and riots and men shot down by the soldiery. No wonder there is political and economic discontent and an emigration so great that the steamship lines can not carry all of those who desire to leave England.
>
> The false statement that living in England is cheaper than in America has been made so often that it is believed by those who have not taken the trouble to learn the facts. Living is not cheaper in England than in America. If anything, it is dearer. Food is much dearer in England than in America. Luxuries like fruit and many vegetables are entirely beyond the reach of the average individual.
>
> * * * * * * *
>
> Let all of us Democrats abandon worn-out and worthless free-trade arguments and frankly admit that a certain amount of judicious protection is a beneficial thing for our country and our people. Then let us seek to apply protection discriminately to develop and maintain valuable industries which require protection and which through the just and proper conduct of their business dealings with the public deserve protection.
>
> Let us realize that the tariff (even an unfair tariff) is not the cause of special privilege, but merely a symptom of special privilege—a useful institution partly corrupted by special privilege.
>
> * * * * * * *
>
> Let us then modify the tariff and purify the tariff, together with all the acts and operations of government, to meet the requirements of the times, but let us modify the tariff in a way which will benefit our own Nation at least as much as it will benefit competing nations.

In conclusion, I will give some prices from the London Times of September 10, 1912:

WHAT IT COSTS TO LIVE ABROAD.

The London Times of September 10, 1912, gives the following as the London wholesale prices for the commodities named on the day before:

	Cents.
Lard, per pound	16.25
Bacon, per pound	19.00
Butter, per pound	38.00
Ham, per pound	20.00

These are wholesale prices. Retail prices are from 10 to 20 per cent higher, and still higher if there is free delivery. Those who think that the cost of living is lower in Great Britain than in the United States should try it.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman's time has expired.

Mr. MILLER. Mr. Chairman——

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Minnesota make a motion?

Mr. MILLER. I wish, if I can get recognition, to amend the paragraph.

The CHAIRMAN. That is the only way the gentleman can get recognition.

Mr. MILLER. I have tried to do it two or three times now, in order to offer a bona fide amendment. I move to amend paragraph 239, page 58, by striking out the words "1 cent," after the word "potatoes," and insert in lieu thereof "1½ cents," and the further amendment to strike out from line 9, page 58, "½ cent," and insert in lieu thereof "1 cent."

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment.
The Clerk read as follows:

Page 58, line 7, after the word "potatoes," strike out "1 cent" and insert "1½ cents"; line 9, same page, strike out "½ cent" and insert "1 cent."

Mr. MILLER. It seems to me, Mr. Chairman, that in the application of the jackscrew to the farmer's portion of the tariff bill they squeezed it down so hard that some of the items had the juice squeezed out of them without any rhyme or reason, and this is one of those items. The gentleman has stated, if I understand his position correctly, that they reduced the duty on sago starch, which is the substitute for potato starch, from 1 cent to ½ cent for revenue purposes, and in spite of that I find from the table which his committee has prepared and furnished us for our information and guidance in order that we may vote and act intelligently upon this great bill—those on this side not having had the marvelous opportunity to attend the Democratic caucus, when full illumination was spread upon the various paragraphs—in that table I find it is expected, having reduced the duty from 1 cent to ½ cent, there will be an absolute deficit over the year which has just preceded.

Mr. HARRISON of New York. Will the gentleman pardon an interruption?

Mr. MILLER. Certainly.

Mr. HARRISON of New York. I think he either misunderstood what I said or is misquoting me, because my argument was directed to explaining the discrepancy between the tax on potato starch and other kinds of starch.

Mr. MILLER. As I understood the gentleman's position, I think it is as he stated. And if by having a 1-cent duty on this they derive $7,000 revenue, and if having ½ cent they derive only $5,000 revenue, wherein lies the argument for reducing the tax?

Mr. HARRISON of New York. The gentleman from Minnesota was arguing in favor of putting this at the same rate.

Mr. MILLER. Precisely.

Mr. HARRISON of New York. In order to do that we would have had to reduce the rate on potato starch ½ cent, and give up $100,000 worth of revenue, or else raise the duty on sago starch to 1 cent and make it prohibitive.

Mr. MILLER. I do not propose to reduce either of them.

Now, it is easy to assume that the starch manufacturers of the United States are prosperous and easy-going. As a matter of fact, nearly all the potato-starch manufactories in the West—those being the only ones with which I have had anything to do and about which I have any information—are owned very largely by the farmers and the potato growers, and they act simply as a regulator of the produce from the farm. They use in making starch, as the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. RAINEY] indicated, good potatoes, but too small to be merchantable. When the price of potatoes goes up, why naturally the starch factories close down. Now, if it is proposed by putting potatoes on the free list that the price of potatoes to the farmers is to be so much reduced that they are to become very cheap, then you do not need any duty on starch made from potatoes, because potatoes will be so cheap that the starch factories will all run at full time. But if it is not expected that that great reduction to the farmers is going to occur, then you do need some duty on potato starch. As a matter of fact, the starch factories are not particularly prosperous, but have to eke out a rather precarious existence. And as my colleague from Minnesota [Mr. STEVENS] so clearly pointed out, there is neither logic, economy, money, rhyme, nor reason in putting 50 per cent of the duty on sago starch that is put upon potato starch when both are to be used for identically the same purpose. If we place the duty on sago starch as called for in my amendment, the duty will be the same as in the present law, the duty will be equalized with that on potato starch, and more revenue will be derived for Uncle Sam. I do not say reduce the duty on potato starch. Leave it up that there may be derived the revenue desired by the gentleman from New York [Mr. HARRISON]; but I do say raise the duty on sago starch, thus treating potato starch made by our farmers fairly and bringing in more revenue for our Government. Mr. Chairman, the situation is positively pathetic. There is no question about the merits of the amendment to increase the duty on sago starch. The arguments of those in charge of the bill establish its merits, and yet it will not be adopted. The merits of a proposition receive no consideration here. The Democratic majority have decided there shall be no amendments adopted, so no amendments will there be, and injury after injury will be perpetrated upon the people and industries of America. Such legislative obstinacy presents one of the most remarkable spectacles ever witnessed in the history of our country.

But, returning to potato starch, the rates in the bill will injure that industry and result in serious harm to the American farmer. Potato starch is a by-product of potato raising, and if the potato-starch factories be closed the American farmer will lose a market for an important part of his produce. Not content with placing potatoes on the free list, it is proposed by this rate further to strike at the welfare of the farmer. A sad day, indeed, for the agricultural interests of our Nation.

Mr. HARDY. Mr. Chairman, I rise to point out what seems to me to be a want of intellectual consistency in the positions so frequently taken by the gentlemen on the other side. Almost hundreds of times they have argued to us that a reduction of the duty has been or will be followed by a higher price in the product concerned. Just a little while ago we had an argument from the gentleman from Michigan to the effect that when hides were put on the free list they, on that account, went up in price, and that when the duty on shoes was reduced or cut in half, shoes, on that account, went up sensibly in price. The gentleman from New York [Mr. PAYNE] is constantly making the same argument.

Now, we do not believe that they believe that argument, for every time you try them they oppose all reductions in behalf of the interests that want higher prices. Now, despite the argument, post hoc propter hoc, made by the gentleman from Michigan, if he would be honest with himself he would say that whatever cause produced the rise of price on hides or shoes, it certainly could not have been produced by the reduction of the duty. The truth is that no candid man makes the argument, post hoc propter hoc, except as a suggestion, a persuasive suggestion, and unless he can show the connection between the two he never insists upon its cogency or power.

The men who talk about the low prices that prevailed in 1896 being a result of the enactment of the Wilson bill, and who talk about the panic of 1893 being the result of the Wilson bill, have been simply making this post hoc propter hoc argument: That because one thing followed another it was caused by it. They have never been honest in making that argument with themselves or with the country, because they know that the low prices of 1893 were not connected with the bill that was enacted in 1894, and that the low prices that followed were not caused by it, but were only continued under it.

Mr. McGUIRE of Oklahoma. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman yield?

Mr. HARDY. I regret I can not yield to the gentleman. I have not the time.

Now, I want to say that the man who wants to connect cause with effect will, when it comes to the low prices of 1893 and 1894, discover that those low prices existed before 1893 all over the country under a Republican régime, and he will try to discover the cause. He will find that wool, cotton, and every other agricultural product had gone down and had been going down for years. Corn had been burned in Kansas before the Wilson bill was framed; but it is convenient—and it may be without intentional deception—that they omit those facts when they talk about the low prices that prevailed in 1896. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

They know that in 1897 and in 1898, after the passage of the Dingley law, cotton was still selling at 4 and 5 cents in my country, and wool was still down. They know that bankruptcy and failure had existed before 1893, and even before the election of 1892, and even during 1890 and 1891, all over this country. They know further that by the retirement of bank notes from 1882 to 1892, amounting to over $300,000,000, our currency had been greatly contracted, while the volume of our business and of our production had increased. The intellectually honest man will find some connection between falling prices and a decreasing currency with increasing volume of business. They know also that after the election of 1896 the Republicans took warning and very largely stopped the further retirement of bank notes, and authorized the establishment of small banks, which added many millions to our bank notes, and that this, with large discoveries and production of gold, greatly increased the volume of our money, and that was followed by rising prices. And an honest man may find some connection of cause and effect between these two facts.

Mr. GOOD. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Texas yield to the gentleman from Iowa?

Mr. HARDY. I regret I can not yield to the gentleman in five minutes.

When you discuss the low prices of 1893 and 1894 you should couple with your statement the fact that low prices existed also before 1892 and the fact that for some years there had been falling prices, a greater and greater disparity between the value of gold and the value of farm and other products. You should give the people those facts, and then you will not go before the country under false pretenses, and you will not charge that anybody expects or has expected to go back to the prices of 1896 with the volume of money as it is now. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

Mr. RAINEY. Mr. Chairman, I move that debate on the pending paragraph close in five minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois moves that debate on the pending paragraph close in five minutes. The question is on agreeing to that motion.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. TOWNER. Mr. Chairman, I presume that it will be impossible on either side of the House to claim perfect intellectual honesty in regard to this discussion. I desire, however, in reply to what has just been suggested by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. HARDY], charging that the Republicans are guilty of intellectual dishonesty in claiming that the low prices that existed in 1893 and subsequently were due to the tariff, to say that that is not altogether a myth by any means.

I admit that much that the gentleman has said with regard to the conditions that existed prior to 1893 is true, and I have never heard any Republican claim that the low prices that existed at that time were entirely due to the operation of the tariff. But if that were true, you would have a substantial argument in favor of the bill that you now propose, because your oft-reiterated statement is that this bill will bring low prices because it reduces the tariff rates.

Intellectual honesty compels you to say to the people that you are expecting to give lower rates on food products because you are lowering the tariff rates. Some of us have been attempting to show that that was not always true. Some of us have been attempting to show that that did not inevitably follow. I want to call the attention of gentlemen to this significant fact: It is said by the distinguished chairman of the committee having this bill in charge that they must fulfill their promise to the people to give them free bread, which I presume in his judgment means cheap bread. There is only one country in the world that I know of that gives the people free bread, and that is Great Britain. Yet the price of bread in the city of Berlin is 10 per cent cheaper to-day than it is in London, the price in Paris is 14 per cent cheaper than it is in London, and the price in Vienna is 25 per cent cheaper for bread to its people than in London, where they have free trade in bread and free wheat and free corn. And all those cities, with their lower prices to their own people, are in highly protected countries.

Mr. HARDY. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. TOWNER. I can not yield. I have the same difficulty that the gentleman had.

I want to say, further, that the greatest progress that has been made, both in the raising of prices of wages to their people and in the lowering of prices of food products to them, in comparison with free-trade England, has been made in Germany, and Germany has the highest protection on her farm products of any country in the world.

The result has been that after she more than doubled her tariff on agricultural products in 1906, the stimulus which was given to agricultural production in Germany resulted in a reduction of the prices of foodstuffs to the German consumer.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired. All time has expired. The question is on the amendment proposed by the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. STEVENS].

The amendment was rejected.

The Clerk read as follows:

240. Spices: Cassia buds, cassin, and cassia vera; cinnamon and cinnamon chips; ginger root, unground and not preserved or candied; nutmegs; pepper, black or white; capsicum or red pepper, or cayenne pepper; and clove stems, 1 cent per pound; cloves, 2 cents per pound; pimento, ½ of 1 cent per pound; sage, ½ cent per pound; mace, 8 cents per pound; mustard, ground or prepared, in bottles or otherwise, 6 cents per pound; all other spices not specially provided for in this section, 20 per cent ad valorem.

Mr. RAINEY. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois offers a committee amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 58, line 18, after the word "section," insert the words "including all herbs or herb leaves in glass or other small packages for culinary use."

The amendment was agreed to.

[Mr. DIES addressed the committee. See Appendix.]

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to close debate on this paragraph and all amendments thereto in five minutes.

Mr. COOPER. I want to offer an amendment.

Mr. PAYNE. I would like five minutes.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Then, Mr. Chairman, I modify my request and ask that debate close in 15 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Alabama asks unanimous consent that all debate on this paragraph and amendments thereto close in 15 minutes. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. HARDY. Mr. Chairman, when I arose a moment ago I did not expect to be shot from behind by my colleague from Texas, but I see that such is the case. In regard to intellectual honesty, the gentleman who sat down a little while ago said that he never contended that the tariff bill of 1893 was the cause of low prices in that day. I want to say that a great many protective Democrats have made that statement. I have heard that statement made on the stump by Republicans and Democrats who were leaning toward protection. I do not charge my friend from Texas with a conscious want of intellectual integrity and I may be guilty of an unconscious want of it. It is born with all gentlemen to try to be intellectually honest, but we are not on all occasions. The gentleman from Texas says you are not honest when you say that you do not expect to reduce the price of the producer, while you do to the consumer. If the tariff alone is to be considered, no man intellectually honest with himself has ever said that. We do say we expect to reduce prices very much to the consumer without hurting the producer if by means of tearing down the tariff wall we can prevent the stilted prices being put upon the people by the trusts behind the tariff wall. Where you have no trust, no combination, if you have free, open competition, the producer gets less and the consumer will get the product for less. If you have not open competition, the producers may get little or nothing, and yet the consumers be held up by the trusts. Tear down the tariff wall and you may get competition. Build it up and keep it up and you do not get competition, for inside the tariff wall combination takes the profits from the producer and the consumer alike. The great capitalists store away the profits and pile them into millions and millions of dollars. They build floating palaces on the sea, they build castles in Scotland under the benefit of high protection, while they hold an iron hand of the trusts both on the producer and the consumer alike.

I know that under so-called protection wool sold in Boston substantially for what it sold for in Liverpool year after year and month after month, not because protection might not have enabled them to get a higher price, but because the woolen manufacturing trust held them down. And we know that if there is a world-wide hide trust and a cattle trust, free hides would not have benefited the people and free shoes might not. Combination is becoming world-wide, and the representatives of the people have got to get busy and throttle and break up the trusts. We have not ended our service to the people when we pass a low tariff. That will help us against domestic trusts, but not much against the world-wide trusts. We have got to be like the watchman on the watch tower, every day and every hour faithful, and see that these designing combinations who crave great profits do not maneuver so as to crush the people. These combinations have cut out free trade in everything but labor, but they have had and continue to have free trade in labor, and Puritan old New England is fast being peopled with a foreign population, and all over the land free trade in labor and high prices in trust products prevail. I say, let us start where we may and break down the tariff wall and stop the stilted prices. Let the people get natural and fair and reasonable prices for their products, and let there be no stilted prices for the farmer or the manufacturer. The farmer can live. For 100 years he has been groaning under the burdens of a high tariff, and when we seek to reduce it the hypocritical cry is twofold—save the farmer and save the laboring man! In God's name, when did they ever before care for either the farmer or the laboring man? They care not now and they never cared, but if they can use the farmer as a cat's-paw to pull their chestnuts out of the fire, if they can use the laboring man and his fear that his wages will be reduced as a club in fighting us and preventing us from cutting off some of their profits, they are up and about it. Morning, noon, and night they inject the farmer and the laboring man into this debate. That is the mask behind which they hide their true and hideous face of greed. What we want is simple justice to all, with special privileges to none. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last two words, to comment a little on this paragraph. This is one of the striking cases—only one of many—where the promise made by the Democratic Party not to injure any business is made most apparent and prominent, not in the observance but in the breach. I have a great many letters from people who say that they voted the Democratic ticket upon the strength of that promise, thinking the party would keep its promise, and now, when they get into power, pointing out the different ways in which they have not done it.

This paragraph on spices in the present law puts all unground, raw spices, so to speak, on the free list, and imposes a specific duty on those spices when prepared for the table, ground and put up in packages. It protects the manufacturer in this country not unduly, because of the ground manufactured spices. We import about $10,000,000 worth annually free of duty, a fair chance for a competitive duty which we hear so much about on that side of the proposition. What does this committee do? They go along here and transfer from the free list absolutely all raw, unground, unprepared spices and put on a specific duty per pound, equal to the duty per pound on those spices ground. There is not anyone within the sound of my voice so insane or so ignorant as to believe that that does not shut up the spice mills of this country. They place the same duty on the imported spices, unground, per pound, that is put upon the manufactured spices per pound. How are they going to grind a pound of it in this country when you consider the labor difference between this country and the countries abroad? We are not grinding the spices to sell abroad. We are not exporting them. We are simply grinding them for our own use. Have they kept their promise? I ask gentlemen on the other side of this House whether they have kept their promise in this respect? You got into power partly on that promise. I have received letters by the hundred from people, stating that they voted for you, because you said you would not injure any business; that you were going to help labor; and they are just hoping for the time to come when they can get at you once more, because of your broken promises. Of course, these things please me. If you are going to do this thing, the worse job you do the better I will like it [laughter], because the sooner the people of this country will get relief. Most of them are bound to get it in the neck, as the boys say. I do not believe in any legislation that is class legislation, especially as against the laboring class and the farmer class. I do not believe in it at all. I want to get around to the point where we can protect them, where we can make good the promise you made not to injure any business in this country. Why do you not keep your promise?

Your President is getting anxious about it. I notice by his talks over in New Jersey that he says you have to keep your pledges. He knows, because he was elected, not by the Democratic Party, but by the division in our party, and by a good many Republican votes, expecting him to keep his pledges, and he is anxious to keep them. But you have been up against it when you went to get some appointments that were dear to your hearts, and he told you plainly how he got there and illustrated how you got there. Why do you not keep your word to the American people put in your platform and proclaimed on every stump? Why do you not do it as you have agreed to do it? Why these broken promises? Why did you encourage these hopes and now break them the first time you have an opportunity by the very first act that you seek to put on the statute books?

Mr. COOPER. I offer the following amendment, which I send to the desk and ask to have read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 58, line 14, after the word "cloves," strike out the words "2 cents per pound" and in lieu thereof insert the words "free of duty."

Mr. COOPER. Mr. Chairman, cloves are now on the free list. Last year we imported nearly six and a half millions of pounds, a large proportion of which was used in the manufacture of vanillin. Vanillin is a flavoring extract used extensively in the preparation of various foods consumed by the people of the United States. It used to be made exclusively from vanilla beans, all of which, of course, are imported; they are not grown in this country. Under the existing tariff law vanilla beans are on the free list, but the pending bill proposes to put them on the dutiable list at 30 cents a pound.

The vanillin made from cloves is, I understand, practically identical with that derived from vanilla beans and is equally harmless as an edible. But in this connection a most suggestive fact was brought to light last Tuesday during the debate on the chemical schedule, when the gentleman from New York [Mr. HARRISON] said that vanillin, which got its name from the vanilla bean, is now being made also from certain coal-tar derivatives. I remember that Dr. Wiley, the former distinguished Chief of the Pure Food Bureau, was bitterly hostile to all attempts to compel the people of this country to eat more and more of articles made from coal-tar derivatives.

Now, these coal-tar derivatives come from Germany. That country has a practical monopoly of their manufacture, as the gentleman from New York [Mr. METZ] made very clear during the debate on Tuesday. He told us that he had to buy these derivatives from manufacturers in Germany or they would shut out his business over here, and that he could not get them except upon the terms fixed by the German trust or syndicate. And yet by the pending bill the rate on vanillin, the finished product, has been reduced 10 per cent to the direct advantage of the German manufacturer and of the importer to this country, while on cloves, now on the free list, the rate has been made 2 cents a pound, and on vanilla beans, now on the free list, the rate is made 30 cents a pound. In other words, vanilla beans and cloves, the raw materials of the American manufacturer of vanillin, are taken off the free list and a high tariff put upon them, while the tariff on vanillin, the finished product of the German manufacturer made from coal-tar derivatives, is lowered 10 per cent.

Through the courtesy of my friend the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. GARDNER], I was this morning handed a letter addressed to him from a firm in Maywood, N. J., from which I will now read some very interesting information as to what such a tariff will do:

The production of vanillin in this country from coal-tar derivatives has been so frowned upon by the Bureau of Chemistry, under Dr. Wiley, that we have stuck to the vegetable supply of raw material, namely, cloves. We could not manufacture from the coal-tar derivative if we so desired, because this material, manufactured in Germany, is so controlled by a trust or syndicate that to ruin the American manufacturer they would at any time withhold supplies. This, therefore, would prevent the organization of a plant for the manufacture of vanillin from this raw material in the United States. We are compelled to use cloves, and to reduce the duty on vanillin from 20 cents to 10 cents per ounce and then add 2 cents per pound to cloves, the equivalent of 20 per cent on our raw material, you can readily understand, spells "ruin."

We call your attention to the paragraph toward the bottom of the first column, page 619, of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, in which Mr. METZ says: "All these products are bought from the German syndicate. * * * They are controlled abroad by syndicates, and all the syndicate has got to do is simply refuse to sell the American manufacturer and he is out of business." "Products," to which he refers are coal-tar derivatives such as would be necessary in the manufacture of vanillin from this source in the United States. Even if the foreigner would let this product come to the United States, which he will not, they would still be subject to a duty bearing from 15 to 25 per cent, so that, no matter which way the unfortunate American manufacturer turns, he is crowded out by a tariff on raw material, unintentionally levied for the protection of the German manufacturer.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. COOPER. Can I have one minute more?

The CHAIRMAN. Debate has been closed by order of the committee. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Wisconsin.

The question was taken, and the amendment was rejected.

The Clerk read as follows:

241. Vinegar, 4 cents per proof gallon. The standard proof for vinegar shall be taken to be that strength which requires 35 grains of bicarbonate of potash to neutralize 1 ounce troy of vinegar.

Mr. TREADWAY. Mr. Chairman, I desire to offer an amendment in the form of a new paragraph.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I would like to limit debate on the paragraph.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair suggests the amendment be reported. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Insert in line 22, page 58, after the word "vinegar," the following as a new paragraph:

"241½. Until such time as the opinion of a nonpartisan tariff commission has reported upon the agricultural schedule the rates of duty on all articles in this schedule shall be the same as the rates provided for in the act of August 5, 1909."

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I think the amendment is subject to a point of order probably, but I have no objection to its being voted upon. I ask unanimous consent that debate on this paragraph be limited to 20 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Alabama asks unanimous consent that all debate on this paragraph and all amendments thereto be limited to 20 minutes.

Mr. PAYNE. Reserving the right to object, is that paragraph 241?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. This is a new paragraph; I did not intend it for that. I will ask to close debate and let the gentlemen speak on the next.

Mr. GARDNER. I hope the gentleman will allow some time on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Massachusetts—241½.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Does the gentleman wish to speak to the amendment?

Mr. GARDNER. No; but my colleague does.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I did not intend to cut the gentleman's colleague out. I ask unanimous consent that on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Massachusetts debate may be limited to five minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] asks unanimous consent that debate on the pending amendment and all amendments thereto shall close in five minutes. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none. The gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. TREADWAY] is recognized.

Mr. TREADWAY. Mr. Chairman, perhaps more than half of the district in western Massachusetts I have the honor to represent consists of those interested in agricultural pursuits. I may add the other half are interested in the welfare of their brother farmer. I have sat here patiently listening to the discussion of these sections of this schedule without offering any amendment as we came to them from time to time. It seemed to me that the entire schedule was so contrary to the interests of the farmer, not alone in Massachusetts but throughout this broad land of ours, that we ought not to differentiate between one section or one paragraph in favor of another in offering amendments. I have refrained from speaking for another reason also, because I have realized that the Democratic steam roller, under the able leadership of the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] as chief engineer, has been so carefully and so thoroughly oiled and managed that amendments offered by us on this side of the aisle are treated the way the steam roller crushes the material under its tremendous weight.

But I do wish, Mr. Chairman, in behalf of the farmers of my home section, to protest against the adoption of this schedule until such time as a nonpartisan tariff board can act upon it. They, like other farmers throughout the country, are honest, honorable, hard-working citizens. No class of our citizens labor harder, in my opinion, and obtain less in return than the tillers of the soil. Nothing should be done to lessen their market prices. So I am glad to enter this protest against a change in the protection now afforded them. These protests have come from individuals, agricultural societies, and granges, of which I am proud to be rated as an humble member.

If the cost to the individual consumer is high on produce, as we have heard so many Democratic Members say here on this floor, the reason can not be because the farmer himself is receiving more than is a fair return for the hard toil and labor that he puts into preparing that produce for the market. It is right and fair that this protection should be afforded them. Therefore, as I say, I have kept entirely still during the discussion of this schedule, but I have been thoroughly aroused at the methods you are using in trying to jam down the throats of the American farmer this iniquitous schedule. Give them a fair show, a fair price for their produce, and a fair return for the sweat of their brow. That is all we ask in behalf of our farmer. We ask fair treatment to him by your party. Let this protest of my own constituents go out to-day, as well as the protest on the part of the rest of the farmers in whose behalf others have spoken at the close of this paragraph, and let us be able to tell them that so far as the Republican votes are concerned, we want justice done them through a nonpartisan tariff commission. That is the reason, Mr. Chairman, why I offer this amendment at this time.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment proposed by the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. TREADWAY].

Mr. LOBECK. Mr. Chairman——

The CHAIRMAN. For what purpose does the gentleman from Nebraska rise?

Mr. LOBECK. I would like five minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The time has been closed by the action of the committee. The question is now on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. TREADWAY].

The question was taken, and the Chair announced that the noes seemed to have it.

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Chairman, I ask for a division on that.

The committee divided; and there were—ayes 46, noes 68.

So the amendment was rejected.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

SCHEDULE H—SPIRITS, WINES, AND OTHER BEVERAGES.

242. Brandy and other spirits manufactured or distilled from grain or other materials, and not specially provided for in this section, $2.50 per proof gallon.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate on this paragraph be limited to 15 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] asks unanimous consent that all debate on the pending paragraph be limited to 15 minutes. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none. The gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. LOBECK] is recognized.

Mr. TOWNER. A parliamentary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. TOWNER. As I understood it, the arrangement as to 15 minutes granted to the gentleman from Nebraska and others was that they were to be recognized on paragraph No. 241.

The CHAIRMAN. Two hundred and forty-two.

Mr. TOWNER. That was the last one read, but, as I understood it, time was to be granted for them to speak on the former paragraph.

The CHAIRMAN. There was nothing of that kind stated in the request of the gentleman from Alabama.

Mr. LOBECK. He asked for 20 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Paragraph 241 was read and passed, and then the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. TREADWAY] offered an amendment to insert a new paragraph, and upon that debate was limited to 5 minutes.

Mr. LOBECK. I understood it was 20 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. It was limited to five minutes. And then a vote was had on the amendment proposed by the gentleman from Massachusetts, and the Clerk proceeded to read the bill in regular order. Paragraph 242 was read, and the gentleman from Alabama asked unanimous consent that debate on that paragraph and amendments thereto be closed in 15 minutes, and it was so ordered. The gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. LOBECK] is recognized.

Mr. RAINEY. Mr. Chairman, perhaps it would be agreeable to the gentlemen who want to speak to modify that arrangement and make the speeches three minutes long instead of five minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. RAINEY] modifies that, and suggests that the recognitions during the 15 minutes be for 3 minutes each. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. LOBECK] is recognized for three minutes.

Mr. LOBECK. Mr. Chairman, I did not intend to speak upon this amendment which has just been read. My understanding was that I should have time to speak on the section just previously read.

My object in rising now is to say that I have heard a good deal said in the discussion of this tariff measure about the panic of 1893–1896. I had a good deal of experience in it, personal experience, and in my judgment the tariff was not one of the chief causes of that panic. One of the causes was the fact that the farmers west of the Missouri River who had been buying merchandise from the East could not purchase on account of crop failures caused by drought. Supplies were sent into the district represented by the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. SLOAN] and other neighboring districts in Nebraska and Kansas by the people of the East and the people of Iowa and Illinois to help the homesteaders and pioneer settlers of Nebraska and Kansas.

When these Republican gentlemen discuss 1893 to 1896 they forget 1873–1879. In the district represented by the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. GOOD] they had equally hard times from Cedar Rapids west. In every town along the Northwestern Railroad they were having auction sales at that time, for I remember personally about it. In the district represented by the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. TOWNER] they had the same degree of hard times, and the same was also true in northwestern Iowa.

We had a high tariff in those days. We were living under a Republican tariff. A Republican newspaper, a copy of which I have in my hand, dated in 1877, namely, the Chicago Inter Ocean, does not ascribe those hard times to the tariff. It ascribes the hard times to the money conditions of that time. The failure of Baring Bros., of London, in about 1890, a world-wide failure, was one of the principal causes of the hard times in this country in the nineties.

In Brother MILLER's State, in Minneapolis, about every man was broke who had been speculating in city real estate. It was the same in St. Paul. It was the same in Sioux City, in Mr. SCOTT's district, and the same in Kansas City and in Omaha. It was overspeculation everywhere and the monetary condition that caused the panic of 1893, not the Wilson tariff.

In my time I have seen hogs and cattle and farm products sold at as low prices under a high tariff as under a low tariff, and I have seen the Chicago live-stock market closed for two weeks to the western farmer and stock shipper under the high-tariff times that prevailed in 1873. I was a shipper at the time, and I know from personal experience.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New York [Mr. PAYNE] is recognized.

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Chairman, I rise simply to commend the majority members of the committee for their action on this schedule.

This is one of the schedules in which we made a great increase four years ago, putting the rates up higher than they had ever been before, and it has often been cited as a typical part of our program in revising the tariff upward. I always plead guilty to that charge on this schedule on wines and liquors, and have never had any apologies to make for it, either. [Applause on the Republican side.]

Now, this committee, after considering it, I do not know how long—they say they have been working on this bill for two years, and of course I accept what they say about that—come in here with the schedule exactly as we passed it four years ago, except that they have lowered the duty a little bit on mineral water. [Laughter on the Republican side.] I have contended repeatedly that if the gentlemen would give to the study of these questions the rest of their natural lives, and should pay attention to and avail themselves of such educational facilities as come to them by way of experience, they would eventually get a good deal better tariff bill than has been shown in any attempt they have made at it thus far. This present schedule is an evidence of the advance that they are making.

I hate to have to call these things to the attention of the House even occasionally as they go along. I leave out a large part of the items on which they have done the same things that we did. Of course I am glad of their indorsement, and yet I do not care so much about that, because the facts have come out now about the tariff revision of 1909, and they are so emblazoned in the reports of the Treasury Department during the four years that have passed since the enactment of the present tariff law that the majority on the Committee on Ways and Means no longer ignore them, but indeed print them in their handbook.

Mr. RAINEY. Mr. Chairman, may I ask the gentleman a question?

Mr. PAYNE. Yes.

Mr. RAINEY. I want to ask the gentleman from New York if it is true, as stated by the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. GARDNER], in opening this debate, that the gentleman from New York [Mr. PAYNE] was against his own bill, and that they forced these items into the Payne bill in opposition to the wishes of the gentleman from New York?

Mr. PAYNE. I can explain that so that the gentleman from Illinois can understand it. We adopted the same rule that the majority members of this committee have adopted, and that the majority members of every Ways and Means Committee adopt. The majority members of the committee always go through the bill, discuss it, agree on the rates of duty by a majority vote, and when they have finally agreed upon it they all support the bill in its entirety. That is what we did. The bill was not exactly as I would have liked to have it. No man ever joined in a report on a tariff bill that was just as he wanted it. Why, you know this bill is not in accordance with the views of the gentleman from Alabama, the chairman of your committee [Mr. UNDERWOOD], not by a long shot, and before you get through with it, it will be more out of the way.

Mr. GARDNER. I should like to ask the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. RAINEY] whether he was in favor of free cattle or not, in his committee?

Mr. RAINEY. I was in favor of free cattle in my committee.

Mr. GARDNER. But you are backing up your committee's report?

Mr. RAINEY. Yes.

Mr. PAYNE. I trust I have answered that question to the full satisfaction of my friend from Illinois, and that he understands now that I did disagree with some portions of that tariff law, and I disagree with them yet; but I simply acceded to the will of the majority, just as the gentleman has done and just as other gentlemen on that committee have done.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. Chairman, during my absence from the House my genial colleague, the gentleman from the tenth district of Kentucky [Mr. LANGLEY], delivered a dissertation upon the subject of chickens; and he stated that in his district they raised some chickens and sold a good many chickens. He got his wires crossed. He should have stated that they sold some chickens and raised a good many chickens, because if it was not for the chicken industry in the tenth district there would not be any Republicans there at all. [Laughter.]

Mr. Chairman, I have heard a good deal of talk from the Republicans of this House about this tariff bill, and they have introduced a good many amendments. Their opposition to the bill and their amendments to it remind me of an anecdote. There was an old negro woman, who went from down in South Carolina up into Mr. MANN's district in Chicago and got a position as a cook in the house of one of Chicago's newly rich. Well, they did not have very much to eat, but they had a great deal of style, and they had it in courses; and in the course of a week this negro woman announced that she was going to resign her position. They wanted to know why she was going to quit. She said: "Well, dar's too much shufflin' ob de dishes for de fewness of de vittles." [Laughter.] That is the way it is with our Republican friends. There is too much shufflin' of amendments for the fewness of the substance of those amendments. [Laughter.]

If I am mistaken, I am willing to be corrected; but I understood the distinguished gentleman from New York [Mr. PAYNE] a little while ago to animadvert against President Wilson for going to the State of New Jersey and raising his voice in favor of pure elections.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. THOMAS. I ask for three minutes more.

The CHAIRMAN. The time is limited by order of the committee.

Mr. THOMAS. I will continue on the next paragraph.

[Mr. McGUIRE of Oklahoma addressed the committee. See Appendix.]

Mr. SLOAN. Mr. Chairman, I regret very much that my distinguished colleague from Nebraska can summon no better argument for this tariff bill than the slander of his own fair State, and especially my district. I desire to say as to my district receiving any comfort or aid from the East in 1894, 1895, or 1896 it is absolutely incorrect. We took care of ourselves then and we are endeavoring to take care of ourselves now, and are asking neither favor nor charity from the East and South. Only plain justice. If anything came to the gates of Omaha, I do not know it. Unfortunately, our crops for two of these years were not good. My friend has not his historical facts on straight. We were not under a Republican tariff law, but were under a Democratic tariff law. The Wilson bill was passed August 27, 1894, and until July 24, 1897, when the Dingley law was enacted, was in effect.

Mr. LOBECK. Did not we have a drought in that time?

Mr. SLOAN. We had no drought in 1896. On the contrary, we had the greatest bumper crop in Nebraska that we had had for 25 years. [Applause.]

Mr. LOBECK. You were defending homesteaders from being foreclosed on mortgages.

Mr. SLOAN. God knows I was. We could get little for our crops, and there was no money to pay mortgage or interest. In 1896 we had a bumper crop of corn. We sold wheat from 25 to 40 cents a bushel under that Wilson tariff law. The report of the Ways and Means Committee on this bill quotes wheat at 35 cents per bushel for 1896. We sold the corn of that bumper crop of 1896, when we could get a market, for 8 to 10 cents a bushel, and also used it for fuel. [Applause on the Republican side.]

The CHAIRMAN. All time has expired.

The Clerk read as follows:

243. Each and every gauge or wine gallon of measurement shall be counted as at least 1 proof gallon; and the standard for determining the proof of brandy and other spirits or liquors of any kind imported shall be the same as that which is defined in the laws relating to internal revenue: Provided, That it shall be lawful for the Secretary of the Treasury, in his discretion, to authorize the ascertainment of the proof of wines, cordials, or other liquors, by distillation or otherwise, in cases where it is impracticable to ascertain such proof by the means prescribed by existing law or regulations: And provided further, That any brandy or other spirituous or distilled liquors imported in any sized cask, bottle, jug, or other packages, of or from any country, dependency, or province under whose laws similar sized casks, bottles, jugs, or other packages of distilled spirits, wine, or other beverage put up or filled in the United States are denied entrance into such country, dependency, or province, shall be forfeited to the United States; and any brandy or other spirituous or distilled liquor imported in a cask of less capacity than 10 gallons from any country shall be forfeited to the United States.

Mr. DIES. Mr. Chairman, I just want to make this remark, that every protectionist is a free trader in everything that he does not sell.

Mr. FORDNEY. That is not true, my friend; and you can not apply it to me. The gentleman is mistaken.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman yield?

Mr. DIES. Mr. Chairman, I am going to make it so plain that I will not have to yield.

Mr. FORDNEY. Do not apply that to me.

Mr. DIES. What is the first thing that protection wants? Free labor. You have always stood for an open gate for the cheap labor of Europe to come to compete in your mills and factories with the labor in this country. That was given to you. You had that, and in the progress and growth of time you wanted more free trade. You wanted free trade in raw materials with which you work.

Some, like my friend FORDNEY, were smart enough to know that if they got free trade in labor and free trade in raw materials, the dynamic forces of society would be so great against them that they would be given free trade in everything that they sold. But protection, in its selfishness, not satisfied to demand an open gate for labor, not satisfied to say that a man who works with his hands in a protective mill shall work in competition with the labor market of the world, has gone a step further now and has said that a man who is engaged in a protected industry shall have free trade in labor, and free trade in the materials with which he works—make every laborer stand and deliver in a free-trade market, and make every producer stand and sell his goods or raw material in a free-trade market, and yet give to you the sacred right to sell that which you make in the protective market.

It is the doom of protection in this country. It ought to be so. You open the gates of labor and let every Italian and every Russian and every laborer from Europe come to compete with the labor of the man who labors here. Then you say to the farmer, "Produce that which you have and sell it in a free-trade market." Do not you know that your laborer, Mr. FORDNEY—do not you know that the laborer and the farmer who produces and sells in a free-trade market will have sense enough to demand that he be allowed to buy in a free-trade market? That is, you say to the farmer in America, "You have got to sell in a free-trade market, and you are not as good as a farmer in Argentina or Australia. There they can sell and buy in a free-trade market, but you have got to sell in a free-trade market and buy in a protected market." That is the mistake that you protectionists are making. Your first mistake was free labor. That was bad enough. Now you demand not only to buy your labor in your free market and sell your goods in a protected market, but you demand of a farmer that he sell his wool and his cotton and his raw material in a free-trade market and then sell him back the same wool and the same manufactured stuff in a high protected market. In other words, thank God, the extreme selfishness of protection is overleaping its own bounds.

Mr. MOORE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman——

Mr. DIES. With great pleasure, to my friend from Philadelphia.

Mr. MOORE. Does it not make any difference to the gentleman that the labor that comes into the United States from foreign countries lifts itself to the American standard of wages when it arrives here?

Mr. DIES. Oh, well, if you bring in labor that is cheaper than ours you will bring down the price of our labor, just as if you bring in clothing in competition with the mills of Pennsylvania that will bring down the price of clothing. You are unwilling to bring down the price of your manufactured stuff in competition with cheap labor, but you are willing to bring down labor itself.

Mr. MOORE. Do we not exalt that labor? Instead of breaking it down, do not we build it up?

Mr. DIES. You exalt foreign labor, but you debase domestic labor.

Mr. MOORE. When it gets here we do raise it to the American standard.

Mr. DIES. He thinks a man who labors with his hands is none too good to have foreign competition, but he believes that a man who manufactures with his capital ought not to have the competition. It is all a difference of the standpoint from which you look.

Mr. GARDNER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DIES. With pleasure.

Mr. GARDNER. The gentleman was saying that New England had always been for free labor.

Mr. DIES. I will say that the Republican Party——

Mr. GARDNER. Yes; it always has. It was founded on that cause.

Mr. FARR. Good!

Mr. DIES. The Republican Party must have stood for free labor, else we would not have had it for 50 years. The Republican Party is standing to-day for free raw material. Why? Because the protectionist is selfishness personified. You want to buy in a free market, and you are selfish enough to demand to sell in a protected market.

Mr. MONDELL. Will the gentleman yield?

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. DIES] has expired.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I move that all debate on the paragraph and all amendments thereto be closed in five minutes.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. MOORE. Mr. Chairman, unlike my eloquent friend from Texas, I do not care to discuss this paragraph from a political viewpoint. [Laughter.] There is a moral to be drawn not only from the paragraph but from the schedule we are discussing when we compare it with the schedules we have passed. The hue and cry of the Democratic Party and the bone of their contention against the Republican Party is that the Republican Party stands for the imposition of a tariff upon goods that are imported from foreign countries. It has been heralded from one end of the land to the other that that tariff is "a tax" upon the people. Allen G. Thurman called it a tax upon "everything one wears from the crown of his head to the soles of his feet." But when we analyze this awful "tax" which is now being "imposed" upon the people in a new form by the Democratic Party we find that under the Payne law, which has been so much derided in the course of this discussion, that the entire tariff collections during the year 1912, if apportioned among the 90,000,000 people of the country, would have amounted to $3.15 each. In other words, any gentleman who finds fault with the protective system, that builds up industry and pays wages, can save his portion of the "tax" for a whole year by abstaining from one trip to the theater or by cutting out one-half a box of good cigars or one square dinner for himself and one-half the price of a dinner for himself and friend. This would wipe out the awful burden the Payne law imposed upon him. But I want by contrast to show that, while there is fierce denunciation of the tariff system, which at the worst imposes only $3.15 "tax" per annum upon everybody in the country, there is no word of protest from anyone on the other side of the House, particularly from anyone coming from the State of Kentucky, against the tax that is now being imposed by the schedule which we have under consideration. It will be seen by reference to the figures in the Democratic handbook that the collections at the ports of the United States last year amounted to substantially $311,000,000. This "burden" was so distributed amongst the people of the country that it was imperceptible; but here is a schedule advanced and supported without change by our friends on the other side, without one word of comment, that imposes a direct tax on the people of the United States amounting to $321,000,000 a year, or approximately $3.50 a head, for liquors and tobacco. Why not charge that up to a tariff system?

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired. Without objection, the pro forma amendment will be withdrawn and the Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

244. On all compounds or preparations of which distilled spirits are a component part of chief value there shall be levied a duty not less than that imposed upon distilled spirits.

Mr. TOWNER. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. I shall leave, Mr. Chairman, the gentlemen from Texas to settle the little difficulty among themselves. I want to refer very briefly to a statement that was made by the distinguished gentleman from Texas [Mr. HARDY], however, in his last address, and let me say, parenthetically, during my brief service in this House I have learned to greatly admire the gentleman from Texas. I think there is no more able advocate of this bill upon the floor of this House than the gentleman from Texas [Mr. HARDY], and with characteristic frankness he says to the House now that they do not now intend to be guilty of the intellectual dishonesty of claiming that to reduce the price to the ultimate consumer will not reduce the price also of the producer; but he says, if it is necessary, in order to prevent the exorbitant high prices that are charged the consumer by reason of the trusts, that we should invite this foreign competition, and it is upon that proposition that I desire to say a word. Mr. Chairman, there has never been any distinction made in this country, in so far as trust control has been effected, between those who were protected and those who were not protected. The trusts upon nonprotected articles have been just as effective in controlling and raising prices as those upon protected articles. Nor is it necessary in order to control the trusts that you should open our markets to the nations of the world. Our friends are very fond of calling this a tariff wall. For the sake of argument let us so consider it, just a moment, and in this great trade war in which the producers of these United States are called upon to defend themselves behind their tariff wall I judge that if behind the breastworks there shall be a conflict in which one of those behind the breastworks shall assault another it is not necessary to tear down the wall or our defenses to the enemy and allow them to come in to punish those who are guilty of a misdemeanor behind that wall.

I think we can take care of and punish these malefactors themselves, and I will join with those gentlemen, and I think every man on this side of the House will aid, in preventing trust combinations from raising prices to the consumer of protected products or any products. I think it will be more to our credit and a higher statesmanship to look after those methods of control that are not extraneous, but within our borders and by our own laws control unlawful combinations, instead of tearing down our industries and inviting outside help to control this our domestic trouble. Let us make our laws so that these combinations which raise the price of farm products, or any other production, shall be prohibited by our laws here, whether it shall be a protected article or whether one that is not protected. The fault of the Democratic argument lies first in the fact that to remove the tariff will not aid in our settlement of the trust proposition, and, second, that we can make effective our trust control within our own territorial limits, among our own people, by our own laws, without destroying our protective rates in this country.

Mr. RAINEY. Mr. Chairman, I ask that all debate close in five minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois asks unanimous consent that all debate on the pending paragraph and amendments thereto close in five minutes.

Mr. DIES. Mr. Chairman, reserving the right to object, I would like to address the committee for five minutes.

Mr. MANN. Can not the gentleman take the next paragraph?

Mr. DIES. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. HEFLIN. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MOORE] and a good many other gentlemen on that side do not understand what the tariff tax means here in the United States. If they do understand, they have not given the House to understand that they do understand. The gentleman from Pennsylvania, speaking of raising $300,000,000 in revenue annually, considers that that is the only amount paid by the American people by reason of tariff taxes. I want to say to the gentleman that by reason of this Payne-Aldrich tariff law, the most obnoxious and oppressive tariff bill ever written, the American people are now paying annually twenty-seven hundred million dollars. This Government has entered upon a policy under the reign of the Republican Party of taxing the American people twenty-four hundred million dollars in order to get $300,000,000 in revenue taxes. Your trusts have sprung up under this protective tariff system. A certain article has 50 cents tax on it, and ceases to come into our country and the Government does not derive one copper on that article. The consumer continues to pay the 50 cents. Where does that 50 cents go?

It goes into the pocket of the trust magnate of the United States. He continues to reap his reward and the consumer continues to bear the burden of a 50-cent tax, although the article ceases to come to our country. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

The gentleman from New York [Mr. PAYNE] said, "Why do you not be honest and keep your promise to the people? I want to protect the laboring man; I want to protect the farmer." What a strange note that was coming from him. Why, he is the author of this Payne-Aldrich tariff bill, and what he did with the laboring man in that bill and what he did to the farmer in that bill was a plenty. [Laughter.] And when I heard him say to-day, "I want to protect the laboring man and the farmer," I thought of the signs in front of two stores in London. Two fellows were engaged in selling fish, one's establishment just above the other's. The man on the upper floor hung out his sign, "Fresh fish to-day." The fellow just under him hung up his sign immediately below it, "Not so fresh as ours." And it went on until finally the fish dealer above hung out this sign, "We sell eels to the King," and the man just below him hung out this sign, "God save the King!" [Laughter and applause.]

So, my friends, if what you are doing for the laboring man and the farmer in the Payne-Aldrich tariff law is protection, God save the farmer and the laboring man. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the pro forma amendment will be withdrawn, and the Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

245. Cordials, liqueurs, arrack, absinthe, kirschwasser, ratafia, and other spirituous beverages or bitters of all kinds, containing spirits, and not specially provided for in this section, $2.60 per proof gallon.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Texas [Mr. DIES] is recognized.

[Mr. DIES addressed the committee. See Appendix.]

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

246. No lower rate or amount of duty shall be levied, collected, and paid on brandy, spirits, and other spirituous beverages than that fixed by law for the description of first proof; but it shall be increased in proportion for any greater strength than the strength of first proof, and all imitations of brandy or spirits or wines imported by any names whatever shall be subject to the highest rate of duty provided for the genuine articles respectively intended to be represented, and in no case less than $1.75 per gallon.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. THOMAS] moves to strike out the last word.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. Chairman, it seems that the little explanation that I have to make must be made in courses. [Laughter.] A little while ago I made the statement that I understood the gentleman from New York [Mr. PAYNE] to animadvert against Mr. Wilson, the Democratic President, because he had seen fit to go to New Jersey and make a speech in favor of jury reform. If I am mistaken in what I understood the gentleman to state I would like to be corrected.

Now, there is no man in this House for whom I have a higher regard than that which I entertain for the gentleman from New York [Mr. PAYNE]. All men must concede that he is a very able man. All men must concede that he is an honest man. And yet, Mr. Chairman, with all that, he is merely a Bourbon standpat Republican, who never forgets anything and never learns anything on the tariff question. [Laughter.]

Mr. GARDNER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Kentucky yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts?

Mr. THOMAS. Of course.

Mr. GARDNER. I will call the gentleman's attention to the fact that the gentleman he is talking about is not present.

Mr. THOMAS. Well, I did not know that.

Mr. GARDNER. I thought so.

Mr. THOMAS. But if he were present it would not make any difference. [Laughter.] And if the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. GARDNER] desires he can substitute himself in place of the gentleman from New York. [Laughter.]

Now, I will say that the President of the United States is nothing more than an American citizen, and as an American citizen he has the right to go to New Jersey or to New York or to Massachusetts or to any other place and raise his voice in favor of purity in elections, and if there are any places on the face of God's earth that need something of this character, they are certainly New Jersey, New York, and Massachusetts, if newspaper reports be true. [Laughter on the Democratic side.]

So far as I am individually concerned, I want to say that Mr. Wilson is a Democratic President. [Applause on the Democratic side.] I voted for him. [Renewed applause on the Democratic side.] I was for CHAMP CLARK for the nomination [applause], but Mr. Wilson is my President, and as a Democrat you are going always to find me upholding the hands of Woodrow Wilson. I thank you, gentlemen. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask unanimous consent that the debate on this paragraph and amendments thereto close in five minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] asks unanimous consent that the debate on this paragraph and amendments thereto close in five minutes. Is there objection?

Mr. MANN. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask if there are gentlemen on this side who have amendments which they desire to offer to this schedule? There seems to be none.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered. The gentleman from Texas [Mr. VAUGHAN] is recognized for five minutes.

Mr. VAUGHAN. Mr. Chairman, being only a freshman here, it had not been my intention to make any remarks during the consideration of this bill. However, the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. TOWNER] made statements in his speech which have caused me to address the committee. He said, if I understood him correctly, that they upon that side, the Republicans, are as much opposed as we on this side, the Democrats, to the great trusts and monopolies that control the prices of products in this country, and that they are willing to help toward the enactment and enforcement of a law that will prohibit any organization from controlling the price of such products. In other words, they are willing to be "trust busters."

Mr. Chairman, if it is wrong for people to organize to control the prices of products to the ultimate consumer, or to obtain a monopoly of trade in any product, why in the name of common sense is it not wrong for this Government to lend its aid toward the promotion of any such organization? Why is it not wrong for this Government to enable manufacturers of products of any kind to obtain a monopoly of trade in such products? Why is it not wrong for the Government purposely to so frame the law as to protect anyone against competition? But leaving out the question of right and wrong, if trusts and conspiracies against trade are contrary to sound public policy, why is it not against sound public policy for the Government itself to restrain trade for the special benefit of those seeking it, that they may obtain higher prices from American consumers of their products?

You on that side pretend to be against trusts and conspiracies in restraint of trade, and yet the very essence of your protection doctrine is that the Government should enter into conspiracies in restraint of trade with the favored classes in this country to enable them to monopolize the home market and obtain higher prices from consumers who have to sell what they produce in the open market against the competition of the world. The cotton raisers, the corn raisers, the producers of other agricultural products—the farmers—have to sell their products against the competition of the world. It is beyond the power of this Government to levy any kind of a tariff upon foreign imports that would protect them against competition, because they have no competition, and whenever you have levied a tariff against the importation of anything from abroad which they produce here, you have done it with the intention of fooling them into the belief that they were being protected when you knew they were not, that they might more tamely submit to your protective system, which has caused them to pay so much higher prices for the things they have to buy.

If trusts and conspiracies in restraint of trade are wrong, then why in the name of common sense is not a protective tariff, the very purpose of which is to restrain trade—why is it not wrong?

Some one behind me says, "He's a free trader." Perhaps so. Yes, Mr. Chairman, if being opposed to any kind of a law that lays tribute upon the masses for the benefit of any class or any mass, if being opposed to tariff for protection upon anything, makes me a free trader, I am, then, a free trader. And I need no better argument in favor of my kind of free trade than the fact that even the Republicans are forced to recognize that trusts and conspiracies in restraint of trade are wrong.

Whenever this Government, by any kind of a law, lends its aid to anyone to obtain higher prices for his goods from his neighbor than his neighbor would have to pay but for such law, it robs the one for the benefit of the other, and it is none the less robbery because done under the sanction of law.

It has been said time and time again during the discussion on this bill that it will ruin the "industries" of the country. What industry will be injured by the passage of this bill? Yes; it may injure some. Every industry that is enabled by the provisions of the Payne-Aldrich bill, under which we are now living, to run its hands into the pockets of the people—of the ultimate consumers—and filch from them higher prices for its products through favoritism of the Government will be forced to take its hands out of the pockets of the people.

I stand for the man who asks no favors of this Government except such as it owes to everyone under the flag. I stand for the great body of the people who only ask that the hand of privilege be taken out of their pockets, and in so far as any industry may be injured by being made to take its hands out of the pockets of the people, it ought to be injured, and this bill will injure it to that extent, and to that extent only.

Those who under the protective system are now enjoying the privilege of putting their hands up to their elbows in the pockets of the consumers, and taking as much as they want, will of course howl about being injured, but the great body of the American people will be benefited by this bill, because it lightens the burden of government upon the great consuming masses and puts it on the shoulders of those upon whom it should rest, and it is as free from protection; it is as low a reduction of tariff taxation as the country can stand at this time without such a shock to the business of the country as should be avoided. Of course it would be bad policy to change absolutely and at once from the system of high protection. It has prevailed too many years; under it the great toiling masses of the country have received such a small share of the wealth they have produced and the favorites of protection have grown so much richer. Of course it would be bad policy to eliminate protection at once. It would be a revolution and revolutions always cause shock and disturbance. But, Mr. Chairman, this bill is a long stride in the right direction. It looks toward ultimate reciprocal free-trade relations with all the nations of the world. Mr. Chairman, I wish to say here that I do not have the fears which my colleague from Texas [Mr. DIES] seems to entertain—that this bill is too long a step to take at one time. If I understood him correctly, he is against protection, but he would eliminate it more gradually. Mr. Chairman, I believe the people have waked up. I believe they are ready for this bill, and whether they are ready for it or not, in my judgment, it is the best tariff law that has been written since before the War between the States. It should commend itself to the American people—to their honesty, to their fairness—and I believe it will. It has the unqualified approval of the President, who received the popular approval last fall, whose position, I believe, the people of the United States understood when they elected him, and who, I believe, is in close and sympathetic touch with the people of the United States, understands their will, and will make their will the law when he approves this bill.

The people of the United States have realized that under the Republican protective-tariff system the money to run this Government is collected from the people, not according to their ability to pay, not according to their wealth, but according to what they eat and wear and consume. They have realized that under this system those who toil for their daily bread and are barely able to support their large families pay as much toward the support of the Federal Government as others who own millions. They realize that the protective system lays a heavier burden upon the poor than they are able to bear and a lighter upon the rich than they should be made to bear. They have realized also that under this protective tariff, while the Government gets millions as taxes the favored few, for whose benefit it is levied, get hundreds of millions. They have realized that they pay taxes every time they buy goods, and that when they buy goods that have been imported, or made out of imported goods, they pay taxes to the Government, and that when they buy goods that have been made in this country they pay tribute to the trusts that have grown up under the protective system.

The Republicans used to tell them that those whom they wanted to protect were "infants," and needed protection. The people know how hard it is to pull a full-grown yearling away from his mammy, and now they realize that they should have weaned the calves long ago. It is to be hoped that this bill will wean them, and that the noise they make about being weaned will not be sufficient to disturb the peace of the country.

The Republicans used to tell the people that they wanted to protect labor, to enable those enjoying protection to get higher prices for protected goods and pay their laborers higher wages. They have seen the protected "infants" import cheap foreign labor to compete with labor here and to take the places of those who join labor unions.

The Republicans tell us we should be patriotic enough to protect the "infants" in order to build up home industries, but the people have found out that the "infants" are carrying their goods across the seas, thousands of miles away, and selling them to foreigners cheaper than they do to folks here at home. They love the foreigner enough to sell to him at a lower price than they do us at home, and then they try to work up within us enough hatred or antipathy against the foreigner, whom they favor, to induce us to so frame the tariff law as to prevent the foreigner from bringing any goods over here that might come in competition with what they have to sell.

No, Mr. Chairman, gentlemen need not be alarmed. I know that those who are enjoying the special privileges of high protection; the privilege of levying tribute upon the people; the kind of special privileges that kings and queens in days gone by sometimes granted to royal favorites—yes; they are going to howl when separated to so large an extent from their privilege of collecting tribute from the people, but the people are not fools, as these Republicans think they are, and they will understand. But, whatever may be the result, be assured that we are right. It may be that the power of those who have enjoyed the benefits of protection at the expense of the masses may be strong enough to produce such a disturbance on account of being separated from their privileges as to cause such a condition, for a while, as may cause the people to think they were wrong in turning away from protection. It is to be hoped such will not be the case. But the people are not wrong in renouncing protection, and if the policy entered upon by the enactment of this bill is steadily adhered to for a sufficient time and given a fair trial, it will bring prosperity to the great masses of the people, and the burdens of Government will bear lightly on their shoulders, and no more heavily on the rich than they are easily able and should, in justice, be made to bear. The policy entered upon should and will ultimately prove successful, because it looks toward the establishment of our taxing system upon the principles of justice and "equal rights to all, and special privileges to none."

MR. Chairman, while I am before the committee I wish to call the attention of the committee and of the country to one feature of this question which has not been mentioned in this discussion. The duties levied by this bill upon imported spirits, wines, and other beverages under Schedule H, now under discussion, are the same as those levied under the present law, the Payne-Aldrich bill, paragraphs 300 to 311 of that law corresponding to paragraphs 242 to 253 of this bill. It is well that the duties are not reduced, for the country should not be flooded with cheap liquor. Liquors are luxuries, not necessaries The man who indulges in their use does not have to do so, and has no right to complain if the Government imposes a tax upon his indulgence in a beverage which, to say the least of it, never benefits him, but often results in his ruin. The consumption of such liquors, therefore, as long as their sale as beverages is permitted at all, is a very proper source from which to derive revenue. But, Mr. Chairman, surely no Democrat will contend that a tariff should be laid upon imported liquors in order that distillers or brewers may have protection against foreign competition, and thereby get a higher price for their liquors. For however much in favor of liquor some of my brethren on this side may be, surely there is no Democrat in favor of a protective tariff for the benefit of the brewers and distillers, for a tariff for protection is certainly contrary to our party faith; and though we have some sugar-protection Democrats, and perhaps some Democrats who may be in favor of protection for producers of some other things, I hope we have no liquor-protection Democrats.

The Republicans, in the Payne-Aldrich bill, raised the tariff on imported spirits from $2.25 a gallon, where the Dingley law placed it, to $2.60 per gallon. Since the internal-revenue tax on such liquors produced in this country is only $1.10 per gallon, it is easy to see that the difference between the two gives protection to the American distiller to the amount of $1.50 per gallon. I am confident, Mr. Chairman, that an examination into the facts will convince the Ways and Means Committee that the American distillers reap the benefit of this differential by collecting from their customers the higher price they are able to collect on account of it. If so, they collect from the American consumers of spirits, over and above ordinary profits and over and above the amount they now pay as internal-revenue tax, which they, of course, get back when they sell, the sum of $1.50 on each proof gallon they sell. If so, Mr. Chairman, this differential is putting about $180,000,000 a year in the pockets of distillers through the higher price they are able to get on account of it, for of the more than 150,000,000 gallons of spirits produced in the United States each year more than 120,000,000 gallons are consumed in the United States; and I see from the report of the Ways and Means Committee which accompanies this bill, on page 189, that there were only 3,061,505 gallons imported last year.

It is easily apparent that the differential of $1.50 per gallon practically prohibits the importation of spirits from abroad to compete with the domestic article, and enables the distiller to collect it from the trade.

I could take up the question as to how the differential between the tariff duties on beers and other similar fermented liquors and the internal-revenue tax on such liquors produced in the United States affords protection to the brewers, and that they get the higher price for their stuff which the differential makes it possible for them to get, and which I am satisfied they do get, and are gathering into their tills by the favor of the Government through this protective differential about $400,000,000. Mr. Chairman, I shall not go into the details now. My purpose in calling attention to the matter is to express the hope that the Ways and Means Committee will report a bill that will take the protection out of Schedule H and make it operate to produce revenue. I have introduced such a bill, and it has been referred to the committee. As a Democrat I am opposed to protection, and, while I believe in taxing luxuries, I am opposed to taxing liquor drinkers for the benefit of liquor makers.

If the internal-revenue taxes on liquors is increased to equal the tariff taxes levied on imported liquors and the differential wiped out, it is safe to say that about $500,000,000 will find its way to the Government Treasury every year which now overflows the tills of the liquor lords of America through the favoritism of this differential. Let this be done, and tariff taxation can be removed from every necessity and every comfort the people would really like to enjoy.

The CHAIRMAN. If there be no objection the pro forma amendment will be considered as withdrawn, and the Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

SCHEDULE I—COTTON MANUFACTURES.

255. Cotton thread and carded yarn, combed yarn, warps or warp yarn, whether on beams or in bundles, skeins, or cops, or in any other form, except spool thread of cotton, crochet, darning, and embroidery cottons, hereinafter provided for, shall be subject to the following rates of duty: Nos. 1 to 9, inclusive, 5 per cent ad valorem; Nos. 10 to 19, inclusive, 7½ per cent ad valorem; Nos. 20 to 39, inclusive, 10 per cent ad valorem; Nos. 40 to 49, inclusive, 15 per cent ad valorem; Nos. 50 to 59, inclusive, 17½ per cent ad valorem; Nos. 60 to 99, inclusive, 20 per cent ad valorem; No. 100 and over, 25 per cent ad valorem. Cotton card laps, roping, sliver, or roving, 10 per cent ad valorem; cotton waste and flocks manufactured or otherwise advanced in value, 5 per cent ad valorem.

Mr. GARDNER. Mr. Chairman, I have an amendment to offer to the present paragraph, but it covers several paragraphs; and so, if it is adopted, which it will not be, I shall move to strike out the subsequent paragraphs to which it refers when they are reached.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Massachusetts offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

Mr. GARDNER. I ask unanimous consent that the amendment be not read, in order to save time, and permit me to go ahead and debate it by unanimous consent of some sort.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, of course I should like to have the amendment read for the information of the House before the gentleman debates it; but before it is read I am perfectly willing to see if we can reach an agreement about time on this schedule. I think the cotton schedule is a schedule which, if you amend one portion, you must amend the balance. If the gentleman has a proposition to offer concerning a reasonable limitation of debate, I shall be glad to agree upon it.

Mr. MANN. Let us see if we can reach an agreement. The amendment offered by the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. GARDNER] covers the first three paragraphs of this schedule—255, 256, and 257. I do not know whether any gentleman on this side desires to offer an amendment to other paragraphs, with the exception of one or two.

Mr. FARR. I do.

Mr. MOORE. There will be others.

Mr. BUTLER. I wish to offer an amendment to the paragraph on laces.

Mr. MANN. Can we get a memorandum of the paragraphs to which gentlemen desire to offer amendments after 257?

Mr. BUTLER. I desire to offer an amendment to paragraph 270 in regard to lace window curtains.

Mr. MOORE. I have one to the upholstery paragraph—263.

Mr. AUSTIN. And I have one to paragraphs 264 and 265.

Mr. MANN. Then, as I understand, gentlemen desire to offer amendments to paragraphs 263, 264, 265, 266, and 270 in addition to the three paragraphs covered by the amendment of the gentleman from Massachusetts. Can we not reach an agreement as to time for debate on the paragraphs covered by the Gardner amendment in the way of general debate, and then the other amendments, which would be limited?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I suppose gentlemen who offer these amendments can not take more than 5 minutes, so that would be 25 minutes for those. I suggest that we agree on time for general debate on the schedule, and then, if gentlemen do not object, we will vote on all the amendments when we finish the schedule.

Mr. MANN. I suggest that we have, if we can, an agreement for debate of the amendment of the gentleman from Massachusetts, which might be general, and then an agreement that when the other paragraphs are read amendments may be offered and a limit of time for debate on those.

Mr. AUSTIN. I suggest that we agree on a limited time to discuss the schedule and divide it up between those who have cotton mills or cotton industries in their districts.

Mr. LENROOT. I think I should object to the proposition put in that form.

Mr. MANN. We can debate the particular paragraphs when we reach them when the amendments are offered, so that will not be stretched out.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I do not see how we can do that. If my friends thought that there was a chance of passing the amendments, that might make a difference.

Mr. MANN. When the amendment is offered to the paragraph, the RECORD shows that such a paragraph is read and the amendment offered, and the Member discusses it, and it shows what it is. Without that the amendment does not mean anything to one who reads the proceedings.

Mr. MOORE. May I inquire whether it is the intention of the committee to offer any amendments?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. There will be a few committee amendments.

Mr. MOORE. It is not likely that the committee will accept any amendment?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Yes; they might offer the same proposition as the committee offered.

Mr. MOORE. In view of the experience we have had in the House, I, for one, am willing to submit the amendments without discussion. I do not want to commit anybody else. It seems to me that this is a schedule that would be affected all along the line by the change made in any one paragraph, and on the statement of the gentleman that no amendments will be accepted by the committee, I would be willing to forego discussion.

Mr. MANN. Would the gentleman from Alabama be willing to agree to give us an hour or an hour and a half on the pending amendments, in the way of general debate on this side, and then five minutes on each of the five paragraphs?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I would be willing to give the gentleman an hour. We have got to have some time ourselves.

Mr. MANN. I think we will do fairly well on the bill if we get through this schedule and another one to-day. It would be a great personal accommodation to me to give us an hour and a half on this proposition and then five minutes on the other paragraphs. There is a great demand for time on this proposition. I do not care how much time is used on the other side.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I will agree to that in this way. The sections the gentleman is talking about are 263, 264, 265, 266, and 270.

Mr. MANN. That is all.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. As I understand, the gentleman wants——

Mr. MANN. An hour and a half on the pending amendment, which will be considered in the way of general debate, and the Clerk read the other paragraphs, and we have five minutes on those.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Ten minutes' debate on each side on those paragraphs, and I control the time?

Mr. MANN. Five minutes on our side on each paragraph.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Of course, if I do not want to use the five minutes I need not do it, but the gentleman wants an hour and a half general debate on his side. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that there may be an hour and a half general debate on each side on this schedule, and after that is concluded the debate then is to be limited to paragraphs 263, 264, 265, 266, and 270, and that on each of these paragraphs there shall be five minutes debate on each side, one half to be controlled by the gentleman from Illinois and the other half by myself.

Mr. BUTLER. Mr. Chairman, I am not going to object, but let it be understood that my colleague from Pennsylvania [Mr. MOORE] has an amendment to paragraph 270 which he desires to offer.

Mr. MANN. That is included.

Mr. BUTLER. I have one also, and we can not speak in concert.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. One of the gentlemen can speak in the general debate.

Mr. BUTLER. If I am given a chance in general debate that is satisfactory.

Mr. MANN. Is it the same amendment or a different amendment?

Mr. BUTLER. It is practically the same.

Mr. MOORE. I would like to state that there are two other amendments to be offered. Mr. VARE has an amendment he would like to offer.

Mr. MANN. Every paragraph is covered, but of course only five minutes on a side are allowed on a paragraph. I am trying to get the most time that I can.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Alabama asks unanimous consent that there be three hours of general debate upon the amendment now pending, to be offered by the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. GARDNER], one-half to be controlled by the gentleman from Alabama and one-half to be controlled by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN]; that then there shall be on paragraphs Nos. 263, 264, 265, 266, and 170, 10 minutes of general debate on each paragraph, one-half of the 10 minutes to be controlled by the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] and one-half by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN], and that at the conclusion of that time all debate on this schedule shall end. Is there objection?

Mr. DIES. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry. What is the amendment of the gentleman from Massachusetts about which three hours of debate are to occur?

Mr. MANN. It is an amendment to the first three paragraphs of the schedule.

The CHAIRMAN. It has not yet been reported.

Mr. MOORE. Mr. Chairman, do I understand the gentleman from Massachusetts proposes to offer an amendment to three paragraphs, and that the general debate is to be upon that amendment?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. The general debate would be upon the entire schedule.

Mr. MANN. At any place in the schedule.

Mr. MOORE. It is not to be limited to what the gentleman from Massachusetts proposes?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Oh, no. The general debate is on the schedule.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, as I understand it, when the general debate closes the Clerk will read the schedule paragraph by paragraph, and when we reach the paragraphs where the debate is to be we will have the debate.

Mr. MANN. That is correct.

The CHAIRMAN. That is the understanding. The Clerk will report the amendment offered by the gentleman from Massachusetts.

The Clerk read as follows:

255. Cotton thread and carded yarn, warps or warp yarn, in singles, whether on beams or in bundles, skeins, or cops, or in any other form, except spool thread of cotton, crochet, darning, and embroidery cottons, hereinafter provided for, not colored, bleached, dyed, or advanced beyond the condition of singles by grouping or twisting two or more single yarns together, shall be subject to the following rates of duty: Nos. 1 to 9½, inclusive, 5 per cent ad valorem; Nos. 10 to 19½, inclusive, 7½ per cent ad valorem; Nos. 20 to 29½, inclusive, 12½ per cent ad valorem; Nos. 30 to 49½, inclusive, 20 per cent ad valorem; Nos. 50 to 59½, inclusive, 22½ per cent ad valorem; Nos. 60 to 99½, inclusive, 27½ per cent ad valorem; No. 100 and over, 32½ per cent ad valorem. Cotton yarns, combed, twisted, dyed, colored, or advanced in manufacture beyond singles in the gray, 2½ per cent ad valorem in addition to the rates otherwise chargeable thereon. Cotton card laps, roping, sliver, or roving, 10 per cent ad valorem; cotton waste and flocks, manufactured or otherwise advanced in value, 5 per cent ad valorem.

256. Spool thread of cotton, crochet, darning, and embroidery cottons in any form shall be dutiable at the same rates of duty as the single yarns from which they are made.

257. Cotton cloth of plain weaves, not bleached, dyed, colored, stained, painted, printed, or mercerized, containing yarn the highest number of which does not exceed No. 10, 5 per cent ad valorem; exceeding No. 10 and not exceeding No. 20, 7½ per cent ad valorem; exceeding No. 20 and not exceeding No. 30, 12½ per cent ad valorem; exceeding No. 30 and not exceeding No. 50, 20 per cent ad valorem; exceeding No. 50 and not exceeding No. 60, 22½ per cent ad valorem; exceeding No. 60 and not exceeding No. 100, 27½ per cent ad valorem; exceeding No. 100, 32½ per cent ad valorem. Cotton cloth of plain weaves when bleached, dyed, colored, stained, painted, printed, or mercerized shall be subject to a duty of 2½ per cent ad valorem in addition to the rates otherwise chargeable thereon.

257½. Cotton cloth of fancy weaves, not bleached, dyed, colored, stained, painted, printed, or mercerized, containing yarn the highest number of which does not exceed No. 10, 12½ per cent ad valorem; exceeding No. 10 and not exceeding No. 20, 15 per cent ad valorem; exceeding No. 20 and not exceeding No. 30, 20 per cent ad valorem; exceeding No. 30 and not exceeding No. 50, 27½ per cent ad valorem; exceeding No. 50 and not exceeding No. 60, 30 per cent ad valorem; exceeding No. 60 and not exceeding No. 100, 35 per cent ad valorem; exceeding No. 100, 40 per cent ad valorem. Cotton cloth of fancy weaves when bleached, dyed, colored, stained, painted, printed, or mercerized shall be subject to a duty of 2½ per cent ad valorem in addition to the rates otherwise chargeable thereon.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. GARDNER].

Mr. GARDNER. Mr. Chairman, this schedule was prepared by the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. GREEN] and by me. No one else is in any way committed to it. We have endeavored to draw a cotton schedule which will come within the four corners of the Tariff Board report. There is only one criticism which can justly be made in respect to its not coming within the bounds of the Tariff Board report. It is a fact that all along the line we allow an additional duty of 2½ per cent to offset the process of coloring and bleaching cloths. Some gentlemen may claim that this duty is not in accordance with the Tariff Board's report. The Tariff Board report was incomplete in its figures on finishing cloths. For instance, it gave us no figures on the foreign costs of finishing cloths, such as ginghams, made by weaving various colored threads. We did not feel justified in saying that finishing mills are entitled to no protection whatever; consequently we allowed a modest 2½ per cent. Moreover, Mr. Chairman, the circumstances have a good deal changed since the report of the Tariff Board was issued, owing to a general rise in pay in the textile industry. The result of our figuring is roughly this: Take cotton cloth, which is the true measure of the whole cotton schedule—under the Payne law the average ad valorem duty for cotton cloth in 1912 was 42.75 per cent. The highest duty proposed under the Green-Gardner proposed amendment is 42½ per cent on cotton cloth, no matter how fancy the weave, no matter how complicated the coloring.

The duties on cotton cloth in the Green-Gardner amendment run from 5 per cent on the cheapest cotton cloth to 42½ per cent on the most highly complicated weaves made from the finest of yarns, whereas the Payne law, on the average, in 1912 was higher——

Mr. BARTLETT. If the gentleman will permit a question. You have, according to that, reduced the rate upon the commoner cotton cloth below the pending bill, I understand.

Mr. GARDNER. Yes; below the pending bill. I shall explain that circumstance in a minute or two. I have only 10 minutes.

Mr. BARTLETT. I beg the gentleman's pardon.

Mr. GARDNER. In the first place, Mr. GREEN and I wish it to be understood that if we were drafting a law we should make the duties specific instead of ad valorem. We believe in specific rates for the cotton schedule, but we have drawn this amendment in ad valorem shape so that the House may understand what GREEN and GARDNER think are the proper ad valorem equivalents for the specific duties which they would approve. The criticism may be made that we have lowered the Underwood rates on coarse cotton cloth and raised it on fine cotton cloth, and that coarse cotton goods are made in the South, and that fine cotton goods are made in New England. That is partly true, but it was not for sectional reasons that we made the changes.

As a matter of fact, in the South to-day great quantities of fine goods are made, and in New England plenty of coarse goods are made. Still, it is true, comparatively speaking, that on the whole the Green-Gardner amendment is more favorable to New England than the schedule which the gentleman from Alabama proposes. However, I do not propose to distort this discussion into a sectional dispute.

Mr. BARTLETT. That was not the purpose of my inquiry at all.

Mr. GARDNER. I understand perfectly. Now, Mr. Chairman, the American Cotton Manufacturers' Association, at the head of which is Mr. Parker, of South Carolina, presented a schedule to the Ways and Means Committee. Out of 42 rates of duty proposed in the Green-Gardner amendment I believe that only 4 are higher than the corresponding rates proposed in the Parker bill, while 4 of our rates are lower than the corresponding rates of the Underwood bill. On the whole, our schedule is substantially lower than the Parker schedule.

The fact of the matter is, Mr. Chairman, that personally I do not believe that cotton cloths made from yarns up to twenties need much, if any, protection; that is, provided that the cloth is a plain cloth, unbleached, not a fancy cloth or a colored cloth. In my opinion these fancy weaves, these Jacquard weaves, these high-numbered fine yarns, all need a great deal greater protection than is accorded them in the Underwood bill. I support that opinion partly by citing the importations which have actually taken place under the high duties of the Payne law and partly by the report of the Tariff Board.

I shall now address myself to what I believe to be an entirely mistaken classification in the cotton schedule of the Underwood bill. Paragraph 257 allows only 2½ per cent extra duty, no matter how complicated the finish, no matter how wonderful the pattern, no matter how many different colored threads are woven together, no matter what dyes are used. The Underwood schedule allows 2½ per cent duty to compensate for the bleaching of coarse brown cotton cloth like this which I hold in my hand. [Exhibiting.] Yet the Underwood schedule allows only the same compensation for weaving this intricate design in colors, such as the one I am showing you. [Exhibiting.]

In each case the Underwood schedule allows 2½ per cent compensation for the extra work. Could anything be more unreasonable? Consider the vast difference in the labor involved.

This morning I went into Woodward & Lothrop's store and there was introduced to Mr. Mack, the chief of the white-goods department, and Mr. Bussell, who has charge of the department in which ginghams are included. I bought a number of pieces of cloth. They could not tell me the numbers of the yarns out of which these pieces of cloth were woven. However, I had the Tariff Board report with me, and I bought goods like several of the samples investigated by the Tariff Board.

Here, Mr. Chairman, is a piece of what is known as "long cloth." No. 15 of the samples of the Tariff Board report is "long cloth." Now, the Tariff Board's report gives the number of the finest yarn in that sample as 40. As you will observe, this cloth is bleached. If it were unbleached, the duty would be 17½ per cent, but inasmuch as it is bleached, the duty is 20 per cent under the Underwood bill. Here we have a piece of Persian lawn. Sample No. 19 in the Tariff Board report is Persian lawn made from yarns whose highest number is 120. Assuming that this simple white Persian lawn which I hold in my hand is of the same fineness, the duty under the proposed schedule would be 30 per cent.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman's time has expired.

Mr. MANN. I yield to the gentleman five minutes more.

Mr. PALMER. Would I interrupt the gentleman if I asked him a question not exactly on that proposition? He may have covered it, and if so, I would not ask him to repeat it. How does the gentleman's substitute compare with the Hill bill, which was offered last year?

Mr. GARDNER. We are higher than the Hill bill on plain cloths except the coarse kinds. We are lower on the coarsest yarns and much higher on the medium and fine yarns. On fancy weaves and on Jacquards we are higher in the higher numbers and lower in the lower numbers, but on the whole we are higher than the Hill bill.

Mr. PALMER. The gentleman does not claim that it does not follow the report of the Tariff Board?

Mr. GARDNER. The gentleman claims exactly that. If he has time he will read a telegram in which the chairman of the Tariff Board declares that he has never consented to give his approval to the Hill bill.

Mr. Chairman, I have shown you this Persian lawn, dutiable at 30 per cent, and this long cloth, dutiable at 20 per cent. Now let me show you some singular comparisons in fancy weaves.

This single white cloth here being dutiable at 30 per cent, what do you suppose that the duty is on this other intricate weave of beautiful colors? [Indicating.] This sample here is made out of yarn No. 28 in the warp and yarn No. 20 in the filling. It is known as a Jacquard gingham. It is dutiable at only 15 per cent under the Underwood bill. Here is another Jacquard gingham [indicating], No. 32 in the warp, No. 47 in the filling, and that is dutiable at only 20 per cent under the Underwood bill. Here is another Jacquard gingham, also dutiable at 20 per cent under the Underwood bill [indicating]. Mind you that ginghams, gentlemen, are made by weaving colored threads, a difficult process and a slow process as compared with weaving gray yarns into plain cloth. What are known as "prints," which used to be so popular, are made by coloring the cloth after it is woven. Machinery to make print cloths goes at a tremendous rate of speed, but no such speed is possible when a pattern is to be woven.

Now, Mr. Chairman, here is a Jacquard madras. No. 70 yarn forms part of the filling; 13 waste, part of the filling; 13 dyed, part of the filling; and 42 card in the warp. There [indicating] is a very pretty, a very wonderful, and a very complicated fabric. Gentlemen, that splendid product is dutiable under the Underwood bill at a lower rate than that plain white fabric [indicating]. That plain white fabric [indicating] carries a 30 per cent duty, while the fancy weave carries only a 25 per cent duty.

Mr. COOPER. What is the value of those two, respectively?

Mr. GARDNER. I do not know the value of this fancy sample; but I can tell you the retail value of the plain sample, because I bought it this morning. I paid 18 cents a yard for it. This is a half yard of Persian lawn. The price that Woodward & Lothrop paid for it was 12 cents.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. BUTLER].

Mr. BUTLER. Mr. Chairman, I had expected to offer an amendment to paragraph 270, but having had an uncomfortable and unsuccessful experience in my effort to secure the adoption of an amendment heretofore, I shall forego the pleasure of the bowling over which my colleague from Pennsylvania [Mr. FARR] will get when he offers his amendment in behalf of the lacemakers. This paragraph covers lace, window curtains, netting, pillow shams, and so forth. The duty on the articles named in this paragraph is to be reduced.

I do not wish to speak to the amendment, which, of course, will be defeated. It should be adopted because it is intended to benefit and stimulate a great industry. I do not criticize gentlemen on the other side for passing a tariff bill. This much is expected of them. President Wilson, for whom I entertain the most favorable and kindly impression, yesterday said that the country did not go Democratic last year. If it did not, I would like to know the way it did go. [Laughter.] He said it could not go Republican because of political differences in our party which led to division. His warning was in his fear of the future. I believe the country expects the gentlemen of the majority to pass a free-trade bill. The American people did not expect it last fall, but they have now concluded that the majority will pass the bill which the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD], with the usual candor that he shows in his speech, said is a bill in which the protection idea has been forgotten by the gentlemen who framed it.

Therefore it is useless to speak to an amendment with any hope for its adoption, especially if such amendment contains a bit of protection in it. But I desire to present an humble protest, not made by what you term the protected interests, but made by the laboring men, the operators employed in the lace mills of Chester, Pa.

It may be unfortunate for their cause, Mr. Chairman, that they addressed this remonstrance to Senator PENROSE and to me, for a cause which we should advocate would be looked upon with suspicion by a free trader. If they had addressed it to the House it might have had, perhaps, a more patient and respectful hearing. The majority here only stares at the petitioner when he holds in his hands a petition for protection. In this protest these men say that they desire Senator PENROSE and me to vote against the recommendations of the Committee on Ways and Means concerning lace and lace curtains.

Well, so far as my vote goes, not to mention that of the Senator, they will not be disappointed. The petitioners further say that the adoption of their recommendation—meaning the recommendation of the Ways and Means Committee—means an increase in foreign competition, and "also means less employment and a reduction in the pay envelope for the undersigned." "Therefore," they say, "we earnestly plead for your support in the retention of the present rates."

I shall place this in the petition basket where it will pass unnoticed and unhonored—to be returned to them by the thin and thorny hand of free trade in about six months from this time.

It is only because of this short, well-pointed, and humble remonstrance that I raise my voice against what seems to me to be a positive wrong. It may not be, Mr. Chairman; when I think of all the different kinds of reformers who participated in the last campaign, I thought of some of them as the philosopher did of the tack upon the floor, most dangerous when pointing heavenward. If this bill will take from these men any part of the pay they have heretofore had, it ought not to pass. Who will deny that?

I do not believe that we are to have a condition in the United States in the business world, such as was described and promised by Democratic orators last fall in their campaign, which would correspond to glories found only in the sky. These same men were promised less expense in their living and more money in their purses. A state of joy treasured in the hearts of angels and hoped for in the breasts of men. While this debate is raging here you admit that your only expectation is to prevent an increase in the present cost of living. You further admit thereby that you do not expect to reduce it. I hope we shall not have disaster. Oh, I sincerely hope that we shall not. I do not predict it, Mr. Chairman. But I am anxiously waiting. I do not wish to see the fulfillment of Republican prophecy. It means distress. Our party can better stand defeated than to be victorious by encouraging disaster.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I yield two minutes more to the gentleman.

Mr. BUTLER. I thank the gentleman from Illinois. Mr. Chairman, I believe that gentlemen, sensible men as they are, in making their air castles do not consider for one moment who are likely to occupy them. You have promised us a state of affairs which I believe that you can never supply. I do not believe that it is possible to cheapen an article of commerce without cheapening every element that goes into its production. Therefore, when you cheapen the products of the country, I believe you are bound to cheapen the labor that brings them forth. If your bill justifies your predictions, your lease upon power is indefinite. If it fails, you will retire for a generation. These lace makers did not expect you to convert our customhouses into market places where their product will be put in competition with that of the foreigner at ruinous prices. You did not tell them this last fall, although you propose to do it now.

Upon this lace schedule these petitioners desire me to say to you that the wages on Nottingham lace curtains represent from 45 to 58 per cent of the value; that is, in the manufacture of Nottingham lace curtains the workingmen get from 45 to 58 per cent of the value of the product. Furthermore, in the comparison which they make—and the comparison is made by workers who come from English and Scottish mills—the difference in the rate of wages here is shown to be 61½ per cent over the union rate in Nottingham, and from 164 to 327 per cent over the rate in Scotland. It is not the lack of knowledge but the lack of time which prevents me from making the prediction of conditions which I believe you are designedly working out for these men. They now understand that you propose to increase the importation of curtains by this competitive law which is to be forced through by your forces riding unbridled at the business affairs of all the American people. What explanation will you make when election day comes again? These people expected you to reduce duties, but did not dream that you would destroy business.

These employers desire me to say to the House that the machinery used in these mills is employed only two-thirds of the time, because the demand for the product is not sufficient for their employment a longer time. There is no sale for it. There is no use for it. It can be used for one purpose only, and that is for the manufacture of Nottingham lace curtains. When you are through, what will become of it? [Applause on the Republican side.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. GREEN].

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Mr. Chairman, everything I have to say will be entirely technical, but I hope there are some gentlemen on this and on the other side who wish to learn something with reference to the technicalities of this schedule.

Last year and year before, if I remember right, a cotton bill was introduced by the Democratic majority of this House. The bill now before us differs from it in some very important particulars. In some respects it has been improved, and in other respects I think the action of the committee has been for the worse. The industry of manufacturing cotton is so important, creating as it does a product in excess of $228,000,000, of which something like $24,000,000 worth of cloth are exported, that it demands, it seems to me, the most careful attention of the House and ought to have a schedule as well framed as it can be under the information that we have before us.

When the Democratic bill was introduced last year yarn up to No. 50 bore a 10 per cent rate. That was the lowest rate that was given in the former bill. The present bill has a lower rate of 5 per cent. In that respect it is an improvement, and agrees with the rates which have been introduced by myself and the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. GARDNER]. The former bill also gave as its highest rate on yarn 15 per cent. The new bill gives as the highest rate only 25 per cent ad valorem and makes no allowance whatever for finishing. That is, the yarns in gray are the same as the cable laid, mercerized, gassed, or advanced in any way by additional processes.

This, in my judgment, is a serious mistake. As a matter of fact, in yarns above No. 40 about 4 per cent of our whole production is now imported, and in yarns used in this country above that number about 19 per cent is now imported. That is to say, there are about 6,700,000 pounds above No. 40 imported, and something like 35,000,000 pounds produced in this country. But this yarn so imported was admitted at a rate on lower numbers of about 24 per cent, and runs from that up to 38 per cent. They must be imported simply because they can be bought in those countries cheaper than they can be by the manufacturers produced by the parties who wish to turn them into cloth.

For that reason it would seem that the present rates which I have given are now on a competitive basis, and yet this bill would greatly reduce them, and, as I am satisfied, turn the manufacture and production of these yarns above 40 entirely over to foreign manufacturers, unless the American manufacturer reduces the wage scale.

With regard to cloth, I wish to supplement the remarks of the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. GARDNER] at the outset in saying that 90 per cent of the cloth produced in this country, approximately 90 per cent, is in the numbers below 40 thread in making it up. So that the provisions of this schedule in reference to plain cloth are by far the most important, so far as quantity and value are concerned, of any found in the bill. It seems to me that there have been some very serious mistakes made in preparing this schedule. The report of the Tariff Board so far as plain cloths were concerned, especially those on the lower numbers, showed that practically all of them were made and sold at the mill doors in this country for as low or lower price than they were made in Europe and sold there at the mills. These plain cloths, therefore, need but little, if any, protection. In the proposed rate given by the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. GARDNER] and myself we have on the lower numbers of yarn put a rate of 5 per cent, which possibly is not needed at all, but is only a nominal rate.

As graded by the bill which we have here, the protection on the coarse grades of cloth is very much higher than there is any necessity of its being, in my judgment. It can be, and I think it ought to be, reduced to the rates which the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. GARDNER] has presented, and it is possible that even those, so far as the coarse grades are concerned, that are below the twenties, might also be reduced from the figures we have given. But that is not really the most serious trouble respecting the rates and provisions of this schedule with reference to cloth. The very highest grade given in this bill on the cloth is 27½ per cent ad valorem. This is advanced, when it is colored, stained, painted, printed, Jacquard figured, or mercerized, by 2½ per cent. The greater amount of the importations into this country are goods that are made either upon what is called dobby looms or Jacquard looms or some other kind that weave fancy cloth. This bill does not distinguish in any manner between the fancy woven cloth and the ordinary plain cloths, except that Jacquard cloths are now included and advanced 2½ per cent, whereas they were entirely overlooked in the bill which we voted upon last summer. As pointed out by the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. GARDNER], the process of mercerizing, or the ordinary courses of finishing, according to the report of the Tariff Board, costs no more in this country than it does in Europe, so that we added only the nominal amount of 2½ per cent for it, and 2½ per cent will be added under this bill; but if a manufacturer produces one of the most expensive kinds of complicated weaves, such as have been shown by Mr. GARDNER, and some of which are simply fancy woven cloths and not Jacquard cloths, then, however complicated they may be, made by dobby loom or Jacquard loom, no matter what figures may be put in or what kind of threads, the same advance is made. It is all lumped together, all thrown together with an advance of 2½ per cent only, which will not anywhere near cover the difference in labor cost between that of this country and abroad.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Iowa has expired.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Mr. Chairman, I wish to have a couple of minutes more.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I yield the gentleman two minutes more.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Mr. Chairman, for the purpose of demonstrating this, I will call attention to two samples mentioned by the Tariff Board. One of these is duck, in which it will be found by examination that the labor cost is less than 5 per cent. Turning then to No. 57 of the Tariff Board report, in the table of 100 samples given, is a fancy woven cloth in which the labor cost is 39.82 per cent of the whole cost of material, or what we may practically call 40 per cent of the whole cost. In other words, the labor cost in this kind of fancy woven cloth is eight times what it is in duck, and yet there is no difference made in this bill, and which we are asked to approve, except 2½ per cent. In the bill which was introduced last session by our Democratic friends a 5 per cent difference was made. This is an improvement in some respects, but it will not near cover the difference between the plain weaves and Jacquard weaves, or even some of the dobby weaves, some of which involve processes costly as the Jacquard weaves.

For these reasons, Mr. Chairman, I assert that this schedule has not received the attention which it ought to have received. This bill is drawn upon wrong lines, and the rates are incorrect and erroneous and find no justification in the facts or the report of the Tariff Board.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. ROGERS].

Mr. ROGERS. Mr. Chairman, I have reserved for considerable amplification in the RECORD my statistical and detailed observations upon this schedule of the tariff, and I therefore desire at this time merely to offer a few general observations upon this great question. Yesterday a gentleman from my own part of the State called upon me—and I assume that my Democratic colleague from Massachusetts [Mr. PETERS], on the Ways and Means Committee, had a similar interview—he brought me samples of cloth which he manufactures in his mill, showing the product from the earliest stages right up to the final stage in which the cloth is ready to be sold across the counter.

He said: "How much do you suppose my mill gets for this beautiful piece of finished cloth?" I guessed very far from the mark. He said: "Twenty-five cents a yard." He then asked me, "How much do you suppose that retails for across the counter?" and I guessed 75 cents a yard. He said: "That retails for $1.50 or more per yard." Now, gentlemen, I say to you that you are attacking the wrong place on this tariff proposition, in so far as it relates to these duties in the cotton schedule. You are attacking the end of the business where neither profits nor wages are unduly high, and yet you are allowing to go absolutely unscathed the middleman—the jobber, the wholesaler, the retailer—to do what they like with the price, and allow it to go skyward, to soar to the zenith, if you please, and get whatever they can from the ultimate consumer. It is the intermediaries who get the large profits, much larger than the manufacturer, and yet the former are absolutely unaffected by this tariff reduction.

Mr. O'SHAUNESSY. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ROGERS. I have only five minutes, and I have a good deal of ground to cover.

Mr. O'SHAUNESSY. I wish the gentleman would indicate how we can do that.

Mr. ROGERS. I must decline to yield; I have only five minutes. Now, Mr. Chairman, it is the fashion in certain sections of the country to charge that the cotton manufacturers of New England are robbers of the consumers, but the fact is that in Lowell, for example, the average yearly dividends of our 10 or 12 cotton mills for the last eight years has been less than 4½ per cent. We in New England were much edified by a remark made on the floor of this House two years ago by a Democratic Member, then and now on the Ways and Means Committee, the Member from North Carolina—you will recall it, those of you who were here at that time—who said, "We of the South intend to make your mills in the North come down to us or else go out of business." That is the idea with which the members of the Ways and Means Committee approached this problem when they were framing this tariff and which they are now attempting to enact into law. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. GREENE].

Mr. GREENE of Massachusetts. Mr. Chairman, I wish to state that the cotton schedule in the Wilson bill adopted by the Democratic Congress in 1894 was prepared after full and free consultation with delegations from the State of Massachusetts, comprising representatives of both the manufacturers who owned the cotton mills and of the different labor organizations representing the operatives who were employed therein. Had the remainder of the schedules of the Wilson bill been written with the same care and discretion, the Democratic Party possibly might have been retained in power in 1896.

The cotton schedule was unchanged when the Dingley law was enacted in 1897, and it was changed only to a very slight degree when it was reported to the House of Representatives by the Committee on Ways and Means in 1909 in the bill known as the Payne bill.

After the Payne bill reached the Senate there were some modifications made in the bill which resulted in severe condemnation being visited upon the Republican Party and the framers of the final tariff bill known as the Payne-Aldrich Tariff Act. And while I believed then and believe now that many of the criticisms were unjust, I wish to call your attention to the fact that no representatives from either the manufacturers or operatives in the district which I have the honor to represent appeared before the Senate Finance Committee and asked for the changes in the bill which seemed to meet with such severe condemnation. Furthermore, Mr. Chairman, during the 15 years that I have been a Member of this House no manufacturer or operative has ever approached me personally or by letter asking me to secure any changes in the cotton schedule.

Since the introduction of the Underwood bill, however, protests by telegrams and by letters have been insistent and severe in their denunciation of the cotton schedules which are contained in said bill.

Mr. Chairman, I do not propose to offer any amendments to the bill, because I realize that, owing to the fact that there is a large majority of Democrats on the other side of the House, all or most of whom are pledged to vote for the passage of the bill without amendment, it would only take up the time of the House needlessly, without accomplishing any beneficial result.

Mr. Chairman, I listened to the remarks made by the gentleman from California [Mr. STEPHENS] this morning in regard to his willingness to vote for a reduction in the tariff upon the cotton and wool industries, but he believed that there ought to be a tariff on the productions of California, and I do not forget when there was a proposition made by the Democratic majority last year to take the duty off of lemons the gentleman from California, after voting himself for all the propositions that had been submitted by the Democratic majority to reduce the tariff, rose in astonishment and almost with tears in his eyes and besought the gentlemen on the Democratic side of the House to reverse their action, and reminded them that he had voted with them on every proposition they had submitted and now they ought to vote with him on the question of lemons. [Laughter on the Republican side.] Now, gentlemen, I do not know anything about the lemon industry, but I want it to enjoy the prosperity which it has long enjoyed. I do not regard the industry as so sacred that it should be entitled to especial consideration, while those who so regard it announce their willingness to join in the destructive onslaught on the cotton and woolen industries. I listened to the amendments proposed here by Mr. GARDNER, my colleague from Massachusetts, and also the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. GREEN] with some astonishment.

I express my astonishment, for the reason that I think, as good men as they are in many respects, they are wholly unfamiliar with the cotton industry. Some of the remarks made to me by the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. GARDNER] as he sat behind me this afternoon, and the questions he propounded to me, convinced me that he is not acquainted with the first rudiments of the cotton industry. I do not blame him for putting in whatever amendments he pleases individually; but I want to say in regard to the cotton schedule and the report of the Tariff Commission or Tariff Board, everyone knows that the Tariff Board did not complete their investigations regarding the cotton industry in all of its details, and they plainly stated that in view of the complex nature of the industry that there was room for a wide difference of opinion in calculating and estimating the varied phases of the cotton industry; and there is no living man, no matter how capable he may be in other lines, who can take up the cotton industry in all its details without devoting very much more time than the Tariff Board were able to devote to it. It certainly would require very much more time than these two gentlemen on this side of the House have devoted to the amendments that they have presented here this afternoon to enable them to qualify as experts in proposing legislation with the view of having their conclusions enacted into law, which might seriously affect the vast number of persons employed in the industry and the large amount of capital invested therein.

I do not pretend to be a cotton expert myself, for I am not. I do not own a share of cotton-mill stock, and have not owned any since 1878. So I do not come here as a cotton expert. But I have always lived in a cotton-mill town and city, and consequently I partake somewhat of the atmosphere of this important industry. I am interested in the cotton schedule not alone from the standpoint of the manufacturers, but I am interested also in behalf of 40,000 people who are employed in the mills in the city of Fall River, where I reside, and who have families dependent upon them. They represent more than two-thirds of the population of my own city. I also speak in behalf of the cotton industry of the entire State of Massachusetts, the State that produces more cotton goods and consumes more cotton than any other State in the Union. For more than 100 years they have been making cotton goods in the city where I reside.

The industry was started upon coarse grades of goods, and some of the early pioneers in this country brought some of the first looms and spinning machinery into this country, taking the same from England and bringing it into this country in parts and assembling those parts here, and beginning the manufacture of cotton goods. And they have built up a wonderful industry, which now comprises many of the finer grades and varieties of cloth. I want to give you a little illustration of how it has been built up within the last 48 years. I call your attention to the number of cotton spindles that were in my city in 1865, as compared with the number that are there to-day. In 1865 they had 265,328; in 1866, 403,624; in 1868, 537,416; and then going on until these later years, in 1910, when there were 3,931,464 cotton spindles, and there has been no material increase there since that date. Directly surrounding the city in which I live, and the other portions of the district which I have the honor to represent, are considerably more than one-quarter of all the cotton spindles in this country, and there is not a more complicated schedule in the bill than the one pertaining to cotton.

I am deliberately and unalterably opposed to the Underwood bill, because the rates proposed are not high enough to protect American industries and American labor, and, further, because the hearings held by the Committee on Ways and Means were not considered with care, nor with any other purpose than to make the people believe they were using care, but with the result in view of providing foreign competition, which, in my view, could only result in reducing wages or throwing American laborers out of employment and destroying capital invested in the cotton industry. I am deliberately and unalterably opposed to the amendments proposed by my colleague from Massachusetts [Mr. GARDNER] and my colleague from Iowa [Mr. GREEN] because they were prepared without the requisite knowledge.

Mr. Chairman, I want to say further that when the proposition was made in the form of an amendment by Mr. Hill, a former Member from Connecticut, last year, it was brought into this House very much in the same manner as the amendments of Messrs. GARDNER and GREEN are brought here to-day. Mr. Hill's bill came in as an entire surprise, as these amendments have come to my attention here to-day. I did not vote for the proposition put in by Mr. Hill, of Connecticut, last year, because, while I am willing to acknowledge that he is an expert on the woolen industry, I do not admit that he was familiar enough with the cotton industry without devoting more time to the work, and I shall not vote for the propositions put in by my colleagues to-day. The number of yards produced in the mills in the city where I reside amount to nearly 1,200,000,000 yards of cloth per annum, and the wages amount to nearly $300,000 per week, or nearly $15,000,000 per annum. The whole industry of that community will be injured by the propositions which these gentlemen present here; and when the dull times come, as come they will in the cotton industry, and they are present to-day, when the dull times come and the mills do not find a market for their product, there is always sure to be a loss in wages and a reduction in the prosperity of the communities in which these industries are located, because when the mills do not find it profitable to run their plants the workmen can not draw their pay. And any such complete change in the tariff schedules as is proposed in the Underwood bill, or was proposed last year—and the present Underwood bill is more drastic than the one presented last year—should not have the consideration and approval of the membership of this House.

Mr. MOORE. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GREENE of Massachusetts. Certainly.

Mr. MOORE. Can the gentleman say whether or not the amendment offered by the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. GARDNER] in any way comports with the partial report of the Tariff Board?

Mr. GREENE of Massachusetts. I am not able to say, but the report of the Tariff Board certainly was not complete. It was not fit to be taken as a basis upon which to prepare a bill, and it was stated distinctly by both of these gentlemen who have presented these amendments that, after careful consideration, they had decided that they could not prepare a bill with any justice to the manufacturers or operatives based upon the uncompleted report of the Tariff Board without much longer deliberation.

Mr. MOORE. Then the gentleman does not consider the amendments scientifically drawn?

Mr. GREENE of Massachusetts. I do not. I consider the amendments unscientifically drawn.

Mr. GARDNER. The gentleman is mistaken in saying that the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. GREEN] and I could not agree on a bill that was just. I said that the committee could not agree.

Mr. GREENE of Massachusetts. While two men might agree upon something they do not know anything about, I am satisfied that the gentleman himself, while he is acquainted with fish and many matters affecting his own district, does not know anything about preparing a schedule relating to cotton goods.

Mr. BUTLER. We should not have any division among ourselves.

Mr. GREENE of Massachusetts. You do not want any division, but it is necessary to exercise common sense. I do not propose to stand here and allow an industry that has been established in my city more than 100 years ago to be destroyed or injured and not register my protest against the methods pursued by the gentlemen in the preparation of these amendments.

Mr. STEENERSON. What does the gentleman want?

Mr. GREENE of Massachusetts. I want to be let alone, unless time enough can be allowed to assemble facts and present conclusions upon which legislation may be framed which will prove helpful rather than harmful to the capital invested and the vast number of men and women employed in the industry. I append herewith a letter which I received to-day from Walter H. Langshaw, of New Bedford, Mass., relating to the cotton-tariff schedule, which is worthy of careful perusal:

Letter on the cotton tariff schedule to the Members of the United States Senate and House of Representatives from Walter H. Lanshaw.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS., April 29, 1913.

The honorable Senate and House of Representatives in Congress assembled:

I feel it my duty to make one more attempt to induce Congress to pass a cotton schedule that will meet the requirements of the situation without entailing serious loss to those who, in a measure or entirely, depend upon the cotton industry for a livelihood.

The proposed bill is wrong from any intelligent point of view. The reduction is too great, in some classes the rates are out of proportion, and a strictly ad valorem tariff is not suitable as a protective, competitive, or revenue tariff because of the fluctuations in cotton.

I do not believe that the apparent desire on the part of the public for revision of the tariff on a lower basis means or necessitates a vicious cut which will seriously disturb values and result in liquidation of labor and capital and serious loss to many towns and cities. Although the Democratic ticket was elected, the people have not expressed themselves as opposing the protective feature and favoring a tariff for revenue only.

The adoption of the proposed bill by the Ways and Means Committee on a basis not supported by the testimony at the hearing is to be deplored, and that such action was taken without any reason being given for ignoring expert testimony raises doubt as to the sincerity of those who dominate the Ways and Means Committee.

As stated in my brief, 2 per cent of our population, about 2,000,000, are directly affected and should be informed why the Ways and Means Committee ignored such testimony and have it explained to them why rates are made on a given number of yarn as compared with a rate on other numbers. For instance, why is the ad valorem rate on gray yarns Nos. 20s to 39s made 10 per cent; on 40s to 49s, 15 per cent; on 50s to 59s, 17½ per cent; on 60s to 99s, 20 per cent? Assuming that cotton was a commodity in which there was a regular standard price, the different percentage rates then would give a net duty of a given number of cents per pound. As a manufacturer I know positively that the cost of manufacturing No. 99s is about double that of 59s. Therefore whatever system is used the number of cents per pound should be double on 99s what it is on 59s, and 59s should be over three times as much as that on 19s.

These comparative differences are not based on theory; they are based on facts which can be easily proven to anyone whose sense of justice is such that he has the desire to act in accordance with the facts and merits of the case. It involves no intricacies or mysteries that need confuse any intelligent man. It is not necessary to know what it costs to make similar goods in Germany, England, or France; the comparative difference can be determined from our own costs. I challenge any person to produce evidence to controvert these assertions or to give a convincing illustration that a tariff on a strictly ad valorem basis will, when figured out, show a rate in cents per pound that will remain the same on any given yarn from one year to another or that will give the same comparative differences from one yarn to another in any one year. Therefore the proposed schedule is not a protective, competitive, or revenue tariff.

On cloth in the gray I challenge any person who possesses practical knowledge of the business to produce evidence that will justify the action of the Ways and Means Committee in putting only an additional duty of only 2½ per cent over gray yarns.

On fabrics in the gray the cost is increased about half as much again over yarns. Therefore whatever system is used the duty per pound of cloth woven of a given number should be over half as much again over gray yarn in cents per pound, or its equivalent per yard. On fancy fabrics in the gray it is more than double the cost of gray yarn; in some fabrics more than three times the cost. On an average it is certainly more than double the cost. So whatever method is used the results should be that the duty should be in cents per pound or its equivalent per yard over twice as much as that of gray yarn. In support of this I will state that the pay roll of the weaving departments of the Dartmouth Manufacturing Corporation is greater than that of the spinning and all labor incidental to spinning yarn.

The working out of the proposed cotton schedule on a given number of yarn, assuming a fair cost or market value, when cotton was at its lowest price, would be 6 cents per pound. Using the same figures of cost, under cotton at the highest price in recent years the duty would be 9 cents per pound, showing a fluctuating difference in duty of 50 per cent. This is no theory; it is an actual fact, and any method that results in such a change because of the changes in the price of raw material is not a good tariff from a protective, revenue, or competitive standpoint, and is certainly bound to be a constant cause of disturbance to the industry.

Under extremely high-priced cotton there would be no revenue. Under extremely low-priced cotton there would be importations, a superabundance of revenue, and a large number of people thrown out of employment. We can not possibly progress on economic lines under such a law.

On gray plain cloth the calculated results are even worse. The duty is in cents per pound all out of proportion to yarns. That is on a calculation using the same basis of cost for conversion and for cotton, and because of a rate on a strictly ad valorem basis the proportion is changed when worked out on high-priced cotton as compared with low-priced cotton.

On fancy and figured gray cloth—which is comparatively a new industry in this country—there is practically no consideration given to the large increased cost of conversion over and above plain gray yarns and plain gray cloth. There is certainly not over 15 per cent of our products in this country that is on fancy and figured work. A large portion is made in New Bedford, and plants have been equipped to do this work, and the little consideration shown for the increased cost in adjusting the rate of duty as compared with other classes is singular considering Chairman UNDERWOOD's significant remark, when asked by a Congressman from this district to give New Bedford more consideration. He said, "New Bedford mills are rich; they can stand it." Rather a suggestive remark and unbecoming one who is such a dominating factor at this period of the Nation's affairs, even if true; but the implication would hardly stand, as there are five or six mills which were projected and completed about three years ago which have not paid or earned a dividend, and the stocks are very much below par, some of them as low as 45 per share, and no buyers.

There are the old mills which have good records whose stock has declined 20 to 40 per cent within three or four years. (See quotations attached.) Such conditions should certainly have important bearing and influence with those who are to decide what kind of a cotton schedule is to be adopted.

In face of these facts do you wonder that those interested in gray cotton fabrics, mostly fancy, in New Bedford or elsewhere, are alarmed at the possibility of such a measure becoming a law? The Dingley rate of duty was unreasonably high, but did not affect the consumer, as gray plain cloths and yarns ruled much below a price at which they could have been imported. The rate was left high evidently for the purpose of making it so as to cover the increased cost of manufacturing fancy fabrics, as there was no distinction made between plain and fancy figured work. There has been considerable growth, particularly in New Bedford, in the last few years, and this growth has resulted in domestic manufacturers underselling importers on special fabrics, hence the antagonism of the importers, who, I believe, have been given too much consideration in the making of the cotton schedule in the proposed bill.

In the act of 1897 the rate was based on so much per number. This is the correct way, but the rate should be changed about every 10 numbers. The duty on that bill of 60/s was 15 cents per pound. Assuming that 10 cents was decided upon, the tariff per pound would be reduced 33⅓ per cent.

On plain woven gray cloths the duty should be about 15 to 16 cents per pound; on fancy, which represents, as before stated, less than 15 per cent of our output in cloth, the duty should be about 20 to 22 cents a pound; other numbers in the same proportion. By a schedule on this basis the duty per pound would be fixed and not be disturbed by the change in the price of cotton.

In the matter of figuring the yarn on the cloth, it is simply a mathematical calculation of ends per inch and inches in width and yards per pound, to determine, with due allowances for contraction, what is the average number. This method is much better than a tariff based on the finest number in the cloth, which would not always be easy to determine.

We have listened to lectures by those who are very much removed from the problem that faces those in the cotton industry, and it has been assumed that we are lacking in efficiency and courage. We have in New Bedford many English employees, and the quality and quantity produced is little, if any, below any known standard, certainly not more than would be natural, considering that we have a limited market of skilled textile operatives and that our growth has been rapid.

In some instances where the dividends have been exceptionally large we are given no credit for efficiency, but are condemned as being avaricious. In instances where the dividends are small or omitted entirely we are accused of keeping antiquated machinery, and therefore condemned and criticized because we do not buy new machinery and presumably pay 45 per cent duty into the United States Treasury, and then be called to task because we asked consideration to which conditions entitled us.

If we carry our capital much less than cost and run the risk involved in borrowing money, and then win out, our dividends are too high. If we hold in reserve earnings to make ourselves strong, and later pay it out and give the stockholders an opportunity to buy a few more shares at par, we are accused of watering the stock. I am reminded of a remark which I think was made by Grover Cleveland in his first campaign, that he was "too tall when he stood up and too short when he sat down."

Two years ago Chairman UNDERWOOD wrote me asking for specific information. I asked for an opportunity to appear before those who were engaged in the work, but no opportunity was given me. It was my intention that if I was convinced of the sincerity of those who had the work in hand to have given them all the information I had at my command. This year, since the hearing, I have endeavored to arrange for a meeting with Chairman UNDERWOOD for the purpose of discussing the subject, but failed. I am now convinced that the request for information was made because it was known that I favored a moderate reduction and was opposed to the policy of the "stand-pat" element, and that some of the information I might give could be used for political effect rather than for the introduction of economic principle in legislation.

The consideration shown one of experience and wide knowledge of the business, who favored a reduction in the tariff, is strangely in contract with that shown to an importer who, I understand, has had the ears of a portion of the committee, and who, desiring to poach on our industrial preserves, is simply representing foreign capital.

The attempt of an importer to controvert a statement of men of experience and interest in this business, on which the welfare of many communities depends, by mention of the duties and costs of some specific cloths, even if they were correct, has no more to do with the main questions involved in this matter than has the price of Poland Spring water to do with the cost per horsepower of the water at Niagara Falls.

The Ways and Means Committee thus far has acted as the judge and jury, yet it is, in a measure, a packed jury, because the majority is comprised of those whose politics are the same as those of the party in power. The chairman, who should be the judge, really becomes the prosecuting attorney. The testimony of the defendants, the manufacturers, is thrown out, and evidence in favor of the prosecution is introduced at special interviews and the defendants given no opportunity to offer new evidence or testimony in rebuttal.

Chairman UNDERWOOD, in a speech to Congress, stated that "conditions of the consumer and manufacturer have changed since the Dingley law was enacted in 1897." While this may be introduced as an argument in favor of a revision, even on a lower basis, it is no argument in favor of the Underwood bill. He also stated that "all commodities have increased an average of 46 per cent." Note that he uses the word "average," a word he criticizes others for introducing into the tariff features, in the same speech. If a portion of this increase has grown because of high protection, in what proportion and in what industry? That is the specific thing we want to know—what industry has been benefited unduly and out of proportion to others, all things considered?

Prices of cotton, wheat, and other commodities have advanced, and common cotton has fluctuated between 6 cents and 17 cents a pound. Special cottons, American and Egyptians, have sold as low as 10 cents and as high as 35 cents for same grade and staple. Is the protective tariff to blame for this? If not, why is it not possible that the same underlying cause is responsible in many of the manufactured commodities, as in the raw materials?

He states, "There is one law of supply and demand." True, and there is no industry, business, or profession in which the law of supply and demand has been applied more effectively than in the cotton industry. The testimony supports it—the proofs can be found by those who seek them.

He further states "that there will be no immediate benefit to consumer because retailers have goods on their shelves bought under protective duties. The merchant will not buy more goods until he has sold these." This illustrates the crudeness of the theories or hypocrisy of some men who pose as leaders in reform movements.

A large number of people in New England would be pleased to have Mr. UNDERWOOD give us a practical illustration of the application of this theory by disposing of some of our shares, including new mills.

There are thousands of bales of cotton and cloth in storehouses which millmen would like to sell at cost, also some new mills. I have one, bought under "protective duties." Part of it has been stopped two years because we can not get cost for its product. I would like to find a customer at cost or even 20 per cent less. Why is Mr. UNDERWOOD so much more considerate of the retailers' welfare than for those who depend on the cotton-manufacturing industry for a living?

He states that "the tariff has been putting a premium on incompetency. We find that industries highly protected are running with equipment 60 years old." For every instance he will find in the cotton industry here, I will find a similar one in England, which is the leader in cotton textiles. Incompetency is not confined to manufacturing; it is in all trades and professions.

Who is responsible for the laws which render it easy for unskilled labor and incompetency to come here in large numbers, but makes it a penalty for any inducement to skilled labor, even though we need them to establish an industry? This condition is contrary to economics, and manufacturers didn't bring it about.

He states that no favored manufacturer has sat behind the committee doors and prepared this bill and dictated its provisions. I should put it that no manufacturer, certainly not in the textile industry, has received any consideration. Personally, I ask for no favors; I do ask for justice and the introduction of some intelligence into a measure that is to affect 2 per cent of the population. I admit that the protective feature has been abused, but because there is a malignant growth is no reason why the patient should be killed or maimed by a bungling operation.

His reference to the raised tax on the luxuries of the rich and reduced on the necessities of the poor is in line with his reference to New Bedford mills mentioned in a previous paragraph. Expressions of this kind raise a question of the motives that govern Mr. UNDERWOOD'S action, and it would appear that the desire is to do something for political effect rather than for the permanent good of humanity. He states on cotton cloth that the people were taxed 50 per cent; they have reduced it 30 per cent. These are the kind of stump speeches that are spread over the country by one who occupies a position that makes it easy to do. We are selling some fine cotton cloths in New England to-day at a less base price than similar goods are sold in England, and considerable of our standard products are sold at over a cent per yard less than they could be imported.

The general tone of his address and a comparison of the inferences drawn from it with the actual facts indicates how essential it is that a commission should be established and the tariff taken out of politics. The business interests of this country have suffered because of the cheap political demagogues, the "ins" on one side and the "outs" on the other, playing the game for political preferment.

There is over $28,000,000 deposited in savings banks in New Bedford. A dollar invested in a corporation is entitled to as much consideration as the dollar borrowed by the mills from the savings bank, no matter who invests in, whether it is the man of great wealth or the comparatively poor man. Most of the stockholders are people of moderate means. The city of New Bedford has increased about 60,000 in the last 20 years. Thousands of the employees in the mills have built their homes and borrowed money on mortgages. I know elderly people and widows who depend, in a measure—in fact, almost entirely—on the income of their modest investments. Therefore it is essential that, if justice is to prevail, these facts should have influence in the kind of a tariff law that is to be enacted.

The steel industry yielded hundreds of millions to those who were prominently identified with it, and, according to "The New Freedom," Mr. Carnegie sold out at about four or five times the estimated value of the property. There is no doubt but what this was due, in a measure, to excessive duty and limited competition, but nobody ever heard of anything like this in the cotton-mill business. Although there have been instances where exceptional profit has been made, it was with plenty of competition, such as is done in any business.

Because the Steel Trust magnates in the past have gathered their harvest and stored it away it is no reason why the cotton industry should be filched and demoralized.

I am on record, as stated in my brief and pamphlet recently published, as favoring for years a moderate reduction, and am opposed to the method of the stand-pat element who were the controlling factors in the Congress that passed the Payne-Aldrich bill. I am not seeking more wealth or trying to build up a monopoly; there is nothing of the kind that could be built up in this business; there are too many in it and it is too diversified. I expect and am willing to make a reasonable contribution for the common cause in the form of reduced valuations, if I can be relieved of the uncertainty and troubles due to pernicious legislation.

What is desired principally is an accurate comparative duty for different classes of gray cotton yarns and cotton cloth, which represent by far the greater portion of the industry.

First. A duty which can be based on our costs by a method that will not be subjected to violent changes because of fluctuations in the price of cotton or because of change in fashion. This is very important, because any irregularity in the proportionate duty per pound of one yarn as compared with another, or with cotton comprised of certain yarns compared with another, or with cloth as compared with yarn, or with fancy cloth as compared with plain cloth, is bound to result seriously when the fashion changes materially.

Second. I naturally desire that the rate of duty be not lower, certainly not at this period, than is justified, considering the high cost of our equipment, for which we have paid 45 per cent, or the equivalent, more than our foreign competitors, as shown by importations of machinery, and of the difference in wages, which is from 30 to 50 per cent, as can be substantiated.

If the social and industrial welfare of this country is to be given more consideration than cheap politics, it is now time to begin, and the present administration could give no better demonstration of their good faith than by passing a tariff bill which, even though it may be somewhat lower than is justified, will be at least scientific and comparatively equitable.

I believe that the fundamental cause of the apparent discontent of the masses, which is not limited to this country alone, is due to a feeling on the part of those who labor long and diligently all of their lives that they do not receive a return in proportion to the share of the world's work which they perform, and I certainly believe they do not receive their proper share. I do not believe that it is due to avariciousness, selfishness, or tyranny on the part of men engaged in any manufacturing business. It is due to the inherent selfishness of the human being as expressed in all walks of life, and consolidated capital, under the name of corporation, has been a target for all those who wish to pose as friends of labor, particularly a portion of our politicians and professional agitators, who reap a harvest through the gullibility of the laboring man.

The cost of living is high here, more so than some time ago. So it is in other countries with a high tariff and with a low tariff, therefore, the tariff now in force, inadequate as it may be, is not entirely, if in a degree, responsible for the increased cost of living. Undoubtedly the cost of living is higher here than in other countries, but the margin between wages earned and cost of living is certainly better than that which exists in other countries. If this were not so immigration would cease. I know for a fact that many who, for homesickness or other reasons, return to the land of their birth, are glad to get back here again. I know of a few who are unable to do so because they could not save the money to pay their passage. Therefore it would seem as though there must be some other cause for the increased cost of living, particularly in this country.

Personally I believe it is due to the tremendous increase in numbers of parasites, and people who live by their wits and those who labor and perform a kind of work which would be unnecessary if economic laws applied in all avenues of life. Political bosses, ward heelers, professional ambulance chasers, and blackmailers—men who use their cleverness to win a case and defend a man they know to be guilty and defeat the ends of justice and increase the cost of administering it; the large number that are engaged in competing for trade; unnecessary solicitors, the cost of and the energy used in providing the consumer with an inferior article, which, if properly applied along creative or inventive lines, would provide the consumer with a superior article. Until legislation devotes more time to these features, the margin between the cost of living and compensation received for labor will not be increased.

New Freedom has a chapter entitled "Let there be light." I would like some light to explain why the chairman of the Ways and Means Committee ignored the testimony of men who, unquestionably, were not identified with the radical "stand-pat" element, and why they made certain rates on one class as compared with another. New Freedom also refers to a "Government by trusteeships" and the "Political boss," and, in accordance with the sentiment expressed, will you not, my dear Senator and Congressman, consider this question carefully and be patriotic and support that which you believe worthy according to the merits of the case?

Writers and speakers, particularly those affiliated in politics, are disposed to devote too much attention to "rich malefactors," particularly those identified with corporations. For 25 years I labored in the ranks with the workers. My letter is not because of a desire that action should be taken to enable me to retain what wealth I have accumulated or to add to it. I am satisfied with what I have and could be perfectly happy with much less, and, no matter how the tariff is adjusted, I shall have enough. My plea is principally on behalf of those who I know are not in as fortunate circumstances.

Yours, very truly,

WALTER H. LANGSHAW,
New Bedford, Mass.

(President and manager Dartmouth Manufacturing Co. and Bristol Manufacturing Co.)

LANCASHIRE'S VIEW OF PROPOSED CUT IN COTTON-GOODS TARIFF.

Sir Charles Macara, president of the Federation of Master Cotton Spinners' Associations of Lancashire, discussing industrial conditions in the American cotton industry and the new Underwood tariff bill, said:

"All their concerns have cost them a tremendous amount more to capitalize than ours have. They are left with this big handicap. At present, despite their tremendous tariffs, we have retained the finer end of the trade, and there is every likelihood that in this branch of the industry the tariff reductions will benefit us, because it is very difficult for them to secure the skilled workers that we have at our disposal. Their workers are of mixed nationalities and constantly migrating, and they can not compete with Lancashire in fine fabrics. The reduced tariff will increase this end of our trade, but it will not give us any greater opportunity on the lower and middle class goods, which Lancashire has not had recently."

The following table shows the high prices reached by local mill shares during the year 1909, their selling prices in September, 1912, and their present prices:

	High, 1909.	September, 1912.	Present value.
Acushnet Mill	360	150	135
Beacon Manufacturing Co	102½	102½	102½
Beacon Manufacturing Co., preferred	111	112½	112½
Booth Manufacturing Co., common		70	50
Booth Manufacturing Co., preferred		85	75
Bristol Manufacturing Co	150	100	75
Butler Mill	175	132	122
City Manufacturing Co	253	110	100
Dartmouth Manufacturing Co	300	245	225
Dartmouth Manufacturing Co., preferred	106	104	103
Gosnold Mills, preferred	113½	95	90
Grinnell Manufacturing Co	250	180	160
Holmes Manufacturing Co	102	99	100
Holmes Manufacturing Co., preferred	103	115	102½
Hathaway Manufacturing Co	200	200	175
Kilburn Mill	195	127½	120
Manomet Mills	138	122	117½
Nashawena Mills	107	75	58
Neild Manufacturing Co		95	95
N. B. Cotton Mills Corporation		125	125
N. B. Cotton Mills Corporation, preferred	101	100	99
Nonquitt Spinning Co	132	94	92
Page Manufacturing Co	130	90	87½
Pierce Manufacturing Co		390	325
Pierce Bros. (Ltd.)		100	100
Potomska Mills	137½	120	116
Quissett Mills, common		85	90
Quissett Mills, preferred		100	98
Sharp Manufacturing Co., common		90	82½
Sharp Manufacturing Co., preferred		102½	105
Soule Mill	175	97½	90
Taber Mill	127	105	102½
Wamsutta Mills	142½	125	116
Whitman Mills	225	160	131

I also append a portion of the testimony given by Mr. Simeon B. Chase, treasurer of the King Philip Mills, Fall River, Mass., in the hearing held before the Committee on Ways and Means on Schedule I, and the colloquy which occurred between himself and members of the committee. I print this extract from the hearings referred to, because I was refused an opportunity to make a statement regarding the same before the House because of the lack of time allowed for its presentation:

Mr. HILL. Would it not necessarily compel a very severe reduction in wages when it would become impossible for the industry to meet the foreign competition on any other basis?

Mr. CHASE. I think that would necessarily be a result under those conditions.

Mr. HILL. In view of the fact that the Tariff Board states that many of the products of the cotton industry are now sold for less than the English product by a considerable percentage in a number of cases, would not that intensify the difficulty in passing that point and then securing revenue after that? In other words, is it possible, in your judgment as president of the Cotton Manufacturers' Association of this country, for any committee to fix a tariff rate which will establish a certain amount of competition and stop there, without imperiling the whole industry?

Mr. CHASE. I do not think so.

Mr. HILL. You do not think it possible?

Mr. CHASE. I do not think so. Nobody knows where that point is, either.

Mr. HILL. That is it exactly. I fully agree with you.

The CHAIRMAN. You recognize the fact we are going to get revenue from this tariff? We have to have a reasonable competitive rate somewhere and there is no reason why you should not stand your proportion of that reasonable competitive rate, as well as the other fellow.

Mr. CHASE. I expect to.

The CHAIRMAN. And all we are trying to do is to bring about a parity. The present tariff bill is written like a mountain range with some high peaks and low valleys. Some fellows are standing the competition coming through the low valleys, and others are having the advantage of the high peaks. We are trying to equalize you, and I am sure you will agree with me that if we can succeed in doing that, you ought to stand your share, as well as the other fellow.

Mr. CHASE. I think this, Mr. Chairman, in all candor, that even from your own point of view, you are not going to accomplish what you think you are as far as the American consumer is concerned. You may get some revenue for the Government.

We have heard a good deal about the high price of cotton and gentlemen have said a good deal about large dividends that have been paid by certain corporations in years gone by. I sold a lot of goods to a retailer. This is a matter of record and can be proved. There were about forty or fifty thousand yards. I put them up in pieces and shipped them to his store. The expense on a yard from my mill to his store was practically nothing; there was no use to consider it as anything. My price for those goods was 8¾ cents. He refused to buy them at that price. At any rate, he came back with a bid of 8½ cents.

I could, at 8½ cents, get possibly a little over a cent a yard profit, but I sold the goods. The man hurried me a good deal for delivery. I went to the city where the merchant did business a short time afterwards, and went into the store and wandered around until I came to the counter and recognized the goods that I had made. I asked the clerk how much it was, and I found it was then selling for 25 cents a yard.

The CHAIRMAN. I recognize, of course, the great difference between the wholesale price and the retail price, but this committee can not adjust that. We do hope to relieve the consumer in some places, but if we are wrong about that and you are right, and we do not succeed in doing that, if we equalize these duties so that they are reasonably competitive all along the line, at least we will give more revenue to the Government; and the other people, through the Government, will get some benefit from this tax, which they do not get when it is a prohibitive tax. You recognize that?

Mr. CHASE. I recognize the revenue feature.

The CHAIRMAN. And I think you will agree that we ought to make the effort.

Mr. CHASE. But when it comes to the consumer, I do not believe you are going to do anything.

The CHAIRMAN. But at any rate, we will give the people the benefit of getting some portion of the tax that is left. But I do not think you will disagree that that is a commendable purpose, if we do it in moderation.

Mr. CHASE. If you will be careful, I have nothing to say. [Laughter.]

Mr. LONGWORTH. Is there any class of cotton goods with the manufacture of which you are familiar that the statement made in the circular quoted by Mr. Palmer would be a true statement?

Mr. CHASE. I think there are cotton goods made in this country where the tariff would not make a particle of difference; that is, you would hardly know the difference whether there is a tariff or not. The amount of labor employed would be so little, with goods made as they are now, with automatic machinery, that it would cut hardly any figure.

Mr. LONGWORTH. Does it apply to any goods you manufacture yourself?

Mr. CHASE. No; it does not apply to anything made in our town, either, so far as I know.

Mr. LONGWORTH. Or made in Fall River?

Mr. CHASE. No.

Mr. FORDNEY. You stated a minute ago you sold a certain grade of goods to a certain merchant for 8½ cents per yard, and later on those goods were being retailed at 25 cents a yard.

Mr. CHASE. That is true.

Mr. FORDNEY. In reference to reducing the cost of the article to the consumer, I can give an illustration in another way which would be just as fair, as to reducing the duty on manufactured articles which we produce.

In the State of Michigan to-day, in which State I have the honor to live, a bushel of potatoes can be purchased for 40 cents. The other morning when leaving for Washington I stepped into a dining car, and paid 15 cents for one baked potato. [Laughter.]

The duty on a bushel of potatoes is 25 cents, and in order to reduce the value or the cost of that baked potato to the consumer that duty of 25 cents on a bushel of potatoes must be distributed. [Laughter.] That is a fair illustration, is it not?

Mr. CHASE. As far as the consumer is concerned, it is. I have not any more question about it than I stand here that, as far as concerns the duties on cotton goods or the general duties on articles of consumption that are levied in the customhouse, the consumer does not know anything about it. They do not cut any figure worth mentioning.

I am not trying to whack the people who retail goods. They are doing a legitimate business, and Mr. Parker touched upon that. The cost of distribution in this country is something that is a perfect scandal; there is no question about it.

We have made money in our business at times—big money at times. I am not here to deny that. All these statistics that have been poked at me, most of them are true, I guess. But if you take 25 years, instead of going back three or four or a half dozen or ten, they will tell a different story. The average has not been so big. We have had these periods when we have made money. I have known a mill to make 40 or 50 per cent in one year, when they had not been making any for five or six years, to speak of, but perhaps had lost money. That is the nature of the business.

But if you are going to help out the consumer you have to get at something else besides the tariff. If you are going ahead to get some revenue for the Government, that is another matter.

COTTON GOODS—BRIEF OF S. B. CHASE.

An impression prevails that the tariff on cotton goods has been largely advanced by the so-called Payne-Aldrich bill. This is not the case so far as it applies to 80 to 90 per cent of the cotton goods produced or consumed in this country.

Except in the very highest schedules, which do not apply to any considerable proportion of goods consumed in this country, the rates are identical with the Wilson bill.

The Wilson bill reduced the rates of duty on cloths made from coarse yarns from 33⅓ to 50 per cent, on medium goods from 22 to 33⅓ per cent, and on cloths made from fine yarns from 11 to 22½ per cent.

Previous to the Wilson bill no element for classification was taken into consideration in fixing the rates of duties excepting the count of the threads per square inch.

It was proven to the satisfaction of the framers of the Wilson bill that duties to be just and fair should be based also upon the fineness of the yarns used in the construction of the cloth, and the so-called Fall River schedule was adopted. While that schedule was not perfect from the standpoint of high-tariff or low-tariff men, both schools of thought regarded it as the most perfect and scientific ever enacted. Subsequent tariff bills have retained this principle, and, as before stated, but few changes have been made. We appreciate the fact that there is an apparent demand for a further revision of tariff schedules, and do not propose to offer objections to a reasonable modification of rates. We are willing to try to adapt our business to such rates as will afford us an opportunity to compete with our foreign rivals. We do not believe this committee or the people of the country at large will require us to do business on a basis that will not afford a decent living to those engaged in the industry according to the American standard.

Public sentiment and legislation is making every effort to eliminate child labor, to shorten the hours of work, to provide compensation for accidents, and to increase in many ways the obligations of the employer to the employees. Progress in these lines has already largely increased the cost of production.

We feel that the approach toward lower duties should be made with great care and moderation. Drastic action in that direction may, and we think will, lead to demoralization and suffering among a large body of people whose wages may be lowered or whose employment may be utterly taken away.

While making no objection to a reasonable reduction of rates, we think it should be done by slow and successive steps.

We wish to point out the difficulties and dangers attending the method of ascertaining the numbers of yarns contained in a fabric and of the ad valorem system. Yarns in the finer numbers especially are subject to great variation in size even when spun upon the same machine. A slight variation in the diameter of rolls on a mule or frame owing to unavoidable difference in thickness of roll covering will cause a variation of as much as 20 per cent. For instance, cloths made from No. 100 yarn will have individual threads as coarse as No. 90 and as fine as No. 110, and we doubt if any expert at the customhouse would be able to properly classify a fabric by sizing the yarns.

A simple method of evading an ad valorem duty will be the consignment by foreign manufacturers of goods to a sales agent in this country, he putting an estimated nominal value upon the merchandise which may enable him to evade a large fraction of the duty intended to be collected.

Respectfully submitted.

S. B. CHASE,
Treasurer King Philip Mill, Fall River, Mass.

I also append the following article, which expresses very forcibly the views of Mr. Robert Kenneth McLea, in which I most heartily concur:

OVERDOING TARIFF REDUCTION—PUSHING THE PENDULUM BEYOND ITS NATURAL LIMIT IS NOW REFLECTED BY A SWING TOO FAR IN THE OTHER DIRECTION.

(By Robert Kenneth MacLea, formerly consulting expert of the Tariff Board.)

[EDITOR'S NOTE.—The importance of the following article will be appreciated. During the recent campaign, Mr. MacLea was an ardent supporter of Mr. Wilson, not only arguing in his behalf at the various tariff exhibits in New York, Brooklyn, and elsewhere, but in organizing and handling the details of one of the greatest demonstrations ever given to a candidate for the Presidency. As chairman of the executive committee for the famous Wilson parade, in which nearly 100,000 men were to march all day and thousands of business houses to shut down in honor of the occasion, he accomplished the seemingly impossible. This great pageant set for Saturday, November 2, had to be called off because of the funeral of the late Vice President Sherman, which took place at the hour when Mr. Wilson was to have reviewed the great body of industrial workmen. Mr. MacLea is an expert on tariff matters and administration, and is recognized as a leading authority in this country.]

Textiles, O fickle "goddess of azure" in woman's world, thou art to prove the means of making or breaking another party of "political power" as of old.

Chagrin and unhappiness reign in the textile world to-day because, like a bolt of lightning out of a clear sky, the new Underwood tariff on textiles (wool and cotton particularly) was thrust upon the commercial horizon on the afternoon of April 7. Nothing approaching it had been thought of by even the most ardent advocates of a low tariff. It stunned. Honest men, who have never been guilty of asking or wishing for favors at the hands of the Government, and who stand highest in the cotton industry, had done everything possible to show the facts from all angles to the Ways and Means Committee at Washington, influenced by President Wilson's preelection statement at Hartford, Conn., September 25, 1912, used all over the land to elect him, in which he said:

"What the Democrats propose is a very practical thing, indeed. They propose to unearth these special privileges and to cut them out of the tariff. They propose not to leave a single concealed private advantage in the statutes concerning the duties that can possibly be eradicated without affecting the part of the business that is sound and legitimate and which we all wish to see promoted."

Then again, to more fully reassure the people of the business world, he said at Pittsburgh on October 17, 1912:

"The Democratic Party does not propose free trade or anything approaching free trade. It proposes merely a reconsideration of the tariff schedules, such as will adjust them to the actual business conditions and interests of the country."

So it came about that the cotton textile men of the South met the new power at Washington in "the spirit of accommodation" and showed frankness and willingness to help the new administration.

Business proceeded normally from January 22 and 23, when the hearings were held, until April 7, when the terrific cuts in cotton textiles were uncovered. Steadily since the cotton market has declined, until at the time of writing over 100 points, or $10 a bale, has been lopped off the farmers' holdings of unsold cotton. The radical cuts in cotton tariff have done this thing. Cloths have felt the influence, too. Great declines from day to day have put the market down in quick order to the low, unprofitable level of 1911. The equivalent can be estimated only in millions of dollars of unnecessary loss.

The reason for this chaotic condition is simple. Men who know had publicly stated that some of the rates proposed on textiles are below the difference in cost of production between here and abroad, which is free trade pure and simple.

It seems almost incredible that the attitude of the lower branch of Congress is such as it has proven to be. The Ways and Means Committee has sought and obtained advice and information from all directions. Much of it has been thrown in the wastebasket, and they have brought out a bill on cotton textiles which will hit some parts of the industry a blow it is unable to stand.

Approximately 10 to 12 per cent of the distribution in this country consists of fine plain and fancy cotton cloths, which under the census of 1910 amounts to about $50,000,000 at mill valuation, but over $100,000,000 consumers' values. These productions are made by a class of mills which can not hope to compete successfully with the English production under the American conditions if these proposed rates become a law.

According to the census of 1910, there was over $200,000,000 worth at mill value of all other cotton-mill productions (excluding cloths). Portions of this part of the industry are facing absolute disaster. Quilts, for instance, dutiable presumably at 25 per cent under one paragraph, are really dutiable at 10 or 12½ per cent under another, which is extending "special privilege" to certain importers who have been most active with the Ways and Means Committee, and will turn the entire business on this class of material to Germany. The same remark applies to an enormous quantity of cotton blankets. Space does not permit of giving the details of many similar examples whereby whole industries of this or that class will be hurt beyond calculation and unnecessarily.

There are a large number of mills making a different class of goods that will not suffer, especially under the proposed rates, which are calculated to prevent the secondary distributer or middleman from asking too much for fabrics converted by him. This, however, is confined only to plain goods.

The great complaint of the people and the trade of this country with the Payne-Aldrich law on cotton textiles was the special graft written into the law for the benefit of a handful of manufacturers, who have already received their just deserts, for internal competition directed at their productions as a result of the publicity achieved by their alliance with Senator Aldrich four years ago, has brought all such goods to their lowest level of values in the home market.

But the Democrats in the lower branch of Congress have apparently placed the honest business man in the cotton industry on trial instead of appreciating that they themselves are on trial. There is still time for the upper branch of Congress to eradicate these errors, and I sincerely believe Mr. Wilson will not permit such gross injustice to be perpetrated. At any rate, Congress should understand that it could do more in textiles to cheapen the cost of living to the consumer with a proper pure textile law than by such ridiculous cuts in the cotton tariff.

The statement made by Mr. UNDERWOOD in his published explanation of the new bill that "no part of the committee's work has been founded upon a belief in the cost-of-production theory, and the theory is absolutely rejected as a guide to tariff making," shows a political stubbornness in adhering to the opposite of business requirements. Mr. UNDERWOOD states in his latest excuse for the cotton schedule:

"When we consider that the average ad valorem rate of duty levied at the customhouse on manufactures of cotton goods, for example, is 45 per cent of the value of the article imported, and the total labor cost of production of cotton goods in this country averages only 21 per cent of the factory value of the product, that the difference in labor cost at home and abroad is about as one to two, and that 10 or 11 per cent of the value of the product levied at the customhouse would equal the difference in the labor wage, it is apparent that our present tariff rates have been misused for the purpose of protecting profits for the home manufacturer. This is not only true of the manufacturer of cotton goods, but of almost every other schedule in the tariff act. To protect profits of necessity means to protect inefficiency."

Why stop at labor cost? Let Mr. UNDERWOOD and the powers who must make our tariff laws study the conversion cost of cotton cloths, of which the labor cost is but a small portion. Take ordinary plain cloths containing yarns of from 20s to 30s. It will be found by examination of the 1,285 different constructions fully analyzed by the Tariff Board report that over 700 gray cloth constructions show a spread of conversion costs of from 9 to 57 per cent on plain fabrics containing not higher than No. 30s yarns. Certainly this represents goods that have successfully gone into market distribution. Why are the conversion costs, which are the actual costs, ignored? Particularly when they are actually known after an investigation. The only excuse Mr. UNDERWOOD can give for comparing the difference in labor cost alone is that the Republican Party used that basis as an argument for its intended tariff making four years ago, which on further investigation it had to abandon.

The proposed reductions will not cheapen the great mass of fabrics for the consumer. It will transfer the business on a great part of the fabrics used from the United States to England. The retailer will still get his profits and so will the middleman who remains in business. The interference with business as a result of these proposed tariff rates is already greater than it should have been. The Ways and Means Committee, in justification of its low rates, claim that it has reduced the cotton-cloth tariff from 42.74 to 26.69 per cent. The absurdity of this statement can be seen—yet it is made broadcast throughout the country—when it is known that these figures are based on the small amount of importations during 1912, which were fine goods and which were already coming in in a competitive way with American-made materials and amounted to but 2 per cent of the distribution.

With the new rates the real reductions are so great that the average is 16.23 per cent—this is injustice. The rates should be compared with the known distribution of fabrics used in the industry in this country. This shows to business men a strong reason for a permanent tariff commission or tariff board for the study and elucidation of the various phases of trade. It is because politicians are apt to think more of their constituents than of the welfare of the country in tariff making that such strong political changes are witnessed from year to year. But as President Wilson said, prior to election on September 21 last, "For there is a God in the heaven; there is justice in the souls of men." So I say let justice be done to the hundreds of thousands of mill workers dependent upon a successful continuation of business in the many branches of the cotton industry, as well as those who have built up the industry and asked only that the rates be fair.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. WILDER].

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. WILDER] is recognized for five minutes.

Mr. WILDER. Mr. Chairman, I hope to obtain forgiveness, either in this world or the next, for constantly harping on this manufacturing side of these propositions. But cotton is one of the large industries of this country, one of the largest, and the wage scale paid is low, one of the lowest. There are many mills in my district making an extensive variety of cotton goods from the commonest to the high grade, such as Lancaster-Bigelow, carpet; Parkhill-Southbridge, printing; big yarn mills, and so forth.

Now, I understand it is the purpose of this bill that is before us to reduce the tariff on this schedule as a whole, purposely, substantially. The query in my mind is, as a manufacturer, whom is this coming out of? I know of one schedule at the present time—on ginghams—where over one-half of the amount of ginghams used in this country of that class is imported. This of itself indicates that the tariff is low enough, does it not?

I want to repeat that, that more than one-half of a certain class of ginghams consumed in this country is imported, and in the case of those ginghams the tariff has been cut in two. The cut is about 50 per cent on that schedule. Now, whom is this coming out of?

Presumably we are trying to lower the cost of living. I wish we might. But is there any virtue in lowering the cost of living by taking it out of our poorest class of people? I ask again, Whom is this reduction coming out of?

If some goods are sold at such a price that one-half of the amount consumed is coming in now from abroad—and that is true also with respect to other smaller portions of the cotton schedule—and the tariff is lowered, what is going to happen? That is a plain, simple, academic proposition. What is going to happen?

If the American manufacturers compete with the foreigner so that the foreigner's goods do not come in, something must be reduced, must it not? Do any of you gentlemen know that the cotton manufacturers of this country, year in and year out, are making less than 5 per cent on the selling cost of their goods? Can you then come down more than 5 per cent without losing all your profits? I am stating this as a practical man. Where is this reduction coming from? It will come from where it always comes from.

This should be clearly understood if the cost of goods is to be lowered; and if the cost of goods is to be lowered, there is only one place for it to come from, and that is from the workingman, because it is all work. Go through it and find out what there is in the manufacture of goods, and you will see that there is nothing but work from first to last. It is all labor.

Mr. FORDNEY. What is the percentage of labor?

Mr. WILDER. It is all labor, figured through from the beginning. Either directly or indirectly and remotely, it is all labor.

Now, there is but one alternative, if these goods are brought in from abroad—that is, if $100,000,000 worth of goods from abroad comes, $100,000,000 worth of work is thrown out, is not it?—including work on the goods in the building of factories, and in the machinery, and the tools, and the selling, and every other expense and activity that enter into the production. It represents just so much lost abroad to this country. And if those goods, as I say, must be lowered in price in this country, the cost must be lowered, and it can come only out of the workingman.

Gentlemen, do not make a mistake about this. If the goods come in from abroad, one of these two things must happen, and in either event it is loss. I do not know of any way by which you can figure it out otherwise, either in this tariff bill or any other. [Applause on the Republican side.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, under the agreement I was to have 5 minutes on each of the paragraphs numbered 264 and 265. I ask unanimous consent now that I may have that 10 minutes at this time, and not take it when those paragraphs are reached.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] asks unanimous consent to have the 10 minutes to be allowed on paragraphs 264 and 265 consumed in general debate at this time, and not to be used at that time. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. MANN. Ten minutes of that time was to be controlled by the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. AUSTIN] anyhow, and I yield to him 15 minutes. [Applause on the Republican side.]

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. Chairman, no section of our great country has grown faster in industrial development than the Southland in the last 30 years under the American protective system or policy. In mining development, in agricultural and manufacturing growth and development, and especially in the cotton industry, I challenge any section of the United States. We have a new South. While the other side of the House will vote almost solidly for this bill, there are thousands and thousands of Democrats among their constituents who believe in a protective tariff. Prior to the Civil War the South was exclusively an agricultural country, with cheap slave labor; but the great God had stored in our mountains and hills inexhaustible quantities of coal, iron, marble, kaolin, zinc, copper, and other minerals, and away up and down the slopes of the Allegheny and Cumberland Mountains the finest body of hardwood timber on the American Continent.

In those days before the war we were sending our money from every State in the South to New England for every piece of calico that our people needed. When we did not purchase in New England we shipped our raw material 3,000 miles across the ocean, to be made up by foreign operatives in the cotton mills of Manchester, England, and reshipped the finished article across the Atlantic Ocean, to be purchased and used in the South. We paid the freight both ways. But times have changed and conditions have changed in the South. I match the southern business man and manufacturer against the business intellect of any set of men in the world on equal terms and conditions. We took from New England more than half of the manufacture of American cotton goods. We have a splendid lot of cotton mills in Virginia and the Carolinas, Tennessee, Georgia, Alabama, and in other States of the South. There are 850 of these mills, representing $300,000,000 in plants, houses, and machinery, with more than 200,000 operatives. We have built many new manufacturing towns and cities. We have furnished better wages to the boys, girls, and men, and through them we have put more money in local circulation for the professional men, the coal operators, the merchants, and the tax-gatherer. The farmer has a new and better market for his cotton and the railroads have greatly increased their earnings.

What is this bill? It is the most injurious and destructive bill to the interests of the South that was ever written by mortal man, the Wilson bill not excepted.

What has the South to gain in this bill for the future increase of her commercial, agricultural, and manufacturing interests? Our rivals in Pennsylvania exacted tribute from the southern people for more than a hundred years under a protective tariff. You have given them free iron ore in order to meet the iron furnaces of the South in competition in the Mississippi Valley and on the Atlantic seacoast. You have reduced the price of pig iron until you have made it impossible for the southern furnaces to sell a dollar's worth of pig iron on the Pacific coast in competition with the cheap Chinese pig iron. You have made it impossible for Birmingham and Tennessee to sell in successful competition along the Atlantic coast with pig iron made in Germany and England, not to mention the furnaces of Pennsylvania. You have given up our iron ore, our pig iron, our zinc, our lead, and our coal market in New England. You are going to destroy a great industry of a sovereign State of the South—Louisiana—which has followed the Democratic banner ever since its creation. By this legislation you will bankrupt countless people in that State, throw their machinery into the scrap heap, and wipe out $100,000,000 of their investments, and turn the operatives loose without employment.

And here is this cotton schedule. Why, the southern cotton manufacturers met in this city and appealed to you in a letter which was read to your caucus. More than 140 of the cotton mills of the South have never paid a dividend. A number of them have gone into the hands of receivers. Instead of encouraging them, instead of helping them, now that you are in power and are writing the tariff bill, you turn your backs upon them. Is it fair? Is it just?

I love the people of the South, my own, my native South, and, God helping me, as long as I am a Member of this House I will never cast a vote against her interests or one that will retard her progress or development. [Applause on the Republican side.]

We purchased abroad last year $65,000,000 of cotton goods. Although we grow 60 per cent of the cotton of the world, what did we export? We exported $50,000,000. We bought $15,000,000 more than we sold in foreign lands. And you are not satisfied with that? Southern men helped write this tariff bill, which says, "We are not buying enough from England and Japan; let us buy more." This bill, according to your own figures and reports, estimates we are going to buy from foreigners in the first year of its operation $12,568,000 more rather than buy it from our own people—from the 850 cotton mills of the South—making under the first year of the Underwood bill the valuation of total imports of cotton goods $77,821,000, which sum will be taken out of this country, out of the channels of trade, sent to foreign lands, giving employment to foreigners when we have an army of deserving American working people here at home.

You say this is Democracy. You say this is a compliance with your promise when you wrote in your platform that no "legitimate industry" in this country would be harmed or injured if you were intrusted with power. Will it harm the cotton mills of the South and the working people in these mills to take every year $12,000,000 additional from them and place those orders in Manchester, England, and in Japan? The cotton industry of the South is a legitimate industry. I dare you to say that it is not. Why, the chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means says that under the Payne tariff bill we are putting money into the pockets of the "special interests." When we pay wages to the men and women, boys and girls employed in American cotton mills, is the money going into the pockets of the "special interests"? Take the 200,000 people in the South, many of them girls and boys who are aiding in the support of the families that need the money; they are all a part of the so-called "special interests."

Oh, but you say there is a high-tariff wall around America. Last year, under the Payne tariff bill, we permitted to come into this country free goods to the value of $881,512,000. There was no high-tariff wall to keep them out. The foreigners sold more goods coming in free last year than they did of goods paying a duty. This is the first time this has happened in 17 years in this country.

What do you propose to do in this bill? You say we are not now getting enough on the free list. We are going to add $102,400,000 to be admitted without the payment of duty, making a total under your bill with the amount imported free under the Payne law last year $983,915,000. In other words, this amount of goods will be sold in competition with American mills and wage earners without paying a cent of duty.

How about Japan, where they pay 10 or 15 cents a day to women and the men 22 cents a day in their cotton mills? Why, they have constructed in their manufacturing cities the best type of English-made cotton machinery. Where the mills of New England and the South furnish cotton goods on the Pacific coast the Japanese have sold in the past two years cotton goods to the amount of $1,300,000 in this country as against $10,470 in 1890 and $292,915 in 1910.

What will they do if the duty is reduced? Mark the prediction: Within 12 months after this bill becomes a law the Japanese importation of cheap cotton goods will be three times what it is to-day.

Mr. KITCHIN. How much is it to-day?

Mr. AUSTIN. In two years it was $1,300,000. Then, when the Panama Canal is opened and you have cheap water transportation to Japan, they will capture and control the markets of the Eastern States.

Mr. KITCHIN. How much do we send there?

Mr. AUSTIN. My good and genial friend, the Demosthenes of the House that saved a satisfactory duty on peanuts of his State, North Carolina, in this bill, asks me how much we send there.

Mr. KITCHIN. Let me ask the gentleman. He said that China sent a million and a half dollars' worth of cheap goods to this country.

Mr. AUSTIN. No; I said Japan. If not, I meant Japan.

Mr. KITCHIN. Well, the gentleman knew, if he knew anything, that she did no such thing. The gentleman knew another thing—that we export ten times more of the cheap goods that are imported from all the world. He knows that we export to China in competition with Japan five times more cheap goods—cheap cotton cloths that are imported into this country from all countries in the world.

Mr. AUSTIN. The gentleman says I made a misstatement as to cotton goods imported from Japan. I will hand him the Government reports from the Bureau of Statistics, furnished me by the Department of Commerce, on Japanese imports.

Mr. KITCHIN. Those are not cheap cloths; they are all figured fancy Japan goods.

Mr. PETERS. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. AUSTIN. I would like to yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts, who saved free coal for Massachusetts at the expense of the coal industry of West Virginia and Virginia.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Tennessee has expired.

Mr. AUSTIN. Will the gentleman give me a few minutes more? I want to answer the gentleman from North Carolina.

Mr. KITCHIN. You had better give him half an hour, for it will take that time to answer.

Mr. MANN. I will give him as much time on this side as the gentleman will give him from that side.

Mr. KITCHIN. I have not control of the time.

Mr. MANN. Oh, I thought the gentleman had them all by strangle hold. I yield three minutes more to the gentleman from Tennessee.

Mr. AUSTIN. Now I will give the gentleman the figures.

Mr. KITCHIN. The figures the gentleman has given me do not show a yard of cloth coming from Japan—it is cotton waste.

Mr. AUSTIN. Look at all the schedules. The gentleman talks about our exports.

We shipped to China cheap cotton goods to the amount of $29,814,000 in 1906, and last year we shipped $7,454,000, showing a loss or difference in the two years quoted of $22,359,000. The English trade papers complained that the Japanese, with their new machinery and their cheap labor, have been enabled to drive them out and supplant them in a number of the Provinces of China in the sale of cheap cotton goods.

Take the question of hosiery——

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. AUSTIN. No; I will not yield with only three minutes at my disposal. Take the question of hosiery. There are 10 or 12 mills in my town, and the people of the South have a large number of mills making hosiery all through the South, with practically every dollar of it southern capital. What are you doing with that industry under this bill? You are increasing the importation of hosiery $1,500,000. Most of that is in wages, and you are giving that trade to Germany. That is what you are doing—taking it from our mills and wage earners and giving it to Germany.

I am going to put in the RECORD an interview from one of the leading cotton manufacturers in my town, one of the ablest and best Democrats in Tennessee, a man who recently came within 4 votes of being elected United States Senator—Col. L. D. Tyson—in which he says that this proposed legislation is drastic and will prove injurious to the cotton mills and to the South. What else? I will give you also in the RECORD a statement from Robert Kenneth MacLea, who supported President Wilson and who made addresses in New York City in his interest and who was selected chairman of the committee to get up that great industrial reception to President Wilson, as a candidate, which was called off on account of the funeral of Vice President Sherman.

Here is an open statement, a letter, stating that the Democratic Party had violated its promise in its platform, and that the President had violated his promise in speeches made in Pittsburgh and in New Jersey, when he said that no legitimate industry would be crippled or injured by the Democratic Party, and that the party was not for free trade and would not favor legislation that would endanger any legitimate, honest business in this country. [Applause.] I will also add a copy of the letter of the American Cotton Manufacturers' Association of the South read in the Democratic caucus and a day letter or telegram from a Tennessee cotton-mill company.

[From the Knoxville (Tenn.) Daily Journal and Tribune.]

COL. L. D. TYSON'S INTERVIEW.

"Blue" is no name for the cotton-mill operators of the South. In North and South Carolina, in Alabama, and in Georgia they are in very bad spirits, and do not know to what ends the action on the tariff as to the cotton schedule will bring the cotton business. The cut in the schedule is pronounced by cotton men as being "drastic," and its effects will probably begin to be felt after September.

Col. L. D. Tyson, who, with James Maynard, Esq., went to Washington recently to present the position of the cotton operators of the Southeastern States, returned to the city yesterday evening. Mr. Maynard went on to New York and the East.

In reply to a query as to how the cotton-mill men expect their business to be affected by the tariff revision, Col. Tyson said:

"The cut on all cotton goods has been very drastic. A cut was expected, but it has placed the tariff below anything that had been expected or anticipated. We had no idea that the tariff would be placed as low as it is now scheduled to be reported on for passage. The cotton men, in fact, are pretty blue.

"I do not know what effect the revision will have on the business. The cut amounted to as much as 50 per cent in some items. Cotton underwear and hosiery were cut from 80 per cent to 25 per cent. On cloths the revision was from about 60 per cent down to 25 per cent. On yarns it was 40 per cent as the highest down to 5 per cent as the lowest, and, of course, the cuts were different on different yarns. I haven't the proposed schedule before me and can not give the details as to these cuts.

"Many think that they will have to shut down their mills and many workers will be thrown out of employment if the bill is passed as it now stands, and it looks as if it would pass. If there is any change in the present schedule, it will have to be made in the Senate. It seems that Mr. Wilson is doing everything in his power to get the bill through as it stands

"I don't know when the bill will become effective, whether immediately on its passage or at a given later date, but the operators do not look for a probable change in the conditions resulting from it before the 1st of October; that is to say, nearly all mills have orders which will keep them running until about that time, and unless the present proposed bill causes much agitation it may be that there will be no change in the business until the contracts now operative are filled.

"Of course, the bill will curtail all projected enterprises in the textile industry, and I don't suppose there will be another spindle put in the South for some time.

"The yarn men seem to be in the most unfortunate position of any of the textile manufacturers, as the cut is, of course, worse there than anywhere else, unless it was in hosiery and underwear.

"What I have said as to the conditions is the consensus of opinions among the cotton men. For my own part I think the Ways and Means Committee has gone too far. Of course, there must be a revision. I expected that. It was in the Democratic platform, which demanded a substantial revision, but the proposed revision has not only been substantial but it has been drastic."

[From May Issue of Dry Goods.]

OVERDOING TARIFF REDUCTION.

(By Robert Kenneth MacLea, formerly consulting expert of the Tariff Board.)

[EDITOR'S NOTE.—The importance of the following article will be appreciated. During the recent campaign, Mr. MacLea was an ardent supporter of Mr. Wilson, not only arguing in his behalf at the various tariff exhibits in New York, Brooklyn, and elsewhere, but in organizing and handling the details of one of the greatest demonstrations ever given to a candidate for the Presidency. As chairman of the executive committee for the famous Wilson parade, in which nearly 100,000 men were to march all day and thousands of business houses to shut down in honor of the occasion, he accomplished the seemingly impossible. This great pageant set for Saturday, November 2, had to be called off because of the funeral of the late Vice President Sherman, which took place at the hour when Mr. Wilson was to have reviewed the great body of industrial workmen. Mr. MacLea is an expert on tariff matters and administration, and is recognized as a leading authority in this country.]

Textiles, oh, fickle "Goddess of Azure" in woman's world, thou art to prove the means of making or breaking another party of "political power" as of old.

Chagrin and unhappiness reign in the textile world to-day because, like a bolt of lightning out of a clear sky, the new Underwood tariff on textiles (wool and cotton particularly) was thrust upon the commercial horizon on the afternoon of April 7. Nothing approaching it had been thought of by even the most ardent advocates of a low tariff. It stunned. Honest men, who have never been guilty of asking or wishing for favors at the hands of the Government, and who stand highest in the cotton industry, had done everything possible to show the facts from all angles to the Ways and Means Committee at Washington, influenced by President Wilson's preelection statement at Hartford, Conn., September 25, 1912, used all over the land to elect him, in which he said:

"What the Democrats propose is a very practical thing, indeed. They propose to unearth these special privileges and to cut them out of the tariff. They propose not to leave a single concealed private advantage in the statutes concerning the duties that can possibly be eradicated without affecting the part of the business that is sound and legitimate and which we all wish to see promoted."

Then, again, to more fully reassure the people of the business world, he said at Pittsburgh on October 17, 1912:

"The Democratic Party does not propose free trade or anything approaching free trade. It proposes merely a reconsideration of the tariff schedules, such as will adjust them to the actual business conditions and interests of the country."

So it came about that the cotton textile men of the South met the new power at Washington in "the spirit of accommodation," and showed frankness and willingness to help the new administration.

Business proceeded normally from January 22 and 23, when the hearings were held, until April 7, when the terrific cuts in cotton textiles were uncovered. Steadily since the cotton market has declined, until at the time of writing over 100 points, or $10 a bale, has been lopped off the farmer's holdings of unsold cotton. The radical cuts in cotton tariff have done this thing. Cloths have felt the influence, too. Great declines from day to day have put the market down in quick order to the low, unprofitable level of 1911. The equivalent can be estimated only in millions of dollars of unnecessary loss.

The reason for this chaotic condition is simple. Men who know had publicly stated that some of the rates proposed on textiles are below the difference in cost of production between here and abroad, which is free trade pure and simple.

It seems almost incredible that the attitude of the lower branch of Congress is such as it has proven to be. The Ways and Means Committee has sought and obtained advice and information from all directions. Much of it has been thrown in the wastebasket, and they have brought out a bill on cotton textiles which will hit some parts of the industry a blow it is unable to stand.

Approximately 10 to 12 per cent of the distribution in this country consists of fine plain and fancy cotton cloths, which under the census of 1910 amounts to about $50,000,000 at mill valuation, but over $100,000,000 consumers' values. These productions are made by a class of mills which can not hope to compete successfully with the English production under the American conditions if these proposed rates become law.

According to the census of 1910 there was over $200,000,000 worth at mill value of all other cotton mill productions (excluding cloths). Portions of this part of the industry are facing absolute disaster. Quilts, for instance, dutiable presumably at 25 per cent under one paragraph are really dutiable at 10 or 12½ per cent under another, which is extending "special privilege" to certain importers who have been most active with the Ways and Means Committee, and will turn the entire business on this class of material to Germany. The same remark applies to an enormous quantity of cotton blankets. Space does not permit of giving the details of many similar examples, whereby whole industries of this or that class will be hurt beyond calculation and unnecessarily.

There are a large number of mills making a different class of goods that will not suffer especially under the proposed rates which are calculated to prevent the secondary distributor or middleman from asking to much for fabrics converted by him. This, however, is confined only to plain goods.

The great complaint of the people and the trade of this country with the Payne-Aldrich law on cotton textiles was the special graft written into the law for the benefit of a handful of manufacturers, who have already received their just deserts, for internal competition directed at their productions as a result of the publicity achieved by their alliance with Senator Aldrich four years ago has brought all such goods to their lowest level of values in the home market.

But the Democrats in the lower branch of Congress have apparently placed the honest business man in the cotton industry on trial, instead of appreciating that they themselves are on trial. There is still time for the upper branch of Congress to eradicate these errors, and I sincerely believe Mr. Wilson will not permit such gross injustice to be perpetrated. At any rate, Congress should understand that it could do more in textiles to cheapen the cost of living to the consumer with a proper pure textile law than by such ridiculous cuts in the cotton tariff.

The statement made by Mr. UNDERWOOD in his published explanation of the new bill that "no part of the committee's work has been founded upon a belief in the cost-of-production theory, and the theory is absolutely rejected as a guide to tariff making" shows a political stubbornness in adhering to the opposite of business requirements. Mr. UNDERWOOD states in his latest excuse for the cotton schedule:

"When we consider that the average ad valorem rate of duty levied at the customhouse on manufactures of cotton goods, for example, is 45 per cent of the value of the article imported, and the total labor cost of production of cotton goods in this country averages only 21 per cent of the factory value of the product, that the difference in labor cost at home and abroad is about as 1 to 2, and that 10 or 11 per cent of the value of the product levied at the customhouse would equal the difference in the labor wage, it is apparent that our present tariff rates have been misused for the purpose of protecting profits for the home manufacturer. This is not only true of the manufacture of cotton goods, but of almost every other schedule in the tariff act. To protect profits of necessity means to protect inefficiency."

Why stop at labor cost? Let Mr. UNDERWOOD and the powers who must make our tariff laws study the conversion cost of cotton cloths, of which the labor cost is but a small portion. Take ordinary plain cloths containing yarns of from twenties to thirties. It will be found by examination of the 1,285 different constructions fully analyzed by the Tariff Board report that over 700 gray cloth constructions show a spread of conversion costs of from 9 to 57 per cent on plain fabrics containing not higher than No. 30 yarns. Certainly this represents goods that have successfully gone into market distribution. Why are the conversion costs, which are the actual costs, ignored? Particularly when they are actually known after an investigation. The only excuse Mr. UNDERWOOD can give for comparing the difference in labor cost alone is that the Republican Party used that basis as an argument for its intended tariff making four years ago, which on further investigation it had to abandon.

The proposed reductions will not cheapen the great mass of fabrics for the consumer. It will transfer the business on a great part of the fabrics used from the United States to England. The retailer will still get his profits, and so will the middleman who remains in business. The interference with business as a result of these proposed tariff rates is already greater than it should have been. The Ways and Means Committee, in justification of its low rates, claim it has reduced the cotton cloth tariff from 42.74 to 26.69 per cent. The absurdity of this statement can be seen (yet it is made broadcast throughout the country) when it is known that these figures are based on the small amount of importations during 1912, which were fine goods and which were already coming in in a competitive way with American-made materials and amounted to but 2 per cent of the distribution.

With the new rates the real reductions are so great that the average is 16.23 per cent. This is injustice. The rates should be compared with the known distribution of fabrics used in the industry in this country. This shows to business men a strong reason for a permanent tariff commission or tariff board for the study and elucidation of the various phases of trade. It is because politicians are apt to think more of their constituents than of the welfare of the country in tariff making that such strong political changes are witnessed from year to year. But, as President Wilson said prior to election on September 21 last, "For there is a God in the heaven; there is justice in the souls of men." So I say let justice be done to the hundreds of thousands of mill workers dependent upon a successful continuation of business in the many branches of the cotton industry, as well as those who have built up the industry and asked only that the rates be fair.

—

LETTER TO THE DEMOCRATIC CAUCUS.

APRIL 12, 1913.

Hon. A. MITCHELL PALMER,
Chairman Democratic Caucus, House of Representatives, Washington D. C.

DEAR SIR: At the annual meeting of the American Cotton Manufacturers' Association, held this day, a committee was appointed to present to the Democratic Members of the House of Representatives a protest on behalf of the cotton manufacturers of the United States against the rates proposed in the bill known as H. R. 10, introduced on April 7, 1913, by Hon. O. W. UNDERWOOD and referred to the Committee on Ways and Means.

This association begs to present to your body a resolution adopted by it at its meeting held in April, 1912, which resolution reads as follows:

"That this association records itself as favoring such reasonable revision of the cotton schedule, based upon differences in cost of production and other conditions, at home and abroad, as shall be consistent with the raising of revenue and the conservation of our home markets."

At a subsequent meeting of the tariff committee appointed by this association the following resolution was also adopted:

"We favor the reasonable revision of the cotton schedule based upon figures at which importations are actually being made and can be made, as shown by the comparative manufacturers' selling price at home and abroad, as shall be consistent with the raising of revenue and conservation of our home markets."

Acting upon this resolution, the tariff committee, at public hearings before the Ways and Means Committee, presented from time to time statements, in which this association, with frankness and at length, gave information with regard to conditions affecting the industry and suggested such reductions as in the judgment of the association could be consistently made without injury to the domestic industry of cotton manufacturing, and at the same time in consistency with the policy of reasonable downward revision and tariff for revenue.

We recognize the propriety of there being adopted at this time such provision in the tariff as would bring domestic and foreign manufacturers into competitive relation.

To the best of our belief the schedules suggested by this association to the Ways and Means Committee contained the lowest rates which could be in reason adopted without danger of injury to the industry of cotton manufacturing in this country.

We recognize, of course, that any suggestions made by ourselves are necessarily addressed to the discretion of the honorable committee charged with the consideration of the subject, and we can only say that we have with perfect frankness presented to the committee all information bearing upon the subject which could be obtained by us. We have not asked the committee to accept our unconfirmed statements upon these subjects, but we have in every instance referred the committee to the findings of the Tariff Board, confirming and proving the correctness of the statements made by ourselves to the committee. In addition, we supplied the committee with other authoritative data, fully confirming the statements of the representatives of the association.

It is therefore with the greatest regret and consternation that we have seen the publication of rates on cotton products recommended by the Ways and Means Committee.

In all sincerity we state to your honorable body that if the rates thus suggested are made effective we believe the injury to our industry will be unparalleled.

We earnestly enter a protest against the suggested rates and state with positive conviction on our part that the effect of these rates will be to transfer a far larger proportion of cotton manufacturing from the United States to foreign fields, where cheaper labor and other favorable conditions obtain, than the Ways and Means Committee can have any conception of.

In an absolute conviction of the truth of our statements we appeal to your body not to make reduction in the rates as drastic as presented in the bill referred to, and would conclude with the statement that if the bill becomes enacted into law a condition of depression will follow in the industry of cotton manufacturing which will, in our judgment, be appalling. Cotton manufacturing is an industry confined not to one community, but distributed throughout a large portion of our country, in portions of which it is the chief industry. It is an industry in which hundreds of thousands of employees are engaged, in which there are many plants, with many thousands of stockholders.

There is absolutely an untrammeled competition between manufacturing plants in the cotton industry, so that there is no condition presented of a monopolistic industry whose control needs in any sense to be broken.

In these views we respectfully present our earnest request that further consideration be given to the cotton schedule in the bill referred to.

Very respectfully,

AMERICAN COTTON MANUFACTURERS ASSOCIATION,
W. A. ERWIN, President.
C. B. BRYANT, Secretary.

—

DAY LETTER FROM A TENNESSEE COTTON MILL COMPANY.

NASHVILLE, TENN., April 30, 1913.

Hon. RICHARD W. AUSTIN,
House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.:

We beg to protest against the adoption of the present proposed tariff rates on cotton goods. The American Cotton Manufacturers' Association rates were placed before the committee sincerely and honestly, and are as low as the industry can stand without being permanently injured. If the proposed rates are passed, wages must be reduced and the industry seriously injured, much of it wiped out. Please save us by voting for the amendments that will embrace rates proposed by the American Cotton Manufacturers' Association.

WARIOTO COTTON MILLS.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I yield to the gentleman from New York [Mr. WALLIN].

Mr. WALLIN. Mr. Chairman, a little later I wish to offer an amendment to paragraph 266 of the bill. I do this in behalf of the great industry known as the cotton knit-underwear industry. In this industry there are about 800 factories scattered throughout the United States. Some of them are very small. Seventy-five thousand people are employed in these mills, and they pay out annually over $35,000,000 in wages. In the bill that first came before the House, in this paragraph, there was a duty of 25 per cent ad valorem. That has now been changed to 30 per cent. The committee evidently thought that 25 per cent was too low, and it was right. Twenty-five per cent was too low, and 30 is too low. I hope the committee will raise it a little and give these industries opportunity to become accustomed to this close competition about which we hear so much. Whenever a doubt exists, as it evidently did with the committee in this case, I believe the preference should be given to American workers and business men, rather than to foreign labor and foreign capital.

I have figures showing the different rates of wages paid here and abroad with the hours of labor, and so forth, and I will ask to have them printed in the RECORD with my remarks, and yield back the remainder of my time.

The statements referred to are as follows:

NEW YORK CITY, April 4, 1913.

The PRESIDENT,
Executive Offices, Washington, D. C.:

Reliable information has reached our association that it is the intention of the Ways and Means Committee to change the present tariff rates on cotton knit underwear to 30 per cent.

This drastic change means the decline of the cotton knit-underwear industry in the United States, and the amount of business which the foreign manufacturer can do with this rate of tariff will be limited only to their facilities for manufacturing goods for our market.

Without regard to politics thousands of voters in this country were influenced by your declaration that "No legitimate industry need fear your election."

This statement was accepted in entire good faith by a great number of your fellow citizens, among whom were thousands of our own work people. We are therefore unwilling to believe that the effects of the drastic change proposed can be understood either by yourself or the individual members of the Ways and Means Committee.

The chief competition which we have to fear is from Germany and France.

To give you some idea of the rate of wages paid in those countries we quote from the report of United States consular agent, George A. Makinson, Sorau, Saxony, as follows:

"The men and women weavers generally work by the piece, and earn $2.75 to $3.25 per week; master weavers, exclusively men, earn $3.50 to $4.50; spooling, twisting, throwing, and stitching are in charge of women, who are paid $1.90 to $3 per week; half-timers, boys and girls over 16 years, engaged in miscellaneous light work, receive 75 cents to $1.50 weekly."

Similar rates of wages, and even lower, are paid in France, while in Spain, see special agent series No. 46, by Ralph N. Odell, agent of Department of Commerce and Labor, covering living and working conditions of mill workers in Spain.

"Eleven hours constitute a working day, according to law, but several of the mills that I visited were running 12 hours. Work usually begins at 5.30 a. m. and ends at 6 p. m."

Spain probably employs the lowest paid labor in Europe, and in a short while our work people would be in direct competition with people whose standard of living is far below the American standard.

While we hold no brief for the wage earners employed in our industry, we believe that their interest should be considered before our own, and in behalf of the 75,000 men and women employed by us and living under American conditions we urge your careful consideration of this revolutionary chance, which threatens our very existence.

We have agreed among ourselves as to that rate of tariff which would still make it possible for us to continue as manufacturers and maintain the present wage scale.

We suggest for your consideration the rates given below, which, in our opinion, will meet every condition demanded by the Ways and Means Committee:

First. The change from a combined specific and ad valorem rate to a strictly ad valorem rate, which, however, we oppose as unjust and unfair.

Second. A reduction of the present rates, which amount to from 90 per cent to 50 per cent, to a new rate which we suggest of from 50 per cent to 40 per cent.

Third. The lowest rate which would conserve the American standard of wages and at the same time give a measure of foreign competition such as we have never known in this country.

We therefore ask that the Schedule I, paragraph 266, should be amended to read as follows:

"Shirts and drawers, pants, vests, union suits, combination suits, tights, sweaters, corset covers, and all underwear of every description made wholly or in part on knitting machines, frames, or looms, composed of cotton or other vegetable fiber, weighing up to and including 9 pounds per dozen, 50 per cent ad valorem; weighing more than 9 pounds per dozen, 40 per cent ad valorem."

This letter is an appeal to you for the very existence of one of the most worthy American industries, and to your sense of fairness, to give our committee an opportunity to demonstrate the vicious effect that the reduction proposed would have upon the existing prosperity and success of the knit underwear manufacturers of the United States.

A copy of this letter is being mailed to each member of the Ways and Means committee of the House and to each member of the Finance Committee of the Senate.

Respectfully submitted.

KNIT UNDERWEAR MANUFACTURERS' ASSOCIATION,
Per Jos. Feldenheimer, Secretary-Treasurer; Andrew Frey, President, Utica, N. Y.; Clifton P. Baker, Boston, Mass.; L. M. Flesh, Piqua, Ohio; P. H. Hanes, Winston-Salem, N. C.; W. C. Spaulding, Minneapolis, Minn.; Henry S. Cooper, Kenosha, Wis.; W. C. Ruffin, Mayodan, N. C.; Harry Querns, Philadelphia, Pa.; Nathan Hatch, Albany, N. Y.; William Sloane, Norfolk, Va.; Edward H. Clift, New York City; John K. Stewart, Amsterdam, N. Y.; J. W. Hanson, Macon, Ga.; Geo. W. Kavanaugh, Waterford, N. Y.

RELATING TO SCHEDULE I, PARAGRAPH 329, ACT OF AUGUST 5, 1909.

JANUARY, 1913.

SIR: The cotton-underwear manufacturers' tariff committee of the National Association of Hosiery and Underwear Manufacturers, representing manufacturers engaged in the knitting industry in nearly every State in the Union, submit for the consideration of your committee some statements, which we trust will receive full and careful consideration.

The present tariff rates are exactly the same under the Payne law as they were under the Dingley law, there having been no change or increase of rates whatsoever, and we ask that the present rates shall remain unchanged.

Our business is one that can be engaged in by small manufacturers with limited means in almost any community.

There are about 800 concerns engaged in the manufacture of knitted cotton underwear scattered all over the United States doing a total business of over $60,000,000. The amount of wages paid out by these 800 concerns represents fully 50 per cent to 75 per cent of the total, or about $35,000,000.

There has never been a trust or combination formed by manufacturers in our branch of the knitting industry for the purpose of controlling either selling price or output, and we do not believe that a trust, combination, or monopoly would be possible owing to the small amount of money it takes to engage in the knitting business.

Furthermore, there is no American industry in which competition is so keen and returns from investment or enterprise so unsatisfactory; as a proof of this statement we can point to at least 125 failures in the knit-underwear business within recent years.

We enjoy no advantages on account of being nearer the source of our raw material than foreign manufacturers, as cotton can be delivered as cheaply in Hamburg, Havre, or Barcelona as it can be delivered in the leading manufacturing cities of this country.

We enjoy no advantage owing to the use of special and more rapid machinery, inasmuch as the foreigners have adopted and are building the same class of knitting and sewing machinery that we use.

The present rate of duty is absolutely essential to the continued existence of manufacturers in our line. Any lowering of the rate would result eventually in the closing down of the mills of this country, throwing out of employment thousands of wage earners, who receive compensation three to four times as great as the same class of employees receive in foreign countries, where the help are better trained and more settled.

Skilled sewing-machine operators in this country earn from $1.50 to $2.50 per day. Other classes of labor, such as winders, knitters, and general help earn fully three to four times as much as similar classes of help in France, Germany, or Spain, and we know from the prices paid for knitted underwear sold in the West Indies and the Latin-American countries to the exclusion of American goods that if the tariff were lowered it would be possible to bring into the United States an unlimited quantity of goods which would undersell the cheapest of the American products.

The rates of duty should not be based alone upon the difference in labor costs of manufacturing and greater expense of doing business in this country as compared with foreign countries, but should also take into consideration the higher rates of interest, the greater cost of installation.

The cost of building and equipping a cotton underwear mill in the United States is fully 70 per cent greater than in Europe; therefore a mill constructed and equipped abroad with a capital of $100,000 could not be duplicated in the United States for less than $170,000. This would result in a corresponding reduction of general expense in favor of the foreign manufacturer.

The foundation of all these higher costs for construction, equipment, and maintenance lies in the higher wages paid to American artisans and laborers in the building, mechanical, and other trades and industries drawn upon by American manufacturers, and are most important factors in the cost of production.

If the tariff should be reduced the jobber and retailer would give preference to foreign goods, but the consumer buying the foreign article would still pay the fixed retail selling price; thus there would be no advantage whatever to the consumer but a greater profit to the retailer.

At this point we wish to emphasize the fact that in spite of the increased cost of living, the quality of our class of manufacture has steadily improved, but the fixed selling prices to the consumer for the past 20 years have remained the same.

The concerns engaged in this line of business use great quantities of cotton yarns, spun largely in the Southern and Eastern States; pearl buttons, cotton fabrics, bindings, cardboard, and many small wares from other sections of the United States, and these industries would likewise be adversely affected by the lowering of the present rate.

Furthermore, the American manufacturer would be compelled to curtail output as importations increase, and in a short while all these industries would be removed from this country to foreign countries.

Of course we always have the alternative of reducing wages to offset the cheap labor, greater number of working hours, and lower standard of living which obtain in foreign countries, applying to our own as well as the collateral branches named; but we can not believe that it is the intention or desire of your committee to inflict such conditions upon our workpeople, and, as American citizens, we hope that such will not be done.

We urge upon you that a specific duty is absolutely necessary in fairness to our industry, in which there are so many grades and classifications of goods, and also for the reason that an exclusive ad valorem duty makes it possible for the foreign manufacturer to use our market as a dumping ground, disturbing conditions in this country, which a specific duty will prevent, and at the same time eliminate the opportunity for undervaluation.

In conclusion, we invite the closest investigation of our statements, and we stand ready to prove the facts which we have set forth.

Respectfully submitted.

Andrew Frey, chairman, Utica, N. Y.; Clifton P. Baker, Boston, Mass.; L. M. Flesh, Piqua, Ohio; P. H. Hanes, Winston-Salem, N. C.; W. C. Spaulding, Minneapolis, Minn.; Henry S. Cooper, Kenosha, Wis.; W. C. Ruffin, Mayodan, N. C.; Harry Querns, Philadelphia; Nathan Hatch, Albany, N. Y.; William Sloane, Norfolk, Va.; Edward H. Clift, New York City; John K. Stewart, Amsterdam, N. Y.; J. W. Hanson, Macon, Ga.; George W. Kavanaugh, Waterford, N. Y.; Joseph Feldenheimer, secretary, Philadelphia.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. FORDNEY].

Mr. FORDNEY. Mr. Chairman, I wish I had sufficient time to say all I would like to say on this schedule. I will take the time to say this, that in the United States there are 29,500,000 spindles in our cotton mills. In England there are 54,200,000 spindles in their cotton mills. We supply England with practically all her raw cotton, and with her 54,200,000 spindles she consumed last year three and a half million bales of cotton, and with our 29,500,000 spindles we consumed nearly 5,000,000 bales of cotton, showing that our cotton has gone abroad and found cheap labor that makes the finest grades of goods. According to the census report there are 1,306 cotton mills in the United States, 669 of which are located in the Southern States and 637 in the Northern States. In the cotton mills the average wage is $265 per year for 300 days' work. In the States of North and South Carolina 428 out of 669 cotton mills are located, or 64½ per cent of all the cotton mills in the South. In the States of North Carolina and South Carolina 61½ per cent of all the employees in the southern cotton mills are found. The wages in the cotton mills of North Carolina and South Carolina are 85½ cents per day, figuring 300 days for a year's work, while in the North the wages are $1.36 a day; yet Mr. Parker, president of 16 factories, I believe, all located in those two States, North and South Carolina, came before the Committee on Ways and Means and recommended lower rates of duty on cotton goods, and said with the rates recommended by him the mills of the South could run and compete with the mills of Europe. When asked whether or not there was any difference in the wage scale between the South and the North in cotton mills, he said there was not. He was mistaken, sadly mistaken. My friends, I want to have read in my time, if you please, a letter which I have just received.

The CHAIRMAN (Mr. RUSSELL). Without objection, the Clerk will read.

There was no objection.

The Clerk read as follows:

DETROIT, MICH., April 27, 1913.

Hon. J. MITCHELL PALMER,
Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: I notice in a quotation from your speech on tariff matters you say "some of the manufacturers may close down out of spite, etc."; this regarding principally the textile factories.

Why do not you and those who believe with you that we can compete successfully with foreign manufacturers arrange to take over these concerns as fast as they close—as they did in 1894–1899—and demonstrate the practicability of your theories?

With Mr. Redfield, you could organize a syndicate to do this, getting those brainy, financial men of Texas and the South to join with you and "prove up." This is where you failed before and thus lost out to the protectionists. Get in ahead of them this time, as they will certainly close down—some have already done so, more will, and we will have thousands out of employment and the scene of those days be reenacted.

That great business element of the South has never had a chance to "show us," as they say in Missouri, what they can do along manufacturing lines, and now is your and their chance.

With the extraordinary high cost of manufactured goods to-day no wonder the people have authorized you to take over the Government. Think of it! We have to pay as high as $15 to have a suit made to order right here in industrial Detroit; 10 to 15 cents for socks; even calico, the favorite garbing of our southern women, costs them here 5 cents a yard; ginghams, from 7 to 10 cents a yard; can't get a decent piece of underwear for less than 25 cents, while we are forced to pay 5 cents for two papers of pins! And nails—just think of it—cost our carpenters 2 cents per pound, and they are only getting from four to five dollars a day to drive them, though there is a prospect of their getting decent wages, as they are demanding a raise right now.

Just think of it! Our housewives can't get a sewing machine under $12.50, though it is warranted for 10 years, with all attachments. Forty-five per cent tariff on these; awful! And think what the housewife has to pay for her sugar right now—11 pounds for 50 cents. Such extortion! Our beet-sugar magnates holding up the wholesale price at $4.35 per 100 pounds. Why, I can recollect way back in the good old days of the Walker tariff—I am 79 now—when all calico cost me for wife's dress was 12½ cents a yard. Nails were 6 cents per pound. To be sure I got $1.75 a day for driving them. Then the farmer's wife brought in 20 dozen eggs to the storekeeper and exchanged them for 8 yards of calico for a dress, or paid for it with butter at 8 cents, or a dozen of chickens at $1.25, while now she can buy a whole dress for less than one of her chickens. Its outrageous the way we are being robbed by this awful tariff. A whole hen now of respectable size she is paid about $1 for, while the eggs she brings in in her auto, the 20 dozen, will buy her a silk-dress pattern. No wonder the common people are kicking at such prices as we are forced to pay to the trusts. Why, our bricklayers are only getting $6 a day here, but as they are going to demand a raise perhaps they will be better paid when you knock out the iniquitous Payne-Aldrich bill. Do you note how much cheaper print paper is since it was put on the free list from Canada? I have not heard any paper boasting about it, but the Canadian paper maker is putting the tariff in his pocket, I understand, instead of it going into our Treasury. But I am glad to note one thing in your new bill, borax goes back on the free list, from which the Payne-Aldrich bill took it and put on a tariff of 2 cents per pound, when, to the wonder and consternation of toolmakers, the price actually went down 50 per cent. "Do I sleep, do I dream, are there visions about, is protection a failure, and to be wiped out?" a la Bret Harte. But do not forget, while relieving the workingman, that you will take off the internal-revenue tax on butter substitutes, that 10 cents per pound when colored and the lighter tax when plain. I do not think you can cheapen calicos and muslins, socks or underwear, but you can cheapen this substitute for cow butter very much to the poor man, as it actually increases the cost of it. Now, do try and take over the factories your bill will close, and show the American people that you can not only compete with all the world but drive them out of their market, both here and abroad.

I would like to have the whole of your speech, but will have to be satisfied with the short extract from which I quote.

Respectfully,
H. PARKER,
512 Fourth Street, Detroit, Mich.

During the reading of the letter,

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. FORDNEY. Mr. Chairman, I would ask the gentleman from Illinois for sufficient time to finish reading the letter. It will take but a minute or two more.

Mr. MANN. I yield the gentleman one minute additional.

Mr. FORDNEY. Yield enough to have the letter finished; it is very good; it is extraordinary; it states facts. [Laughter.]

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I yield three minutes to the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. MORGAN].

Mr. MORGAN of Oklahoma. Mr. Chairman, I rise not so much to ask for the protection of cotton mills which now exist in Oklahoma as to plead for legislation which will bring cotton mills into existence in our new State.

If judged by the number of its cotton mills at present Oklahoma would have no great interest in this schedule, but if judged by the possibilities of having cotton mills in the future, Oklahoma is deeply and vitally interested in this schedule.

The census of 1910 shows that in 1909 Oklahoma cultivated to cotton 1,976,935 acres of land, on which was produced 555,742 bales of cotton, which was valued at $35,399,356. But seven States in the Union produced more cotton in 1909 than Oklahoma. The raising of cotton is one of the chief industries of our State, and contributes largely to the wealth of our people.

Agriculture is the chief industry in Oklahoma.

As I have said before on this floor, Oklahoma is, however, capable of becoming a great manufacturing State.

In a recent bulletin issued by the Bureau of the Census referring to the manufacturing interests of Oklahoma it was said:

A marked increase in the independent industrial activities of the State commenced with the development of the old fields in 1907 and the discovery of natural gas. This cheap fuel has attracted manufacturers who have established a number of new enterprises. An abundance of coal and lumber and the location of such minerals as gypsum, cement rock, asphalt, granite, limestone, and zinc have further stimulated manufactures. In 1899 the total value of manufactured products amounted to only $8,133,000, as compared with $24,459,000 in 1904 and $53,682,000 in 1909.

There were in Oklahoma at that time 2,310 manufacturing establishments, employing 18,034 persons, including proprietors, salaried employees, and wage earners. Thirty-eight million eight hundred and seventy-three thousand dollars of capital were invested. In wages and salaries these manufacturing establishments paid out $9,285,000.

The bulletin issued by the Census Bureau on Oklahoma does not report a single cotton factory. However, there are a few cotton factories in the State at the present time.

Oklahoma is a large producer of raw cotton. She has almost an unlimited supply of cheap fuel. Her coal fields are extensive and almost inexhaustible. Natural gas exists in such abundance as to give promise of lasting for an indefinite time. Her oil fields in extent and productiveness are hardly surpassed in any State of the Union. There are few, if any, States in the Union better supplied with fuel than Oklahoma. Cheap fuel is one of the primary elements in developing and maintaining industries.

While I shall have the honor to in part represent the State of Oklahoma in this Congress, I shall deem it my duty to vote for national legislation which I think will contribute in the largest degree to the material growth and development of my own State.

The provisions of this bill are intended, as I understand it, to invite and secure competition in manufacturing lines from foregn countries. The Ways and Means Committee, in their report, estimate that in every line of manufacture the reduction of the tariff duty will largely increase the importations to this country from abroad.

The importation of additional cotton goods from abroad will not encourage the establishment of cotton mills in my State. Competition from abroad in cotton goods will not tend to develop cotton factories in Oklahoma. The policy which this bill inaugurates will not encourage men with capital to come to Oklahoma and invest their money in the building and operating of cotton manufacturing establishments.

And what I say of cotton factories is, of course, true of any and all other kinds of manufacturing establishments. I believe that the provisions of this bill if enacted into law will retard the development of Oklahoma in the line of manufacturing industries.

The largest city in our State, Oklahoma City, the capital of the State and the commercial center of the State, I am proud to say, is in my district. The daily papers of that city frequently call attention to the importance of securing for that city mills and manufacturing establishments. Not long ago I read in one of those papers an article telling of the steps which were being taken by some enterprising citizens to establish in Oklahoma City a great cotton factory that would bring millions of money to the city, give employment to thousands of intelligent workingmen, and thus contribute to the prosperity of citizens of the city regardless of their business or occupation.

There is not a city in Oklahoma that would not give a reasonable cash bonus to secure a cotton mill or any other important manufacturing industry. Will the reduction of our tariff, the opening of our markets to foreign products, the increase of competition by the sale of goods manufactured abroad—will these things encourage the investment of capital in new mills in Oklahoma or elsewhere in this country? Certainly not.

I am therefore in favor of national legislation that will aid my own State in its material development, that will encourage the founding of new industries within its borders, that will add to its wealth and population and multiply the blessings enjoyed by all our people.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I hope the gentleman on the other side will use some of his time. How much time have I remaining?

The CHAIRMAN. Sixteen minutes, as the Chair has kept it.

Mr. PETERS. I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. BARTLETT].

Mr. BARTLETT. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen, cotton manufacturing is a great industry in the State where I live and the district which I represent. We not only have factories that produce the common, coarser grade of goods, but in the city I live in and in other parts of my district there are factories that produce the finer grades of goods.

There have come to me but few objections to this bill. These people who have erected those factories, the native people, the Georgians, are not protectionists. They are Democrats in every sense of the word. They believe in the Democratic doctrine of a tariff for revenue, and not a tariff for protection. It is true there have been a few who have left the Democratic Party upon the matter of the tariff, but they were men who cared more for their own personal fortune than they did for the interests of the entire country.

I hold in my hand a letter just received from the president of a cotton factory in my district, and I propose to read it. We are not to be lured from our devotion to the party to which all these men belong by saying that we are to be benefited by maintaining upon the statute books a tariff such as now is carried upon the goods that they produce. A majority of the cotton manufacturers in the State of Georgia, while they may believe, some of them, that the rates of this bill are too low—I do not blame them for wanting the rates as high as they can get them, whether they manufacture cotton goods or whether they manufacture woolen goods—but the cotton manufacturers of the State are not devoted to these highly protected goods and do not ask for them. This is the letter to which I refer:

> We are noticing the tariff agitation with a good deal of interest, and, while we are Democrats and standing by the party, we hope you will try and make things as light on us as possible. We do not propose going Republican even if our business is damaged. We had arranged capital to double our plant, and while we have been compelled to suspend for the present we really believe we are going to stay in business and do our building at an early date.

That is but an indication that an attempt has been made to frighten these people, and they are not to be driven from their party allegiance by an effort to say that their business is to be destroyed.

Now, I want to call attention to another fact. The chief cost of erecting a factory in the South is in the cotton machinery, which is 50 per cent of the cost.

I read from a cotton manufacturer in my State who is as well posted as anybody, and he says:

> These burdens, particularly in the matter of high cost of machinery, are probably the most serious which American mills must contend with. Practically the direct effect of the high cost of machinery makes it necessary to employ almost double the capital needed in establishing foreign mills, and American mills must earn from 60 to 80 per cent more per spindle in order to secure a fair return on the investment over European mills.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. PETERS. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes more to the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. BARTLETT].

Mr. BARTLETT. Now, after going through the various costs of cotton machinery per spindle, and how much it costs in this country, and how much in England and Germany, he says:

> Cheaper machinery will place this country nearer on a parity with foreign competitors and enable us to better compete with them in the struggle for foreign trade.

Now, what have we done in this bill? The Republicans put in the basket clause 45 per cent on mill machinery, and because of that tax of 45 per cent on mill machinery it has cost the cotton manufacturer, when he built a mill in the South, an amount equivalent to 50 per cent of the cost of the factory. And, says this man, Mr. G. Gunby Jordan, of the Phoenix Mill, in Columbus, Ga., who knows what he is talking about and who has had as wide an experience as any man in the South, that cheaper machinery will place the manufacturers of the South nearer on a parity with their foreign competitors and enable them better to compete with them in the struggle for the foreign trade.

And, at last it is the foreign trade that the people who manufacture cotton goods in the South are seeking. Take off the tax, as we have done in this bill, reduce the tariff upon cotton mill machinery from 45 to 25 per cent, cut it in two, reduce the rates upon the indigo and the other dyes they use, giving them a fair chance in the markets of the world, and they do not need any protection upon their goods and do not ask for it.

Mr. Chairman, one other word. It was stated here in a debate this morning by the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. KELLEY], whom I do not see present, in a reply that he made to the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. THOMAS], that Georgia had no law upon its statute books in reference to the employment of children in its factories. On the impulse of the moment, when he named Georgia as one of those States, I said that that was not true, and it is not true. I had occasion to call attention to that fact in the last session of Congress in reply to the gentleman from New York, Mr. Michael E. Driscoll, who made the same statement in reference to the State of Georgia. Now, I am not familiar with the laws of the other Southern States on that subject, but I put in the RECORD last year the laws of the State of Georgia on that subject, in which I showed and demonstrated that the people of Georgia in 1889 had had the laws placed upon their statute books which prohibited the employment of children in factories under a certain age.

Mr. GREENE of Massachusetts. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield to me for a question?

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman yield?

Mr. BARTLETT. Well, if I have time; yes.

Mr. GREENE of Massachusetts. I would like to inquire if you have in Georgia a board of inspectors whose duty it is to visit your mills and see that the law is complied with?

Mr. BARTLETT. Yes, I will answer the gentleman. And not only that, but by statute the grand jury twice every year especially investigates the question of the enforcement of the law and reports results to the court. In the city where I live I have seen men indicted and convicted for the violation of that law.

Mr. GREENE of Massachusetts. I am glad to hear of that, because that is an advance.

Mr. BARTLETT. Yes. And I will say to the gentleman that I have read the laws of his State in reference to this matter, and we in Georgia have in great measure copied the laws of Massachusetts in that matter.

Mr. GREENE of Massachusetts. Every other State could do it with advantage, too.

Mr. BARTLETT. Massachusetts has led the way often and often again in the enactment of good laws, and we are not ashamed to follow them when they are good. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. PETERS. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. PALMER].

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. PALMER] is recognized for 10 minutes.

Mr. PALMER. Mr. Chairman, I do not pretend to be anything of an expert upon the technicalities of the cotton schedule, and I shall not discuss this schedule in the manner in which it has been discussed by minority members of the committee here with regard to its details; but I want to call attention to a few general propositions with respect to this particular schedule.

The history of tariff revisions during the past few years makes the questions arising out of the revision of Schedule I amongst the most interesting in all the work of tariff changes, because it is what happened to Schedule I and what did not happen to Schedule K that so incensed the public mind that the people began digging into the entire Payne law, until it was condemned from cover to cover in this country from ocean to ocean.

Despite the fact that a Republican President had declared that Schedule K was indefensible; despite the fact that no satisfactory testimony was offered to the Committee on Ways and Means to justify the retention of the then existing rates, much less increases in the rates, Schedule K was permitted to be rewritten in the law under the Payne revision in exactly the form that it had been upon the statute books for generations. Schedule I fared even better, for while seeming reductions were made in Schedule I in the House, when it reached another branch of the American Congress it was so manipulated that had it not been for the unceasing activity of some patriotic and hard-working statesmen over there the country would never have waked up to the discovery that the cotton manufacturers of the country were protected under the Payne-Aldrich revision to a very much higher degree than they had been under the previous law.

Anybody who wants to get an interesting side light on recent Republican methods of revising tariffs ought to read a little volume which was published about four years ago, entitled "The speeches of ROBERT M. LA FOLLETTE in the United States Senate," for in that work he showed how the cotton manufacturers had entered the Senate of the United States and indirectly were able to accomplish what plain persuasion and arguments never would have accomplished before the Ways and Means Committee under the chairmanship of the distinguished gentleman from New York [Mr. PAYNE].

I think I am well within the mark when I say that to these two causes—the failure to make any change in Schedule K and the willingness to make changes indirectly and by subterfuge in Schedule I, in the interest of the cotton manufacturers of the country—was due more than to any other thing the universal condemnation by the people which followed the enactment of the Payne law.

Another interesting thing about this schedule is that the recent history of its proposed revision reveals in a striking way the real attitude of the old-fashioned protection Republicans upon this much-advertised Tariff Board proposition. The Tariff Board, named by a Republican President, conceived by Republican legislators in this House, and born in an appropriation bill, went to work upon the cotton industry, and finally made quite a voluminous report. After it had been made, one of the most distinguished members of the Ways and Means Committee in the last Congress and one of the most able tariff makers who has sat in this House certainly during my time, went to work upon this Schedule I with the intent and purpose of writing a bill which would be in exact accordance with the findings of the tariff board which he and other Republican Members had defended and which his President had appointed. The gentleman from Connecticut, Mr. Hill, who is no longer a Member of this House, but whose ability to construct tariff legislation with accuracy and regard for the facts from his point of view—I mean with regard to the principle upon which Republicans would write a law—no man will gainsay, and whose industry, capacity for work, and desire to do what in good faith he started out to accomplish no man in the House will criticize—this gentleman prepared a revision of Schedule I in collaboration with experts who worked for the Tariff Board.

He had the assistance not only of the experts of the Tariff Board, who really did the work for this Tariff Board, but he sat day and night with the distinguished Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, Mr. Curtis, who is in the Treasury Department in charge of the administration of the customs laws, and who is himself a considerable expert, than whom perhaps no man in the country could better say whether the language of the proposed bill was in exact accordance with the recommendations of the Tariff Board. With all this help, Mr. Hill wrote and finally introduced his cotton schedule revision bill.

Well, one day, just when the gentlemen on the other side were criticizing us because in writing our metal schedule bill we refused to wait until the Tariff Board had come in with its report, when they were criticizing us because we reported a Schedule K revision which did not take into consideration any of the findings of the Tariff Board, Mr. Hill brought his bill into the Ways and Means Committee and offered it as a substitute for the Underwood bill, because, as he said, having stood for a Tariff Board and his party having stood for a Tariff Board he wanted to present a bill which was in exact accord with the Tariff Board's report. He submitted it as a Republican Tariff Board substitute for the Underwood cotton-revision bill, and my distinguished friend, the gentleman from New York [Mr. PAYNE], would not vote for it, and every Republican member of the committee, with the exception of Mr. Hill, repudiated it absolutely. Why they did so I do not know, except that they are not prepared or ready to follow a Tariff Board, even of their own creation. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

Mr. GARDNER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PALMER. Certainly.

Mr. GARDNER. Here is a telegram from the president of the Tariff Board:

HARTFORD, CONN., April 18, 1913.

Hon AUGUSTUS H. GARDNER, Washington, D. C.:

Mr. Hill received assistance from staff of Tariff Board in preparation of his bill, but the bill was never officially considered by the board. Personally, I was too busy at the moment to consider his rates in relation to our report, and the same was true of most members. I stated to him throughout that I was not prepared to indorse it without further consideration. You can use this, but will try to write more detailed statement.

HENRY C. EMERY.

Mr. PALMER. The gentleman will agree with what I have said about his distinguished fellow citizen of Massachusetts, Mr. Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Curtis, will he not?

Mr. GARDNER. Except that I have always understood he was a Democrat. He is an excellent man, even as a Democrat.

Mr. PALMER. He will agree with me in saying that no man in the country perhaps, or certainly in the public service, is better qualified to determine how the language of a proposed act will conform with the findings of any other board of the public service?

Mr. GARDNER. If it were not for the fact that we had found in that table 18 absolute mistakes in figuring, we might agree with the gentleman.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. PALMER. I should like a little more time.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I yield to the gentleman three minutes more.

Mr. PALMER. I am not quite clear, from the gentleman's statement, whether it is the Tariff Board schedule in which he has discovered the 18 mistakes or Mr. Hill's table or Mr. Curtis's table, and I have as much confidence in Mr. Curtis's ability to decide a question of this kind as I have even in the ability of my distinguished friend from Massachusetts [Mr. GARDNER]. He says that the bill was written just as closely as language could make it in accordance with the report of the Tariff Board. Mr. Hill believed so, and his opinion would have as much weight with me as that of the gentleman from Massachusetts.

Mr. GARDNER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PALMER. I yield.

Mr. GARDNER. Can the gentleman quote from the RECORD any such statement from Mr. Curtis, and couple it with the statement he made that the gentleman from New York [Mr. PAYNE] voted against that bill?

Mr. PALMER. I do not quite understand the gentleman's question.

Mr. GARDNER. The gentleman said Mr. PAYNE voted against the Hill bill on the floor of the House.

Mr. PALMER. No; I said Mr. Hill offered this bill in the Committee on Ways and Means and it got his vote, and he could not get anybody else to vote for it.

Mr. GARDNER. But the gentleman from New York [Mr. PAYNE] voted for it on the floor of the House, and the gentleman knew it.

Mr. PAYNE. The gentleman is mistaken about that. I declined to vote on the ground that I had never seen the bill until it was read in the committee, and because it was nearly all ad valorem rates.

Mr. PALMER. I do not think the gentleman will dispute the accuracy of my relation of it.

Mr. PAYNE. I think the gentleman is mistaken.

Mr. PALMER. I do not want to do the gentleman an injustice. I am not excusing or justifying the action of the gentleman from New York or anybody else on that side; I am simply commenting on the fact that the Tariff Board revision of the cotton schedule, in spite of all we have heard about the infallibility of such a commission, could not receive the vote of more than one member of the Ways and Means Committee in the Sixty-second Congress.

Now, it seems to me, in view of that kind of history, that it is about time that we heard less about the Republican desire to have a tariff board prepare legislation for the body which is charged by the Constitution with the duty of preparing such legislation.

Mr. MURDOCK. Mr. Chairman, I think this is very illuminating, and I wish the gentleman would go on with his narration as to the cotton-schedule bill. What became of the bill which came out of the Ways and Means Committee?

Mr. KITCHIN. May I interrupt the gentleman? The gentleman from New York and the gentleman from Connecticut, Mr. Hill, produced a substitute in this House—the Hill bill. Did not the gentleman from New York and the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. GREENE], who is now a Republican, and the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. ANDERSON], now a Republican member of the Ways and Means Committee, and the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. GARDNER] all vote for it?

Mr. PALMER. I can not speak about the number of Members who voted for it. I will simply say that Mr. Hill, relying as a sincere man would, having stated that the Tariff Board was a proper thing in revenue legislation, upon the report of that board, appealed from his fellow members of the Ways and Means Committee and went upon the floor of the House with his bill, where the miserable support he got for it was the most severe condemnation of the Tariff Board that has ever been uttered in the country.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PALMER. Yes.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Is not the gentleman incorrect about the support it received?

Mr. PALMER. Well, it was inconsiderable.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Are not the rates that the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. GARDNER] has brought in nearer the Hill bill than the bill you bring in to-day is nearer the bill you had last year?

Mr. PALMER. Oh, that is beside the question.

Mr. AUSTIN. If the gentleman will pardon me, I think he will find that every Republican on this side of the House voted for the bill except the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. GREENE], Mr. Ames, of Massachusetts, and myself.

Mr. PALMER. That may be true; and if I said it was inconsiderable support I will say that it would have been much more considerable if the gentleman from Tennessee had voted for it. [Laughter.]

Mr. AUSTIN. I am a standpatter from Standpattersville.

Mr. PALMER. The gentleman is not for a tariff board?

Mr. AUSTIN. If it is right, I am; and if it is wrong, I am not.

Mr. KITCHIN. The gentleman from Tennessee voted against the Hill bill because the rates were a good deal lower than the rates in this Underwood bill, and you thought it would destroy all the industries of the country?

Mr. AUSTIN. I voted against both the Hill bill and the Underwood bill because the rates were not high enough.

Mr. KITCHIN. They were lower than the Underwood bill.

Mr. AUSTIN. I voted against both because the duties were too low.

Mr. KITCHIN. Were not the rates in the Hill bill lower than in the Underwood bill?

Mr. AUSTIN. I do not know.

Mr. PALMER. Now, Mr. Chairman, if gentlemen are willing, I would like to make my speech myself. [Laughter.] I want to discuss, as I said in the beginning, the schedule in a somewhat general way. We have heard from our friends from New England, as, indeed, we have heard from other parts of the country, from the friends of the cotton manufacturers, that this revision of the cotton schedule will ruin them, will put their mills out of business; and I suppose we have heard as awful things about the dire effects of the revision with respect to this schedule as we have with respect to any in the whole tariff bill. According to the census reports, the total production in this country of all the articles covered by Schedule I amounts to $1,500,000,000 in round figures. Of course, it is possible that the census has duplicated many of them; but as near as we can get at it, speaking in round terms, $1,500,000,000 worth of these goods are made in America. If that figure, by reason of duplications in the census reports, is high, it does not change the force of the argument I make, except in slight degree. Last year the imports amounted to $24,358,360, which was 1½ per cent, or to be exact, 1.58 per cent, of the total American production in 1910 of the articles covered in this schedule, and the exports during the same year were $50,769,511, or $26,000,000 more than the imports.

Mr. AUSTIN rose.

Mr. PALMER. I can not yield just now.

Mr. AUSTIN. I just want to correct the gentleman's figures.

Mr. PALMER. I will yield if the gentleman thinks I have made a mistake in my figures.

Mr. AUSTIN. The gentleman's figures on the exports are correct, but Mr. O. P. Austin gave me the imports as being something over $63,000,000, and he gave them to me to-day.

Mr. PALMER. That is a mistake.

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Pennsylvania has deducted from that the laces, which we do not make here, amounting to $37,000,000 of these $63,000,000. Deduct that $37,000,000 and that leaves $26,000,000 for cloths and yarns.

Mr. PALMER. Yes. I am discussing the imports of the kind of articles covered by Schedule I in the present bill.

Mr. AUSTIN. They contain laces.

Mr. PALMER. They are not in Schedule I.

Mr. AUSTIN. Then you have transferred them?

Mr. PALMER. That is true. The gentleman ought to keep up with the march of events.

Mr. AUSTIN. You change them so often it is hard to do that.

Mr. PALMER. The point I am making is this: While it is easily possible that in readjusting rates over an entire industry in the country we might make such a change as would bring some distress to one particular mill here or there, yet we can not, in legislating for 100,000,000 people and a country as great as this Republic, stop because here and there a pin may be put down where somebody is going to squeal.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Pennsylvania has again expired.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I yield the gentleman 10 minutes more.

Mr. PALMER. Mr. Chairman, when the Underwood tariff bills were prepared in the Sixty-second Congress we were anxious to know as accurately as we could find out what would be the effect of the reduced rates on imports, and we had estimates of imports and the revenues resulting therefrom made, not by the Committee on Ways and Means, but by experts in the Treasury Department.

As was shown in our first report, when the Underwood bill providing for a revision of the woolen schedule came into the House, those estimates were made by experts in the Treasury Department, then controlled by the Republican Party, and they based their estimates upon a system of calculation which had been in vogue in the Treasury Department in making such estimates for many years. They figured the effect of the reduced rates in the Dingley law and made calculations in advance. They figured the effect of such reductions as appeared in the Payne law, and made calculations in advance as to probable imports, and the amount of the imports which followed the changes in the Dingley law and in the Payne law came so close to the estimates made by these experts before the laws were put upon the statute books that it is a safe conclusion to assert that the basis which they adopted was a conservative and proper one. These same gentlemen, figuring in exactly the same way, make the estimate that under the present reduction of Schedule I the imports by reason of the reduced rates will increase to $36,927,000—that is to say, from $24,000,000 to $36,000,000, or from $1\frac{58}{100}$ per cent to $2\frac{49}{100}$ per cent. Let me ask you if there is any man of sense and experience in this House who believes that an increase of imports of the articles covered by this schedule from 1½ per cent to 2½ per cent of the American production is going to injure or destroy the legitimate industry of cotton manufacturing in this country?

Mr. MARTIN of South Dakota. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PALMER. I will yield.

Mr. MARTIN of South Dakota. I would like to ask the gentleman, along the same line of reasoning, whether, in his judgment, the slight prospective increase in importations will materially affect the prices of these commodities?

Mr. PALMER. Well, I will get to that in a moment.

Mr. MURDOCK. Before the gentleman gets to that proposition I desire to ask him this question: Was the Underwood cotton bill a year ago, or two years ago, framed on a policy for revenue only?

Mr. PALMER. It was.

Mr. MURDOCK. Where does the present schedule differ from that Underwood bill?

Mr. PALMER. It was framed with the further thought in mind, which runs through every Democratic effort at making a tariff, that those things which are the necessities of life, even at the expense of revenue to the Government, must have duties which will modify the prices of the articles in the interest of the consumer. Now, let me go a little further, and I will answer the gentleman before I conclude. Production in this country of a billion and a half. Suppose that the merchants on Pennsylvania Avenue, here in the city of Washington, were doing a business of $1,500,000 per annum in a certain line of goods. Suppose that the merchants in the city of Baltimore were sending over into this market to the people of Washington, to compete with those merchants, $24,000 worth of goods; and then suppose that we would pass a law which would have the effect of reducing the freight rates or express tariff to such an extent that by reason of that reduced rate of transportation, which is nothing but a tariff, the Baltimore merchants would be able to increase their sales in the Washington market from $24,000 to $36,000 a year. Do you believe that those merchants on Pennsylvania Avenue, doing a business of $1,500,000, would go out of business, would close up their shops, cash in, or throw their labor out of employment because $12,000 worth of additional goods from Baltimore came in here? Why, no; you do not, and they would not. What would they do? Why, they would pay a little more attention to the efficiency of their working force. They would get up a little earlier in the morning and perhaps work a little later at night. They would devise means to attract the people so that custom should come to them and keep this competition from Baltimore down to the point of safety, and they would be content with a little less profit in order that they might keep that competition down to the point of safety, and they would be compelled—indeed, they would be glad—to sell their products at a little less profit to the Washington consumer. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

Now, that is exactly what will happen in the cotton industry. If this reduction were so low that the floodgates would be open and foreign goods would come in here in enormous quantities your mills might close down and labor might go out of employment; but if the reductions are sufficiently moderate to permit only a moderate increase of importation the only effect will be a reduction in the price of the product to the American consumer at the expense of the profits of the American manufacturer. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

Mr. GREENE of Massachusetts. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PALMER. I will yield.

Mr. GREENE of Massachusetts. I think the gentleman was present when Mr. Chase, of Fall River, testified to a sale of goods that he made and what he found they were selling for by the retailer. It was a statement before the Committee on Ways and Means.

Mr. PALMER. I do not remember it. I might have been present; I do not know.

Mr. GREENE of Massachusetts. Will the gentleman permit me to state it?

Mr. PALMER. I really have not the time to permit the gentleman to do that.

Mr. GREENE of Massachusetts. Well, this is very important, and I should state it, I think, in line with what the gentleman said.

Mr. PALMER. I decline to yield for that purpose. The gentleman is going to state something from memory which must appear in the RECORD.

Mr. GREENE of Massachusetts. It is what I heard—what he told me himself.

Mr. PALMER. I want to conclude by adding simply this: That that idea, if you follow it out, will run through all the line of manufactured products in this country, and labor will not be touched by reason of the reduced price of the product, because the amount of production by the American manufacturer will not be materially decreased.

Why, this $12,000,000 increase of importations can be largely absorbed in the growing population in this country, and yet the American manufacturer will be compelled to keep his price down in order to keep those imports to the point of safety for himself.

Mr. MARTIN of South Dakota. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PALMER. I yield.

Mr. MARTIN of South Dakota. In the illustration the gentleman has given he has spoken with the utmost fairness, I think——

Mr. PALMER. I am trying to.

Mr. MARTIN of South Dakota. He has referred simply to the negligible increase in importations. Does he expect more than a negligible decrease in prices?

Mr. PALMER. The imports are going to be negligibly increased, because the American producer will considerably reduce the prices of his product. That is what keeps the competition down to the point of safety for the American producer. He must keep his price down or the competition from imports must be very much larger.

Mr. AUSTIN. May I ask the gentleman a question?

Mr. PALMER. Yes.

Mr. AUSTIN. On pages 34 and 35 of your report, you say you are going to increase the imports to about $140,000,000. Sixty per cent of that in wages would be about $80,000,000. Would not that hurt any laboring people in this country?

Mr. PALMER. That is a fallacious argument that has sunk into the mind of my distinguished friend, who is a self-confessed, high protection standpatter, and proud opponent of the tariff board legislation, which he ought to get out of his head.

Mr. MOORE. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. PALMER] has expired.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I yield five minutes more to the gentleman.

Mr. MOORE. Does the gentleman declare that there is a trust in the cotton business?

Mr. PALMER. I have not declared so.

Mr. MOORE. Does the gentleman declare there is a trust in the wool business?

Mr. PALMER. I have not declared so. I think there is something like a Woolen Trust.

Mr. MOORE. Is it not a fact that the price is kept down to the consumers, as far as woolen and cotton products are concerned in the United States, because there is actual competition in the industries in this country, and that mill works against mill, and the wits of one mill owner operate against the wits of another mill owner, right here in the United States?

Mr. PALMER. The answer to that is that while competition takes place at certain seasons and under certain conditions, there is another kind of competition which they do not have, which will come from the lowering of this tariff wall. The people of this country do not make all these things with equal efficiency and economy, and the manufacturers here do not make some of them as cheaply as they can be made abroad, beyond question, so that in particular lines only, not generally, this competition will take place.

Mr. MOORE. There is such competition now, is there not?

Mr. PALMER. I am not going to talk about trusts. I am trying to discuss this bill and stick to the subject without making a political speech, and I think I am succeeding fairly well. [Applause.] I just wanted to add this one thought, that in any line of industry in this country where we moderately increase imports the effect will be, as I have stated, to reduce the price of the product in order that the American producer may keep down that foreign competition to the point of safety, resulting in benefit to the American consumer. And the earnings, in all those branches of industry where that will be the result, and especially in the industry covered by the cotton schedule, have been so enormous, taken in a large and general way, that the American manufacturer can afford to reduce the price of his product and still get as a return upon the capital that he invests as much money as you and I in that or other lines of industry should expect to get or ought to have. [Applause.]

Mr. DONOVAN. Mr. Chairman, has the gentleman's time expired? I think there is a little time left.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman has two minutes remaining.

Mr. DONOVAN. Of course, I being an amateur, it is only an intelligent Member that I can get any information out of.

Mr. FITZGERALD. After that—after that. [Laughter.]

Mr. PALMER. After that, I will be glad to yield.

Mr. DONOVAN. I understood the gentleman to say that our exports were $50,000,000. That is true, I think?

Mr. PALMER. Yes.

Mr. DONOVAN. Is the gentleman from Pennsylvania familiar as to where those goods went? Did they go to Europe wholly?

Mr. PALMER. Not to Europe wholly.

Mr. DONOVAN. The statement was made here that some had gone to China, and the statement was also made here that the trade with China had fallen off in six years about $22,000,000.

Mr. PALMER. Well, what is the gentleman's question?

Mr. DONOVAN. Is it true that our export trade has fallen off to the amount of $22,000,000 in six years with China, for instance?

Mr. PALMER. Oh, no; it has increased.

Mr. DONOVAN. Increased to China?

Mr. PALMER. Yes; as I understand it.

Mr. AUSTIN. I challenge that statement.

Mr. PALMER. Well, I present, in answer to the challenge of the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. AUSTIN], the figures of the Department of Commerce and Labor.

Mr. AUSTIN. Those figures that he quoted are from the Department, too.

Mr. FITZGERALD. No challenges here; I will not stand for them. [Laughter.]

Mr. MANN rose.

The CHAIRMAN. Has the gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. DONOVAN] concluded?

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, have I the floor?

Mr. DONOVAN. Yes.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I am perfectly willing to give the gentleman the floor if I can get time later.

Mr. DONOVAN. I will yield to the gentleman.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I listened, as I always do, with interest to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. PALMER], but on this occasion I listened with some surprise to the statements made by him—I think not in his usual fair and candid manner—concerning the Hill bill and the circumstances of its being drawn and presented. I doubt very much whether the gentleman from Pennsylvania is posted on the facts as well as one might assume from the statements which he made.

I will say, Mr. Chairman, that this side of the House, which stands for a tariff commission, is willing now, as it has been for the last year, to vote for a cotton schedule based on the report of the Tariff Board. [Applause on the Republican side.]

The Tariff Board did not recommend tariff rates. It found facts. Mr. Hill undertook to draw a bill which, in his judgment, would conform to the facts. I discussed the matter with Mr. Hill on several occasions. When he had drawn the bill he himself did not pretend that there was not or might not be a difference of opinion as to what a bill should be, based upon the facts found by the tariff commission.

This side of the House has never contended that when a tariff commission reported the facts as to the difference in the cost of production at home and abroad, that of itself wrote the bill, or that everyone would accept the same figures in the bill as following the facts found by the commission. Everywhere people have differences of opinion as to what certain facts find. They have differences of opinion as to what the facts are which are found no matter who may find the facts, and when the Hill bill was presented to the Committee on Ways and Means without any previous agreement among the minority members of the committee the rest of the minority members declined to commit themselves on the bill as conforming with the findings of the Tariff Board without an opportunity of making a full examination.

Subsequently, upon the motion to recommit the cotton-schedule bill, Mr. Hill made the motion to substitute his bill. He did it with my consent, although he did it and voted for it, and the rest of the Republican Members of the House who voted for it—and most of them did—voted for it as against the Underwood bill, not then being fully satisfied that it conformed with the findings of the tariff commission.

Further examination of that bill has convinced the Republicans of the House, in the main at least, that the Hill bill did not conform to the findings of the Tariff Commission. But we shall offer a motion to recommit this bill to the Committee on Ways and Means with directions to bring in a cotton schedule which will conform with the findings of the Tariff Board; and when we put forward the proposition that we are willing to establish a tariff commission to ascertain facts upon which tariff legislation shall be based we carry with our action the good faith of accepting the legislation which is to be actually based upon the facts which are found by the commission, and which as to the cotton schedule were found by the Tariff Board. [Applause on the Republican side.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Illinois has expired.

Mr. DIES. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. DIES. What is the status of the debate as to time?

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, may I ask the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. PETERS] whether he will consume some time now or what disposition he wishes to make of the balance of his time? I believe I have 11 minutes remaining.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois has 11 minutes remaining.

Mr. PETERS. I will use some of my time now.

Mr. AUSTIN. Let me ask the gentleman when he is going to move a recess.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Texas [Mr. DIES] submitted a parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. MANN. Perhaps that has been answered by what has occurred since.

Mr. DIES. I wanted to know how much time remained to the gentleman from Massachusetts.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. PETERS] has 55 minutes remaining, or 45. There was 10 minutes taken from the paragraph while the present occupant of the chair was not in the chair. Adding that time the gentleman from Massachusetts has 55 minutes remaining and the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] has 11 minutes remaining.

Mr. DIES. I should like to have 5 minutes from the gentleman from Massachusetts.

Mr. PETERS. I have promised to yield to one or two other gentlemen first.

Mr. MANN. May I ask when the gentleman intends to move that the committee rise?

Mr. FORDNEY. Why not rise now?

Mr. PETERS. I think the general debate had better run a little longer—until half past 6. I yield to the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. CLINE] five minutes.

Mr. CLINE. Mr. Chairman, in the exceedingly brief time allotted to me I am only going to refer to one or two questions that have been involved in this discussion.

During the last four or five years that tariff debate has been going on in this House I have never heard a single Republican discuss the question of cost of units of production in the discussion of any schedule. In their comparisons between the wages paid here and abroad it has always been by the day, the week, or the year. We have always contended that the amount of efficiency on the part of the American laborer has been equal to the productive capacity of the foreign labor, the price being taken into consideration. We have not always had at hand the evidence to show this fact, and I want particularly to show this with reference to my friend from Massachusetts [Mr. GARDNER] in his discussion this afternoon. I am going to quote from an editorial in the Wool and Cotton Reporter, published in Boston, Mass., the direct representative of the cotton and woolen industries of this country, for the purpose of establishing our position.

Weavers in the domestic industry will operate 8, 10, and sometimes 12 nonautomatic looms on plain cloth, a condition which is not noted in foreign countries, because it is an exceptional case where a weaver will operate 6 looms in the foreign industry, and in the majority of cases the number operated is only 4 on plain cloth.

Mr. GARDNER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CLINE. I have only five minutes. Do not ask me to do that, please. This editorial continues:

To show more clearly the general situation, it can be said that in the domestic industry a weaver will ordinarily operate 6 and even 8 dobby looms on fancy work, the usual number operated being 6, and in most domestic mills a weaver will also run 6 Jacquard looms on the majority of Jacquard cloths which are being produced, while this number is never even approached in foreign countries, the number of looms on dobby work being less than 4, and for jacquard work less than for dobby work. This condition is noted because of the strict rules which are formulated by the manufacturers and union organizations, and because of the standard set prices for weaving.

On any kind of fabric which is made on an automatic loom there is absolutely no comparison between the domestic industry and that of foreign countries, because American mills are so far in advance that no comparison is possible, and while the number of automatic looms in England is increasing, the domestic industry is equipped with probably over fifteen times as many automatic looms, and for a much smaller total number of looms. The use of better cotton makes possible the operation of a greater number of looms per operative in the domestic industry, thus placing the domestic manufacturer on a much more equal basis than the mere wages which are paid to the operative would indicate.

There is ample proof that the production per operative in the domestic industry in the majority of cases is much larger than that of the foreign operative, and manufacturers who speak the truth admit it to be a fact.

Now, gentlemen, this is your witness whom I have had on the stand, and I have read from an editorial written by the proprietor of that journal. It establishes our position pretty conclusively that the efficiency of American labor on the Jacquard looms, which make the same quality of high-grade cloth that the gentleman exhibited here, is from three to four times as great in this country as the labor in the best English mill.

Mr. FARR. Who is the editor of that paper, please?

Mr. CLINE. I do not know the editor. This paper represents the textile products.

Mr. FARR. Published in Boston?

Mr. CLINE. Published in Boston.

Mr. FARR. Oh, yes; that gentleman was before the committee and fought the industry.

Mr. CLINE. Now, I want to say just another word about my friend from Tennessee [Mr. AUSTIN] on the question of the condition that exists by virtue of this bill. My friends, we have had this bill before this country for two successive years. The exports of the various items in this schedule were $35,000,000 in 1910, $45,000,000 in 1911, and $52,600,000 in 1912, an increase of 50 per cent on the very articles that we are discussing in this schedule.

My friend from Tennessee goes into predictions as to what will happen—industries will close down, men go out of work, and it is the most vicious bill that ever was written in this country. Now, you can not fool the American people; you can not fool the people down in Tennessee. I am quoting from Cotton, a magazine published at Macon, Ga., giving a direct account of the mills existing in the southern country and the products they have and the amount of money that is invested. There is not a Southern State but what is putting money into new industries in the cotton line every month in the year. In Nashville the Warioto Cotton Mills are investing $15,000 in remodeling their factory.

Mr. AUSTIN. I have a telegram from that company saying that it will ruin them.

Mr. CLINE. The Elwood Manufacturing Co., incorporated with a capital of $50,000, is another. Nashville has a manufactory of waterproof cloth, and Memphis only last month organized a company with a capital of $250,000 to go into the cotton industry. Now, I say you can not fool the people of Tennessee; they know that the profits of this business are sufficient to warrant them in investing their money in these enterprises.

Mr. AUSTIN. Let me ask the gentleman if any cotton mills were built after the Wilson bill became a law?

Mr. CLINE. Oh, the Wilson bill seems to worry the Republicans. That song has been sung at every opportunity. I am talking about the conditions that exist now.

Mr. AUSTIN. I am speaking of the conditions under the Wilson bill.

Mr. CLINE. I am talking about the conditions that exist now, when the country knows that we are going to pass this bill, and they are ready to put their money into these enterprises.

Mr. AUSTIN. I have a telegram from the Warioto Co., at Nashville, Tenn., protesting against the bill and saying that it will ruin their industry.

Mr. CLINE. The article from the Cotton magazine is as follows:

TENNESSEE.

Nashville: The Warioto Cotton Mills are to invest about $15,000 in the remodeling of their present buildings and erect an office structure. Plans and specifications have been prepared. This company operates 25,000 ring spindles, 700 looms.

Englewood: The Englewood Manufacturing Co., of this place, have incorporated with an authorized capital of $50,000 for the manufacture of knit goods.

Nashville: It is reported that Reeves & Ely Co. have recently incorporated to manufacture waterproof cloth.

Memphis: The Memphis Cotton Manufacturing Co. was recently chartered with a capitalization of $250,000. Of this it will invest $100,000 for the purchase of a site and erection of buildings, where it will install machinery for the manufacture of cotton goods from linter cotton.

Mr. MANN. I yield one minute to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. GARDNER].

Mr. GARDNER. Mr. Chairman, the textile industry would be very much surprised if it heard that the editor of that newspaper which has been read is its official representative. The editor is my friend Mr. Frank P. Bennett. He has not been looked upon in the light in which the gentleman pictures him. Yet there is a good deal of truth in what he says. It is true that we use automatic looms, and it is true that English trades-unions frown on their introduction into Great Britain. But for the most part these automatic looms are used on coarse goods, and that is the very reason why the Green-Gardner amendment makes the duties on coarse cotton cloth less than is provided in the Underwood bill.

In the city of New Bedford, which largely manufactures fine goods, 90 per cent of the looms are nonautomatic and only 10 per cent are automatic. The reason is that New Bedford manufacturers, as I am informed, find that the automatic looms are not suitable for the production of goods such as they make. Automatic looms, as I understand it, produce a cloth with a rough surface, and ladies who are paying high prices for fine fabrics do not like the feeling of rough dress goods. Moreover, although the cost of tending 15 looms—and that is about the number of automatic looms which, on an average, one man operates—although the actual cost of loom tending is small, the cost of superintendence is very great. In addition, various high-class employees must be employed in connection with automatic looms beyond what is necessary in connection with ordinary looms. I have been told that the automatic loom constantly breaks threads, but, of course, is unable to mend them again. For this reason it is desirable to use coarse yarns which are not readily broken.

These are the various reasons assigned by manufacturers for the circumstance that the use of automatic looms for fine goods has never gained a satisfactory footing.

As to coarse goods the case is different. Automatic looms are under the ban of the British weavers' unions, whereas those looms are extensively used in this country. That is the reason why the Green-Gardner amendment makes a lower rate than does the Underwood bill for coarse cloth made from yarns below twenties.

Mr. FORDNEY. Mr. Chairman, I want to say that the editor of the paper—Mr. Bennett—alluded to by the gentleman from Indiana, came before the Committee on Ways and Means as an enemy of the cotton and wool industry, and so asserted himself. The hearings are quite full of his testimony. It is not true, and there is no evidence anywhere in any official report, that the labor in the cotton or woolen mills is more efficient in the United States than abroad. There is evidence in abundance that in the cotton and woolen mills of England the son follows his father with an apprenticeship of four years at very low wages. If I had the time to present it, I could show that the labor in the cotton mills and woolen mills in Europe is more efficient than in the cotton and woolen mills of the United States. There is an abundance of proof of this kind. I defy any man to show reliable reports, official reports, or any other kind, to the contrary, unless it be something from some man who is an enemy of the industry.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Michigan has expired.

Mr. PETERS. Mr. Chairman, I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. DIES].

[Mr. DIES addressed the committee. See Appendix.]

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I move that the committee do now rise.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the committee rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, reported that that committee had had under consideration the bill H. R. 3321—the tariff bill—and had come to no resolution thereon.

RECESS.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House take a recess until 7.45 p. m.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly (at 6 o'clock and 35 minutes p. m.) the House took a recess until 7.45 o'clock p. m.

EVENING SESSION.

The recess having expired, the House was called to order by the Speaker.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the bill H. R. 3321.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the bill H. R. 3321, with Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee in the chair.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] has 44 minutes and the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] has 9 minutes remaining.

Mr. MANN. Will the gentleman from Alabama permit me to make a suggestion to him? Why not read the paragraphs that are not to be amended and adopt such committee amendments as the gentleman desires before we finish debate?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. That is satisfactory. Without objection, Mr. Chairman, we will read until the crowd gets in.

There was no objection.

The Clerk read as follows:

262. Plushes, velvets, velveteens, corduroys, and all pile fabrics, cut or uncut, whether or not the pile covers the entire surface; any of the foregoing composed of cotton or other vegetable fiber, except flax; and manufactures or articles in any form, including such as are commonly known as bias dress facings or skirt bindings, made or cut from plushes, velvets, velveteens, corduroys, or other pile fabrics composed of cotton or other vegetable fiber, 40 per cent ad valorem.

Mr. PETERS. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following committee amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 67, line 6, after the word "fiber," insert the words "except flax."

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

263. Curtains, table covers, and all articles manufactured of cotton chenille, or of which cotton chenille is the component material of chief value, tapestries, and other Jacquard figured upholstery goods, composed wholly or in chief value of cotton or other vegetable fiber; any of the foregoing, in the piece or otherwise, 35 per cent ad valorem.

Mr. PETERS. Mr. Chairman, I offer a committee amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report it.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend, page 67, line 14, by striking out the period after the words "ad valorem" and insert a semicolon and adding the words "all other Jacquard figured manufactures of cotton or of which cotton is the component material of chief value, 30 per cent ad valorem."

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. MANN. As I understand it, we will have the right to recur to five of these paragraphs for the purpose of offering amendments?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Yes; I do not think it will be necessary to read them through again.

Mr. TREADWAY. Mr. Chairman, may I be allowed to ask a question in connection with this amendment, or would it be in order at some later period?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I understand there is no debate. The amendment has been adopted.

Mr. TREADWAY. I will wait until we recur to it.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Yes.

The Clerk read as follows:

265. Stockings, hose and half hose, selvedged, fashioned, narrowed, or shaped wholly or in part by knitting machines or frames, or knit by hand, including such as are commercially known as seamless stockings, hose and half hose, and clocked stockings, hose and half hose, all of the above composed of cotton or other vegetable fiber, finished or unfinished; if valued at not more than 70 cents per dozen pairs, 40 per cent ad valorem; if valued at more than 70 cents per dozen pairs, 50 per cent ad valorem. Cotton gloves, knitted or woven, 35 per cent ad valorem.

Mr. PETERS. Mr. Chairman, I offer a committee amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report it.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 68, line 2, strike out the words "Cotton gloves, knitted or woven," and insert the words "Gloves, by whatever process made, composed wholly or in chief value of cotton."

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

266. Shirts and drawers, pants, vests, union suits, combination suits, tights, sweaters, corset covers, and all underwear of every description, made wholly or in part on knitting machines or frames, or knit by hand, finished or unfinished, not including stockings, hose and half hose, composed of cotton or other vegetable fiber, 30 per cent ad valorem.

Mr. PETERS. Mr. Chairman, I offer a committee amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report it.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 68, line 8, after the word "unfinished," insert the words "not including such as are trimmed with lace, imitation lace, or crochet, or as are embroidered and."

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

269. Towels, doilies, bath mats, quilts, blankets, polishing cloths, mop cloths, wash rags or cloths, sheets, pillowcases, and batting, any of the foregoing made of cotton, or of which cotton is the component material of chief value, whether in the piece or otherwise, 25 per cent ad valorem.

Mr. PETERS. Mr. Chairman, I offer two committee amendments.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report them.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 69, line 8, strike out the word "doilies."

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 69, line 12, after the word "otherwise," insert the words "not embroidered nor in part of lace and not otherwise provided for."

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk resumed and concluded the reading of the schedule.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will call the attention of the gentleman from Alabama that the Clerk has concluded the reading of the schedule.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman——

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman let me call his attention to an obvious error in paragraph 255 which I do not think has been corrected?

It says, as to yarns, "Nos. 1 to 9, inclusive, 5 per cent ad valorem; Nos. 10 to 19, inclusive," and so forth, "7½ per cent ad valorem." Now, there is a No. 9½ and a No. 19½ all the way through.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I understand that, but last year I took that up with the Bureau of Standards in fixing this classification. We had a letter which was read to the House last year. I do not have it at my hand now. In that letter it was stated that none of the yarns could be stated with absolute accuracy—that is, they only approximate the number—and, of course, the importer in bringing in the yarn will not make it 9½ or 19½, because he would thereby throw it to a higher rate. He would throw it to the basket clause, which would bring a higher rate.

Mr. PAYNE. He would not on all, but he would on some of them.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. We had the matter up last year, and I wrote a letter to the Bureau of Standards, and published the reply then.

Mr. PAYNE. He might do that on some of the higher numbers.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I looked into that last year and, as I say, published the letter; and as the yarns are only approximate I do not think there will be any difficulty about making it 9 or 10.

Mr. PAYNE. I think it might give rise to litigation.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I do not think so. I call the gentleman's attention to the fact that the highest rate in this bill on yarns is 25 per cent. The basket clause is 30 per cent. Of course, the cloth goes higher. But that difficulty does not arise in the cloth paragraph, and in this paragraph I do not think any importer would try to enter it at a higher rate than he would have to pay in the regular way.

Mr. PAYNE. If he brings it in at 9½ he would have to perjure himself to get the rate fixed at 10.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. They said at the department that it was difficult to ascertain that with absolute certainty.

Mr. PAYNE. They do import them now, I understand.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. They are numbered that way, but it is very difficult to tell the difference between No. 9 and No. 9½.

Mr. PAYNE. I do not suppose they would perjure themselves in order to come in.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. PETERS] is to close the debate, and the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. KITCHIN] is expected to be here.

Mr. MURRAY. He is on his way.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I am not sure that the gentleman from North Carolina will be here, and I will be glad if the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] would use up his time.

Mr. MANN. I am perfectly willing to use the time if only one speech follows.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. So far as I know there will be only one. The gentleman from Illinois is right about it, but I do not like to cut out the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. KITCHIN] if he happens to come in.

Mr. MANN. I know; but I do not want to go ahead and have both the gentleman from North Carolina and the gentleman from Massachusetts to follow.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I understand now that the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. KITCHIN] will not speak.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I yield nine minutes of my time to the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. LENROOT].

Mr. LENROOT. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. PALMER] this afternoon devoted a great deal of his time to a discussion of the Tariff Board and the bill introduced at the last session by Mr. Hill of Connecticut revising this schedule, based upon the report of the Tariff Board, and tried to make much of the fact that there was some disagreement among Republicans on that subject as to the exact terms of that bill.

Now, if the gentleman from Pennsylvania and every other Member on that side of the aisle could only forget their prejudices for a little while, and exercise a little of that intellectual honesty that was spoken of so often this afternoon, and examine into the purposes and theory of a tariff board they will certainly see, as the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] explained this afternoon, that it is not the purpose or thought of anybody that the Tariff Board will make a report that will determine exactly the rate that shall go into each item of every schedule. What does happen and what has happened with reference to this report is that it does set limits between which there may be honest differences of opinion among Republicans as to a tariff along protection lines, and among Democrats as to a tariff along revenue lines. Between those limits there may be, Mr. Chairman, honest differences of opinion, but outside of those limits there can not be any differences of opinion.

And with reference to the bill that is before us—the Democratic bill—if those gentlemen would examine the report of that Tariff Board as to the cloth and yarn schedules of this bill, they will find that the Hill bill does come within the limits of the report of the Tariff Board. They will find that the cloth paragraph also does, but it is the first one that they have introduced, revising the schedule, that does do it.

And what is the situation, Mr. Chairman, with reference to the Democratic revision of Schedule I?

In 1911, at the special session, they introduced and passed through this House a bill revising the cotton schedule. I voted for that bill. I tried to show at that time that that bill, so far as these coarser cotton cloths were concerned, purchased by the great masses of the people, was a protective bill and not a tariff for revenue bill at all. We all know what happened to the bill finally.

A year went by. In March last the Tariff Board made its report upon the cotton schedule, and last August the Democrats again brought in a cotton bill. The gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] stated that during that year they had given this cotton schedule deep thought and careful study, and I do not know but prayerful consideration, that he and his committee had examined thoroughly the report of the Tariff Board, and after all of that study and all of that information, they had come to the conclusion that their bill of 1911 was absolutely perfect, without a flaw, and they introduced into the session last year the same bill identically, word for word and rate for rate. That bill went through this House, and here we have the third bill. But this bill is not at all like the two previous bills that the Democrats have brought in. Out of 37 rates in this bill and in the previous bill they have changed 22, or nearly 66 per cent of the rates.

Now, what has brought about this change among the Democratic leadership to change these rates in this cotton schedule? I am speaking now of these paragraphs under consideration. What has happened since that time? Only one thing, and that is that the cotton manufacturers, whom our Democratic friends have so often reviled as writing tariff bills, have appeared and testified before the Committee on Ways and Means, and either this bill has been rewritten because of the testimony and statements of the cotton manufacturers or else you have gone to the report of the Tariff Board, but have not been frank enough to acknowledge it.

But, Mr. Chairman, I do believe that the Democracy have so much pride of opinion that they would not have been willing to change those rates in any particular, except for a circumstance that happened in the hearings last winter that compelled them to do so. And what was that? Why, the American Cotton Manufacturers' Association itself proposed a bill to the Democratic Committee on Ways and Means revising this cotton schedule, and in that bill they proposed to reduce the rates upon coarse cotton cloth 50 per cent lower than they did in their bills of 1912 and 1911, and, of course, they could not have come in here and put in a bill calling for rates on coarse cotton cloth 100 per cent higher than the manufacturers themselves asked for.

But though you have reduced those rates 50 per cent upon the coarse cotton cloths, I challenge any gentleman upon that side of the aisle to show that it is a tariff for revenue only. It is a protective tariff, a tariff that every Member upon this side of the aisle can vote for, because the rate is not large, but it is a rate that no man upon that side of the aisle, unless he is willing to say that he is voting for protection, can vote for. And why, Mr. Chairman? Because in these coarse cotton cloths the report of the Tariff Board shows, and the testimony of the cotton manufacturers themselves shows, that we can and do compete with the world in those cotton cloths.

Why, Mr. Chairman, this afternoon the gentleman from Georgia read a letter from a southern cotton manufacturer, in which you remember he said, "Treat us as lightly as possible." Well, you have done so. He has nothing to complain of as to the coarse cotton cloths that he makes down in Georgia. Give the New England manufacturer the same protection in his higher counts that you have given the southern manufacturer in his low counts, and you have a protective bill from A to Z in this cotton schedule.

Now, Mr. Chairman, on these coarse cotton cloths we are not only competing with the world, but in 1911 we sent 11,000,000 yards to Canada, not only in competition with Great Britain, but with a tariff charge of 7½ per cent against us. The tariff upon these cloths into Canada from this country was 32½ per cent. The tariff from England was 25 per cent. So that you can not say that this is a tariff for revenue only so far as these cloths are concerned. If you be intellectually honest, you will admit that you are protecting the southern cotton manufacturer in the things that he makes so largely.

You have lowered some rates because you were compelled to. You have raised others, either because of the demand of the cotton manufacturers, or else because you have studied to some purpose the report of the Tariff Board. If you would take another year to study the subject, you might get a fair and consistent bill. We are ready to do the work now. [Applause on the Republican side.]

Mr. PETERS. Mr. Chairman, many of my colleagues from Massachusetts on the opposite side of the House have presented their views to the committee, and have shown at least that there is irreconcilable differences in their views.

We have reached the time in our industrial history when the old prohibitive-tariff system is outgrown. It may have been necessary to have had high rates of duty to raise the revenue in war time, and it may have been beneficial in some instances to continue them afterwards; but that it should be necessary to continue the prohibitive tariff rates which have been in existence on cotton goods for the last 10 or 15 years nobody who has studied the industry can believe.

My colleagues from my own State on the other side have tried to get together and get some common point of view. Their singular lack of success has been shown by their views this afternoon, when one amendment presented by my colleague, Mr. GARDNER, received its severest criticism from his colleague, Mr. GREENE.

It has been stated that the cotton industry will receive a terrible blow from the enactment of the rates in this bill. I believe the result will show not that the cotton industry will suffer but that it will be put on a sounder basis by the rates we propose in the bill. We have had prohibitive rates. They have placed a heavy burden on the consumers, and I believe have not been to the ultimate advantage either of the industry or the people employed in it.

The result of prohibitive rates has been to tremendously overstimulate certain branches of the cotton industry. Some concern will make tremendous profits, there will be a rush into that branch of industry, and the market will be overproduced. The unnatural production forced by prohibitive rates must be invariably followed by overproduction and depression.

This bill places rates on a competitive basis. The rates on yarns and cloths and all cotton products are at points which will allow reasonable importations.

Mr. MURDOCK. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PETERS. No; I can not yield now.

A careful investigation has been made of the increases which it is thought would be stimulated by adopting the rates recommended in this schedule. The importations in cotton last year were $24,000,000.

It is estimated that under this bill which we have before us imports will be increased to $36,000,000, an increase of $12,000,000. See what that increase amounts to, when compared with the huge product of this industry. In 1904 the total production in the United States of cotton goods, including cotton small wares, according to the report of the Census Bureau, was valued at $450,468,000. In 1909, the last year for which we have corresponding statistics, manufactures of cotton in this country were valued at $628,392,000, or an increase in five years of $177,900,000 in the total production of the mills and factories of this country, an average yearly increase of over $35,000,000. It will be seen that an increase of importations of $12,000,000 is by no means going to ruin any industry which increases its yearly production by three times that amount and which exported last year goods to the value of $31,388,998.

It is absurd to claim that this tariff will revise the cotton schedule in such a way as to throw men out of employment or to upset the industry. Such remarks are made largely by those who desire to create a feeling of uncertainty, to create a political feeling against a party for their own political purposes, or else they are lamentably blind to the facts concerning the industry.

I believe firmly that the industries of the whole of our country are going to be put by this tariff bill on a firmer, sounder foundation. Removed from the uncertainties of tariff discussions and from the unfortunate overstimulation of prohibitive duties, our industries will develop on a sound basis that will make the next years ones of prosperity. Connected with that prosperity will be the name of the man whose sound judgment has shaped the preparation of the bill, the chairman of our committee, Mr. UNDERWOOD. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, this side surrenders the balance of the time in general debate. I understand that the gentleman from Illinois has still 15 minutes on amendments to be offered.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, there are 15 minutes yet remaining. Is the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. PETERS] going to yield to his colleague [Mr. TREADWAY] for a question?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I will ask the gentleman to ask the question in his own time.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I understood the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. PETERS] would yield to answer a question.

Mr. PETERS. Certainly.

The CHAIRMAN (Mr. ADAMSON). Does the gentleman yield?

Mr. PETERS. Yes.

Mr. TREADWAY. Mr. Chairman, I intended to ask the gentleman a question before he finished his remarks. I would like to ask, in view of the fact that the amendment just adopted to section 263, at the request of the committee, puts all other Jacquard goods at a 30 per cent rate, why the rate is not made 35 per cent, as in the other portion of this section? We read in section 263 that "Jacquard figured upholstery goods," etc., bear a rate of 35 per cent. Why is the distinction made between one kind of Jacquard goods made on a Jacquard loom and another?

Mr. PETERS. Mr. Chairman, there was some doubt in the minds of the committee whether the Jacquard goods referred to would come in under section 269 or under the basket clause at 30 per cent, and to remove that doubt they were fixed in section 263, which contained the other Jacquard goods, and were fixed at 30 per cent, which was the rate intended by the committee.

Mr. TREADWAY. Just one other question, please. An amendment was adopted to section 269 striking out the word "doilies." The particular question I would ask now has to do with mills making quilts. I understand that it is the intention of the committee to have it construed that Jacquard quilts will, of course, come in under 30 per cent rate rather than under section 269, line 8, where the word "quilts" appears.

Mr. PETERS. That will bring all Jacquard quilts under 30 per cent rate.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MOORE] is to be recognized to offer an amendment to paragraph 263, and then I yield five minutes to him from this side.

Mr. MOORE. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following as a new paragraph, as a substitute for paragraph 263.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Strike out paragraph 263 and insert the following:

"263. Curtain, table covers, and all articles manufactured of cotton chenille, or of which cotton chenille is the component material of chief value, tapestries and other Jacquard figured upholstery goods, if valued at not over 30 cents per square yard, composed wholly or in chief value of cotton or other vegetable fiber; any of the foregoing, in the piece or otherwise, 45 per cent ad valorem; if valued at more than 30 cents per square yard and not exceeding $1 per square yard, 50 per cent ad valorem; if valued at more than $1 per square yard, 55 per cent ad valorem.

Mr. MOORE. Mr. Chairman, I have not indulged in general debate on the cotton schedule, although I come from the greatest textile city in the United States——

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Will the gentleman allow a question?

Mr. MOORE. Yes.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Does the gentleman put the rates higher than in the Payne law?

Mr. MOORE. No; 5 per cent less on the lower grades.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. The last division is higher, and that is the important division.

Mr. MOORE. That is on the finer goods that are used by the richer class of——

Mr. UNDERWOOD. The reason I asked the gentleman—is there any indication that this industry is not prospering under the Payne bill?

Mr. MOORE. The industry at present is prospering.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Then I ask the gentleman why did he raise the rates.

Mr. MOORE. Under the Dingley bill the industry did not prosper, because the mills were working half time and some of them quarter time and because generally there was a retardation of all production of upholstery goods in the United States. This is a case that illustrates as clearly as any I can present the necessity of a protective-tariff duty. Foreign upholstery manufacturers were able to keep their goods in this country under the Dingley law. The rates were raised in the Payne law, and as a result of the raising of those rates the mills began again to thrive in the United States, and particularly in my city. I know personally that men were walking the streets for want of work because the Dingley rates were too low. Now, I know personally that when the Payne rates were in effect the mills began to work again full time and the employees had plenty to do.

The industry is thriving now because every mill is working full tilt and doing the very best it can with the raw material on hand to fill orders in anticipation of what is coming. That may account to a very large extent for the statements that some gentlemen have advanced here as to our present prosperity. The textile mills to-day, with what raw material they have on hand, are working full tilt in order to prepare for what is to come. Now, as I said, I did not discuss this matter under general debate. It is one of the unwritten laws of this particular session of Congress that a man who comes from a district where there are interests of this kind must leave the whole discussion to a Member who comes from a district where nothing is known about it and in which there is no interest. In fact, this seems to be a session of Congress where a man who is a lawyer can discuss everything until the cows come home and settle questions affecting industries whether he knows anything about them or not. I do not want to offend the other side of the House or this side of the House when I say the discussion we have just had on the cotton schedule illustrates better than anything else could have done that we are not now prepared to pass an intelligent or scientific cotton bill.

The differences of opinion upon both sides, the lack of information upon all sides, the utter disregard of the men actually engaged in the business, who know by experience what is best for the trade, confirms the statement I have made. Oh, of course the gentlemen upon the other side say that the man who is interested in the business naturally will take care of his local interests. I would like to know a lawyer of this House who will refuse to discuss here problems of law in which he is interested and which only serve to confuse the public mind and delay public business; hair-splitting, while the men who want business done wait to have it done. I have presented this amendment in the interest of the industries of my city. If that is a crime, it can not be helped. I am ready to plead guilty to an effort to persuade you to stay a bill particularly with respect to upholstery products, so that the mills engaged in this industry may not be placed upon half time and the men now employed will not be put upon the streets.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, the remarkable unity in the Republican Party in its effort to write a tariff bill is well illustrated by the last two speeches that have been made on that side of the House. The gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. LENROOT], although he advises his Republican colleagues to vote for our cotton schedule, says we have not reduced it enough, and the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MOORE], not satisfied with our cotton schedule, not even satisfied with the Payne bill, not only proposes to raise this paragraph under which he admits the business interests of the country affected by it have prospered, but proposes to raise it and ask you to vote to raise it above the rate in the present Payne law. Now, where does the Republican Party stand?

All of you gentlemen stand for a revision by a tariff board. The most complete report that you had in the last Congress by a tariff board of your own creation was on the cotton schedule. You have had it before you for study for two years, and at the end of that time, still proclaiming that you believe in a revision of the tariff by a tariff board, we find one distinguished gentleman representing you here complaining that this bill is too high, according to the Tariff Board reports, and the other distinguished gentleman, the Representative from Pennsylvania, is not only not satisfied with this bill, but is not satisfied with the Payne bill; but under your theory of a tariff board revision he desires to raise the rate still higher and increase the burdens on the American people, when he admits on the floor that the industry is prosperous under the present rate.

Now, I do not want to indulge in captious criticism, but I am perfectly willing to accept the captious criticism that that side of the House throws us. That is your business. That is what you are here for. You are the critics of the Congress, as we have been sometimes in the past. It is the part of the Government that belongs to you [applause on the Democratic side], and I do not want to invade your privilege, but I ask you, and the country is going to ask you, when you proclaim yourselves in favor of a revision by a tariff board, and you have had the best report of a tariff board, that you stood for and proclaimed all right, before you for two years, and you can not agree among yourselves on a rate that should go into this schedule. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment proposed by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MOORE].

The question was taken, and the amendment was rejected.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. VARE] is to be recognized to offer an amendment to paragraph 266, after which I yield him the 5 minutes' time on this side.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. VARE] offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

On line 9, page 68, paragraph 266, instead of—
"Composed of cotton or other vegetable fiber, 30 per cent ad valorem."
To read:
"Composed of cotton or other vegetable fiber, 50 per cent ad valorem."

Mr. VARE. Mr. Chairman, the purpose of this amendment is not to restore the Payne duty of 1912 of 60.27 per cent. It is not to restore the Dingley rate of 61.41 per cent ad valorem, but it is simply asking the Democratic Party to give the manufacturers and workingmen of the city of Philadelphia, which I have the honor in part to represent, the same rate—50 per cent ad valorem—that was given them in the Wilson-Gorman bill of 1896.

I do not intend to take the time of the committee in discussing the fiscal policy which is being put into effect by the Democratic Party and the overturning of the protective principle, under which this country has obtained its great growth and under which wages have been maintained at a standard higher than in any other country in the world. The city of Philadelphia, which I have the honor to represent in part, is the greatest manufacturing city in this country. It is also known throughout this and all other countries as the city of homes, containing, exclusive of hotels and apartment houses, 350,000 dwellings, the major part of which are occupied by mechanics and other wage earners. The fact that the city of Philadelphia is regarded as the home city of the country is due almost entirely to the splendid opportunities for employment in these manufacturing industries, and I therefore feel that I would be recreant to my trust if I did not raise my voice to protest against the passage of this bill, which so seriously affects virtually every industry in Philadelphia. I feel that I should call attention to the fact that inasmuch as the Ways and Means Committee admitted that an injustice had been done in reducing the duty on knitted underwear from 60 to 25 per cent ad valorem and withdrew this paragraph from the Democratic caucus in order to increase the reduced duty to 30 per cent ad valorem that it is quite probable that other mistakes have been made. The increase from 25 to 30 per cent will not afford the slightest protection to Philadelphia's underwear industry. Where we are paying our employees from $1.75 to $2.50 a day the same class of operators in Germany are receiving only from 50 to 75 cents a day. Where the foreigners are able to sell in this country at $2.50 a dozen, including their profit, our Philadelphia manufacturers, without counting profit, must pay $3.60 a dozen to turn out the same kind of underwear. The same thing is true of hosiery and all other textile interests, in which Philadelphia has millions of dollars of capital invested and on which thousands of our workmen are dependent for a livelihood.

It has been intimated that the Republicans are engaged in calamity howling and that no harm will really be done to American industry by the passage of the Wilson-Underwood bill. For the information of Democrats who hold this view, I merely wish to cite an instance of what is already happening. In Bradford, England, the firm of Joseph Benn & Sons has long been engaged in the worsted business. After the passage of the Dingley tariff law they found that they could more profitably make in this country such goods as they had formerly made in their English mill for export here. So they established another plant in Rhode Island to make goods for the United States market.

In both mills they made the same kind of goods, with the same kind of machinery, and of identical raw material. The conditions are practically identical in all respects except the wages paid.

Many of the employees of the Bradford mill came to this country when the firm established itself in Rhode Island, and they testify that sorters who receive $7.79 in the English branch of the business receive $16.50 per week in the Rhode Island branch. Mechanics receive $7.30 in the English branch and $15 per week in the Rhode Island branch. Weavers receive $3.41 a week in the English branch and $12 per week in the Rhode Island branch. They say that if they lived the same way in the United States as they do in England they could save at least half of their wages.

If what the Democrats have said is true, namely, that the working people of this country will prosper under the new bill, it would seem that the firm of Joseph Benn & Sons would be willing to continue in business; and yet on April 18 last the following announcement was posted on the door of the firm for the information of 1,500 American employees:

The provisions in the new Wilson-Underwood tariff bill make it absolutely impossible for us to successfully compete with imported goods. Therefore the stoppage of machinery will take place immediately.

JOSEPH BENN & SONS.
HARRISON BENN.

Mr. Benn has stated publicly that the notice speaks for itself. He has explained that it is not the intention of the company to close up all its factories at once. There will be a lay off of employees a few at a time, at intermittent periods, which will depend probably on the question of orders that are to be filled in the future. Mr. Benn is quoted as saying:

There is no mystery in the closing of our mill. I find that under the proposed new tariff act I can make goods in Bradford, England, and land them in New York at about 4 cents a yard cheaper than I can make them in Rhode Island and ship them to New York. On 13 numbers or styles I find that I can save from 10.6 per cent to 14.6 per cent a yard by making the goods in the Bradford plant and shipping them to New York. For that reason I have ordered all work that is being done stopped at this plant, and am sending a cable to the Bradford plant to start 500 pieces of goods to take the places of the goods which we have stopped making here.

This is a concrete example of what is taking place in the textile industry, and I merely call it to the attention of the Democratic Party for what it may be worth to them. [Applause on the Republican side.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I ask for a vote.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment proposed by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. VARE].

The question was taken, and the amendment was rejected.

Mr. WALLIN. Mr. Chairman, I desire to offer the following amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New York [Mr. WALLIN] offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend, page 68, paragraph 266, line 9, by striking out the figures "30," after the word "fiber," and inserting the figures "40" in lieu thereof.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York [Mr. WALLIN].

The question was taken, and the amendment was rejected.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, a moment ago I inadvertently misled the Chair by asking him to recognize the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. VARE] to offer his amendment before the amendment offered by the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. GARDNER] had been disposed of. I now ask to have a vote upon the amendment offered by the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. GARDNER], which is now pending.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. GARDNER].

The question was taken, and the amendment was rejected.

Mr. MANN. Now, Mr. Chairman, I ask the Chair to recognize the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. FARR] to offer an amendment to paragraph 270, and then I will yield him five minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. FARR] offers the amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Substitute for paragraph 270:

"Lace window curtains, nets, nettings, pillow shams, and bed sets, finished or unfinished, made on the Nottingham lace-curtain machine or on the Nottingham warp machine, and composed of cotton or other vegetable fiber, when counting 5 points or spaces between the warp threads to the inch, 1 cent per square yard; when counting more than 5 such points or spaces to the inch, one-half of 1 cent per square yard in addition for each such point or space to the inch in excess of 5; and in addition thereto, on all the foregoing articles in this paragraph, 20 per centum ad valorem: Provided, That none of the above-named articles shall pay a less rate of duty than 50 per centum ad valorem."

Mr. FARR. Mr. Chairman, I had hoped that with Schedule C, metals and manufactures of, we would have seen the finish of the injuries that will be inflicted upon the district which I have the honor to represent—injuries which will follow directly from the provisions in this bill—but I find that a lace mill in the district, employing 400 or more people, will be in serious danger if the reduced tariff in this section of the bill becomes a law. Therefore I have offered my amendment as a substitute for section 270. The amendment constitutes the existing law.

I am in receipt of a communication from the secretary of the Chartered Society of Amalgamated Lace Operators of America, affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, under date of April 24, 1913, which reads as follows:

To the Hon. JOHN R. FARR:

DEAR SIR: I am mailing you under separate cover a petition from the employees of the Scranton Lace Curtain Co. Knowing, as you do, the hardships that we, the employees, went through during the time that the Wilson bill was in effect, and you understanding the local conditions, I am sure I can thank you in advance for your voice and influence in regard to this matter.

I am, yours, JAMES GOODALL, Secretary.

SCRANTON, PA.

Now, the friends of organized labor have an opportunity to save an industry which employs organized labor. It is one of the best organized industries in this country, and is now on a competitive basis with the product of foreign industries, paying 68½ per cent more wages than are paid in England, and three times the rate of wages for a 9-hour day that is paid in Scotland for a 10-hour day—industries with which our Scranton industry is in direct competition. One-third of the capacity of the Nottingham machines in this country is now unused. Importations are increasing.

Mr. BUCHANAN of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield for a question?

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman yield?

Mr. FARR. Yes.

Mr. BUCHANAN of Illinois. Is that a communication from an organization of labor?

Mr. FARR. Yes.

Mr. BUCHANAN of Illinois. Has it a seal on it?

Mr. FARR. Yes. It reads, "The Chartered Society of Amalgamated Lace Operatives of America, Branch No. 3."

Mr. BUCHANAN of Illinois. Has it got the organization seal on it?

Mr. FARR. Yes; it has its seal on it.

Mr. BUCHANAN of Illinois. I mean the seal of the organization.

Mr. FARR. It has the seal on it. There is no question about it. I know the organization.

Now, Mr. Chairman, inasmuch as the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. BUCHANAN] has been made acquainted with that fact, as a member of organized labor, I am looking for his support.

In the petition to which I have referred these petitioners say:

We, the undersigned, do hereby petition the honorable Senator and Congressman from our district to vote against the recommendation of the Ways and Means Committee concerning laces and lace curtains.

The adoption of the recommendation of the Ways and Means Committee means an increase in foreign competition and also means less employment and a reduction in the pay envelope for the undersigned.

Mr. Chairman, I desire the members of organized labor on that side of the aisle to remember that in Scranton and elsewhere in all these industries in this country engaged in the manufacture of Nottingham laces we are paying three times the wages that are paid in Scotland for the same kind of work and for just as much work, and I am going to ask them if they are going to support this provision to put this industry in danger?

Relative to the lower tariff, Mr. Paul B. Belin, treasurer of Scranton Lace Co., writes me as follows:

As a matter of fact, the existing duties on our imported yarns run about 26 per cent, and under the new bill they will average about 22 per cent, which is practically inappreciable. On the coarser numbers, which are spun in the South, we will not be able to get a better price, owing to the fact that the duties in most cases are raised rather than lowered; so that, with cotton out of the way as a negligible quantity apparently, we would be forced to compete on wages.

As a local man, you are quite well aware of the position we have always taken in reference to this matter, and you are also quite well aware that we have always paid more than anybody.

As an actual fact we are paying just exactly three times as much wages as the Scotch lace manufacturers, who will compete directly with us if this bill should pass. We work 9 hours a day, whereas the Scotchmen work 10. At the present moment there is practically very little difference between our prices and the prices of Scotch or English curtains. It is only due to our strenuous selling efforts that we are able to keep out the Scotch and English curtains, and if they were given an advantage of 20 per cent on the low-grade curtains, as proposed in the new tariff bill, I, for one, fail to see how it will be possible for us to run the mill, as I am quite sure there is no possibility of reducing wages.

Trusting you will use your earnest endeavors to prevent any such bill being passed, I am,

Very truly, yours, THE SCRANTON LACE CURTAIN CO.,
PAUL B. BELIN, Treasurer.

I notice a communication to a gentleman on the other side of the aisle, my colleague, Mr. CASEY, in which the writers say there are numbers of skilled mechanics in the Wilkes-Barre, Pa., mills now idle.

Now, the question has been asked here frequently as to why this difference of wages in foreign countries exists. We are not nearly so much concerned with wages in foreign countries as we are with the wages paid our working people, and I repeat that here is an opportunity to maintain a splendid industry, furnishing the product at a price lower than it was sold for before the industry was established in this country, paying splendid wages to a splendid class of people. The passage of this bill will mean the displacement of a large number of male employees. [Applause on the Republican side.]

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, if I understood the gentleman aright, he stated that he had communications from the men who were working in these mills appealing to him that this industry should not return to the disastrous condition in which it was under the Wilson bill. Did I understand the gentleman correctly?

Mr. FARR. That is what the gentleman wrote to me.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. And the gentleman charges, I suppose, that the rates in the Wilson bill were the cause of this industry being in such a disastrous condition.

Mr. FARR. At that time.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. That is your opinion about it?

Mr. FARR. Yes.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, this is a very good illustration of how a Republican wants to make up a tariff bill—the "scientific method." He comes before this House and appeals to the House to return to the rates under the Payne bill because the workmen in the factory in his district have written to him that they want to be saved from the disastrous conditions that were forced on them by reason of the enactment of the Wilson bill. Now, he feels sure about that, because I have just asked him, and that is the great issue that he has brought before this House on these Nottingham curtains.

Now, under the Payne bill these curtains in 1912 had a rate whose ad valorem equivalent was 52 per cent. Under the Wilson bill the rate was 50 per cent.

Mr. FARR. That is a difference of 52 per cent.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. And to the difference between 50 per cent and 52 per cent the gentleman attributes some calamitous conditions. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

Mr. FARR. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. No; I can not yield now.

Mr. FARR. I will explain the difference, if you will permit me to do so.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I understand the difference.

Mr. FARR. Of course you do.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I understand the difference. The difference is that the gentleman now knows what the Wilson rate was, and he did not know it when he made his speech. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

Mr. FARR. I beg the gentleman's pardon. I did know, and I can explain the difference, and the gentleman knows the difference, but he does not want me to state it.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. The gentleman talks most of the time in this House, but I ask him not to talk in my time.

Now, the gentleman reminds me of a condition I met with in the campaign last fall. It is a well-known fact that when Mr. Dingley wrote the Dingley bill he adopted the Wilson rates on the iron and steel schedule, with one or two insignificant changes. Otherwise the Wilson bill and the Dingley bill were the same on the iron and steel schedules. When I was making a speech last fall in a town in Connecticut a gentleman rose in the audience and he said, "It does not make any difference about what you say about this matter. We remember when our iron and steel works were closed under the Wilson bill."

I asked him if he attributed that to the rates in the Wilson bill, and he said he did. I then asked him if they had prospered under the rates in the Dingley bill, and he told me that they had had the most amazing prosperity that they had ever known. Then I invited him to the platform, with both the Dingley bill and the Wilson bill lying there, and I promised him I would turn Republican if he would find any material difference in the iron and steel rates between the two bills, and he has not found them yet. [Applause on the Democratic side.] And that is about the condition of you calamity howlers. Because Mr. Wilson's bill happened to run into a Republican panic, a panic that was brewing before the bill was ever enacted, you are ready at all times and on all occasions, whether there is a change in the rate or not, to attribute those conditions to the enactment of a law that had nothing to do with it. [Applause.]

Now, so far as this particular schedule is concerned, everybody knows that this class of lace curtains are made almost entirely by machinery. They are machine-made goods. They are taking possession of the American market, as far as the American market can absorb the goods.

There may be a part of the industry that does not employ the full number, so far as the capacity of the machines are concerned, but that is due to the fact that the enormous profit these men have made in the past year has invited capital into making Nottingham lace curtains until they have increased the production beyond the capacity of the American market to absorb it.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. FARR].

The question was taken, and the amendment was lost.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. AUSTIN] was to be recognized to offer an amendment to paragraphs 264 and 265 without debate.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment: I move to strike out, in line 18, page 67, the figures "20" and insert the figures "30."

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend, line 18, page 67, by striking out "20" and inserting "30."

The question was taken, and the amendment was lost.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. Chairman, I offer the further amendment, on page 68, on line 1, strike out the figures "40" and insert "70," and, in line 2, strike out "50" and insert "71."

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 68, line 1, strike out "40" and insert "70"; in line 2, strike out "50" and insert "71."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Tennessee.

The question was taken, and the amendment was lost.

The Clerk read as follows:

273. Flax, hackled, known as "dressed line," 1½ cents per pound.

Mr. ROGERS. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 70, line 6, after the word "line," strike out "1½" and insert "2½."

Mr. ROGERS. Mr. Chairman, the old rates, as I recall them, of the paragraphs corresponding to paragraphs 272 and 273 were, respectively, 1 cent per pound in the former paragraph and 3 cents per pound in the latter. The rate in paragraph 272 has been reduced to one-half of 1 cent. There seems no good reason, then, for not assenting to a similar reduction of one-half of 1 cent on the present dressed-flax rate to 2½ cents. The product referred to in paragraph 272 is the raw material for the commodity in paragraph 273.

There is in my district, in the town of Andover, one of the few hackling-flax plants in the United States—one of the half a dozen, I am told. About two months ago the operatives of that plant sent me a petition, asking me to come over from Lowell to Andover and listen to their story in connection with these two paragraphs of the tariff.

I went there, and in an upper room in one of their mill buildings during the noon hour, the men having hurried back from dinner in order to be present, they explained their grievance. They told me, with every apparent sincerity, that if these compensatory duties between undressed flax on the one hand and the dressed flax on the other were not retained this branch of their activity, employing 100 men more or less in this mill alone, would be driven out of business, because the men in this country who make use of the flax would in that event have the hackling done on the other side, where they could have it done more cheaply than they could here. They pleaded with me, and I plead with you now, to retain this compensatory duty undiminished, so that this industry, one of only a half a dozen in this country, and one which in no wise keeps up the price of the product or interferes with any other manufacture, may not be legislated out of existence.

Mr. ADAMSON. Mr. Chairman, in view of the copious interchange of unfavorable opinion on this floor in the last few days I deem it a bad time to tinker with the hemp market, as proposed in the amendment just offered. I would not, however, be impolite enough to remind the gentleman of the old adage: "No thief e'er felt the halter draw, with good opinion of the law." Gentlemen here are not culprits, nor fit subjects for a halter. They are merely the apologists for the real thieves—the beneficiaries of the robber protective tariff. I am constrained, however, by these complimentary remarks to lament the decadence of honesty in this country. A wicked and degenerate world makes the doubled-barreled minority miserable.

There are no honest men among the Democrats, it seems. The very mildest characterization made of their duplicity and meanness is by that meek and elegant gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. LENROOT], who says we are not frank, and sometimes not decent.

Honesty is confined to the scattered, disjointed, dismantled, discordant fragments of the stand-pat Republicans and the new-fledged Bull Moose Party, which, like the wasp, is bigger at its birth than it ever becomes in after life. [Laughter.] Great God! Is that all the chance there is for honesty in this world? Both of these other bodies have admitted that they are honest; that is, each admits it for itself but denies it to the other fragment. The Democrats, however, have the excuse for their meanness that they are ignorant, because both the other bunches have also called them ignorant. Our critics will find that the Democrats understand this bill. A waiting country and a suffering people, for 50 years wandering in the wilderness, being robbed of their earnings, hope for it soon to become a law and that it may long bless the land. [Applause on the Democratic side.] But if honesty is confined to the standpatters and Bull Moose adventurers described, I say, Come on, fire and brimstone—there will be no Lot found exempt from the destruction of Sodom and Gomorrah. [Laughter and applause.] If there were anybody escaping and looking back, to be transmuted into pillars of salt, there would not be enough to save the old fragmentary stand-pat party nor the Bull Moose claimants to a monopoly of holiness.

Mr. Chairman, there are several wonderful things under the sun that have been developed by this debate. My extremely witty friend from Philadelphia [Mr. MOORE], who makes a joke out of the most serious and sacred things, excuses robber protection in this country by showing how little was collected at the ports and how little was the per capita share of each citizen. Great heavens, that is the very objection we have to it—that it is an infernal, infamous system that collects one-eighth of the tax for the Government, which any honest man would be willing to pay for the support of his Government, but licenses the robbers to take the other seven-eighths of the tax and put it in their own pockets. [Applause on the Democratic side.] He did not figure out that view of it.

Another proof of their great honesty is that all they attempt here is the plea of the criminal asking for a continuance of the case in the form of a tariff board. Whoever heard of a Republican during 50 years of misrule and misuse of power insisting on surrendering their power over the tariff to a tariff board until the election in 1910 turned them out of power in this House? Then they began to clamor for a tariff board to prevent a triumphant Democracy from revising the tariff downward. [Applause on the Democratic side.] They also talk about open caucuses; and their younger brother, the slab-off, the offshoot, the Bull Moose Party, also takes up the cry, and they say that they, too, must have open caucuses. Did you ever hear of Republicans while in power and capable of doing any devilment wanting open caucuses? [Laughter.] When they are reduced by an outraged people to an insignificant minority, then they begin to talk about coming out in the open, for they can not do further harm. [Laughter and applause.]

What is there now in either of these caucuses that anybody cares anything about? What would the play of Hamlet be with Hamlet eliminated? Of course, the bosses fixed everything for the Republicans while they were in the majority, whether they had a caucus to ratify it or not. The combination of that party, with all the special interests working automatically and passing the word down the line, was all that was necessary with or without a caucus, but now when there is no devilment they can do, no further inequalities to create and maintain, no further power to rob the people to enrich their favorites and pile up campaign funds for future emergencies; when their councils are vapid, meaningless, powerless, not even noticed by the newspapers, they can do nothing but talk, talk, talk, and, of course, an open caucus affords them a few more auditors and can not decrease effectiveness which does not exist. There is one remarkable thing about the Bull Moose experiment in the fortunes of political warfare, which is sufficient unerringly to indicate its paternity even if we had no other knowledge of that subject. Their much vaunted open caucus is always widely heralded and the result fully announced in advance, thereby suggesting the inheritance from its parent party of corruption and disaster of that traditional practice of having everything arranged—cut and dried—ready, so that the open caucus will have no difficulty in working smoothly and automatically, but the result is always just as predestined by some master mind who has laid the plans and prepared the way.

It would be impolite to use the word "boss" in connection with the statecraft of such great and eminent reformers.

There is another matter of wonder forced on my mind by the repeated suggestions that workmen intelligent enough to turn out the most finished articles, work which in this country commands as much as $2.40 per day, done by the same character of workmen, are nevertheless content and happy and glad to remain in Europe and produce the same character of work at 80 cents per day. What there is in Europe to charm their senses, fill their pockets, save their money, make them fat and happy at one-third the rewards afforded in this country, my reading of history, geography, and ethnology fails to disclose. Everybody but protectionists knows that for 2,000 years most of the countries in Europe have been supposed to possess considerable general information and some special knowledge on particular subjects. The truth or fallacy of such statements must depend either on the ignorance of Europe or the poetic license of gentlemen who make inaccurate statements on the subject. Far be it from me to ascribe either ignorance or incorrect statements to distinguished gentlemen on this floor whom we have so often heard admit both their honesty and their wisdom. The only alternative is the conclusion that Europe is densely ignorant and that all our helpless pampered protected industries have to be hothoused to enable them to extort from their fellow citizens high prices for their goods made in competition with ignorant pauper laborers of Europe, who are smart enough to compete with our best workmen in the production of the finest articles for one-third the wages, but are yet too ignorant to know that they could do better in this country or that they could be happier than they are.

Now, such logical statements as that do not surprise me. I am somewhat accustomed to liberal statements in debate here, not to say fantastical nor extravagant latitude. The only thing that surprises me is that some of our enterprising brethren, who can work cheaper abroad than at home and sell all their goods cheaper abroad than they do at home do not start a newspaper over in Europe. The work over there is so cheap it would not cost much to run the paper. Those workmen are so prosperous and well satisfied they would certainly be able to take the paper, and, as they began to realize their ignorance, they would certainly appreciate the paper. By that means they might learn of this goodly land which for a small sum in a few days they could reach in safety and treble their earnings by the same work. I have no doubt some of them would move over if they were duly advised on the subject. I do not want any of them myself unless they are healthy, honest, intelligent, and wealthy, but I understand some of my protection friends are not as hard to please on the subject as I am; they actually find means to slip the information to some of those benighted people and inveigle them over here by the thousand and work them at the same old prices, still charging their customers the same old high prices for the products. The most remarkable thing, however, of this remarkable debate is the persistent calamity howl of the bifurcated minority. They have done their best to talk up a panic before it comes. Instead of infecting my part of the country with their dishonest politics they have aroused a protest from our manufacturers, who write me "for God's sake hurry through the passage of this bill; that if any harm is done to business it will not be the result of the bill, but the result of the calamity talk, the direful forebodings of disaster which the protected interests, dying hard, holding with a death grip to the instruments of their ill-gotten gain, are indulging so lustily either to postpone or defeat this bill." Of course, such continual talk can scare the timid, and money is always timid. In fact, it is afraid of anything but a Government bond, and charges for the use of itself in proportion to its fears when investing in anything but Government bonds.

You have all heard of the man who in the perfect bloom of health was nevertheless sensitive and credulous. Some of his associates planning a practical joke expressed concern about his health, and one at a time in succession met him and told him how bad he looked, asked him how long he had been sick; another one had heard of the bad reports of his dangerous malady; another one apprehended his death soon, he looked so bad. The poor loon, frightened to death, died before night. This kind of talk, however, can not kill the patient in this instance, because they have talked so long and so falsely that the American people know them, and their prophecies are no longer heeded. Bill Arp wrote about a man who hated another so bad that the unfortunate victim went to the bad, all of his hair came out, and he drowned himself in a mudhole that night. If maledictions meant hatred, the fierce denunciations of the dual and clamorous minority in this House would destroy every patriot here and permit the return to power of that horde which has held high carnival of misrule discrimination and robbery with short intermissions and slight hindrance for 50 years. That gallant old king, warrior, priest, and poet, the Psalmist

David, said in his wrath, "All men are liars." As it was easy for him to get forgiveness, I have no doubt he was forgiven for that unkind remark, but if he had lived in this day and familiarized himself with the jargon of protection apologists he would have been able to conclude in his sober judgment that some men in high places are careless about their information and reckless about their statements. He might have been tempted to sing in the sweetest strains of sacred verse his religious opinions about the heterophemy of discredited politicians, the dissensions of divided political camps quarreling over the method of their destruction while railing at the victors and indulging in the wildest flights of hyperbolical language. Selah. [Loud applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Georgia has expired.

Mr. PETERS. Mr. Chairman, I admire the sympathy of my colleague from Massachusetts [Mr. ROGERS] for the employees affected by paragraphs 272 and 273, but I can not admire his accuracy. He complains that in changing the rates we have made rates which now place the men engaged in hackling flax at a disadvantage. I will inform him that we have cut much of the rates in half, using exactly the same language. At present paragraph 334 of the Payne Act fixes 1 cent per pound. We have made it one-half of 1 cent per pound. Section 273 of the present bill takes the place of section 335 of the present law and reduces the rate from 3 cents to 1½ cents per pound. I think my arithmetic is accurate on this; and if not, I hope I will be corrected.

Mr. ROGERS. I would like to ask the gentleman this question: Is not it a question as to the protection afforded to the workman what the difference is between the two items and not what particular divisor you use in connection with each item?

Mr. PETERS. If we divide you receive the same ad valorem rate which you have at present.

Mr. ROGERS. You have 1 cent between the two rates in this Underwood bill. You had 2 cents between the two rates as compensatory duty in the old bill.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. ROGERS].

Mr. BUCHANAN of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, the question of organized labor has been brought up here this evening by a gentleman for whom I have great regard, my friend from Pennsylvania [Mr. FARR], who I believe is sincere in what he advocates, but who has been deluded by the party and the people with whom he has been associated. I stated the other day that organized labor, in the main, was not in favor of a protective tariff; that they were aware of the fact that a protective tariff did not protect labor but protected the big business interests of the country, the manufacturers who were bringing in foreigners here by the shipload for the purpose of keeping down their wages; and I want to quote again from the Secretary of the American Federation of Labor, Mr. Morrison, who is a man for whom all who know him have great respect for his integrity, honesty, and loyalty to a principle, and I believe at this time he ought to be in closer touch with the organized labor movement, even labor as a whole, than most any other man, because his position requires him to keep posted in regard to those things, as the organizers report to him from different parts of the country. So he ought to be in a position to know whereof he speaks, and this is what the Secretary of the American Federation of Labor states:

THREAT TO SHIFT TARIFF BURDEN TO LABOR RESENTED—SPEAKER FOR 2,000,000 WORKERS CALLS CRY OF PROTECTED INTERESTS A SHAM—WAGES WON'T BE CUT—"PROTECTED INDUSTRIES NOTORIOUS FOR LOW PAY OF EMPLOYEES," SAYS MORRISON.

[By Samuel M. Williams, staff correspondent of The Evening World.]

WASHINGTON, April 29.

The American Federation of Labor has 2,000,000 enrolled and organized members. Employers of a number of these members are saying that reduction of the tariff duties, foreign competition, and lower prices for commodities will bring also a reduction of workingmen's wages.

At the headquarters in Washington of this greatest of labor unions Frank Morrison, general secretary, the man in closest touch with its activities and sentiment, was asked what would be the result if tariff reductions brought wage reductions. This was his answer:

"Labor's wages will not be cut. Labor's wages can not be cut because, in many industries, they are already at the lowest living point. If attempt is made there will be strikes all along the line. It will be fought to the finish. We are in the midst of a tremendous campaign of organization to strengthen the position of labor against further exploitation for the benefit of capital.

"It is notorious that, as a rule, the higher the tariff protection an industry has enjoyed, the lower the wages paid to its employees. Some of the most favored of protected trusts, like steel, sugar, wool, cotton, beef, have paid the worst starvation wages. Simply because capital is liable to lose some of its protection profits the burden can not be shifted to labor and the worker made to contribute the loss out of his own pocket.

PROTECTED INTERESTS HAVE EXPLOITED LABOR.

"Capital has had protection, but labor has had to face unrestricted competition. Importations of goods are taxed, but immigration is free. Employers have taken advantage of this fact and exploited labor to the very limit, until now the exploited victims are revolting.

"The cotton manufacturer, the silk manufacturer, the steel manufacturer have had the advantage of a protected market for their products. But when labor sought its share of the rewards there was no law to prevent the coming in of foreign labor to beat down wages. The price of manufactured products could be raised to the limit of production, but the price of the labor could be kept down to the minimum by untaxed drafts on Europe. There was merely the price of transportation to be reckoned.

"Now, let us see what is happening. The swarms of unskilled foreign labor, brought in originally to combat American labor, are turning on their employers. The demonstrations of the Industrial Workers of the World are the logical result of this exploitation of humanity. They were unorganized. They were, in many cases, ignorant and unable to speak the language of the country. The employer took advantage of their helplessness and screwed down wages until the men and women simply could not stand it any longer.

PROTECTION FOR LABOR, NOT PRODUCTS ONLY.

"They broke out in revolt in Lawrence, and now in Paterson. We of the American Federation of Labor are not responsible for these conditions. Capital has brought them on itself, because it sought to combat and defeat organized labor with unorganized labor. And you see the results.

"We believe in protection for American labor, not protection alone for American products. While a literacy test may not be the best qualification for admission to this country, yet I favored the immigration bill along that line which President Taft vetoed last year.

"Since the law to-day gives practically free admission to foreign labor the American Federation has undertaken on its own account a propaganda to restrict immigration. We are sending everywhere throughout Europe notices to check the incoming tide at its source. We are urging that any proposed removal be deferred for two or three years until economic conditions in this country have opportunity to adjust themselves to a better basis. Otherwise we shall have a great mass of unskilled, unorganized labor dumped in upon the market, resulting in decreases in wages, increases in strife, and widespread suffering.

"Our reports from the country at large indicate that to-day there is about an even demand for labor. There is no appreciable slackening in industry, but there is a clearly defined tendency toward shading off the rewards of labor. It is not at present so much in the form of actual cut in wages as it is in the demands for increased output, which is equivalent to lower wages. Take the case of certain iron and steel mills around Pittsburgh. Every new manager coming into power has fresh schemes for more economical production that result in less net return to the laborer.

ONLY CHANCE OF LABOR IS IN ORGANIZATION.

"We are entering an era of vital interest to all classes of wage earners, because of changing economic conditions. We believe that the only way to protect the laborer is by organization, and the American Federation of Labor is concentrating its efforts along that line.

"We are having rapid growth in numbers. The two million mark has been passed for the first time. We are endeavoring to bring the unorganized in, to make them strong where they were weak. We are printing a newspaper in 18 languages to circulate among this great mass of foreign workingmen who have been so horribly exploited, not only to their own suffering, but to the injury of their fellow workers of America.

"No; there can be no reduction in wages, because some of the tariff-protected trusts are in danger of losing their protection. The workingmen of America realize too clearly the state of affairs to permit that. I do not know just what will happen, but labor is determined to fight any proposition to reduce its rewards."

Now, it may be said by gentlemen on that side of the House, as was said by the gentleman from Washington [Mr. FALCONER] the other day, that the labor man who makes statements of that sort has not got any brains in his cranium, but I want to say, if the gentleman is here, and if not I am sorry he is not here, that men in that position do not get their convictions from the same source that the gentleman from Washington does. He, no doubt, gets his convictions from where he has his profits, in a shingle industry and the timberland business in the Northwest—and it might be of interest to those who are here to know that there has been a recent strike in the shingle industry in that locality due to the fact that they were not paying wages so that they could live up to the standard that American workmen should live. [Applause on the Democratic side.] Those things might be of interest to the gentleman, if he were here. It may also be of interest for you to know that men who do not know the needs of the laboring people of this country and know how they have suffered due to the combined forces of the great combined manufacturing interests of this country beating down the price of labor—big business—come to this Congress asking for protection under the name of labor, and when they get their protective tariff exercise their influence everywhere and all the time to crush labor down, as the great Steel Trust in recent years has done, and used their influence to encourage the importation of large numbers of foreigners; and in advertising for labor in that locality they express their preference for the foreigner while the American workman is walking the highways looking for work. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired. The question is on the amendment proposed by the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. ROGERS].

The question was taken, and the amendment was rejected.

The Clerk read as follows:

273. Flax, hackled, known as "dressed line," 1½ cents per pound.

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

I do not rise for the purpose of discussing this paragraph except incidentally. My real purpose is to preach a funeral sermon over the remains of an infant industry, an industry that had promise of future development equal to that almost of the cotton industry. I wish to point a moral from its untimely demise.

Mr. Chairman, if you were to ask the first man you met on the street whether it were possible to raise flax in this country suitable for the making of good linen cloth, he doubtless would tell you no. And I have no doubt that any majority member of the Ways and Means Committee would make the same statement from the fund of misinformation that has written this bill. The statement never has been and is not now true. It has always been possible to raise flax in this country suitable for making linen cloth. The difficulty has not been there, but in the fact that the process by which flax straw was made into flax fiber, suitable for spinning, was so disgusting in its nature that American workmen would not engage in it. It was the custom to rot the flax in a river or a small stream to separate the fiber from the chive or gum of the straw.

The result was a condition so disgusting, as I say, that American workmen would not work in it. But in the last four years a chemical process has been discovered by which the former one can be eliminated, and which is performed under conditions suitable to the American workmen. A syndicate of eight gentlemen was formed in Chicago for the purpose of experimentally developing the industry. Out of the fertile acres of the district which I have the honor to represent they chose some hundreds of acres upon which to try the experiment of raising flax for linen cloth. It is only necessary to say here that that experiment proved an unqualified success. The farmers received on the average of $2.95 per acre for the sale of the flax straw in addition to the seed that came from it. Process by process and stage by stage these patriotic men developed the industry until they succeeded in securing a fiber that would produce a linen yarn as fine as 60 lea, a quality very nearly as good as that which is raised in Ireland, Scotland, or France, at a price slightly but not very much higher than the cost of production in those countries. They wished to make this industry distinctly American, from growing the flax to weaving the cloth. These men came to Washington with a view of retaining a duty upon the flax and linen cloth sufficient to permit the industry to live. The hearings are full of the promise of that industry. Yet they were refused the necessary protection, and within the last 10 days they have notified their manager in my district to shut down their mill and cancel the contracts with the farmers.

Mr. Chairman, this industry does not die a natural death. It is murdered at the hands of a ruthless majority, destroyed before its sun had fairly risen in the very morning of its usefulness. The beautiful blue of the flax blossom will no longer adorn the fields, but in its place we shall have the sear and unromantic yellow brown of the oats and the wheat. The music of the mill and the factory turning the flax straw into fiber will be stilled, and in the place of the song of the toiler we shall listen to the plaintive wail of the idler, the tramp, and the beggar. [Applause on the Republican side.]

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask unanimous consent that all debate on this paragraph close in five minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Alabama asks unanimous consent that all debate on this paragraph and amendments thereto close in five minutes. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. CANTRILL and Mr. CAMPBELL rose.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. CANTRILL] is recognized.

Mr. CANTRILL. Mr. Chairman, and gentlemen of the committee, I desire to take a position to-night in striking contrast to the position taken by the gentleman on the other side who has just taken his seat in discussing this schedule of flax and hemp. The district which I represent and the district which is represented by my colleague, Mr. HELM, on the floor of this House produce practically all of the hemp that is grown in the United States. This bill has cut the rate one half. Back in the old days, if I am correctly informed, the tariff on hemp was as high as $60 a ton, and it is now cut under this bill to $10 a ton.

But I want to say to this committee, holding up the farmers of central Kentucky as the true exponents of Democracy, that since this bill was reported I have not had a single letter from a farmer in my district protesting against the action of this committee. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

The farmers in my country realize that to impose a duty of high protection upon jute and manila and other fibers that come in competition with hemp would be to lay a tax upon every grain grower in the country for his binding twine and his sacks, and upon the cotton growers of the South for their burlaps; and the farmers of central Kentucky, the truest Democrats in the country, are not making a single protest, because they are willing to surrender their own particular interests if it is for the common weal and welfare. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

Fellow Representatives, I do not to-night make a request that the grain growers of the West or the cotton growers of the South shall be taxed in order that the hemp growers of Kentucky may grow rich at their expense. [Applause on the Democratic side.] If we are to be sacrificed on the altar for the common good and for the benefit of democracy, well and good. We do not ask that the rest of the country be taxed for our benefit. I commend the example of the farmers of central Kentucky to gentlemen on that side of the House. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the pro forma amendment will be withdrawn. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

275. Hemp, and tow of hemp, one-half cent per pound; hemp, hackled, known as "line of hemp," 1 cent per pound.

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Chairman, I am a little bit surprised at the extremities to which my friend from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD], the chairman of the committee, is driven in his attempts to defend this "indefensible" bill that is now before the House. [Laughter on the Republican side.] It was well illustrated by the speech that he made, closing the debate on the cotton schedule. And, by the way, he said he had been in the party of critics for the Lord knows how long—15 or 20 years—and that we are the critics now, and then he turned around and began to criticize our people. [Laughter on the Republican side.]

He says that the gentleman from Pennsylvania criticizes this bill because the rates of duty in the cotton schedule are not high enough. The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MOORE] was talking about high-priced goods when he said the duties were not high enough, and he was seeking to raise those. Then the gentleman from Alabama said the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. LENROOT] criticized the schedule because the rates were too high. Yet I understood that the gentleman from Wisconsin, or at least the House did, even if the gentleman from Alabama did not, was criticizing the rates on the low-priced goods, the coarse goods, and said they were too high, and also said that the rates on the high-priced goods were not high enough.

Then the gentleman from Alabama gave an account of how he slew some unsuspecting Republican—I think it was in Connecticut—in the campaign last fall. [Laughter on the Republican side.] The Republican was complaining that in 1894 the industries in his community were suspended and the people did not get work. Of course that man was testifying from the facts that he knew and from conditions that he had seen right there in Connecticut when the metal industry was suspended, when he said the shops were idle and the people were not able to find employment. Those were the facts. Then the chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means says he stated to that Republican that the rates in the Wilson bill were as high as the rates in the Dingley bill on the metal schedule, and says that he offered that unsuspecting Republican in Connecticut some book, perhaps of comparison, showing the rates of the two bills, and promised him that if he would find a single rate in that schedule——

Mr. UNDERWOOD. No; I said there were several rates that were different. Stick to it.

Mr. PAYNE. That is the way I understand the gentleman. But I do not care whether it was several rates or a dozen. The gentleman from Alabama promised that if not more than a dozen or so of the rates were not found to be as high in the Wilson bill as in the Dingley bill, he would turn Republican; and he said he has not heard from that man since. [Laughter on the Republican side.] Why, the man after hearing that speech probably did not desire to have him become a Republican. [Renewed laughter on the Republican side.]

Why, if you would examine that schedule you would find 50 rates that were higher in the Dingley bill than in the Wilson bill, and if the committee had put all the rates in the Wilson bill in a column side by side with the rates of the Dingley bill they would find a good many more differences, because there were so many blanks in the Wilson bill. [Laughter on the Republican side.]

Oh, the differences in rates occur along on every page or so. Take it on page 131, lead in sheets: Wilson bill, 32.34 per cent; Dingley bill, 58.89 per cent. In the next paragraph, 54.50 per cent in the Wilson bill, as against 58.71 per cent in the Dingley bill. Go on a little further, and on paragraph 158 you will find 31.77 per cent in the Wilson bill, as against 49.50 per cent in the Dingley bill. Type metal, 31.15 under the Wilson bill and 42.90 under the Dingley bill. And so we go on down the line. We get to some more interesting articles that are made down there in Connecticut; small hand goods. There are lots of them.

Mr. MOORE. I want to call the attention of the gentleman——

Mr. PAYNE. Do not interrupt me. I can point out any number of them. Articles not specially provided for, 35 per cent under the Wilson bill and 45 per cent under the Dingley bill. Lead articles, 35 per cent under the Wilson bill and 45 per cent under the Dingley bill; metal and metal compositions, 35 per cent under the Wilson bill and 45 per cent under the Dingley bill; nickel wares, 35 per cent and 45 per cent; pewter wares, 35 per cent and 45 per cent; platinum wares, tinfoil, zinc wares, 35 per cent and 45 per cent. We will go back further than that.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. PAYNE. Oh, let me read the metal schedule for the information of the gentleman.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I will give you the information right now.

Mr. PAYNE. Now the gentleman gets in to amend his speech. [Laughter.]

Mr. UNDERWOOD. No; I am going to amend the gentleman from New York—not my speech. I never did understand how the Republicans ran their heads on the rock, which they did four years ago, until to-night. Here is a distinguished gentleman, a gentleman of charming personality, and we could not understand how he made the mistake he did in writing the Payne bill until to-night. My distinguished friend from New York has served more years on the Ways and Means Committee than any other man that has ever served on it as chairman, and yet he gets up here and tries to contradict my statement by reading to you the ad valorem equivalent. Now, I will ask my friend, Was not the tax on pig iron under the Wilson bill $4 a ton, and was it not $4 a ton under the Dingley bill?

Mr. PAYNE. Oh, I can not repeat from memory the schedules of the Wilson bill that I have not read now in these 20 years.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. My friend knows it was; but he reads you the ad valorem equivalent, as if the price of pig iron never changed. [Laughter on the Democratic side.] Because the specific rate, when worked into the price of the ad valorem equivalent, very clearly makes a change. And the distinguished new member of the Ways and Means Committee, the gentleman from Pennsylvania, was rampant to join his colleague from New York and point out the difference in the ad valorem equivalent of specific rates in different years. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

Now, of course, my friend knows that the rate on pig iron was the same under the Wilson bill and the Dingley bill; yet I find the ad valorem equivalent in 1896 under the Wilson bill was 22 per cent and a fraction, and under the Dingley bill it was 27 per cent. So you can go on through the schedules. You can take all of these rates, and you will find that——

Mr. PAYNE. Come down to paragraph 130.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. There are one or two places——

Mr. PAYNE. You have only picked out one so far where the specific rate was the same.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I will read you some more if you want to hear them.

Mr. MOORE. Take the upholstery schedule.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. You will find, if you go right through this schedule on these various rates, that the specific rates were the same in all except a few differences, and here is the book right in my hand; but when you come to the ad valorem equivalent, of course you find the difference, because the ad valorem equivalent of the various iron and steel articles changes with the change in price, which change in price produces a different ad valorem equivalent, which the gentleman from New York, when he is reminded of the fact, knows just as well as I do.

Mr. PAYNE. Yes; and you know that the rates were different just as well as I do. [Laughter on the Republican side.]

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from New York [Mr. PAYNE] and the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] seem to have some difference of opinion with regard to the relative rates of the Dingley bill and the Wilson bill. In a way both of the gentlemen are no doubt in some degree correct; but as a matter of fact the controversy between them is, in my opinion, relatively unimportant. The real question, the one that interested the American people most tremendously, was what happened under the Wilson bill and what occurred under the Dingley bill. [Applause on the Republican side.] My dear friend from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] may have proved to his satisfaction, may have drawn the wool over the eyes of the gentleman in Connecticut without intending to do it, with regard to the rates, but he did not attempt to disprove the only really imporant fact in the equation presented by the Connecticut ironmaster.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. That a Republican panic was on.

Mr. MONDELL. And that was that the gentleman's industry was paralyzed under the Wilson bill and it was not to him material whether the rate was high or low.

My recollection is—and if I am not correct I hope some of these tariff sharps will correct me—that the average ad valorem under the present Payne law is lower than the average ad valorem under the Wilson bill of infamous memory. Under the one, depression, idle mills, 4,000,000 men out of employment, Coxey's army, soup houses, sheriff's sales, and a depleted and nearly bankrupt Treasury. Under the other, abundant revenue, prosperity, overflowing and spreading to every corner of the land, the people generally prosperous and contented. And yet the rates in the one that brought prosperity on the average lower than in the one that brought disaster. Why? Because one was drawn and framed in accordance with a logical, well understood, and clearly defined principle of protection and the other an attempt to fulfill impossible promises, a sectional makeshift, lame, halting, high here, low there, misfit, no matter what the rates were they disarranged the industries of a mighty Nation, and started its people on the road to the poorhouse. [Applause on the Republican side.]

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. I do not want to take up the time of the House in debating an ancient proposition, but I do not think we are justified in letting the few remarks which have been made by the gentleman from Wyoming go unnoticed. It is difficult to drive into the head of any Republican that the Wilson bill did not go on the statute books until August, 1894. Everybody knows, and it has been told to the gentleman so often that his memory has failed him again, that when President Harrison went out of the White House the bonds were printed and waiting for signature to take care of the deficit left by the Republican administration. [Applause on the Democratic side.] Everybody but the gentleman from Wyoming knows that a Republican panic was in full blast, banks failing from one end of this country to the other, in June and July of 1893, more than a year before this Wilson bill went on the statute books, and before the Democratic Congress was called in session for any purpose.

Mr. MONDELL. In anticipation of it.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I knew my friend from Wyoming would say that, because we have served here together for two decades and this is not the first time he has made this speech; it is an annual production. [Laughter on the Democratic side.] And after his attention is called to the fact that the panic occurred a year before he locates his soup houses and before the Wilson bill went upon the statute books, he always throws up his hands and comes back with the same reply and says it was in anticipation of Democratic action. [Laughter.] But I want to say to my friend if that was all there was in it the country has had more than six months to anticipate the continuation in power of the Democratic Party for the next half century [applause on the Democratic side] and the soup houses have not opened up yet. [Laughter.]

Mr. MONDELL. The gentleman does not understand it; the people think it will last but two years, and they are keeping up their courage. [Laughter.]

Mr. UNDERWOOD. They are looking down on this House, and they know that the aggregation on the Republican side will never get together in two years. [Laughter.]

The CHAIRMAN. The pro forma amendment will be withdrawn, and the Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

276. Single yarns made of jute, not finer than five lea or number, 15 per cent ad valorem; if finer than five lea or number and yarns made of jute not otherwise specially provided for in this section, 25 per cent ad valorem.

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. The gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. CANTRILL] says that the farmers of that State are willing and ready, if need be, to be sacrificed upon the altar of Democratic Party expediency. Mr. Chairman, the Republican Party does not expect the farmer to permit himself to be manacled and led to slaughter on the altar of the expediency of the Republican Party; it does not believe in destroying industry. But, Mr. Chairman, I did not have an opportunity when I was on my feet before to point the moral which would naturally follow as a conclusion of the little story I tried to relate. If the Republican Party were in power it would have prospered and encouraged this little industry in my district until we would have a flax mill in every hamlet, a linen mill in every village. The Democratic Party has destroyed it in its youth and vigor; nothing could more eloquently point out the difference in policy. The Republican Party believes in life, development, and progress. The Democratic policy leads to death, destruction, and decay. Yes; the farmers of Minnesota will still till their fields and tend their flocks and herds, but if, where peace, plenty, and prosperity now reign supreme, want, worry, and weariness shall raise their ghoulish heads, the farmers of Minnesota will know where to place the responsibility and will exact the full penalty from those who are responsible.

Mr. BARNHART. Mr. Chairman, for a week or two I have observed with a good deal of interest the inundation of high-tariff crocodile tears on that side of the House, and when I think of all that have been shed by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MOORE], the gentleman from Wyoming [Mr. MONDELL], and the others, not including the old high-protection war horses down on the front seat there, it seems to me there has been enough of that sort of copiousness to float all of the battleships that Capt. HOBSON would build, if he could, in the next quarter of a century. I very well recall, as a newspaper man, the scarecrow efforts of the Republican leaders and the Republican press in 1893-94, at the time of the panic, and I want to call special attention to the difference in the patriotism as displayed by the Republican leaders and press at that time and that displayed by the Democratic leaders and Democratic press during the panic of 1907-8. In 1893-94 every Republican orator and every Republican newspaper wailed calamity, calamity, calamity, in ghoulish glee, without regard to results.

In 1907-8 when the Republican panic came upon us, when the business of the country was utterly paralyzed, the Democrats everywhere, Democratic press and Democratic patriots, begged of their constituents to stand back of the banks, to be manly, to be patriotic, and to save the country from the national peril which engulfed it. The result was that we finally wiggled through by Democrats helping to hold up where Republicans would have torn down.

These Republican calamity promoters, as you might call them, have been talking all sorts of scare stuff. Why, these old Republican leaders down here, these biased men, have been talking high tariff from a holier than thou attitude all these years.

The other day I heard the statement of an earnest high tariffite, who said he had a camp in Mexico during the summer months, and that while there he bought half a carcass of beef twice a week, for which he paid 4½ cents a pound. He said the other half of that carcass was taken just across the line into the United States and sold for 35 cents a pound, and you high tariffites applauded.

The tariff on that beef, according to the statement of the chairman, was about 6 cents a pound ad valorem, but according to the statement of the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. GARDNER] it was 1½ cents a pound specific. The cost of the carcass being 4½ cents a pound, if you estimate the tariff at the maximum of 6 cents a pound, that would make the beef cost 10½ cents plus freight within the United States line, where it was sold for 35 cents, leaving a profit of twenty-odd cents a pound for shipping that meat across the line from Mexico into the United States. It seems to me that if such conditions prevail—and I am not disputing anybody's word, for I have no reason to do so—a man could go there and make more profit than any moneybag in Wall Street. And many other high-tariff arguments made here figure out the same seemly way.

Mr. MONDELL. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BARNHART. No; I can not yield, because I have not taken any time, while the gentleman from Wyoming has taken nearly all the time. To the gentlemen from Wyoming and Iowa and Pennsylvania and Washington, especially, who have been juggling facts and screaming calamity in this debate, and who pretend to have fear in their hearts of direful calamities to come, I wish to recite a little verse that my old friend Gen. SHERWOOD gave me the other day, and which illustrates their pretended peril:

There was a man named Joseph Cable,
Who bought a goat, just for his stable;
One day the goat, too prone to dine,
Ate a red shirt, right off the line.
Then Cable to the goat did say,
"Your time has come; you'll die this day."
And took him to the railroad track,
And there he bound him on his back.
The train then came, and the whistle blew;
And the goat well knew his time was due,
But with a mighty shriek of pain,
Coughed up the shirt and flagged the train.

Gentlemen, you are not half as bad off as you think you are, or as you pretend to be, for you may yet cough it up. [Prolonged laughter and applause.]

Mr. PETERS. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate on this paragraph close in five minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Massachusetts asks unanimous consent that all debate on the paragraph and all amendments thereto close in five minutes. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. MOORE. A little while ago I had the pleasure of listening, as you did, to that splendid speciment of Georgia statesship, the chairman of the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce [Mr. ADAMSON], whose oratory is sui generis, and who has a style like unto which there is none other in this House. He denounced the Republicans for standing up for their industries and gave us a homily upon the honesty and integrity of the Democratic Party upon the tariff question. And now comes the goat story of my friend the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. BARNHART]. I anticipated that story and find it most appropriate to illustrate the Democratic position, in Texas at least, by an effusion which is the result of the day's deliberations. I would match the Sherwood poem recited by the gentleman from Indiana with—

GARNER'S GOAT OF TEXAS.

Of all the creatures in the land,
Of pedigrees supremely grand,
There's none that do respect command
Like Garner's goat of Texas.

The modest sheep may browse around
From Maine way out to Puget Sound,
But they don't count a cent a pound
With Garner's goat of Texas.

The noble steer may be of use
If freed from tyrant trust abuse;
But even that would be the deuce
To Garner's goat of Texas.

If you want wool, the wool is fair;
If you want hair, the wool is hair;
If you want meat, the meat is there!
That's Garner's goat of Texas.

So, while you kick the wool of sheep,
And beef and mutton make so cheap,
Protective tariff now will keep
The Garner goat of Texas.

Oh, wondrous breed of Lone Star State,
Premier of wool and hair, thy rate
Of 10 per cent is truly great—
Thou Garner's goat of Texas!

[Laughter and applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The pro forma amendment will be withdrawn, and the Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

280. Gill nettings, nets, webs, and seines made of flax, hemp, or ramie, or a mixture of any of them, or of which any of them is the component material of chief value, 30 per cent ad valorem.

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. But I rose more particularly to refer to a few remarks made in one of the infrequent intervals in which the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. ADAMSON] has honored us with his presence. He has been abusing the Republican Party for so long and in such unmeasured terms that while he has not been here much during the debate he imagines that we must have been abusing the gentlemen on the other side as he habitually abuses us. For fear nothing of that kind had occurred in his absence he concluded his interesting remarks by referring to us as he ordinarily does, the mildest term used being, as I recall, something like robbers, looters, despoilers, partners of the wicked trusts, and agents of special interests.

Now, the fact is that during this discussion, so far as I have heard it, no one on this side has said anything that brought into question the motives of anyone on the other side. We are assuming that, misguided as you are, you are trying in your poor, misguided way to carry out some impossible promises you have made. But it is just barely possible that not here but elsewhere, after this bill passes and has been analyzed, some people will suggest this, that, while the bill may have been drawn in good faith, it was drawn with devilish ingenuity. Some may suggest that industries were sacrificed without benefit of clergy, certain regions left with all of their opportunities for development taken from them, and all so artfully as not to entirely wipe out a Democratic majority in the country.

The newspapers are blessed with free print paper, without regard to the effect on the American makers of paper, who, however, only occupy a few districts, which are probably Republican anyway. The woolgrower is not expected to affect many districts, and the sugar grower of Louisiana is a Democrat, anyway, whatever you do to him. As for the beet-sugar grower, it may be suggested by some one that he has not enough influence to greatly change congressional representation, and thus jeopardize your control.

And then there are the powerful automobile makers. Our tariff of 45 per cent on the machine and all its parts compelled their manufacture here. Your rate of 45 per cent on the complete machine gives the manufacturer control of the market. Your rates of 20 and 30 per cent on parts gives the manufacturer a chance to import an automobile complete, except tires and name plate, at an average rate of less than 25 per cent. The powerful and influential manufacturer has a high protection—the workman who makes the parts whistles for a job; but the workman has not much influence, some folks think, while the automobile manufacturer is most influential and the largest advertiser in newspapers and magazines in the country. Some folks may think this all looks very peculiar.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Wyoming [Mr. MONDELL] has expired.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, we have enjoyed ourselves with our political debates for two hours, and I would like to address myself to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] and the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. MURDOCK] in order to see if we can not agree to swap tobacco between the lines, and do business for an hour, read the bill, and confine ourselves to the actual amendments.

Mr. MANN. I am quite willing to have the rule enforced, so far as I am concerned, for the balance of the evening session.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I would like to read down to the wool schedule if I can.

Mr. MANN. I think that is desirable, too. There are some amendments that will be offered and discussed on this side.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I do not mean to cut out amendments, but if we can have an understanding for an hour we will——

Mr. MANN. I am quite willing that the gentleman shall confine himself to the rule for the next hour.

Mr. MURDOCK. The gentleman does not intend to go into Schedule K to-night?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. No.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

281. Floor mattings, plain, fancy, or figured, including mats and rugs, manufactured from straw, round or split, or other vegetable substances, not otherwise provided for in this section, and having a warp of cotton, hemp, or other vegetable substances, including what are commonly known as China, Japan, and India straw matting, 2½ cents per square yard.

Mr. MOORE and Mr. STEVENS of Minnesota rose.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. STEVENS].

Mr. STEVENS of Minnesota. Mr. Chairman, I desire to offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Minnesota offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend, page 71, paragraph 281, lines 12 and 13, by striking out the words "including mats and rugs."

Mr. STEVENS of Minnesota. Mr. Chairman, I am very glad that the hilarity of the occasion has been dispensed with, so that we can now get some information concerning the amendments which I shall offer, since they concern some important business enterprises and a large number of good citizens in our section of the country and the good and cheap living of our citizens everywhere. There is possibly some inconsistency between the words which would be the subject of the amendment which I offer, "including mats and rugs manufactured from straw, round or split, or other vegetable substances not otherwise provided for in this section," and the paragraph below, which provides for mats and rugs made of flax, hemp, jute, and other vegetable fibers. Apparently the paragraphs seek to make a distinction between the products of vegetable substances, on the one hand, and vegetable fibers on the other. This difference may be sound and sensible to a botanist, but not to the average American business man when it imperils his industry.

This paragraph 281 changes existing law by including "mats and rugs" within its provision along with mattings of the same material, and differentiates them from the paragraph below, which includes the general subject of mats and rugs though of kindred materials and for exactly the same use. My amendment is designed to place the mats and rugs where naturally they would seem to belong, in the paragraph covering the general subject of mats and rugs. Whether this classification and grouping is sound and fair depends on the viewpoint. If the sole object is to bring into one class articles of the same material, irrespective of the business situation, use, and consequences, then, of course, we must submit. But if natural and necessary business conditions and uses and the proper revenue to be obtained and the proper values of the articles should be considered, then the committee is wrong and the items should be changed. The particular reason why this ought to be done is, briefly, this: The mats and rugs which would be covered by the amendment which I have offered and the one which I will offer to the next paragraph come into competition with those made in this country, known as Crex or wire grass rugs, made in Minnesota and Wisconsin. The mats and rugs made in China, Japan, and India, covered by my amendment, are made by the cheapest sort of oriental labor and in surroundings often filthy and sometimes bearing disease.

The labor in the Orient receives a wage of from 17½ to 25 and 30 cents a day, while the rugs and mats with which they compete here in this country are made by a high class of white labor of our own people, paid from $1.90 to $3 and $4 a day, and in new and most modern and sanitary factories and from the most cleanly and healthful materials.

Two of the large factories are in the district which I have the honor to represent, but of course there are others competing strongly for our domestic trade, which has developed within the last few years and really constitutes one of the industries which are of great benefit to our whole section of the country. It is not merely a local industry. I do not plead for that, but it is an industry which has aided in the development of some of our farming districts by utilizing wire grass, a waste product heretofore, and thus has increased fivefold the value of such lands and furnish remunerative and diversified employment to many hundred men in our rural districts. The factories in our cities employ a high and deserving class of our people and supply a cleanly and cheap and very artistic floor covering which our people did not get before and would not secure if you allow it to be supplanted by the cheaper, doubtful, and less durable and valuable competing product of the Orient.

Now, this paragraph reduces the rate from the existing law that would cover this sort of material from about 7½ cents to 10 cents a yard to 2½ cents a yard, or at least 66⅔ to 75 per cent. The committee must realize and their hearings clearly show that the present rate and conditions are highly competitive and absolutely necessary for the existence of this important industry. The existing tariff on a standard 12-yard rug is about $1.09, while the difference of labor cost alone is more than $1.22. So the rate in this paragraph is utterly inadequate and will be ruinous, and for that reason it is difficult to conceive why this particular class of grass mats and rugs are singled out from all of the other classes, from other fibers, and included in this paragraph, where naturally they would not belong. So for that reason, for the reason of giving an industry that is struggling for existence a fair chance, preventing misapprehension, and preventing difficulty and litigation in the future and making a logical arrangement of these two paragraphs, I have ventured to suggest this amendment, and trust that the committee will consider it. Now, these mats and rugs are in the basket clause and have a tariff rate of about 20 per cent. There is no complaint about that rate. But you reduce this rate to 2½ cents per yard, which would be from 5 to 10 per cent, and this you realize would be practically nothing, and be ruinous to this new and struggling industry. The sole reason of more convenient classification by the customs officials on account of the material of which it is composed should not be a sufficient reason for the committee to consign a very deserving and struggling industry to the cemetery. Rather should your committee indicate its purpose to place all materials and articles together which properly can be, and articles of kindred materials and for the same use together, as my amendment seeks to do.

I realize that the committee have already considered this subject. I have read the hearings. But at the same time it should be understood that the people in several States are vitally interested in successfully carrying on the industry which has been started so auspiciously, and we earnestly urge the very best consideration for the amendments I have offered. I only seek to continue the policy laid down by the distinguished chairman of the committee—that of a fair, competitive tariff. We do not ask more. You have given us far less now as well as an inconvenient and illogical arrangement. But by classing all rugs and mattings together, striking them out of paragraph 281 and including all of them in paragraph 282, you thus place together all articles for the same use of kindred materials and which compete with each other. My amendments striking out the words "including mats and rugs" from paragraph 281 and including "grass and its substitutes," after "flax," in paragraph 282, accomplishing all of these very desirable purposes, and I very much hope they will be acceptable to the committee.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I desire to say that this amendment was placed here intentionally. Heretofore, under the Payne bill, these manufactures of mats and rugs fell under paragraph 463, in the sundry schedule, and we had that same paragraph in this bill on sundries, where, if the gentleman's motion should prevail and they were stricken out of this paragraph they would fall at 25 per cent under the sundry schedule, and the rate now is higher than that.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman permit an interruption?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Yes.

Mr. MANN. Would they not fall under paragraph 282? The next paragraph is "Mats and rugs made of flax, hemp, jute, or other vegetable fiber except cotton."

Mr. UNDERWOOD. No; I have the book here. They fell in paragraph 463, and that was put in intentionally. If the motion of the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. STEVENS] prevailed, they would now fall in paragraph 379 and be taxed at 25 per cent. As a matter of fact, they have a better rate where they are. But the purpose of putting them in here and putting a specific rate on this particular paragraph was to prevent the undervaluation of these mats and rugs that have been complained of, mostly coming from Japan; and the gentleman's motion, if it prevailed, would have the effect of reducing the rate under which they are taxed in this bill.

Mr. MANN. Of course, if the gentleman's motion should prevail, a further motion could be offered. Does the gentleman from Alabama happen to be familiar with the grass-mat industry that has grown up in the Northwest?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I will say to the gentleman that I have no detailed knowledge about it; but the matter came up in the hearings in our committee and was discussed, and the expert of the Treasury Department, Mr. Nevius, prepared this provision and it was intended to bring the basket and mat provision from the sundry schedule and place it here.

Mr. STEVENS of Minnesota. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman allow me to ask him a question?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Certainly.

Mr. STEVENS of Minnesota. Would not this cover the subject that the gentleman has in mind? In the next paragraph, after the word "flax," insert the words "grass and substitutes therefor." Would not that cover the subject?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. It might carry it to a higher rate here, but it would throw these Japanese mats into a paragraph where they never have been heretofore and where they do not belong, because they are not composed of the same fiber.

Mr. STEVENS of Minnesota. But that is what the gentleman is doing now.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. No. We are simply bringing them back to the paragraph with the other manufactures of straw, whereas, they not being mentioned in the old law, the courts have held that they fall in paragraph 463, in sundries.

Mr. STEVENS of Minnesota. But, Mr. Chairman, these mats that I have in mind, that would be covered by the language I suggest, are not the mats provided for in that paragraph. They are not the same kind of mats. They are not a cheap, ordinary kind of mat, but they are a high-grade mat, made from grass.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. The decisions of the courts do not sustain the gentleman in that. The decisions of the courts threw them into the sundry schedule.

Mr. STEVENS of Minnesota. But the decisions of the courts would have to follow the language of the gentleman's law.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. They would if we changed the law. We changed it to carry them into the same paragraph as the other class of straw carpeting. It was simply that the words were left out of that paragraph.

Mr. STEVENS of Minnesota. These mats and rugs cost, ordinarily, between 25 and 40 cents a yard. You make the duty only 2½ cents, or less than 10 per cent.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. We may differ on the rates——

Mr. STEVENS of Minnesota. You place them in the wrong class. You should not place them in the class with very cheap material.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. We were advised by the importers and experts who were interested in the matter and who appeared before us in the hearings that they did belong there, and we put them there for that reason.

I ask that all debate on this paragraph be closed in five minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Alabama asks unanimous consent that debate on this paragraph close in five minutes.

Mr. MOORE. I want to offer an amendment. I do not care to discuss it.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. MANAHAN. Mr. Chairman, I think the chairman of the committee is in error when he states that the experts who were heard at the hearings classified the Japanese importations in the schedule in which they are placed. I have before me the testimony taken at the hearing when Mr. Wirtz, one of the importers referred to, I presume, testified as follows:

> For about five years we have been experimenting in Japan with the manufacture of a rug similar to this. It is not made of the same material—

He was referring to the Crex rug manufactured in Minnesota—> and it is probably not, at least at present, as good an article. It costs laid down here, duty paid, at the present time, practically the same as the domestic.

Later on, on page 3791:

> Mr. WIRTZ. Those are under the 35 per cent duty. Under that 35 per cent duty, foreign competition has not been a factor.
> Mr. HARRISON. What figure do you suggest?
> Mr. WIRTZ. We suggest 5 cents per square yard.

He afterwards said that 5 cents a yard was equivalent to 20 per cent. Then he made this statement:

> We claim that if the consumers are to have the benefit of foreign competition—and I believe the idea is to make the duty a competitive one—that it will have to be reduced, because at 35 per cent it has been shown that the manufacturers in foreign countries are not able to produce an article at a price that will compete with the domestic.

This is the testimony of a man who was partial to the importation of these competitive Japanese rugs, and he says that at 5 cents per square yard they could compete. Now, I can not understand how the committee could make the rate on this article, sent in here from Japan and China to compete with the domestic manufacture, half the rate suggested.

Mr. HARRISON of New York. The gentleman will hardly maintain that the Japanese floor matting comes into direct competition with these single-piece Crex straw rugs.

Mr. MANN. Not in ordinary form.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. On the Pacific coast the Japanese rugs do come into competition under this very tariff, and that applies to a great many articles. We hear a great deal about the railroad rate protecting various products as against the Japanese. On the Pacific coast the contrary is true. The Crex rug can hardly be sold at all on the Pacific coast on account of the difference in the cost of transportation.

Mr. MANAHAN. Mr. Chairman, I wish to make this observation in support of the amendment transferring mats and rugs made of grass from paragraph 281 to paragraph 282: Here is an importer upon the strength of whose testimony the 2½ cents per square yard is imposed by this bill. As I have shown by this testimony taken by the committee, he himself puts them as competitive with the domestic article under a rate of 5 cents per square yard. He refers to them as being competitive when coming in from Japan and China under a rate of 5 cents per square yard, and complains of the present duty of 35 per cent ad valorem as unfair to the importers. Naturally that is his argument, but he himself volunteers to the committee the only testimony that the committee has where a figure is named, as far as I can find, and he says that 5 cents a yard would be fairly competitive. Yet in the face of that testimony by a great importer of these Japanese rugs this committee puts the rate at 2½ cents—one-half the figure suggested by him. What chance has a domestic manufacturer when his competitor can bring in his goods under a rate only one-half as high as he himself considers competitive?

Mr. Chairman, when you consider the fact that these rugs are made in China and Japan by laborers working at from 17½ to 25 cents a day, as shown by this very testimony, in competition with white men working in Minnesota for approximately $2 a day—practically eight times as high wages paid by the domestic manufacturer—it is clear that this is glaringly defective as a schedule. Labor is a very important item in the manufacture of rugs and mats of this character.

The raw material in this country, as well as in China and Japan, is comparatively cheap. Many men are employed in cutting the wire grass from lands which would be otherwise practically valueless. Many men are employed in the factory weaving and making rugs. In this country the work is done by farmers and other high-class laboring men, among the best of our citizens. In Asia the work is done by a cheap, low type of man at a miserable wage, approximately one-eighth of what we pay. In this country the grass is cut from clean, new fields, handled by clean white men and women in clean, well-ventilated factories, and the result is a clean and sanitary rug upon which little children can with safety play in the homes of our country. In Asia the material for these rugs is gathered from ancient fields, saturated with the germ-laden refuse of the countless ages of an overcongested race of inferior men. The work is done over there by the dirty hands of a subnormal type of an inferior race, and the rugs and mats when made are stored in all sorts of places and shipped in old ships with other unwholesome cargoes of the Orient, and when they finally reach the homes of the American people they are not clean or sanitary or fit to be played upon by our children.

Furthermore, all the money that is paid for these imported rugs and mats goes to China and Japan and stays there forever. The money paid for the rugs and mats of our factories stays in this country in continual service of the people. It is not fair to make a rate that will discourage or destroy this new and important industry built up in the Northwest. It is not statesmanship to legislate for the benefit of foreigners. It is not honest if this particular schedule was designed to enable large importers in New York to drive our own producers out of their legitimate markets. And whether that was the purpose of the men who urged the change or not it will have that effect. This reduction will lessen the revenue of the Government and benefit no one but the importers of Japan and New York. It is indefensible on the theory of competition and unfair as a matter of economy. I say more than that. This schedule bears upon its face the evidence of having been made without regard to the showing of facts, without regard to the rights of the domestic producer, but in solicitous consideration of the profits of selfish importers. They talk about reducing the cost to the consumer, apparently oblivious of the fact that reducing the cost to the consumers of this country will benefit no one if at the same time they reduce the producing power of the same people to a corresponding degree. Legislation destructive of domestic enterprise, laws that handicap producers, rates that favor foreigners are all unwise beyond telling. It does no good to make things cheap if the people generally have nothing with which to buy even cheap things. There must be a husbanding of our resources within our own borders, a stopping of leaks to foreign lands.

We must, of course, change laws that take from our people for the benefit of a few of our own selfish citizens, but our changes must not go so far as to put our men—men who toil—on a level contest with the degraded men of a decadent nation like China. We must not legislate like blind dreamers. Tax laws should be made according to fair business principles based on facts as they are. I hope this amendment will be accepted. It is simple justice—that is all.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendemnt offered by the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. STEVENS].

The question was taken, and the amendment was lost.

Mr. MOORE. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

On page 71, line 17, after the word "matting," strike out "2½ cents" and insert "3 cents."

Mr. MOORE. This is to give additional protection.

The question was taken, and the amendment was lost.

The Clerk read as follows:

282. Carpets, carpeting, mats and rugs made of flax, hemp, jute, or other vegetable fiber (except cotton), 35 per cent ad valorem.

Mr. STEVENS of Minnesota. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

On page 71, line 19, amend by adding after the word "flax" the words "grass and substitutes therefor."

Mr. STEVENS of Minnesota. Mr. Chairman, I realize somewhat the problem which the committee has had, and I have tried to meet it by carrying out their theories of classification and grouping by providing clearly that the first paragraph relating to this subject, No. 281, should cover mattings made from vegetable substances, while the second paragraph, No. 282, should cover mats and rugs of all descriptions, and with a sufficient identification and inclusion of materials so that there shall not be any opportunity for fraud or misdescription. I think we all agree that this is desirable, and I have no disposition, and I would not urge the amendment if I thought it would accomplish any such result as fraud on the Treasury. But the inclusion of wire-grass rugs and mats under the rate of 2½ cents per square yard is a very gross injustice. The cheaper grades of floor mattings should not have a higher rate, but the better grade and entirely different kind of floor covering, such as wire-grass mats and rugs, certainly needs a different rate and class.

I think the language I have drawn clearly provides for this difference. The definition of each class is clear and distinct. A mat and rug covering a limited surface is an entirely different article from matting, which is extended and requires cutting and fitting. The mats or rugs made of grass or substitutes for grass are made from high grade of straw, such as is grown in the Orient—in China, Japan, or Formosa—for that purpose. That kind of an article is well known and defined, and if any court or appraiser has made a mistake in the past this language will bring them back to the right position and indicate what should be the proper class and rate; it would thus put this industry in our own country in a position to meet the intensely severe competition from the Orient.

Now, if the gentlemen of the committee are sincere in desiring competitive conditions between the oriental products and similar products in this country, considering all the different problems of labor and distribution, here is an opportunity to use as a practical example a legitimate industry which is doing the best it can to solve some of the conditions of decent and economical living by providing a cheap, sanitary, and durable floor covering of good appearance and made of clean and healthful materials. So far these companies engaged in this business have developed an entirely new industry, are utilizing materials entirely waste before, and without any great profit. Why, the profits of this concern average only about 8 per cent per annum, while the profits of the importers of the competing products average more than 10 per cent on their goods. It does seem that our own citizens, taking the risk and making the development, employing our own citizens, should be entitled to an equal show with the importers of competing oriental products. These importers, under the rates which you have in the bill, would have an interest in developing the industry in China and Japan instead of in this country, and would greatly push these foreign goods, because it would be for their advantage to do so. I append to my remarks some advertisements of these foreign rugs competing with the domestic, to show this is what is actually going on. The customers receive no advantage of lower prices, but the dealers get larger profits, and so will push the foreign rugs. The language of my amendment is now so clear as to relieve the apprehension which the chairman of the committee has as to confusion and hereafter placing these articles in the wrong class. This would take them out of the basket clause and put them clearly where they belong, among certain classes of material made of vegetable fiber and of a certain kindred kind and shape, and all for a certain well-known and defined specific purpose, which can not be mistaken. That is, by taking all mats and rugs out of paragraph 281, it confines such paragraph to the general subject of mattings of straw and other vegetable substances. So, by including in the general subject of mats and rugs paragraph 282, all mats and rugs of flax, grass, and substitutes therefor are called for in my amendment, it makes it very clear that kindred articles should be treated together and alike.

[From Washington Post of Sunday, May 4, 1913.]

Summer floor coverings to replace those of winter.

The spring cleaning should include the replacing of winter rugs and floor covering with these cool summer ones. Not much to pay here.

Wool fiber rugs, in green, olive, red, and brown; neat all-over and medallion designs; also plain centers, with Walls of Troy border; noted for their durability. Size, 9 by 12 feet; $8 values. Monday, choice at $5.95.

Japanese matting rugs, in attractive woven-in designs; very effective for summer use. Size, 9 by 12 feet; $5 values. Monday, for $3.19.

6 by 9 foot size	$1.59
3 by 6 foot size	.59
27 by 54 inch size	.29

Grass matting rugs, a comprehensive display of these, embracing colors of green, blue, red, and brown; plain and striped borders. Sizes and prices as follows:

54 inches by 90 inches	$2.10
6 feet by 9 feet	3.50
8 feet by 10 feet	5.25
9 feet by 12 feet	7.00
9 feet by 12 feet	9.10
12 feet by 15 feet	12.95
Stenciled rugs.
54 inches by 90 inches	$2.45
6 feet by 9 feet	4.15
8 feet by 10 feet	6.10
9 feet by 12 feet	8.10
12 feet by 15 feet	10.10

Spot deliveries of "Dixie" grass rugs for the present retail season.

Always on the alert for something new and good, merchants everywhere were quick to appreciate the merits of our "Dixie" grass rugs, the latest entrant in the race for supremacy in goods of this class.

A twisted weave of selected grass, cleverly put together, durable, handsomely designed, beautifully colored and smooth in surface, made of very superior materials, attractively priced, the success of the "Dixie" grass rugs was assured from the outset.

The first product of the looms was sold last year within a few days. Production facilities were enlarged, and we are now in a position to make immediate deliveries of all patterns and colorings.

Special terms of shipment.

Stock carried in New York and St. Paul warehouses. From St. Paul we make free delivery to any common overland point of orders aggregating 210 pounds or more.

We of course have a color catalogue, and it will afford us pleasure to send you a copy. Write for it to-day.

Resolution urging the Congress of the United States to take the necessary steps for the establishing of a Federal telegraph and telephone system rendering a local and interstate service.

Whereas the telegraph and telephone are ever-increasing public necessities; and

Whereas these services could be more certainly and more fairly rendered under a system of Government ownership of these utilities: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the city council of the city of Minneapolis, That it is the judgment of the council that the time is ripe for the acquisition of these utilities by the Government of the United States, and that the Congress of the United States be urged to take the necessary steps for the establishing of a Federal telegraph and telephone system rendering a local and interstate service, such as is rendered by the Post Office Department; and be it further

Resolved, That the city clerk be directed to send copies of this resolution to the Senate and the House of Representatives and to the Senators from Minnesota and Representative from the fifth congressional district.

Passed April 11, 1913.

KARL DELAITTRE,
President of the Council.

Attest:

HENRY N. KNOTT, City Clerk.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, just a word. I do not know whether any member of the committee has had any occasion to have his attention especially called to this grass mat, which I believe is called Crex, a name given to it by the manufacturer. It is an industry which has been developed somewhat in Minnesota, making a fancy sort of mat out of grass that was not utilized before, and which being established, as I understand they are now, it is being copied in Japan, where they can produce it undoubtedly a little cheaper, and producing a little cheaper grade of mat than is made here.

The rate that is fixed here in the bill would be a very low ad valorem rate, 2½ cents a square yard, and while I do not expect that the committee will agree to an amendment offhand with reference to the subject, I am quite sure that if the committee will have the opportunity to make any investigation of this, they will see that it is desirable, both from a revenue standpoint and from our standpoint, a protective standpoint, to raise the rates somewhat on that Crex grass matting, because, if it be not raised, I am quite positive the Japanese will drive the people here out of business, and then probably after that all we will get will be ordinary Japanese floor matting. Of course, this is not in competition in the main with Japanese floor matting. I do not know whether the gentleman happened to notice it or not, but at one time down town at one of the stores there was a large amount of this Crex matting on exhibition in one of the windows. I took the trouble, having a little curiosity, to satisfy that curiosity in regard to it. It was a new industry and making quite a development. I think it is quite a desirable thing to aid an industry of that sort.

Mr. HARRISON of New York. Mr. Chairman, the witnesses before the committee did produce some imitations that the Japanese had made, but I am bound to say that they were very poor imitations. In the first place, the Japanese have not the wire grass that grows in Minnesota, and in the next place, the dyeing was of a very inferior quality, so altogether I think no one would hesitate about which to choose as between the two rugs. That is as far as the Japanese have gone up to date.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman says no one would hesitate, but after all nearly every one does hesitate between buying a thing which is a little expensive and one which is very much less expensive, which looks like it. The gentleman from New York and I may proceed upon the theory that it is economy to pay a little more for an article, but I apprehend the majority of people unfortunately do not proceed on that theory, but that where two articles look alike and are apparently very much the same, they will be very apt to buy the cheaper article and drive the other out of competition with it.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Minnesota.

The question was taken, and the amendment was rejected.

The Clerk read as follows:

285. Linoleum, plain, stamped, painted, or printed, including corticine and cork carpet, figured or plain, also linoleum known as granite and oak plank, 30 per cent ad valorem; inlaid linoleum, 35 per cent ad valorem; oilcloth for floors, plain, stamped, painted, or printed, 20 per cent ad valorem; mats or rugs made of oilcloth, linoleum, corticine, or cork carpet shall be subject to the same rate of duty as herein provided for oilcloth, linoleum, corticine, or cork carpet.

Mr. MOORE. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word in order to get some information. I would like the attention of the gentleman from Alabama. The manufacture of linoleum is a very large industry, and I would offer amendments if I thought they would pass. I want the gentleman to state his position in regard to one or two propositions. Linoleum is made largely of linseed oil and burlap. Burlap was formerly on the free list. It comes in from India, because it is not profitable to make it in this country. Placing burlap on the dutiable list, of course, makes it more difficult for the manufacturer of linoleum to obtain his raw material, and adds to his cost. Linseed oil, I think, has also been raised, that being a raw material. The duty on linoleum, however, the manufactured product, has been reduced. If this is in line with the policy of the committee to tax the raw materials and lower the duty on the manufactured article, of course an amendment would be of no avail. I do not care to offer one if the gentleman maintains that the item is as the committee intended.

Mr. PETERS. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman is mistaken. Neither linseed oil nor linoleum has been increased. They have been decreased.

Mr. MOORE. I said that the duty on linoleum had been decreased, but that burlap had been taken from the free list and put on the dutiable list.

Mr. PETERS. Burlap is not on the free list. It has been decreased. It came in last year at an ad valorem equivalent of 23.92, and in the bill before us, section 288, it is placed at 20 per cent.

Mr. MOORE. There is a duty on burlap now in this bill?

Mr. PETERS. Yes; and there is a duty in the present law.

Mr. MOORE. But the duty has been increased.

Mr. PETERS. No; the gentleman is mistaken. It has been reduced.

Mr. MOORE. Then I have been misinformed. I understood burlap, which heretofore had been free, had now been made dutiable. If the gentleman is right about that, I will not press the matter.

Mr. PETERS. If the gentleman will look at page 225 of the handbook, he will see that the duty on burlap is given at the ad valorem equivalent of 23.92.

Mr. MOORE. Then I may have been mistaken.

Mr. MANN. The duty on burlap is the same as jute cloth, which is nine-sixteenths cent per pound plus 15 per cent under the existing law.

Mr. PETERS. I give the ad valorem equivalent on burlaps coming under the existing law. Not exceeding 30 threads to the square inch nine-sixteenths cent per pound plus 15 per cent, which is equivalent to 23.86. Exceeding 30 and not exceeding 55 threads to the square inch seven-eighths cent plus 15, or an equivalent of 23.19. The total burlaps coming in at 23.92.

Mr. MOORE. The gentleman is prepared to stand by the rates in this paragraph on the lower grade of linoleum?

Mr. PETERS. Yes.

Mr. MOORE. Then I will not offer any amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the pro forma amendment will be considered as withdrawn.

The Clerk read as follows:

287. Bands, bandings, belts, beltings, bindings, cords, ribbons, tapes, webs and webbings, all the foregoing composed wholly or in chief value of flax, hemp, or ramie, or of flax, hemp, or ramie and india rubber, and not otherwise specially provided for in this section, 30 per cent ad valorem; wearing apparel composed wholly or in chief value of flax, hemp, or ramie, 50 per cent ad valorem.

Mr. PETERS. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 72, line 20, after the word "ramie," insert the words "or of flax or ramie and india rubber."

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. MOORE. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to offer this amendment without discussion. It is an amendment to paragraph 286.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Pennsylvania asks unanimous consent to return to paragraph 286 for the purpose of offering an amendment. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 72, line 13, after the word "linen," strike out "30 per cent ad valorem" and insert the following: "40 cents per dozen pieces and 20 per cent ad valorem."

The question was taken, and the amendment was rejected.

The Clerk read as follows:

288. Plain woven fabrics of single jute yarns, by whatever name known, 20 per cent ad valorem.

Mr. BROWNING. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. Mr. Chairman, while I shall refrain from offering an amendment to section 288 of this bill—as all amendments offered by gentlemen on this side are promptly rejected—I wish to state that it is manifestly unfair that a duty should be placed on burlap, which is included in this item. Not one yard of burlap is made in this country, most of it being imported from England, and it is the foundation of floor oilcloth, which is the poor man's carpet. Now, to decrease the duty on floor oilcloth and retain the duty on burlap works an injustice to manufacturer and consumer alike, and this is one of the many inequalities in the bill now under consideration.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the pro forma amendment will be considered as withdrawn.

There was no objection.

The Clerk read as follows:

290. Bags or sacks made from plain woven fabrics, of single jute yarns, not dyed, colored, stained, painted, printed, or bleached, 25 per cent ad valorem

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. Chairman, I wish to offer an amendment. On page 73, paragraph 290, after the word "bleached," in line 5, strike out "25 per cent ad valorem" and add "be transferred to the free list."

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 73, line 5, after the word "bleached," strike out "25 per cent ad valorem" and insert "free of duty."

Mr. MANN. I suggest to the gentleman he offer the motion to strike out the paragraph 295 with the statement that if that prevails he will offer to put it on the free list when it is reached. It amounts to the same thing.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I will accept that.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the amendment will be modified as suggested.

There was no objection.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. Chairman, this particular bagging, made of single-thread jute fiber or jute yarn, is used altogether, as far as I know, for covering or sacking agricultural products. All of the wool of this country that is sent to market is sacked in this kind of material. You have placed wool on the free list. Oats and wheat from the Pacific coast are shipped largely in this kind of bag. Millions of these bags are used for transporting grain to Liverpool around the Horn. That staple of the Southland, cotton, is also wrapped in this class of material. You have seen fit in this bill to place the covering for cotton made of this same material on the free list. Now, I submit to you this question: Would it not be fair and somewhat compensatory to your wool and grain raisers of the North and West if you would give them the same privilege that you give to your cotton raisers and give them a covering for their wool and grain free of duty, the same that you are giving to the cotton raisers of the South?

The same might be said of the sack that covers potatoes and mill products—bran, shorts, and feed stuffs. Mill stuffs that you have placed on the free list are largely sacked with this same material, and it looks to me like it would be only fair that you place bags of this character on the free list, as you have the covering for your cotton raisers. I hope this amendment may prevail.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment proposed by the gentleman from Washington [Mr. LA FOLLETTE] to strike out the paragraph.

The question was taken, and the amendment was rejected.

Mr. MOORE. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MOORE] offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 73, line 3, strike out paragraph 290 and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"290. Bags or sacks made from plain woven fabrics, of single jute yarns, not dyed, colored, stained, painted, printed, or bleached, and not exceeding 30 threads to the square inch, counting the warp and filling, seven-eighths of 1 cent per pound and 15 per cent ad valorem."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment proposed by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MOORE].

The question was taken, and the amendment was rejected.

The Clerk read as follows:

SCHEDULE K—WOOL AND MANUFACTURES OF.

295. Combed wool or tops and roving or roping made wholly or in part of wool or camel's hair, and on other wool and hair which have been advanced in any manner or by any process of manufacture beyond the washed or scoured condition, not specially provided for in this section, 15 per cent ad valorem.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I move that the committee do now rise.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the committee rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, reported that that committee had had under consideration the bill (H. R. 3321) to reduce tariff duties and to provide revenue for the Government, and for other purposes, and had come to no resolution thereon.

ADJOURNMENT.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly (at 10 o'clock and 40 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned until Saturday, May 3, 1913, at 11 o'clock a. m.

PUBLIC BILLS, RESOLUTIONS, AND MEMORIALS.

Under clause 3 of Rule XXII, bills, resolutions, and memorials were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. CRISP: A bill (H. R. 4578) amending section 808 of the Criminal Code of the District of Columbia, providing punishment for rape, etc.; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. KENT: A bill (H. R. 4579) making appropriation for the completion of jetties at the entrance to Humboldt Bay, Cal.; to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4580) to authorize a survey of Bolinas Channel, Marin County, Cal.; to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. FERRIS: A bill (H. R. 4581) providing for the sale of certain remnant lands in the Kiowa-Comanche and Apache ceded reservation in Oklahoma, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

By Mr. L'ENGLE: A bill (H. R. 4582) to levy and collect an internal-revenue tax from manufacturers of tariff-protected articles who do not pay living wages and maintain certain labor conditions in their factories; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. ANSBERRY: A bill (H. R. 4583) to furnish bronze medals of honor to surviving soldiers who responded to President's Lincoln's first call for troops; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. HINDS: A bill (H. R. 4584) to protect our national food supply by the extermination of certain enemies of food fishes of the Atlantic coast; to the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

By Mr. CLAYTON: A bill (H. R. 4585) to amend paragraph 1, section 24, of an act entitled "An act to codify, revise, and amend the laws relating to the judiciary," approved March 3, 1911; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. McKELLAR: A bill (H. R. 4606) to provide for 1-cent postage; to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4607) regulating trials by jury; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4608) declaring that persons, firms, or corporations in any manner engaged in interstate-commerce business who shall become engaged or concerned in the fixing of prices of any foodstuffs contrary to the rules of competition shall be guilty of a felony, and providing for their punishment; to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. TALBOTT of Maryland: Resolution (H. Res. 85) authorizing the chairman of the Joint Select Committee on Disposition of Useless Executive Papers to appoint a messenger to said committee; to the Committee on Accounts.

Also, resolution (H. Res. 86) authorizing the chairman of the Joint Select Committee on Disposition of Useless Executive Papers to appoint a clerk to said committee; to the Committee on Accounts.

By Mr. HOLLAND: Resolution (H. Res. 87) authorizing the Clerk of the House to pay to Mary C. Adams the sum of $60; to the Committee on Accounts.

PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, private bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. AINEY: A bill (H. R. 4586) granting a pension to Lent B. Gage; to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4587) granting a pension to Margaret A. Seeley; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4588) granting an increase of pension to Thomas W. Tiffany; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4589) granting an increase of pension to William Roberts; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4590) granting an increase of pension to Hebron B. Miller; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. ANSBERRY: A bill (H. R. 4591) granting a pension to Ann Miller; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. BARTHOLDT: A bill (H. R. 4592) granting an increase of pension to Lloyd G. Harris; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. BROWN of West Virginia: A bill (H. R. 4593) granting an increase of pension to A. A. Rogers; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. COPLEY: A bill (H. R. 4594) granting a pension to Albert Pringnitz; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. CULLOP: A bill (H. R. 4595) granting a pension to W. S. Richey; to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4596) granting an increase of pension to Joshua Pryor; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. KIESS of Pennsylvania: A bill (H. R. 4597) granting an increase of pension to Richard Van Dusen; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. LAFFERTY: A bill (H. R. 4598) granting an increase of pension to Alice M. Wallace; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. MURDOCK: A bill (H. R. 4599) granting an increase of pension to James M. Dilley; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. SMITH of Maryland: A bill (H. R. 4600) for the relief of Mrs. Thomas S. Ferral; to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. J. M. C. SMITH: A bill (H. R. 4601) granting a pension to Francelia Frost; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4602) granting an increase of pension to David Foley; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. STEENERSON: A bill (H. R. 4603) for the relief of A. R. Butler; to the Committee on Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4604) to amend an act entitled "An act granting an increase of pension to Marie J. Blaisdell," approved May, 24, 1900; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. TAVENNER: A bill (H. R. 4605) granting a pension to Zella Ruby Kilmer; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. FESS: A bill (H. R. 4609) granting a pension to Rosa Drumm Berry; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4610) granting a pension to Ellen Miller; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4611) granting a pension to Henry Fleig; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. SPARKMAN: A bill (H. R. 4612) granting a pension to Sarah Whidden; to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4613) granting a pension to Mary S. Ryan; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4614) granting a pension to Luvinia Johnson; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

By the SPEAKER (by request): Petitions of sundry citizens of New York City and of the State of Missouri, against the income tax on mutual life insurance companies; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also (by request), petition of the council of the city of Toledo, Ohio, favoring the passage of legislation for the Government to acquire ownership and control of all telephone and telegraph systems; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

Also (by request), petitions of Miles Dorsey and Abbert Kaselow, of Missouri, against mutual life insurance companies in income-tax bill; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. AINEY: Petition of sundry citizens of the fourteenth congressional district of Pennsylvania, against mutual life insurance companies in the income-tax bill; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. ANSBERRY: Petition of Joseph Ringleins, against mutual life insurance companies in the income-tax bill; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. ASHBROOK: Petition of J. E. Foster, Coshocton; Henry G. Crew, New Philadelphia; C. M. Gilmore, Alexandria; Harry Swisher, Newark; and J. A. Cree, Utica, all in the State of Ohio, protesting against the nonexemption of insurance-policy holders in the income-tax section of House bill 10; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. BALTZ: Petition of M. M. Stephens and Dr. C. B. Vonnahme, of East St. Louis, Ill., and J. C. Jarvis, of Centerville Station, Ill., protesting against including mutual life insurance companies in the income-tax bill; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. BARTHOLDT: Petition of W. B. Biddle, of the St. Louis & San Francisco Railroad Co., and 155 other citizens, of St. Louis, Mo., protesting against including mutual life insurance companies in the income-tax bill; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the Lewis-Zukoski Mercantile Co., St. Louis, Mo., protesting against the passage of the legislation prohibiting the importation of the feathers and plumes of wild birds for commercial use; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the St. Louis Top Co., St. Louis, Mo., protesting against the proposed reduction of the duty on rice; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the National Oats Co. and the D'Arvy Advertising Co., St. Louis, Mo., asking that the manufactured products of oats be put on an exact parity with the raw material; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of John L. Messmore and 70 other citizens, of St. Louis, Mo.; the Home Life Insurance Co., St. Louis, Mo.; and other citizens of Missouri, protesting against including mutual life insurance companies in the income-tax bill; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the Henry Heil Chemical Co., St. Louis, Mo., protesting against the proposed reduction of the duty on sugar; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the Prufrock-Litton Furniture Co., St. Louis, Mo., protesting against the removal of goat hides from the free list; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. BRODBECK: Petition of cigar manufacturers and Cigar Makers' Union No. 315, of the twentieth congressional district of Pennsylvania, against free tobacco and cigars from the Philippines; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of 14 citizens of the twentieth congressional district of Pennsylvania, against mutual life insurance companies in the income-tax bill; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of cigar manufacturers of York and McSherrytown, Pa., against free cigars from the Philippines; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. BURNETT: Petition of E. M. Harris, M. D., of Russellville, Ala., against mutual life insurance companies in the tariff bill; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. BURKE of Wisconsin: Petition of F. R. Schmidt and 40 citizens of Portage, John W. Limla and 16 citizens of Washington County, Edward Johne and 4 other citizens of Sheboygan, and Louis Detz and 14 other citizens of Hericon, all in the State of Wisconsin, protesting against including mutual life insurance companies in the income-tax bill; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. CARY: Petitions of sundry citizens of Milwaukee, Wis., against mutual life insurance in the income-tax bill; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the Public Museum of the city of Milwaukee, Wis., favoring the clause in the tariff bill prohibiting importation of skins and plumage of wild birds; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the insular government of Porto Rico, against reduction of the duty on sugar; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the G. G. Bollworth Co., of Milwaukee, Wis., relative to the tariff on horticultural products; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the Federal Rubber Manufacturing Co., of Milwaukee, Wis., against the reduction of duties on bicycles, etc.; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. CLARK of Florida: Petition of the Florida State Horticultural Society of the State of Florida, favoring the retention of the present duty on citrus fruits; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. DALE: Petition of the Central Federated Union of New York City, against the proposed revision of the tariff in relation to cigars; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of C. F. Taylor, of Philadelphia, Pa., relative to the method of solving the Philippine question; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of sundry citizens of Brooklyn, N. Y., against the income tax on mutual life insurance companies; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of sundry citizens of New York, N. Y., protesting against the removal of the duty on Philippine tobacco and cigars; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. DICKINSON: Petition of the National Bank of Commerce, of St. Louis, Mo., and other banks and citizens of Missouri, protesting against including mutual life insurance companies in the income-tax bill; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. EAGAN: Petition of 21 citizens of New Jersey, protesting against including mutual life insurance companies in the income-tax bill; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the mayor and the board of council of the town of West New York, protesting against the reduction of the tariff on laces and embroideries; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. ESCH: Petition of the New York Life Insurance Co., of New York, N. Y., against mutual life insurance companies in the income-tax bill; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. FITZGERALD: Petition of sundry North Carolina monazite miners, against a further reduction in the duty on monazite; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of sundry citizens of Buffalo, N. Y., relative to the proposed tariff changes affecting the flour-milling, live-stock, and packing industries; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. GERRY: Petition of George E. Hoey, Henry H. Wardle, C. B. Blivell, Katherine McKone, Thomas Brook, Charles W. Littlefield, Alfred K. Potter, William G. Smythe, Edward E. Rice, R. G. Hazard, W. S. Redfields, Maurice H. Stearns, John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance Co., Massachusetts Mutual Life Insurance Co., John Bennett, Alfred Green, Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance Co., Charles Matteson, Archibald C. Matteson, William J. Brown, John Champlin, J. H. Hambly, and Archibald W. Couper, all in the State of Rhode Island, protesting against including mutual life insurance companies in the income-tax bill; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the Nicholson File Co., of Providence, R. I., against the reduction of the tariff on files, etc.; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of B. A. Ballow & Co., of Providence, R. I., against the reduction of the tariff on jewelry; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of Alice Hall Walter, of Providence R. I., and Flora Jarver, of Kingston Hill, R. I., favoring the clause prohibiting importation of wild-bird plumage; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the W. J. Feeley Co., of Providence, R. I., against the reduction of the tariff on ecclesiastical goods; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the International Braid Co., of Providence, R. I., against the reduction of the tariff on cotton small wares; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of Cigar Makers' Union No. 94, of Pawtucket and Providence, R. I., against the importation of cigars from the Philippines free of duty; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the Regina Manufacturing Co., of East Greenwich, R. I., against the reduction of the tariff on tracing cloth; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the Pawtucket Woolen Mills, of Westerly, R. I., against the reduction of the tariff on woolens and wool; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petitions of the Quidnick Windham Manufacturing Co., of Providence, R. I., the Lebanon Mill Co. and the Dexter Yarn Co., of Pawtucket, R. I., against the sections of the tariff bill relating to the textile industry; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the Blodgett & Orswell Co., of Pawtucket, R. I., against the reduction of the tariff on cotton yarns; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petitions of the United States Bobbin & Shuttle Co. and the Providence Mill Supply Co., of Warwick Mills, against the reduction of the tariff on cotton and woolens; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. GOULDEN: Petition of sundry citizens of the twenty-third congressional district of New York, against putting Philippine cigars on the free list; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petitions of sundry citizens of the twenty-third congressional district of New York, against mutual life insurance companies in the income-tax bill; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. GRAHAM of Pennsylvania: Petition of George G. Meade Post, No. 1, Department of Pennsylvania, Grand Army of the Republic, of Philadelphia, Pa., against mutual life insurance in the income-tax bill; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the Manufacturers' Club of Philadelphia, Pa., against the clause in sundry civil bill forbidding the use of money for prosecution of labor and farmers' organizations; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. GRIFFIN: Petition of sundry citizens of Brooklyn, N. Y., against the income tax on mutual life insurance companies; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. HINDS: Petition of the Yarmouth Board of Trade, of Yarmouth, Me., favoring 1-cent letter postage; to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.

By Mr. KINKEAD of New Jersey: Petition of Oscar Schmidt (Inc.), of Jersey City, N. J., against the duty on grain; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. LAFFERTY: Petition of the City Council of Portland, Oreg., favoring Government ownership of the telegraph and telephones; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. LEVY: Petitions of sundry citizens and the Central Federated Union of New York, against free cigars from the Philippines; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petitions of the Estey Piano Co. and F. Radle & Bjur Bros. Co., of New York, against the duty on ivory tusks; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the John Ogden Co., of New York, against the duty on metal sashes; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the National Cloak & Suit Co., of New York, against assessment of fee in relation to filing protest against assessment of duties by collector of customs; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of Mrs. Clara Huyler, of New York, against placing Bibles on the free list; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the Uda Biggs & Stewart Hess Co., of New York City, against the clause prohibiting importation of wild-bird plumage; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petitions of John W. Borden and Benjamin Bronstein, of New York, against mutual life insurance companies in the income-tax bill; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. McCLELLAN: Petition of J. T. Lampman & Co., Claverack, N. Y., asking that the same consideration as to the duty be given to rye and buckwheat as to wheat; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the Consumers' Albany Brewing Co., Albany, N. Y., favoring the passage of legislation to remove the duty on barley and malt; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. McGILLICUDDY: Petition of Androscoggin Local, No. 15, I. B. of P. M., Lisbon Falls, Me., protesting against the removal of the duty on imported paper; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. MOTT: Petition of the Central Federated Union of Greater New York, against change in the tariff on cigars; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the Rocky Mountain lead-ore producers, against the reduction of the duty on lead ore; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of St. Regis Local, No. 45, of Deferiet, N. Y., against the reduction of the duty on paper; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of Utah Chapter of the American Mining Congress, against the reduction of the duty on lead ore; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the Linnæan Society of New York City, favoring the feather proviso in Schedule N of the tariff act; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of Local No. 144, International Brotherhood of Paper Workers, of Blood River, N. Y., against the reduction of the duty on paper; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. O'BRIEN: Petition of sundry citizens of New York, N. Y., protesting against the removal of the duty on Philippine tobacco and cigars; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of John Lieberguth, Brooklyn, N. Y., protesting against the removal of the duty on stained and painted glass; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of Joseph Hyman, Bernard Frankenfelder, G. Kimpel, and Harry Glemly, of New York City, protesting against Schedule N, affecting the importation of human hair; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of Charles H. Dominge and Herman Friedlander, of Brooklyn, N. Y., protesting against the income tax on life insurance companies; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of Margaret O'Grady and Nora Sweeney, of Brooklyn, N. Y., and E. K. Stewart, of New York City, protesting against the passage of legislation preventing the importation of feathers and plumes of wild birds for commercial use; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the Angora Specialty Co., of Brooklyn, N. Y., protesting against the reduction of the tariff on sugar; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. REILLY of Connecticut: Petition of sundry citizens of New Haven, Wallingford, Meriden, and Hartford, Conn., protesting against the income tax on mutual life insurance companies; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. SMITH of Idaho: Petition of the Columbia and Snake River Association, Pendleton, Oreg., protesting against the repeal of the free-tolls section of the Panama Canal act; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. STEPHENS of California: Petition of the Joseph Dixon Crucible Co. and the Hawaiian Fertilizer Co. of San Francisco, Cal., against placing sugar on free list; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the Brownstein-Louis Co., of Los Angeles, Cal., against the duty on indigo; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce, Los Angeles, Cal., protesting against submitting the Panama Canal controversy to the arbitration court; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

Also, petition of the Lewis-Simas-Jones Co., San Francisco, Cal., protesting against the proposed reduction of the tariff on sugar; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. TAVENNER: Petition of Local Union No. 305, Cigar Makers' International Union of America, of Monmouth, Ill., against free cigars from the Philippines; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. WALLIN: Petition of sundry citizens of New York City, against the removal of the tariff on cigars made in the Philippine Islands; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petitions of sundry citizens of the thirtieth district of New York, against the inclusion of life insurance companies in the income-tax bill; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. WILSON of New York: Petition of the Central Federated Union of New York City, against the proposed revision of the tariff in relation to cigars; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the Linnæan Society of New York, favoring the feather proviso in Schedule N of the tariff act; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

UNIV. OF MICHIGAN,

MAY 18 1914